- 1976: Black armband on left sleeve for Mets' first owner, Joan Payson, and for first manager Casey Stengel, both of whom died prior to the start of the 1976 season.
- 1986: Mets 25th Anniversary.
- 1992: Memorial for William Shea (all season). Shea helped bring National League Baseball back to New York, and Shea Stadium was named for him.
- 1994: Miracle Mets 25th Anniversary patch worn in place of the sleeve Mets disc. MLB 125th Anniversary patch is worn on the other sleeve that year.
- 1996: John McSherry memorial — the umpire died on Opening Day in Cincinnati. McSherry was a New Yorker, and his funeral was held at St. Patrick's Cathedral in Manhattan. This is direct embroidery in black thread on the sleeve, not a patch.
- August 15, 1999: AIDS ribbon worn at San Francisco for "Until There's a Cure" Day.
- March 29–30, 2000: Opening Series in Tokyo vs. Cubs. AIU Insurance patch worn on right sleeve of white home alternates (March 29) and road grays (March 30). Patches were likely removed after the game.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mets 1998-1999 MDA "Shirts off Our Backs"

Like several other teams in MLB and minor league baseball, the Mets held auction-style fundraisers for players' uniforms in both 1998 and 1999. Fans placed bids during the game, and after the game, the winners received the jerseys from the players in a postgame ceremony.

The Mets' version of this fundraiser supported the Muscular Dystrophy Association. These jerseys had special patches on the right sleeves.

© GameWornGuides.com

April 9, 2001

2001, after September 11

Right: Because the Mets market so many game-worn jerseys during the season, relatively few in circulation have the 9-11 embroidery.

Right: Same embroidery with "9-11-01" and twin American flags returns on all jerseys and is used for all of 2002.

Far right: Tug McGraw inscription is on all 2004 jerseys, as it was used all year. Bob Murphy embroidery was added after the announcer's death on 8/3/2004.

- 2001, April 9: Opening Day only — a "20/60" patch honoring Met legend Tommie Agee and rookie Brian Coles.
- 2001, after September 11 and all of 2002: Two small flags and "9-11-01" were embroidered directly on the right sleeve. In 2002, the embroidery appeared below the 40th Anniversary patch.
- 2002: Mets 40th Anniversary.
- 2004: Shea Stadium 40th Anniversary.
- 2004: On game jerseys only, a small embroidered inscription — "Ya Gotta Believe, Tug" — appeared below the Shea patch in tribute to former Met and Phillie Tug McGraw.
- 2004, after August 3: "Bob Murphy" was embroidered directly (not a patch) above the Skyline patch in memory of the longtime broadcaster, following his death.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009

2012 (both)

2013

- 2008: Shea Stadium final season.
- 2009: Citi Field inaugural season patch.
- 2012: 50th Anniversary patch on left sleeve in place of the Mets disc. On the black alternate, the patch appears on the right sleeve.
- 2012: Gary Carter memorial ("Kid 8") on the right sleeve; on the black alternate, it appears on the left chest.
- 2014: Memorial patch for Ralph Kiner featuring an announcer's microphone.
- "FC" patch honoring former General Manager Frank Cashen.

2014

2014

A note on Mets' sleeve embroidery: Several of the Mets' sleeve commemoratives — including McSherry, Tug McGraw, Bob Murphy, and the 9-11 with flags design — are embroidered directly onto the garments and are not separate patches. This work was done by the Mets' official tailor, Stitches, of Whitestone, NY.

© GameWornGuides.com

June 14, 2016

- 2016: June 14: An actual safety-pinned ribbon (not a patch) worn in honor of the victims of the Orlando nightclub massacre.
- 2016, July 30: Mike Piazza patch in honor of his number retirement.
- 2018: “Rusty” memorial patch for former player Rusty Staub, starting March 31.
- 2020: Black memorial patch for Tom Seaver, starting September 5.
- 2021: Pinstriped memorial patch for Tom Seaver, worn all season.
- 2022, July 9: “17” patch in honor of Keith Hernandez’s number retirement.
- 2024, June 8–9: MLB World Tour London Series patch and Build Submarines sponsor patch were worn for two games against the Phillies in London. The patches replaced the team disc and standard sponsor patches — appearing on the home jersey (June 8) and the road jersey (June 9). Placement varied by player handedness, with patches appearing on opposite sleeves. A Buddy Harrelson memorial patch was worn above the sponsor patch for this series.

July 30, 2016

2018

2020, starting September 5

July 9, 2022

2021

June 8-9, 2024

© GameWornGuides.com

2024, through June 28

2024, starting June 29

- 2024, through June 28: Buddy Harrelson memorial patch worn as a standalone patch above the team disc from the start of the season through June 28, when it was replaced by a combined memorial patch honoring both Harrelson and Jerry Grote.
- 2024, starting June 29: Combined memorial patch for Buddy Harrelson and Jerry Grote, featuring a background color matching each jersey. This patch is placed over the team disc. Additionally, a black circle patch with a white “24” honoring Willie Mays is worn above the sponsor patch.
- 2025: “7” memorial patch for Ed Kranepool, worn above the team disc.

© GameWornGuides.com

2023-2025 Mets Advertising Patches

April 10-25, 2023

2023, starting April 26

2024, City Connect

With the start of the 2023 season, teams were permitted to sell the placement of an advertising patch — up to four inches square — to appear on one of their jersey sleeves. The sleeve on which the patch appeared could change from player to player, and each team that sold a patch handled the placement differently.

The Mets struck a sponsor patch deal with New York Presbyterian Hospital. The patches first appeared on April 10, 2023, and featured a white square with a red border and the sponsor's logo in red.

Team owner Steve Cohen called them the "Phillies colors" and vowed to change them to something more appropriate for the Mets. On April 26, a new version debuted. It featured a blue rectangle with an orange border and the sponsor logo in white.

A black-and-white iteration of the second version of the patch was introduced for the City Connect jersey in 2024.

The placement of the patch varied depending on each player's handedness. The team's normal logo patches remained on the opposite sleeve from the ad patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mets Postseason Patches

2000 World Series (right sleeve)

2015 World Series
(right sleeve)

2015 NL Division Series
2015 NL Championship Series

2016 NL Wild Card (right sleeve)

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

1973 New York Mets Game Worn Bob Miller Home Jersey

Examination Date: October 21, 2020 Certification Number: 20-1021J04

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review:

Description: New York Mets home white with blue pinstripes, seven button, Rawlings jersey issued to player #30, who in 1973 was pitcher Bob Miller. "Mets" script angled on the front in Royal Blue with dark red-orange twill as properly used by the Mets pre-1976. The player number is on the left front and on the back in the correct font for the 1973 Mets. There is no player name on the back, as correct for 1973. The front placket has been custom-reinforced on the back on both the button and buttonhole) with a second layer of pinstripe knit. The jersey is an appropriate size for Miller to have worn. The Mets skyline disk patch is sewn to the left sleeve and is very faded from wash.

The Mets won the National League pennant in 1973, losing to the Oakland A's in the 1973 World Series. Miller joined the Mets in the final week of the 1973 season, pitching in only one game, and did not appear in the 1973 World Series. He then pitched for the Mets in 58 games in 1974 before ending his career.

An examination of this jersey shows that the METS wordmark and the numbers "3" on front and back appear factory-stitched at the same place and time, likely at the Rawlings factory. However the "0" on both back and front are not original, crudely stitched in the manner common to work done in the clubhouse. The numbers are also not properly centered on either front or back. See "wear and repairs" below for more.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings red tag showing the size as 44, appropriate for 1973, is stitched inside the front right tail. White flag tag pinched under the right edge says SET 1 #8P 1973. The hand-embroidered team tagging patch that once appeared inside the back of the neck is missing, it has been removed, but the stitching outline of it remains.

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Wear & Repairs: This jersey shows easily at least a full season of use; its fabric is grayed from many washings, and the lettering is burnished and not shiny any longer. Given the fact that Miller played for only one game in 1973, it is highly likely that this was likely actually one of the two jerseys that had been issued that season to fellow pitcher #31 Harry Parker- with the "1" removed and crudely replaced with a "0" for that final few days of the season. If there is evidence of the "1" having been there remains hidden under the left vertical stroke of the 0, on both front and back. It could have been worn again by Miller in 1974; it could have been used later in spring training and in the minor leagues. The "0s" on back and front show wash-fraying of the edges due to sloppy attachment to the jersey with very wide zigzag stitching that is not exactly along the edge, typical of a clubhouse stitching job, and also shows jersey-fabric puckering underneath that indicates that the jersey was washed (probably) many times with the current numbers in place.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is consistent with known exemplars. While it is missing its collar tag, it has the proper manufacturer tagging in its tail for 1973 and exhibits ample use. In my professional opinion, this is a game worn Mets jersey worn by Bob Miller in 1973 and also probably also earlier that season by pitcher Harry Parker.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Jerry Grote 1972 New York Mets Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: May 9, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0509J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Wilson made, size 44 (marked, now measured as a 42 caused by shrinkage) gray double knit button front New York Mets jersey, with #15 in team font on both front and back. Blue soutache on the placket, Mets "skyline" patch on the left sleeve. Team strip tagging inside collar and linen lining inside the placket. 1972 was the first year the Mets wore double knit jerseys, switching from the earlier flannels. Black armband at the end of the left sleeve. Autographed "Jerry Grote" in blue marker on the front left, below the front numbers. I have no professional opinion on the autograph.

In 1972, Jerry Grote appeared in 62 games for the Mets, Hitting .210 with 3 home runs. That season the Mets platooned Grote and Duffy Dyer at catcher. (Baseball Almanac) In his 16-year major league career, Grote played in 1,421 games, accumulating 1,092 hits in 4,339 at bats for a .252 career batting average along with 39 home runs and 404 runs batted in. He ended his career with a .991 fielding percentage, which at the time of his retirement was eighth highest all-time among catchers. He is the Mets all-time leader in games played as a catcher (1,176). Grote caught 116 shutouts in his career, ranking him 15th all-time among catchers. (Wikipedia)

Restoration Performed: As received, this jersey had been circulated to the minor leagues, as had nearly all Mets MLB issues of the era. The blue soutache trim was half gone and what remained was partly detached; The front "New York" had been stripped off after its MLB use was through, and the blue over orange "Mets" home jersey style script had been sewn on to replace it. In 1973, three of the six Mets' minor league affiliates had the same name as the parent club. The jersey shows heavy but even use, with a great deal of fading of the front numbers which had come partly detached. The original skyline patch was on the sleeve, and there was extremely minor evidence of the original presence of the black armband that had been below it. The light table revealed the ghost of the original "NEW YORK" wordmark on front, and also showed that the numbers on back were not original to the garment. The "5" was in the correct font but did not sit exactly on top of the original ghost, and the "1" was the wrong font, using the style used on the MLB Mets' Rawlings home jerseys.

Because the jersey was autographed, it could not be laundered. I stripped the remaining soutache shards and replaced it with the same vintage trim. I replaced the armband with original materials. After spot cleaning and steaming the front where I had removed the replacement "Mets" wordmark, I cut the NEW YORK lettering from my team template, and matched it to the ghosts on front. I then both media-blasted the cut lettering and organically dyed it to simulate the patina of the front numbers to which it would be

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Above left, as received. At left ghost images of the original New York are difficult to see but definitely present, appearing as orange staining. Below, the ghosts of the original back numbers adjacent. I stitched the lettering using suitably faded thread to match the original numbers, and touched up the stitching of the front numbers only where they were coming off. On back, even though the "5" was not original to the jersey, we elected to leave it as it was team applied, vintage, and in the correct font. Most likely, it was a "take off" numeral from another stripped MLB jersey. I replaced the back "1", recreating the original font and performing the same aging steps to make it better match the adjoining 5.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson manufacturer's tag noting the size as 44 is in the correct style for 1972 and is stitched properly to the left front tail, the tag shows very heavy but even wear, and it remains firmly attached. The 3 1/2" gray knit-fabric strip tag inside the back of the collar is hand chain-stitch embroidered. "15 44 72" (player number 15, size 44, 1972) in the familiar style of the Wilson factory stitcher, embroidery using black thread. The collar tag has been sewn in place prior to the placket of the jersey having been stitched closed, making the stitching thread that holds it in place invisible from the outside of the jersey. The tagging matches exemplars for the 1972 Mets' road jerseys.

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that the team sleeve patch and the front numbers were, when received, originals sewn to the jersey. The linen lining inside the collar remains stained and worn from use, but is intact and still firmly attached. While the use of the jersey would be deemed as "heavy", it is even and consistent, and the jersey is undamaged. There are no signs of repairs, and even the full set of seven buttons appear original.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good professionally restored condition. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by catcher Jerry Grote of the 1972 New York Mets.

William F. Henderson

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Nelson Briles 1978 tagged, 1979 New York Mets Home Spring Training Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: August 4, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0804J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Rawlings-made New York Mets size 44 (marked and measured) two-button Henley two-button neck pullover jersey, (a style first worn by the Mets in the 1978 regular season) white with Royal Blue engineered pinstripes, Royal/orange/Royal knit trim bands the sleeve ends and the neck opening. "Skyline" logo patch on the left sleeve. Mets script in Royal Blue over orange on front, player number 59 on front and back, as issued to pitcher Nelson Briles in spring training, (where 1978 jerseys were worn) Exhibits typical wide number spacing seen on Mets jerseys of that year. No names on back were used on 1978 jerseys. Fonts are correct for the team as used by Rawlings in that year. Size 44 is appropriate for Briles, matching exemplars.

In a 14 year career with four teams, Briles compiled a 129-112 record with an overall 3.44 ERA. After being released by the Orioles following the 1978 season, Briles spent Spring Training 1979 with the Mets. Photos of him in Spring Training, he appears to be wearing this same jersey, when examining the intersection of the pinstripes with the sewn lettering elements. Though he failed to make the club, he appears in a Saturday Night Live skit featuring actual Mets players. Fictional Dominican second baseman Chico Escuela (portrayed by Garrett Morris) was also with the Mets that Spring attempting to make a comeback at 41 years old. However, he was feeling some resistance from his teammates as his tell-all book about his playing days with the Mets, Bad Stuff 'Bout the Mets, had just hit bookstores. Briles commented that he could not forgive Escuela for writing such a book. (Wikipedia). It surely appears that Briles is wearing this jersey in the SNL video.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings red tag appropriate for 1978 inside the front right tail as is correct, noting the size as 44. A small white rectangle of white twill fabric sewn to its right is hand chain stitched with the codes "44 78 59" in blue embroidery thread (size 44, 1978 player #59) . These are all accurate for Briles.

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that the lettering on the jersey is original. There are a few dirt stains on the tails and sleeve tops. The lettering is softened with some minor fraying of the edges of some of the orange twill Some of the lettering stitching is coming loose running down the centerline of the back; the first place that stitching wear is generally seen. The knit trim, often bleached, is bright and unfaded on this example. Overall, this jersey is in very good used condition, probably having been used for several seasons in the minors before being retired (this style jersey was worn by the team through spring training 1983)

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

1979 NEW YORK METS ROSTER

(As of April, 1979)

MANAGER: Joe Torre (5)
COACHES: Chuck Cottier (53); Willie Mays (24); Joe Pignatano (52); Dick Sisler (51); Rube Walker (54)
TEAM PHYSICIAN: Dr. James Parkes
TRAINERS: Tom McKenna, Joe Dear

NO.	PITCHERS (12)	B-T	HT.	WT.	Date of Birth	1978 CLUB	W-L	ERA	G	IP	H	BB	SO
46	Allen, Neil	R-R	6-2	185	1/26/58	Jackson	5-9	3.09	16	123	88	35	111
						Tidewater	2-7	4.42	10	57	65	12	39
28	Burnand, Dwight	R-R	6-2	170	5/31/52	Tidewater	1-4	3.64	18	67	66	22	28
						METS	1-1	1.54	5	46	44	27	25
26	Drabek, Mike	R-R	6-6	220	6/24/51	METS	4-11	4.77	27	136	171	34	64
						Tidewater	3-1	4.18	4	34	27	11	6
33	Falcone, Pete	L-L	6-2	185	10/ 1/53	St. Louis	2-7	5.70	19	76	84	48	28
32	Hausman, Tom	R-R	6-5	200	3/31/53	Tidewater	5-2	1.57	10	74	64	23	42
						METS	3-3	4.67	10	52	54	9	16
40	Kobel, Kevin	R-L	6-1	183	10/ 2/53	Tidewater	3-3	2.57	10	63	58	9	18
						METS	5-6	2.92	12	108	89	30	51
38	Lachemann, Steve	R-R	6-0	200	8/17/46	METS	7-13	3.56	37	91	78	31	73
22	Morris, Jerry	R-R	6-4	215	2/ 2/50	Cal-METS	9-6	3.28	68	119	119	63	67
30	Scott, Mike	R-R	6-3	215	4/25/55	Tidewater	10-10	3.93	28	192	196	83	91
37	Swan, Craig	R-R	6-2	185	11/30/50	METS	1-6	2.43	24	44	44	54	19
49	Zachry, Pat	R-R	6-6	175	4/24/52	METS	10-6	3.23	21	138	120	69	78

NO.	CATCHERS (3)	B-T	HT.	WT.	Date of Birth	1978 CLUB	AVE.	G	AB	H	HR	RBI	SB
42	Hodges, Ron	L-R	6-1	185	8/22/49	METS	.195	47	187	36	0	7	4
7	Simons, John	R-R	6-0	185	8/21/51	METS	.254	143	477	135	12	77	26
29	Tourtelot, Allen	R-R	5-10	165	8/28/57	Tidewater	.254	61	252	77	3	31	2
						METS	.250	4	12	3	0	0	0

NO.	INFIELDERS (8)	B-T	HT.	WT.	Date of Birth	1978 CLUB	AVE.	G	AB	H	HR	RBI	SB
5	Hebner, Richie	L-R	6-1	191	11/26/47	Philadelphia	.283	137	485	133	17	71	4
13	Chapman, Kelvin	R-R	5-11	172	6/ 2/56	Jackson	.266	10	188	50	0	12	1
12	Flynn, Doug	R-R	5-11	165	1/ 6/54	METS	.264	151	448	118	3	42	41
15	Frazier, Lee	R-R	5-11	160	10/ 8/50	METS	.257	112	413	106	1	31	0
27	Hernandez, Ed	L-L	6-3	215	11/ 8/44	METS	.219	66	91	17	3	19	0
25	Martinez, Wilfredo	L-L	6-1	193	4/ 1/48	METS	.256	159	579	146	17	95	5
18	Youngblood, Joel	R-R	5-11	175	8/28/51	METS	.252	113	266	67	7	30	4

NO.	OUTFIELDERS (6)	B-T	HT.	WT.	Date of Birth	1978 CLUB	AVE.	G	AB	H	HR	RBI	SB
4	Boswell, Dave	L-L	6-2	200	12/ 8/52	METS	.274	107	314	48	4	15	3
17	Flores, Bill	R-R	6-0	180	10/27/52	Salt Lake City	.273	76	303	75	2	31	12
						Tidewater	.276	36	100	27	5	8	4
						METS	.000	1	1	0	0	0	0
5	Henderson, Steve	R-R	6-1	185	11/18/53	METS	.264	113	360	104	10	40	13
31	Mazzilli, Lee	L-R	6-1	185	10/ 2/55	METS	.267	138	461	123	7	51	7
16	Mazzilli, Lee	L-R	6-1	185	10/25/55	METS	.271	148	542	146	18	62	20
						Tidewater	.18	132	473	113	18	66	5
8	Norman, Dan	R-R	6-2	195	1/11/59	METS	.266	19	64	17	4	10	1

NON-ROSTER PLAYERS

NO.	PITCHERS (3)	B-T	HT.	WT.	Date of Birth	1978 CLUB	W-L	ERA	G	IP	H	BB	SO
51	Grant, Jim	R-R	6-1	200	8/ 5/43	Baltimore	4-4	4.67	14	54	56	21	10
59	Briles, Nelson	R-R	6-1	185	12/ 1/55	Jackson	11-8	3.55	36	185	178	42	115
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

EQUIPMENT MANAGER: Herb Norman
HEAD GROUNDSKEEPER: Pete Flynn

Far left: Nelson Biles as he appeared in the Mets team photo, taken late in spring training 1979. He is listed as a non-roster player in April 1979, but he was released before the start of May. Bottom row: Screen grabs from the famous Saturday Night Live sketch about fictional player Chico Escuela's comeback attempt with the Mets after he had written a tell-all book called "Bad Stuff 'Bout the Mets". Briles has a role in the sketch, and these screen grabs are of him in uniform, surely matching the one in review.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good original condition: The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher Nelson Briles of the New York Mets during spring training 1979.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Joel Youngblood 1979 New York Mets Home Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: February 9, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0209J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Rawlings-made New York Mets size 44 (marked and measured) two-button Henley two-button neck pullover jersey, white with Royal Blue engineered pinstripes, Royal/orange/Royal knit trim bands the sleeve ends and the neck opening. "Skyline" logo patch on the left sleeve. Mets script in Royal Blue over orange on front, player number 18 on front, as issued to Joel Youngblood, 18 on back as well. Fonts are correct for the team as used by Rawlings in that year. Size 44 is appropriate for Youngblood at this stage of his career, matching exemplars. The jersey is autographed just above the front numbers "Joel Youngblood #18 1979". I have no professional opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.

1979 was Youngblood's third year on the Mets, where, as a versatile player, he platooned at multiple positions in both infield and outfield. He played in 158 games that year, batting .275 with 16 home runs. (Baseball Almanac). In 1408 games over 14 seasons, Youngblood posted a .265 batting average (969-for-3659) with 453 runs, 180 doubles, 23 triples, 80 home runs, 422 RBI, 60 stolen bases, 332 bases on balls, .329 on-base percentage and .392 slugging percentage. He finished his career with a .955 fielding percentage. He played at least one inning at every position except pitcher in his major league career. (Wikipedia)

Restoration Performed: As is typical of Mets jerseys of this period, this jersey had been stripped of its original nameplate. Of their five minor league clubs in 1980, four were named "Mets, and team jerseys were almost always sent to one of these clubs after a season's worth of use in MLB. This jersey bore a faint stitching imprint of a a very long removed nameplate in a steep arch, typical of the club and the proper length for the name "YOUNGBLOOD" using the wide letter spacing the team employed. I made a new nameplate from a pair of color-matching period warp-knit game worn pants and serged the edge like original and stitched it over the ghost of the old nameplate. Before stitching the name lettering to the plate, I media-blasted and organically dyed the new lettering to make it better match the game-aged original elements. The thread holding the back numbers in place was excessively worn and much of it was completely missing. We elected to repair the numbers "in place" vs. removing them to re-stitch them to better preserve the originality of the 1979 lettering. The front numbers were missing entirely, so I remade them from the original team patterns and covered the original ghosts exactly.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

At left: the jersey prior to restoration, and other examples of 1979 Mets jerseys showing similar tagging to the jersey under evaluation. Below, photos of Youngblood in his Mets uniform showing his wall-to-wall nameplate.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings red tag appropriate for 1981 inside the front right tail as is correct, noting the size as 44. A small white rectangle of white twill fabric sewn to its left is hand chain stitched with the codes "44 79 18" in blue embroidery thread (size 44 1979 player number 18) in the familiar hand of the Rawlings factory stitcher. These are accurate for Youngblood. A white flag tab is sewn under the right edge of the red Rawlings tag; "SET 1 1979".

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that the lettering on the jersey is original, save for the missing front numbers and the original nameplate which had been removed. This jersey is in reasonably good used condition, probably having been used for a few seasons in the minors before being retired. The knit trim, often bleached, is bright and unfaded on this example. The restored nameplate color match is very good as it was made from a pair of matching similar-aged pants. The original lettering is burnished from use and washing, with fraying edges and missing most of its original sheen. The two buttons at the neck appear to be the originals.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good, mostly original condition: the numbers on back are all original, and the nameplate and front numbers have been properly restored with replacements near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Joel Youngblood of the 1979 New York Mets.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Mike Scott 1982 New York Mets Home Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: August 12, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0812J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Rawlings-made New York Mets size 44 (marked and measured) two-button Henley two-button neck pullover jersey, white with Royal Blue engineered pinstripes, Royal/orange/Royal knit trim bands the sleeve ends and the neck opening. Plain sleeves, Mets Skyline patch was omitted from left sleeve for 1982. Mets script in Royal Blue over orange on front, player number 30 on front, as issued to pitcher Mike Scott, exhibiting typical wide spacing seen on Mets jerseys of that year. 30 on back as well. Fonts are correct for the team as used by Rawlings in 1982, the first year that the tall/narrow Rawlings font was used, replacing the legacy shorter and square font. Size 44 is appropriate for Scott at this stage of his career, matching exemplars.

In this, the fourth year of his 13 year career, Mike Scott appeared in 37 games, 22 as as a starter, compiling a 7-13 record with three saves and a 5.14 ERA. Many call the eventual 1983 trade of Scott to the Astros one of the worst ever made by the Mets, as Scott went on to stellar career with the Astros winning the Cy Young Award in 1986, and NLCS MVP honors, while leading the league in strikeouts that year. He threw one no-hitter, was selected to the All Star squad three times and has had his number retired by the Astros. (Baseball Almanac, Wikipedia)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings red tag appropriate for 1982 inside the back of the neck as is correct, noting the size as 44. A white flag tab, printed SET 1 1982 is pinch-sewn under the bottom right corner of the Rawlings tag, A small white rectangle of white twill fabric sewn beneath it is hand chain stitched with the codes "30 82 1" in blue embroidery thread (player number 30, 1982, set 1) matching exemplars. These are all accurate for Scott.

Restoration Performed: As is typical of Mets jerseys of this period, this jersey had been stripped of its original nameplate. Of their six minor league clubs in 1983, five were named "Mets, and Mets MLB team jerseys were almost always sent to one of these clubs after a season's worth of time was spent in the big league. The jersey had previously been restored inaccurately and when I received it it bore a replacement nameplate using an inexact font and an improper name arch. On the light table, this jersey revealed the stitching imprint of its original nameplate, typical of the club and the proper length for the name "SCOTT". I made a new nameplate from a pair of color-matching same-period warp-knit game worn pants and serged the edge as original, then stitched it over the ghost of the old nameplate. Before stitching the name lettering to the plate, I media-blasted and organically dyed the new lettering to make it better match the game-aged original elements.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that the lettering on the jersey is original, save for the loss of its original nameplate. The vertical lines of thread holding the back numbers in place along the centerline of the back are slightly worn and coming loose. This is the typical location for thread failure to begin, especially on a pitcher's jersey. We elected to leave this alone for the sake of originality. This jersey is in very good used condition, probably having been used for a season or two in the minors before being retired. The knit trim, often bleached, is bright and unfaded on this example. The restored nameplate color match is very good as it was made from a pair of matching similar-aged pants. The lettering is burnished from use and washing, with slightly fraying edges and missing most of its original sheen. The centermost edges of the back numbers exhibit some minor fraying. The jersey is free of damage, repairs and is bright and clean despite its use.

Above: the jersey as received and prior to restoration. At right, tagging from other Rawlings-prepared 1982 Mets game jerseys from our exemplar library. At right, Scott in his 1983 Topps card, photo taken in 1982, perhaps wearing this jersey,

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good mostly original condition: the numbers on front and back are all original, and the nameplate on back has been properly restored with a replacement near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher Mike Scott of the 1982 New York Mets.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Document of Restoration

New York Mets 1972 Road Jersey #45

Examination Date: November 7, 2022 Certification Number: 22-1107J01

This is not an opinion of authentication; it is simply a documentation of a restoration performed.

Description: Gray double knit button front New York Mets jersey, with #45 in team font on both front and back. Blue soutache on the placket, Mets "skyline" patch on the left sleeve. Wilson made size 44 with team strip tagging : "45 44 72" inside the back of the collar. Linen lining inside the placket. 1972 was the first year the Mets wore double knit jerseys. The jersey is in good condition.

Restoration Performed: Jersey had been repurposed for minor league use, with the original "NEW YORK" stripped from the front and blue-orange Mets script replacing it. This was a common alteration for team road jerseys of the time. I stripped the Mets script off the front, cleaned the glue outlines, and steamed the fabric to help erase the old holes. The light table revealed the clear evidence of the original NEW YORK lettering ghosts in the team font. I recut new lettering, media blasted it and dyed it to simulate age to match the player numbers on the jersey, then stitched it in place using bleached colored thread to match original appearance.

I added a black memorial armband to the end of the left sleeve as was worn that year for the death of Gil Hodges. There was no clear evidence of the former presence of an armband, but this is not totally unusual, as these were applied with a wide straight stitch and the holes from the thread likely closed up though many minor-league washings.

Conclusion: With my restoration, this jersey has been properly returned to original 1972 specifications.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Rusty Staub 1974 New York Mets Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: March 25, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0325J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Rawlings 7-button-front double knit road jersey, issued to #4, Rusty Staub. Size 44 marked and measured, consistent with other jerseys worn by Staub at this point in his career and reasonable given the player's height and weight. "Mets" across both panels of the front in Varsity Royal twill outlined with dark red-orange. 1974 was the first year for this road jersey design; previously the team's road jerseys always had "New York" arched on the front. For 1974, the road jersey now mirrored the appearance of the team's home jerseys albeit without their blue pinstripes. 1974 was also the first year that Rawlings provided the team's road uniforms, replacing vendor Wilson. Notably, the gray polyester fabric used by Rawlings in 1974 did not retain its gray color. This one has faded to a pale off-white beige color, and without knowing that it had originally been gray one might assume it was simply dirty white. This fabric color failure is evident in every 1974 Mets road jersey I have evaluated, as well as in all photos in our reference library. The button configuration features three closely-spaced gray pearl buttons all stuffed into the top four inches of the jersey, above the METS wordmark, with the final four buttons more widely spaced below the wordmark. Narrow old-style dark blue soutache rings the placket. The heavily puckered Mets "skyline" patch is stitched to the left sleeve; sleeves are characteristically short as was the style in the early 1970s. The player number 4 is stitched to the left chest and on the back, just 5" from the collar, and in the same two-color twill as the team wordmark. The number font is correctly Rawlings full-block (or, Block with Serifs.)

Rusty Staub was a popular and versatile player who enjoyed a 23 year career, with the Houston Colt 45s/Astros, Expos (twice), Mets (twice),Tigers, and Rangers. He is the only major league player to have 500 hits with four different teams. He, Ty Cobb, Alex Rodriguez and Gary Sheffield share the distinction of being the only players to hit home runs before turning 20 years old, and after turning 40 years old. In 1974, in 151 games played for the Mets, Staub hit .258 with 19 home runs. His number #10 was retired by the Montreal Expos. (Baseball Almanac, Wikipedia)

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The Rawlings "The Mark of a Pro" red tag appropriate for 1974 is stitched to the outside of the left tail, an uncommon placement but consistent with other 1974 Mets team issues. Tightly zig zagged inside the back of the collar is a 1" x 2 1/4" pale gray tackle twill team tag, with "44 74 4" (size 44, 1974, player #4) hand chain-stitched on it in dark blue embroidery thread, in the familiar handwriting of the Rawlings factory stitcher and matching exemplars. The stitching holding the tag in place is invisible from the outside of the back collar, meaning it was properly applied there before the placket was stitched closed at the factory. There is a small faded black marker "C" penned to the right of the collar tag, likely an artifact of later minor league use.

Wear & Repairs: Moderately heavy wear is apparent on this jersey, though the aforementioned severe color fading of the gray fabric makes it look more worn than it otherwise would. The twill lettering is still bright but is burnished from wash abrasion, is slightly puckered and has lost its sheen. All stitching is very tight, small, bright, a characteristic of other 1974-75 Mets jerseys I have handled. The old-style traditional blue soutache shows wear, missing its "fuzz" in a spot. There are some dirt stains on the front tails of the jersey that likely would wash right out. A light table evaluation shows that all sewn elements of the jersey are original; some fabric puckering exists behind them all. Mets jerseys were regularly sent to the minors for a second life when their major league service was through, and I have little doubt that this jersey did an extended tour of duty in the club's farm system. In 1975 the Mets had five minor league clubs, of which four were named "Mets". In prior years, when team road jerseys had said "NEW YORK" on front, these jersey were stripped and re-lettered with "Mets", something no longer necessary with the new style of the 1974 MLB road jerseys.

Far left, wash puckering and staining visible behind the back numeral; shows tiny tight stitching that is typical on 1974 Mets jerseys. Also shown; exemplar tagging from four other 1974 Mets road jerseys.

Conclusion: This jersey is in generally good but well-used condition, is properly lettered, and has no alterations of any kind. It has the correct team tagging It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and game worn by Rusty Staub of the 1974 New York Mets.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Dock Ellis New York Mets 1979 (Final Season) Road Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: May 25, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0525J05

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Rawlings-made New York Mets size 44 two-button Henley two-button neck pullover jersey, Royal/orange/Royal knit trim bands the sleeve ends and the neck opening. "Skyline" logo patch on the left sleeve. Mets script in Royal Blue over orange on front, player number 35 on front, exhibiting typical wide spacing seen on Mets jerseys 1978-79. 35 on back as well; front and back numbers are sewn slightly crooked, going downhill to the right. Ellis wore various sized jerseys throughout his career. Exemplars in our library show a size 42 in 1975 and 46 in 1976, so size 44 in 1979 is deemed reasonable. Ellis played on the 1979 Mets for less than one month. A midseason acquisition, he probably wore a spare jersey that was on hand in the clubhouse. No one else wore #35 in 1979.

Famously, as a Pirate, Ellis threw a no-hitter on June 12, 1970, and later stated that he accomplished the feat under the influence of LSD. Ellis was the starting pitcher for the National League in the All-Star Game in 1971 and later that year, the Pirates won the World Series. Joining the Yankees in 1976, he helped lead the team to the American League pennant, and was named the league's Comeback Player of the Year. Ellis was traded to the New York Mets on June 15, 1979. Ellis went 3–7 with a 6.04 ERA with the Mets. Ellis requested the Mets send him back to the Pirates, and he returned to Pittsburgh in September. Ellis made three relief appearances with the Pirates that year, retiring after that season. Ellis finished his career with a lifetime win–loss record of 138–119 and an ERA of 3.46. (Wikipedia)

Restoration Performed: As is typical of Mets jersey of this period, this jersey was presented to me without its nameplate. Of their five minor league clubs in 1980, four were named "Mets", and team jerseys were typically sent to one of these clubs after a season's worth of time was spent in MLB. This jersey bore a clear stitching imprint of a removed nameplate in a steep arch, typical of the club and the proper length for the name "ELLIS" using the wide letter spacing the team employed (see photo of Ellis in 1979). I made a new nameplate from a pair of period Mets' game worn pants and serged the edge like original and stitched it over the ghost of the old nameplate.

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Above left: the jersey prior to restoration. Above right. Ellis pitching in 1979 in his home uniform, showing the steep arch and wide spacing of the letters on his nameplate. At right, two other examples of 1979 Mets road jerseys showing their similar tagging to the jersey under evaluation. The TORRE example claims to have its original nameplate, the #29 example is missing its nameplate as most examples are.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings red tag appropriate for 1979 inside the left front tail as is correct, not in the size as 44. The tag is very loose, held on by thread on only two sides. Exemplars show a 1979 SET flag tag under the right border, and this one likely did as well, but with the stitching gone it is now absent. A Mets strip tag is sewn to its left with a white zig zag stitch, the tag's lettering hand-embroidered in the familiar hand of the Rawlings factory stitcher onto a piece of white tackle twill (also correct for the Mets) says 44 79 35... (size 44 1979 player number 35). These are all accurate for Ellis.

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that the letting on the jersey is original, and that a nameplate had been removed. This jersey is in good used condition, probably having been used for a season or two in the minors before being retired. The knit trim, often bleached, is bright and unfaded on this example. The restored nameplate color match is very good considering it was made from a pair of matching similar aged pants.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good condition: the numbers on front and back are all original, and the back has been properly restored with a nameplate near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher Dock Ellis of the 1979 New York Mets.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Randy Jones New York Mets 1981-1982 Road Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: Jan 30, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0130J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Rawlings-made New York Mets size 42 two-button Henley two-button neck pullover jersey, Royal/orange/Royal knit trim bands the sleeve ends and the neck opening. "Skyline" logo patch on the left sleeve. Mets script in Royal Blue over orange on front, player number 35 on front, exhibiting typical wide spacing seen on Mets jerseys 1978-82. 35 on back as well; Jones wore a size 40 jersey earlier in his career, moving to size 42 jersey as the years passed. This is a reasonable size for him to have worn in 1981-82. The jersey is autographed on the front and inscribed "#35 Game Worn 1981"

Jones was signed by the Mets prior to the start of the 1981 season, and was assigned #25, since his preferred number 35 was already being worn by pitcher Ed Lynch. For 1982, Lynch switched to 36 and Jones adopted #35. A light table examination clearly shows the change of the first digit on this jersey from 2 to 3, both front and back. Further, the replacement numbers are sewn on using a different thread type and wider stitch spacing than the other elements, both typical of a clubhouse number change (vs. one done at Rawlings). The Mets were a frugal team and it is not unusual for a player's prior year jersey to be used as his backup the next year.

After eight years in San Diego, where he had been an All-Star and won a Cy Young award, Jones' two years with the Mets were decidedly less spectacular. In those two years combined he appeared in a total of 51 games compiling an 8-18 record in 167 innings pitched. He was traded to the Pirates at the end of the season, and retired before ever pitching for the Bucs.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings red tag appropriate for 1981 outside the right front tail as is correct, noting the size as 42 (marked and measured). A Mets strip tag is sewn to its right with a gray zig zag stitch, the tag's lettering hand-embroidered in the familiar hand of the Rawlings factory stitcher onto a piece of gray knit fabric (also correct for the Mets) says 25 81 1… (player #25 1981, set 1). These are all accurate for Jones, as noted above.

Restoration Performed: As is typical of Mets jersey of this period, this jersey was presented to me without its nameplate. Of their six minor league clubs in the mid-1980s, five were named "Mets", and team jerseys were typically sent to one of these clubs after a their time was over in MLB. The thread on the numbers, especially the replacement numbers "3" on back and front showed significant wear that would indicate further use after 1982 in the minors, and I touched up said stitching only where needed to secure the numbers more tightly to the jersey. This jersey bore a clear stitching imprint of a removed nameplate in a steep arch, typical of the club and the proper length for the name "JONES" using the steep arch and wide letter spacing the team employed by the team. I made a new nameplate from a pair of fabric-matching period Mets' game worn pants and serged the edge like original. I media blasted the new lettering and dyed it to match the rest of the vintage elements and stitched it over the ghost of the old nameplate.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Top left: the jersey prior to restoration. Below, a close-up of the front number "3" showing a stitching pull ghost line (highlighted in red) that shows where the bottom of the original "2" had been, and two other examples of 1981 Mets road jerseys showing similar tagging to the jersey under evaluation.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good condition: number changes are team-original and reasonably explained, and the player nameplate has been properly restored with one near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher Randy Jones of the 1981-1982 New York Mets.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Daryl Strawberry 1987 New York Mets Home Game Jersey, Autographed

Examination Date: April 25, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0425J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Rawlings made size 42 (marked and measured, tapering to the waist is observed but not tagged) pullover jersey, home white with blue engineered-stye pinstripes, New York Mets Darryl Strawberry #18. "Mets" script on an angle on front in Royal Blue outlined by orange, "18" beneath it on the left chest. On back the number repeats with the player's name arched above using the Mets extra-condensed lettering font reserved for long names. All sewn-on elements are rendered two layer dazzle twill, a shiny ribbed fabric that the Mets began using on their home jerseys in 1987. Name on back is direct sewn, no nameplate is used as is correct for 1987. Wide orange/blue/orange racing stripes are sewn-in to the tops of the sleeves and up the sides of the garment, paired with a blue knit V-Neck collar. The jersey is autographed in blue Sharpie on the front below the "M" in Mets, and to the left of the back numbers. I have no professional opinion on the authenticity of the autographs.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings "Action Tailored" red tag correct for 1987 is sewn inside the lower left tail, noting the size as 42. A small white flag tab pinch-sewn under its right border reads SET 2 1987. There is no extra length tailoring marked, though at 34" in length this jersey is an inch longer than typical; Strawberry inconsistently sometimes received anywhere from 1" to 4" extra length on his jerseys. The Rawlings script is embroidered in white near the end of the right sleeve; 1987 was the first year that this appeared,

Wear & Repairs: The jersey is in excellent condition and shows at best very light use. Everything is stitched tightly, the fabric is clean without notable stains or pulls. There is no notable puckering of the lettering or the fabric beneath it. The tags are still crisp and unwrinkled. If worn and washed, I would judge it to be a single use.

Conclusion: This jersey matches all of the specifications of an authentic team issued and game-worn 1987 Mets Darryl Strawberry jersey in terms of size, tailoring, lettering style and fabrics. It does not display obvious use or wear, but shows no contrivance in its construction or stitching.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Eddie Murray 1993 New York Mets Autographed Road Game Jersey

Examination Date: January 30, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0130J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Russell-made six button full weight knit gray size 46 (marked and measured) jersey lettered for #33 Eddie Murray of the New York Mets. Russell was the sole on-field provider of Mets jerseys in 1993. This is a one year team road jersey design; plain gray body with sewn-in 1" elastic sleeve end trim in Royal Blue banded with orange through its center. Script "NEW YORK" with underline tail in blue/orange/white on the chest. The player number 33 is sewn to the center of the back, the name "MURRAY" is radially arched on the back above the numbers. All lettering is three layer twill, Varsity Royal, dark orange and white, in the correct fonts for Mets jerseys in 1993. On the left sleeve is the Mets team "Skyline" patch. Murray has autographed the front left of the chest in black Sharpie and added "#33" beneath. I have no professional opinion on the autograph, however there is a serialized JSA tag on the tail tag (AP56550) that certainly refers to the autograph. The jersey was presented to me without provenance, and without the accompanying JSA certificate.

Murray played first base for the Mets in 1992-1993. In 1993 he appeared in 154 games and compiled a batting average of .285 with 27 home runs. (Baseball Almanac) Murray is one of only seven players in MLB history to be in both the 3,000 hit club and the 500 home run club. After his 21 year career he was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in 2003. (Wikipedia)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: On the front outside left tail is the Russell Diamond Collection locker tag, in the correct style for 1993. Pinched beneath the tag is sewn an "Intera Fabric" tag that appeared only on some 1992 and early 1993 jerseys. The Russell R is embroidered in dark blue on the right sleeve end. Mets jerseys were not team-tagged in 1993, however the front tail placement of the Intera fabric tag and the lack of a back-of-the-collar size tag, plus the fact that the jersey is a size 46, not a size made for retail sale, indicate to me that this jersey was made for team issue. Murray wore progressively larger jerseys through his career, from size 44 in 1977 to size 50 in 1997. I would judge a 1993 jersey in size 46 is a reasonable match.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows very light wash and wear. A light table examination shows that all elements are original without alteration, and the jersey has no repairs or contrivances.

Conclusion: This jersey in review is in excellent condition, is properly lettered and has no alterations or contrivances of any kind, and has characteristics that tell me it was made to team-issue specifications and it shows minimal use. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to specifications and worn by Eddie Murray of the 1993 New York Mets.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Mike Scott 1979 New York Mets Rookie Season Road Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: August 6, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0806J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Rawlings-made New York Mets size 44 (marked and measured) two-button Henley two-button neck pullover jersey, Royal/orange/Royal knit trim bands the sleeve ends and the neck opening. "Skyline" logo patch on the left sleeve. Mets script in Royal Blue over orange on front, player number 30 on front, as issued to pitcher Mike Scott, exhibiting typical wide spacing seen on Mets jerseys 1978-79. 30 on back as well. Size 44 is appropriate for Scott at this stage of his career.

Scott joined the Mets as a rookie, and was on their opening day 1979 roster. He appeared in 18 games that season, 9 as a starter, compiling a 1-3 record with a 5.36 ERA in 52.1 innings pitched. He went on to have a 13 year MLB career, with three All-Star Game appearances, and finished his career with a 124-108 record. His player number was retired by the Houston Astros, where he had been traded in 1983. (Baseball Almanac, Wikipedia)

Restoration Performed: As is typical of Mets jerseys of this period, this jersey had been stripped of its original nameplate and was presented to me with an incorrect reproduction in place, which I removed. Of their five minor league clubs in 1980, four were named "Mets", and team jerseys were typically sent to one of these clubs after a season's worth of time was spent in MLB. This jersey bore a faint stitching imprint of a removed nameplate in a steep arch, typical of the club and the proper length for the name "SCOTT" using the wide letter spacing the team employed. I made a new nameplate from a pair of period Mets' game worn pants and serged the edge like original and stitched it over the ghost of the old nameplate. I media-blasted and organically dyed the new lettering to make it better match the game-aged original elements.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings red tag appropriate for 1979 inside the left front tail as is correct, noting the size as 44. A small white flag tab is pinch-sewn under the right side of the Rawlings tag, reading "SET1". A Mets team strip tag made of white tackle twill is sewn to its left with a white zig zag stitch, the tag's lettering hand-embroidered in the familiar hand of the Rawlings factory stitcher says 44 79 30... (size 44 1979 player number 30). These are all accurate for Scott.

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that the letting on the jersey is original, and that an original nameplate had been removed. This jersey is in very good used condition, probably having been used for a season or two in the minors before being retired. The knit trim, often bleached, is bright and unfaded on this example. The restored nameplate color match is very good as it was made from a pair of matching similar-aged pants. The lettering is burnished from use and washing, missing most of its original sheen. There is a small white vertical scuff mark on the bottom of the back "3".

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Above left: the jersey prior to restoration. Below, other examples of 1979 Mets road jerseys showing similar tagging to the jersey under evaluation. The TORRE example claims to have its original nameplate, the #29 example is missing its nameplate as most unrestored examples are.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good condition: the numbers on front and back are all original, and the back has been properly restored with a nameplate near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher Mike Scott of the 1979 New York Mets.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Howard Johnson 1992 New York Mets Game Used Road Jersey

Examination Date: July 3, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0703J07

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Russell-made six button full weight knit gray size 46 (measured as a 44) button front jersey lettered for #20 Howard Johnson of the New York Mets. (Johnson wore almost exclusively size 44 jerseys at this point in his career. I will note that the jerseys styles with the inset side trim always fit more snugly, so it is not unusual to see this one in a size 46.) Russell was the sole on-field provider of Mets road jerseys in 1992. Jersey has inset 2 1/2" wide "racing stripes" in white/orange and blue on the tops of the shoulders and down the sides. Arched Block-Condensed "NEW YORK" is in blue/orange/white on the chest. The player number 20 is sewn to the center of the back, the name "JOHNSON" is radially arched on the back above the numbers. All lettering is three layer in dazzle twill, correct for Mets jerseys in 1992. On the left sleeve is the black and white "S" disk memorial for William Shea, worn in 1992 only.

Howard Johnson enjoyed a 14 year MLB career, playing nine of those years with the Mets. In 1992, After a brilliant 1991 season, Johnson had a disappointing 1992 outing. Johnson appeared in 100 games for the Mets, hitting .223 with 7 home runs.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: On the front outside left tail is the Russell Diamond Collection locker tag, in the correct style for 1992. Pinched beneath the tag is sewn a 100% Polyester tag, and another fabric flag tag now washed clean of any writing that might have been on it. This tag may have had additional tailoring information on it. The Russell R is embroidered in white on the right sleeve end. Sewn beneath the Russell tagging is a 1 1/8" x 3 1/8" piece of white knit fabric with NEW YORK METS 92s printed in blue silkscreen plastisol ink. The tagging matches exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows good signs of wash or wear. All the lettering is still firmly attached and is slightly softened from repeated washing. The tagging is slightly wrinkled and puckered. The jersey fabric is slightly puckered underneath the sewn-on numbers. A light table examination shows that all lettering is original without alteration, and the jersey has no repairs or contrivances.

Conclusion: This jersey is in very good condition, is properly lettered, and has no alterations of any kind. It has the correct team tagging and uses the Mets' special lettering fabric. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and game worn by Howard Johnson of the 1992 New York Mets.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Dwight Gooden 1994 New York Mets Home Jersey

Examination Date: November 4. 2020 Certification Number: 20-1104J17

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1994 New York Mets Russell, six-button jersey, lettered for #16 Dwight Gooden. Royal Blue engineered pinstripe upward-sloped "Mets" script with underline, #16 below and on the left side. "GOODEN" arched on back and direct-sewn without a nameplate in the Mets correct block condensed font, with player number "16" centered below. All lettering is blue over orange over white, exactly as used on on-field jerseys in 1994. Jersey is autographed, "Doc Gooden Game Used 1994" on the back below the numbers and the autograph is certified by Beckett (I offer no opinion on validity of the signature). There are two sleeve patches, both unique to strike-shortened 1994: on the right sleeve is the MLB 125th Anniversary patch; on the left sleeve is the Mets rectangular "25th Anniversary of the Miracle Mets" patch. 1994 was Gooden's final season with the Mets after eleven years with the team. He posted a 3-4 record that year.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Russell Diamond Collection size 48 tag sewn on the lower left outside tail, in the correct style for use in 1994, with a small 100% polyester flag tab pinched below. The Russell "R" logo is direct embroidered on the end of the right sleeve. 1994 Mets jerseys were not team tagged in any way, though the presence of the 100% polyester flag tab and the absence of the collar flag size tag indicate that this jersey was indeed made to team-issue specifications and not for retail sale. Our exemplar library of authenticated Gooden game jerseys shows that at this point of his career he was wearing a size 46 jersey, and for years had preferred 2" extra length tailoring. This jersey is a size 48 without special tailoring.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey does not show obvious signs of wash or wear. A light table examination indicates that all elements are original and unaltered. All elements are crisp and all twill lettering unpuckered. If used, in my opinion it was not worn and washed more than once.

Conclusion: it is my opinion that this jersey is genuine issue to Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets during the 1994 season, with attribution of game use by Gooden by his inscription on the jersey. The jersey in review is reasonably sized for the player though it lacks his customary tailoring. It is properly team-lettered and numbered.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Rey Ordóñez 1996-1997 Style Game Model Mets Road Jersey

Examination Date: November 4. 2020 Certification Number: 20-1104J19

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: AIS-made six button full weight knit gray button front jersey lettered for #0 Rey Ordóñez of the New York Mets. AIS was the sole on-field provider of Mets road jerseys, in this specific style 1995-1997. Ordóñez joined the Mets in 1996 and work #0 in 1996-1997 only. Jersey has royal blue soutache trim 1/2" from the sleeve ends and on the placket. Stylized "NEW YORK" is arched in blue/orange on the chest. The player number, 0, is sewn to the left chest and the center of the back, the name "ORDONEZ" with tilde is radially arched on the back above the numbers. All lettering is to team specification. The Mets' skyline disk patch is sewn on the left sleeve, and is the correct style for 1996-1997. Notably, in both 1996 and 1997 the Mets wore commemorative patches on the right sleeve that do not appear own this jersey. In 1996, the Frank McSherry memorial was direct embroidered (not a patch) on the sleeve end of all on-field jerseys after the first few days of the season and then worn all year. In 1997 the Jackie Robinson "Breaking Barriers" patch was worn all season long. This jersey has neither patch, and the light table reveals no signs that either was ever there. The jersey is autographed on the upper right chest. (I have no opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Inside the back right tail is the AIS locker tag in the correct style for 1996-1997. A tiny size 42 flag tag is added below (a reasonable size for Ordóñez to have worn). There is no visible AIS tagging on the jersey, as is contractually regulated. Only Russell could display its brand on sleeves in those years.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows no real signs of wash or wear. All the lettering is still crisp and the tagging is unblemished. A light table examination shows that all lettering is original without alteration.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in excellent new condition, is properly lettered, and numbered, and appears to have no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications for Rey Ordóñez of the New York Mets, but not game worn.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Tom Glavine New York Mets Game Worn Autographed Road Jersey

Examination Date: March 5, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0305J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 2006-07 New York Mets #47 Tom Glavine Majestic full weight knit size 44, six button gray jersey. The Mets "New York" road wordmark is sewn arched across the chest in glacier-pattered blue tackle twill outlined with orange and then a black drop shadow. Extra velcro closure beneath the wordmark. Royal blue soutache is sewn on the placket and 1/2" from the sleeve ends. The three-color player number "47" is sewn to both the back and the left front in the same colors as the team wordmark, as is correct. The player name and number are sewn to the back, again in the same twill pattern as the front. The Mets "skyline" patch is sewn to the left sleeve in the style incorporating the black drop shadow around the Mets script. The autograph and inscription is for pitcher Dontrelle Willis: "To Dontrelle-Keep up the good work. I enjoy watching you. Good Luck! "Tom Glavine" is written in black Sharpie between the back player number and name (I have no opinion on the autograph). Glavine played for the Mets 2003-2007. Trying to narrow down the exact year of use for this jersey is difficult— the Mets wore this style and made by Majestic for all these years, all with the same manufacturer tag; we can eliminate 2004 as a possible year of use because that year's jerseys had commemorative sleeve patches. In our archives, 2003-2005 jerseys seemed to all have year/set flag tags. Jerseys attributed to 2006-2007 seem to arbitrarily lack year/set tags.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Period-correct Majestic "Authentic Collection" manufacturer tagging sewn on the inside left front tail. A small size "44" flag tag is sewn beneath, bottom center. Majestic "twin peaks" logo embroidered onto the end of the right sleeve. The MLB Silhouetted batter patch in orange white and blue is affixed to the outside back of the collar. The inside left side seam has a fabric tag sewn in that is frayed and washed clean of its printing. There are no team year, set or tailoring tags on this jersey, which is correct. There are two very frayed fabric tags pinched under the bottom of the Majestic tag, also washed clean of any printing that may have been on them. However, based on the jerseys appearance and Glavine's preferred tailoring, we can assume they referred to extra jersey length and extra length sleeves.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all stitching is original and unaltered. The inside tagging shows extreme fraying and fading from wash wear that is consistent with long term use. However, the jersey itself presents well and all sewn elements are crisp and bright and show minimal wear, aspects somewhat typical of a jersey worn by a pitcher.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tailored, tagged, lettered, and numbered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It exhibits game use and wash wear, and appears to have no alterations of any kind. Given the lack of year/set tagging, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine and was worn by Tom Glavine of the New York Mets during most likely in either the 2006 or 2007 seasons.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Pedro Martinez 2006 New York Mets Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: January 21, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0201J14

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 2006-tagged New York Mets #45 Pedro Martinez Majestic six button full weight knit size 46 gray jersey. The Mets "New York" road wordmark is sewn arched across the chest in glacier-patterned blue tackle twill outlined with non-glacier orange and then a non-glacier black drop shadow. Extra Velcro closure beneath the wordmark. Royal blue soutache is sewn on the placket and 1/2" from the sleeve ends. The three-color player number "45" is sewn to both the back and the left front in the same colors as the team wordmark, as is correct. The player name and number are sewn to the back, again in the same twill pattern as the front. The Mets "skyline" patch is sewn to the left sleeve in the style incorporating the black drop shadow around the Mets script. The player has autographed the 5 on the back with his name and the inscription "CY 97-99-00" in silver Sharpie.I have no opinion on the autograph, but it is certified with a Beckett letter, included.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Year-correct Majestic "Authentic Collection" manufacturer tagging sewn on the inside left front tail; the correct location. A small size "46" flag tag is sewn beneath, bottom center, plus a SET 1 2006 fag tab is pinched beneath it to the right. Majestic logo embroidered in Royal blue onto the end of the left sleeve. The MLB Silhouetted batter patch in orange white and blue is affixed to the outside back of the collar. The inside left side seam has a fabric tag sewn in with the Majestic code "0062" printed on it, the code that designates a jersey made for team use.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all stitching is original and unaltered. The inside seam tagging shows major fraying and fading from wash wear that is consistent with a season of use; the Mets had five different uniform choices to wear in these years, and likely two sets of each kind. Therefore it is reasonable to conclude that any single style/set jersey may have been worn by a player in fewer than a dozen games. The jersey is dirty, splashed with something that has caused blotches of dark staining on the front and especially on the tails both front and back.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged, lettered, and numbered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It exhibits game use and wash wear, and has been photo matched. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine and was worn by Pedro Martinez in the 2006 season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Tom Glavine New York Mets 2006 Autographed Home White Game Jersey

Examination Date: March 5, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0305J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 2006 tagged New York Mets #47 Tom Glavine Majestic full weight knit size 44, six button white alternate jersey. The Mets script wordmark is sewn slanted across the chest in glacier-pattered blue tackle twill outlined with orange and then a black drop shadow. Extra velcro closure beneath the wordmark. Royal blue soutache is sewn on the placket and 1/2" from the sleeve ends. The three-color player number "47" is sewn to both the back and the left front in the same colors as the team wordmark, as is correct. The player name and number are sewn to the back, again in the same twill pattern as the front. The Mets "skyline" patch is sewn to the left sleeve in the style WITHOUT incorporating the black drop shadow around the Mets script, not typical of Mets jerseys of this period (1999-2009). However, close examination of news photos from the 2006 season do indeed show that some players (Glavine included) were issued their snow-white jerseys with the old style, pre 1998 non-black-drop shadow sleeve patch! The jersey is autographed in black Sharpie between the back player number and name adding the inscription "CY 91, 98" (I have no professional opinion on the autograph).

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Period-correct Majestic "Authentic Collection" manufacturer tagging sewn on the inside left front tail. A small size "44" flag tag is sewn beneath, bottom center. Majestic "twin peaks" logo embroidered onto the end of the right sleeve. The MLB Silhouetted batter patch in orange white and blue is affixed to the outside back of the collar. The inside left side seam has a fabric tag sewn in that bears the style code "0062", the code used for team-issued style full weight knit jersey. There are two crisp, slightly curled fabric tags pinched under the bottom of the Majestic tag, +1 slv and +2" body. This is Glavine's preferred size and tailoring, as seen on exemplars in our reference library. Notably: the bottom stitching line of the tag has been altered, showing where the stitches were ripped out and then re-sewn, assumedly when the year and tailoring tags were added. This is not typical, but in this case I will note that the special tailoring DOES exist, and there was certainly no conscious effort to hide the new stitching as it is misaligned with the first set of holes. (See photos on the next page.)

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all stitching is original and unaltered. A careful examination of the stitching on this jersey leads me to conclude that the team logo and the player name and number were all sewn on this jersey at the same time on the same machine with identical sized stitches and thread. The jersey shows minimal wear, perhaps having been washed once or twice, with a couple of small pulls on the fabric (sleeve under the disk patch, front placket near the neck) It notably does not show the typical chafing a jersey with Velcro causes to itself in the washing machine, where the Velcro strip abrades the fabric that surrounds it.

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Pedro Martinez 2005 New York Mets Home Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: June 3, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0603J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 2005-tagged New York Mets #45 Pedro Martinez Majestic six-button full-weight knit size 46 white jersey with Royal Blue engineered pinstripes. The Mets script wordmark is sewn arched across the chest in glacier-patterned blue tackle twill outlined with non-glacier orange and then a non-glacier black drop shadow. Extra Velcro closure beneath the wordmark. The three-color player number "45" is sewn to both the back and the left front in the same colors as the team wordmark, as is correct. The player name and number are sewn to the back, in the same twill pattern as the front. The Mets "skyline" patch is sewn to the left sleeve in the style incorporating the barely visible black drop shadow around the Mets script. Experts know that Martinez specified his pitching game-day Mets uniforms custom-made with mesh sleeve inserts, or else he sliced the bottoms of the sleeves open. This example has white mesh inserts sewn into the seams.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Year-correct Majestic "Authentic Collection" manufacturer tagging sewn on the inside left front tail; the correct location. A small size "46" flag tag is sewn beneath, bottom center, plus a SET 1 2005 flag tab is pinched beneath it to the right. Finally, a flag tab noting "2" extra body" is added to the left. Majestic logo embroidered in Royal blue onto the end of the left sleeve. The MLB Silhouetted Batter patch in orange, white and blue is affixed to the outside back of the collar. The inside left side seam has a fabric tag sewn in with the Majestic code "0062" printed on it, the code that designates a jersey made for team use.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all stitching is original and unaltered. The set and tailoring tagging is curled and shows signs of hot water washing. The inside seam tagging shows wear that is consistent with multiple use. the Mets had five different uniform choices to wear in these years, and likely at least two sets of each kind. Therefore it is reasonable to conclude that any single style/set jersey may have been worn by a player in fewer than a dozen games. The jersey is splashed with dirt that has caused blotches of dark staining on the tails, both front and back.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged and lettered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It exhibits use and wash wear. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine and was worn by Pedro Martinez of the New York Mets in the 2005 season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Al Leiter 2001 Mets Home Black Alternate Game Jersey

Examination Date: November 25, 2022 Certification Number: 22-1125J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 2001 Rawlings six button full weight knit black home Alternate style jersey lettered for #22 Al Leiter of the New York Mets. Rawlings was the sole on-field provider of Mets jerseys in 2001. Black-bodied jersey has royal blue knit ribbon trim 1/2" from the sleeve ends and bordering the placket. Stylized "METS" is slanted in blue/white/orange drop shadow on the chest. The blue layer is in team-specific "Glacier" style pattered fabric. The player number 22, is sewn to the left chest and the center of the back, the name "LEITER" is radially arched on the back above the numbers. All lettering is to team specification, and the top layer (only) of all lettering is in blue glacier twill, a herringbone-patterned fabric used by the Mets 1997-2011. The Mets' black background "Midnight" variant of the skyline disk patch is sewn on the left sleeve, and is the correct style for 2001. A Velcro closure is added between the second and third buttons. The post 9-11-2001 Mets sleeve embroidery is present on this example, matching exemplars. Also indicating use post 9-11 is the gold-edged USA flag stitched to the back of the neck.The MLB silhouetted batter patch is sewn to the back of the neck, but is properly covered by the flag patch sewn on top of it.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Inside the front left tail is the Rawlings Authentic Collection locker tag. There are two added flag tags: A size 48 flag tag is added below (the proper size worn by Leiter in 2001, matching exemplars) and a small flag tab that reads "SET 2 2001" is sewn to its right. The Rawlings "R" inside an ellipse is embroidered in blue to the end of the left sleeve. Contractually in 2000 Rawlings was allowed to have its logo displayed there.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all lettering is original without alteration. The jersey shows signs of light wash and wear. All the lettering is still crisp, the stitching tight, and the tagging is slightly curled but unblemished. There is some puckering on the team sleeve patch. Given the fact that the Mets had five different uniform styles in 2001, and the players were issued at minimum two sets of each style, the wear this jersey displays is entirely reasonable for at least a partial season's worth of use.

Conclusion: It is my considered opinion that this jersey is a genuine issue to Al Leiter of the New York Mets in the 2001 Season. It exhibits appropriate use and wash wear with no alterations of any kind. It is properly tagged, lettered, and numbered, including post-9/11 memorials.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

David Wright 2005 New York Mets Game Worn Black Home Alternate Jersey

Examination Date: June 3, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0603J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 2005-tagged New York Mets #5 David Wright Majestic six-button full-weight knit size 46 black jersey with Royal Blue soutache trim. The Mets script wordmark is sewn arched across the chest in glacier-patterned blue tackle twill outlined with non-glacier white and then a non-glacier orange drop shadow. Extra Velcro closure added beneath the wordmark. Royal Blue soutache outlines the placket and is also sewn 1/2" from the end of each sleeve. The three-color player number "5" is sewn to both the back and the left front in the same colors as the team wordmark, as is correct. The player name and number are sewn to the back, again in the same twill pattern as the front. The Mets midnight-variant "skyline" patch is sewn to the left sleeve in the style incorporating the orange drop shadow around the Mets script. Wright wore both size 46 and 48 jerseys at this time of his career. The back number is autographed by the player in silver Sharpie. I have no professional opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Year-correct Majestic "Authentic Collection" manufacturer tagging sewn on the inside left front tail; the correct location. A small size "46" flag tag is sewn beneath, bottom center, plus a SET 1 2005 flag tab is pinched beneath it to the right. Majestic logo embroidered in white onto the end of the left sleeve. The MLB Silhouetted batter patch in orange, white and blue is affixed to the outside back of the collar. The inside left side seam has a fabric tag sewn in with the Majestic code "0062" printed on it, the code that designates a jersey made for team use.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all stitching is original and unaltered. The set and tailoring tagging is curled and shows signs of hot water washing. The inside seam tagging shows wear that is consistent with multiple use. the Mets had five different uniform choices to wear in these years, and likely at least two sets of each kind. Therefore it is reasonable to conclude that any single style/set jersey may have been worn by a player in fewer than a dozen games. The jersey is splashed with dirt, mostly visible on the back to the right of the player number and appears to be unwashed.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged and lettered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It exhibits appropriate use and wash wear. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine and was worn by David Wright of the New York Mets in the 2005 season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Mike Piazza 1999 New York Mets Game Worn Black Road Alternate Jersey

Examination Date: March 15, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0315J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1999 Russell six button full weight knit black Road Alternate style jersey, size 50 with special tailoring, lettered for #31 Mike Piazza of the New York Mets. While the jersey has no year tagging, 1999 was the only year that Russell made these jerseys both without the MLB Silhouetted batter on the back of the neck (added in 2000), and with the black-themed "Midnight" Mets disk logo on the sleeve, introduced in 1999. Jersey has narrow royal blue soutache trim 1/2" from the sleeve ends and bordering the placket. Stylized "NEW YORK" is arched in blue/white/orange drop shadow on the chest. All other player lettering on the jersey follows the same color theme. The player number, 31, is sewn to the left chest and the center of the back, the name "PIAZZA" is radially arched on the back above the numbers. All lettering is to team specification, and the top layer (only) of all lettering is in blue glacier twill, a herringbone-patterned fabric used by the Mets 1997-2011. A Velcro closure is added between the second and third buttons.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Outside on the front left tail is the Russell Diamond Collection locker tag as used in 1999, showing the garment's size as 50, correct for Piazza. There are two added flag tags: A 2" extra length flag tag is added below (the proper tailoring for Piazza) and a small flag tag that reads "100% Polyester". The Russell R logo is direct-embroidered on the end of the right sleeve. While a set of black 1999 jerseys was also made for the team by Rawlings, contractually in 1999 only Russell was allowed to have its logo displayed in that spot.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examinations shows that all lettering is original without alteration. The jersey shows signs of light to moderate wash and wear. All the lettering is still crisp, the stitching tight, and the tagging is slightly curled and mildly frayed but unblemished. Given the fact that the Mets had five different uniform styles in 1999, and the players were issued at minimum two sets of each style, the wear this jersey displays is entirely reasonable for a partial season's worth of use. As a note, there are several shiny spots and horizontal shiny scars on the black fabric on back both above and below the player name, characteristic of the improper use of an iron or a heat plate and may have occurred when the jersey was lettered.

Conclusion: It is my considered opinion that this jersey is a genuine issue and worn by Mike Piazza of the New York Mets in the 1999 Season. It exhibits moderate use and wash wear with no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It is properly tagged, lettered, and numbered, and is the proper size with special tailoring preferred by Piazza.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Rickey Henderson 2000 Mets Road Black Alternate Jersey

Examination Date: November 4, 2020 Certification Number: 20-1104J18

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 2000 Rawlings six button full weight knit black Road Alternate style jersey lettered for #24 Rickey Henderson of the New York Mets. Rawlings was the sole on-field provider of Mets road jerseys in 2000. Jersey has royal blue soutache trim 1/2" from the sleeve ends and bordering the placket. Stylized "NEW YORK" is arched in blue/white/orange drop shadow on the chest. The player number, 24, is sewn to the left chest and the center of the back, the name "HENDERSON" is radially arched on the back above the numbers. All lettering is to team specification, and the top layer (only) of all lettering is in blue glacier twill, a herringbone-patterned fabric used by the Mets 1997-2011. The Mets' black background "Midnight" variant of the skyline disk patch is sewn on the left sleeve, and is the correct style for 2000. The MLB silhouetted batter patch is sewn to the back of the neck, newly added to all MLB team jerseys for 2000. A Velcro closure is added between the second and third buttons.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Inside the front left tail is the Rawlings Authentic Collection locker tag. There are four added flag tags: A size 44 flag tag is added below (the proper size worn by Henderson) and a small flag tag that reads "SET 2 2000" is sewn to its right. Tags also designate MINUS 1 INCH (length) and SLEEVE MINUS 1 INCH. The jersey displays the custom-tailored flat tails preferred by Henderson. The Rawlings "R" inside an eclipse is embroidered in blue to the end of the left sleeve. Contractually in 2000 Rawlings was allowed to have its logo displayed there.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examinations shows that all lettering is original without alteration. The jersey shows signs of light wash and wear. All the lettering is still crisp, the stitching tight, and the tagging is slightly curled but unblemished.. Given the fact that the Mets had five different uniform styles in 2000, and the players were issued at minimum two sets of each style, the wear this jersey displays is entirely reasonable for a partial season's worth of use.

Conclusion: It is considered my Opinion that this jersey is a genuine issue to Rickey Henderson of the New York Mets in the 2000 Season. It exhibits appropriate use and wash wear with no alterations of any kind. It is properly tagged, lettered, and numbered, and has all the special tailoring preferred by Rickey Henderson.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Jose Reyes 2007 New York Mets Black Road Alternate Game Jersey

Examination Date: January 18, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0118J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 2007-tagged New York Mets #7 Jose Reyes Majestic six-button Cool-base knit size 44 black jersey with Royal Blue soutache trim. The Mets Road "NEW YORK" wordmark is sewn arched across the chest in glacier-patterned blue tackle twill outlined with non-glacier white and then a non-glacier orange drop shadow. Royal Blue soutache outlines the placket and is also sewn 1/2" from the end of each sleeve. The three-color player number "7" is sewn to both the back and the left front in the same colors as the team wordmark, as is correct. The player name and number are sewn to the back, again in the same twill pattern as the front. The Mets midnight-variant "skyline" patch is sewn to the left sleeve in the style incorporating the orange drop shadow around the Mets script. Reyes wore size 44 jerseys throughout his career.

In 2007 Reyes played in 160 games for the Mets, batting 280 with 12 home runs. Reyes is a four-time MLB All-Star. He led MLB in triples in 2005, 2006, 2008, and 2011. Reyes also led the National League (NL) in stolen bases in 2005, 2006, and 2007. He was the NL batting champion in 2011. He is also the New York Mets' all-time leader in triples and stolen bases. (Baseball Almanac, Wikipedia)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Year-correct Majestic "Authentic Collection" Cool-base style manufacturer tagging heat pressed on the outside of the left front tail, noting the size as 44 (marked and measured) ; the correct location. A SET 3 2007 flag tab is pinched into the inside side seam, stacked with two other tags: the Majestic garment style tag that shows the jersey as style 0063, the proper code for team issue Cool-base jerseys, and a small tag noting +1" sleeve length. The Majestic logo embroidered in white onto the end of the left sleeve. The MLB Silhouetted batter patch in orange, white and blue is affixed to the outside back of the collar. This jersey was presented without provenance. And while the MLB authentication/hologram program was in operation in 2007, it was not implemented universally. The Mets were an early purveyor of team-issued gear sold at its stadium store, and sold it usually "as is" without any letters of authenticity.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all stitching is original and unaltered. The set and tailoring tagging is curled and shows signs of repeated hot water washing. The inside seam tagging shows wear that is consistent with multiple use. the Mets had five different uniform choices to wear in these years, and had multiple sets of each kind (this one is marked as set 3). Therefore it is reasonable to conclude that any single style/set jersey may have been worn by a player in fewer than a dozen games. The jersey presents well, but has clearly been worn and washed. There are a few stray loose threads and scuff marks.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged and lettered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It exhibits appropriate use and wash wear. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine to Jose Reyes of the New York Mets in the 2007 season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Document of Restoration

New York Mets 1973 Road Jersey #23

Examination Date: September 26, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0926J02

This is not an opinion of authentication; it is simply a documentation of a restoration performed.

Description: Gray double knit button front New York Mets jersey, with #23 in team font on both front and back. Blue soutache on the placket, Mets "skyline" patch on the left sleeve. Wilson made size 42 with team strip tagging : "23 73 42 inside the back of the collar. Linen lining inside the placket. The jersey is in fair condition with fading, staining and missing a button and some of its trim from wear.

Restoration Performed: Jersey had been repurposed for minor league use, with the original "NEW YORK" stripped from the front and blue-orange Mets script replacing it. This was a common fate for team road jerseys of the time. We stripped the Mets script off the front, cleaned the glue outlines, and steamed the fabric to help erase the old holes. The light table revealed the clear evidence of the original NEW YORK lettering ghosts in the team font, with faint impressions of the lettering outlines and a couple of holes in the fabric in the corners of the old lettering caused during removal (marked in the photo below with small circles) I recut new lettering, media blasted it and dyed it to simulate age to match the original player numbers on the jersey, then stitched it in place. using bleached colored thread to match original appearance. I replaced the shredded soutache trim with period-correct materials.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Tom Seaver 1982 New York Mets "Press Events" Home Game Jersey

Examination Date: June 4, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0604J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Rawlings-made New York Mets size 46 (marked and measured) two-button Henley two-button neck pullover jersey, white with Royal Blue engineered pinstripes, Royal/orange/Royal knit trim bands the sleeve ends and the neck opening. No "Skyline" logo patch on the left sleeve, that feature exclusive to 1982. Mets script in Royal Blue over orange on front, player number 41 on front, as issued to pitcher Tom Seaver, exhibiting typical wide front number-spacing seen on Mets jerseys of that year. 41 on back as well in correct fonts. Player name on a white single-needle serged edge nameplate. Fonts are correct for the team as used by Rawlings in 1982. Size 46 is appropriate for Seaver at this stage of his career, matching exemplars. Seaver has signed the jersey in bold blue Sharpie below the front numbers. I have no professional opinion on the authenticity of the autograph. Auction photos show the presence of a serialized PSA sticker inside the neck, but that sticker was no longer in place when I examined the jersey here.

Tom Seaver was re-signed by the Mets from the Reds in December of 1982 and played for the Mets again for a single season in 1983 before leaving for the Chicago White Sox in 1984. A hometown hero, Seaver's re-signing created a lot of local excitement, and was well covered in the New York media. As is the custom, a jersey was produced for Seaver to display and wear at these events. While I do not specialize in photo-matching, pictures of him at his team press conference as well as in team PR photos on Getty Images and on the cover of the May-June issue of New York Sports Magazine clearly show Seaver holding and wearing the jersey in review, without question. Dozens of points of alignment clearly show the pinstripes crossing the lettering as well as their position in relation to the neck buttons and the sleeve end and collar trim, as well as where the sleeves are sewn to the body of the jersey. There are also two tiny pieces of blue thread poking out under the connector stroke between the letters "TS" in METS On the front, which is visible on the magazine cover photo.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings red tag appropriate for 1982 correctly sewn inside the back of the neck, showing the size as 46 (marked and measured). There is no year or set tagging on this jersey, and notably when Seaver played his first regular season game for the Mets in 1983, the team had changed uniform styles, wearing new ones with wide "racing stripes" over the tops of the shoulders and up the sides; but because the Mets (technically) wore their 1982 uniforms in 1983 spring training, it is very possible that Seaver could have worn this particular jersey there if the need arose, however, in 1983 Spring Training, baseball cards and news photos show the team wearing their blue BP jerseys.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that the lettering on the jersey is original. This jersey is in excellent condition, there is a ground- in dirt mark on the front left shoulder, perhaps where a bat handle with pine tar would have been laid. The knit trim, often bleached on period examples, is bright and unfaded here. There are no repairs and the jersey is without contrivance.

Seaver Rejoins the Mets With a Year Guaranteed

Here, Seaver as he appeared when the team signed him, wearing the jersey in review. Besides the dozens of points of intersection of elements, note the tiny stray blue thread ends that are visible on the front wordmark. Below, the jersey being held up by Seaver at his signing press conference, overlaid with the image of the jersey in hand showing perfect alignment with all elements. Bottom center shows the PSA sticker (certifying the autograph) that is no longer with the jersey as reviewed.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in excellent original condition: The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher Tom Seaver of the New York Mets prior to the start of the 1983 regular season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Chapter 25

Washington Nationals

Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys

1970–2025, Tenth Edition

William F. Henderson

Nationals Uniform History Notes

- The current Washington Nationals were born for the 2005 season when the Montreal Expos relocated to Washington, DC.
- The Orioles opposed the Expos relocation to Washington, contending the Washington market was "theirs" and the competition would be harmful to them. MLB did not agree, and the move was approved.
- The team name was not actually decided until very late; and many hoped that the Senators name would be revived. Others wanted the team named the "Grays" after the Negro League franchise that had sometimes called Washington, DC home. Controversy swirled, and the city council of the District of Columbia argued that "Senators" was an inappropriate name for a team from the District, since "Senators" was a federal Government term, and the team belonged to the District, not the Federals. Whatever.
- While some rumors persisted that the Nationals would retain elements of the Expos uniform, this was not the case. The Nationals uniform was completely new, with ornate three–color, bevel–lettered wordmarks on both home and road jerseys. The original team colors were navy, red, and metallic gold.
- Despite being in only their 21st year, it is surprising that this relatively brief period requires so many pages of detail to cover it!
- Not only have the Nationals made constant changes to their uniforms in their first two decades of existence, but they have used an array of alternate jerseys, changed batting practice jerseys with abandon, and have participated in their fair share of Turn Back the Clock games.
- To start, inaugural player numbers are an ornate affair with a 3D beveled look that frankly looks good on paper but is hard to visualize in three dimensions when sewn on cloth. Home jersey says "NATIONALS," road jersey "WASHINGTON."
- While that home jersey is used unchanged through the 2010 season, the road jersey lasts only four years before being replaced in 2009 by a script "Washington" jersey.
- For 2011, the home uniform also changes to the curly–W logo, and all player numbers are simplified to eliminate the three–toned, gold–beveled font.
- The first alternate jersey appears for 2006, in bright red with an interlocking "DC" on the left chest. It changes for 2009 to have the curly–W logo on the chest, and two years later it is modified slightly again.
- A rather ornate stars–and–stripes–themed blue jersey appears for 2009, and features the "DC" logo on the chest. This jersey lasts only two years before it too is changed to also feature the curly–W wordmark, but now in stars–and–stripes. It disappears after 2019, but not before it is joined by a similarly decorated white version in 2017.
- The 2018 season introduces an additional blue alternate with a script "Nationals" on front—a feature that had only appeared on batting practice jerseys before. The jersey is a fixture in the team's 2019 postseason title run. A white alternate version of the jersey joins it in 2020, becoming the team's primary home jersey in 2023. Both script jerseys lose front numbers with the transition to Nike's VPE template in 2024.
- In 2022, the Nationals introduce their first City Connect jersey, inspired by the cherry blossoms that bloom each spring in Washington. The soft gray base, adorned with sublimated cherry blossoms, was paired with pale pink accents and "Washington" appeared across the chest in a script font resembling park signage. A cherry blossom branch adorned the left chest, creating the most delicate and thematically cohesive designs in the City Connect series.
- With the Nike VPE template rollout in 2024, two new jerseys make their debuts: a road gray block–letter "WASHINGTON" replacing the venerable script "Washington" after a 15–year run, and an alternate home white pullover with contrast–raglan sleeves that is rarely worn. This bumps the alternate red curly–W jersey from the lineup, the first time the team is without a red alternate since its maiden 2005 season. The pullover is notable because its one of the first two to appear with the VPE template, along with an Angels nostalgia–inspired jersey.
- In 2025, the pullover is mothballed after just one year and the alternate red curly–W is reinstated, albeit with some changes to the trim elements
- A City Connect 2.0 uniform also debuts in 2025, the base color a faded American denim blue, evoking the city's historic architecture and weathered streets, while a subtle street grid pattern was integrated into the fabric to reflect Washington's iconic layout. The 3D–style interlocking "DC" logo on the chest paid homage to both the Nationals' 2005–2010 branding and the 1956 Washington Senators. Pink cherry blossoms on the patch and cap tie the design back to the team's CC 1.0 look..
- In Turn Back the Clock games, the Nationals have appeared as the Montreal Expos and also the old American League Washington Senators. Homestead Grays uniforms often used for Negro Leagues tributes.

I am always looking for new information and better photographs. If you can share new information, or offer corrections to this material, please send a note to me, at gameworngguides@gmail.com Please tell me which page you are referencing. All contributors will be recognized by name in a future edition.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005–2010

2005–2008

2006–2008

2009–2010

2011–2019

2011 – 2020

2017–2020

All Jerseys Change to Flex Base

2018–2020

2020

Nationals Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2005	Home White	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Inaugural team shield	–	Majestic
	Road Gray	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Team Disc/words	–	Majestic
2006	Home White	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Team Disc/Stars	–	Majestic
	Road Gray	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Team Disc/Stars	–	Majestic
	Alternate Red	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Team Disc/Stars		Majestic
2007	Home White	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Team Disc/Stars	RFK Stadium^	Majestic
	Road Gray	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Team Disc/Stars	–	Majestic
	Alternate Red	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Team Disc/Stars	RFK Stadium^	Majestic
2008	Home White	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Team Disc/Stars	New Stadium Inaugural	Majestic
	Road Gray	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Team Disc/Stars	–	Majestic
	Alternate Red	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Team Disc/Stars	New Stadium Inaugural	Majestic
2009	Home White	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Interlocked DC	–	Majestic
	Road Gray	3 color special font	4 color special font	3 color block	no	Interlocked DC	–	Majestic
	Alternate Red	3 color special font*	4 color special font	2 color block	no	Interlocked DC	–	Majestic
	Alternate Blue	2 color special font*	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Team Shield	–	Majestic
2010	Home White	3 color special font	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Interlocked DC	–	Majestic
	Road Gray	3 color special font	4 color special font	3 color block	no	Interlocked DC	–	Majestic
	Alternate Red	3 color special font*	4 color special font	2 color block	no	Interlocked DC	–	Majestic
	Alternate Blue	2 color special font*	3 color special font	2 color block	no	Team Shield	–	Majestic
2011	Home White (Curly W)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Alternate Blue	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
2012	Home White (Curly W)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Alternate Blue	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
2013	Home White (Curly W)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	Navy Yard	Majestic
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	Navy Yard 	Majestic
	Alternate Blue	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
2014	Home White (Curly W)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Alternate Blue	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
2015	Home White (Curly W)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	10th Anniversary	Majestic
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Team Disc	10th Anniversary	Majestic
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	10th Anniversary	Majestic
	Alternate Blue	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	10th Anniversary	Majestic
2016	Home White (Curly W)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Alternate Blue	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
2017	Home White (Curly W)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Alternate White	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
	Alternate Blue	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Majestic
2018	Home White (Curly W)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	All Star Game	Majestic
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Team Disc	All Star Game	Majestic
	Alternate White	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	All Star Game	Majestic
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	All Star Game	Majestic
	Alternate Blue	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	All Star Game	Majestic
	Alt Blue (Script)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	All Star Game	Majestic
2019	Home White (Curly W)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	MLB 150th	Majestic
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Team Disc	MLB 150th	Majestic
	Alternate White	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	MLB 150th	Majestic
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	MLB 150th	Majestic
	Alternate Blue	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	MLB 150th	Majestic
	Alt Blue (Script)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	MLB 150th	Majestic
2020	Home White (Curly W)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	2019 WS Champs	Nike
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Team Disc	2019 WS Champs	Nike
	Alternate White	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	2019 WS Champs	Nike
	Alt White (Script)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	2019 WS Champs	Nike
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	2019 WS Champs	Nike
	Alt Blue (Script)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	2019 WS Champs	Nike

^ September 14–23 only

* Front numbers are the same font as the back, but lack the 3D–style sculpturing found on the back numbers.  Navy Yard shooting memorial patches worn only after September 21 through to end of season.

© GameWornGuides.com

These six styles continue from previous years

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2021	Home White (Curly W)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Nike
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Nike
	Alternate White	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Nike
	Alt White (Script)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Nike
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Nike
	Alt Blue (Script)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Nike
2022	Home White (Script)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Nike
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Nike
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Nike
	Alt Blue (Script)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc	–	Nike
	City Connect	–	Custom 3 color	1 color block	no	Recolored DC flag	Gray/pink team disc	Nike
2023	Home White (Script)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Ted Lerner Memorial/Team Disc‡	–	Nike
	Road Gray (Script)	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color Varsity Bold	3 color block	no	Ted Lerner Memorial/Team Disc‡	–	Nike
	Alternate Red	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Ted Lerner Memorial/Team Disc‡	–	Nike
	Alt Blue (Script)	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Ted Lerner Memorial/Team Disc‡	–	Nike
	City Connect	–	Custom 3 color	1 color block	no	Ted Lerner Memorial/ Recolored DC flag‡	–	Nike
2024	Home White (Script)	–	2 color Varsity Bold (perf)	Nike Block 2 color	no	Team Disc‡	–	Nike
	Road Gray (Block "Washington")	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold (perf)	Nike Block 2 color	no	Team Disc‡	–	Nike
	Alternate White Pullover	–	2 color Varsity Bold (perf)	Nike Block 2 color	no	DC Outline‡	–	Nike
	Alt Blue (Script)	–	2 color Varsity Bold (perf)	Nike Block 2 color	no	Team Disc‡	–	Nike
	City Connect	–	Custom 3 color (perf)	Nike Block 1 color	no	Recolored DC flag‡	–	Nike
2025	Home White (Script)	–	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc‡	–	Nike
	Road Gray (Block "Washington")	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc‡	–	Nike
	Alternate Red	–	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc‡	–	Nike
	Alt Blue (Script)	–	2 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	Team Disc‡	–	Nike
	City Connect 2.0	–	3 color Varsity Bold	2 color block	no	District of Columbia Disc‡	–	Nike

© GameWornGuides.com

Home, Road and Alternate Jerseys

2005–2010 Home

Bill Henderson Collection

The Nationals' home jersey features the wordmark "NATIONALS" across the front in a bridge design—flat on top and arched on the bottom. All lettering is red/metallic gold/navy. Red top layer is a very complex cut shape to give the appearance of being beveled. Lettering and numbers front and back are similarly styled. NOB is two–color, red/navy, no nameplate used. Inaugural sleeve patch says "Established 1905" at the bottom. Patch changes to a simple disc for 2006–2008, then to an interlocking DC for 2009–2010.

2006–2008

2005

2006

2005

2009–2010

© GameWornGuides.com

2005–2008 Road

Imaged by Heritage Auctions, HA.com

Imaged by Heritage Auctions, HA.com

2006–2008

The Nationals' road jersey features the wordmark "WASHINGTON" across the front in a bridge design flat on top and curved on the bottom. All lettering is navy/metallic gold/red. Navy top layer is a very complex cut shape to give the appearance of being beveled. Logos and numbers front and back are similarly styled. NOB is two–color, navy/red, no nameplate used. Sleeve patch for 2005 spells out the team name. For 2006–2008 it is a simple DC logo ringed by gold stars.

© GameWornGuides.com

2006–2008 Alternate

This patch used all three years on left sleeve

A red alternate jersey was introduced in the Nationals' second season. It is similar but not identical in appearance to the 2005 batting practice jersey. Three–color, 3D numbers on both front and back, navy/metallic gold/white. Names on back with no nameplates used, Block, white/navy. Sleeve patch is the navy–blue "DC" disc with the ring of gold stars.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009–2010 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

The road gray jersey body and trim itself is the same as the prior year, but the front lettering is completely changed. The bridge–arched "Washington" lettering from the prior years is replaced by a red script wordmark with underline, reminiscent of the Washington Senators' late 60s–early 70s uniforms. Numbers and names completely shuffle their colors from prior years. Numbers on front are red/blue/white; numbers on the back are complex four–color red/metallic gold/blue/white. Names are red/blue/white without nameplates used. Using different numbers/colors on the back and the front looks somewhat odd to me. The sleeve patch is an interlocked "DC" red/gold/blue.

Above: wordmark splits awkwardly in the middle of the letter "h," which may be geometrically correct but rarely works well in practice. Note heavy wash fading and resulting mismatch of underarm panels on this well–worn game jersey, a problem with Cool Base jerseys. Jersey below is made of non–Cool Base heavy knit fabric.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009–2010 Alternate Red

The red alternate jersey changes significantly from 2008. White knit trim is added to the front and sleeve ends, and the "DC" logo on the front is replaced by the stylized cursive "curly W" in white outlined in blue, similar to the batting practice jersey design. Notice that these Nationals' jerseys with the wordmark on the left chest have another unique feature—the buttons are evenly spaced. Normally, there is an extra wide space between buttons left for the team wordmark. I don't understand why other teams with similarly positioned team designs (like the Yankees) don't do this as a matter of course. This jersey is intended to be worn at all Saturday and Sunday home games. Numbers on back are white/metallic gold/red/blue; numbers on the front are white/red/blue and lack the fancy sculpted accents of the back numbers. Names are white/blue. Note the low placement of the front numbers. The sleeve patch is the same style interlocked "DC" as found on the standard home and road jerseys, except its colors are in a different order. This patch is white/gold/blue.

Left: Photo taken June 16, 2009 features the MLB Father's Day cancer awareness blue ribbon patch worn by all MLB teams that day.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009–2010 Alternate Blue

Bill Henderson Collection

This jersey looks like something left over from a 1976 Bicentennial sale at Walmart. Some see it as a desecration of our flag by incorporating its image into a corporate logo. I just see it as a bad design.

The alternate blue jersey is intended for special occasions, such as commemorating Independence Day, September 11 and for use in military tribute games. It is meant to be worn with a special blue cap that repeats the jersey's "DC" logo. This jersey features white and red knit trim around the sleeves, collar, and down the front of the jersey. Numbers on back are white/gold/red; numbers on the front are white/red only and lack the fancy sculpted accents of the back numbers. Names are white/red. Note the low placement of the front numbers. The Nationals' primary logo patch is used on the left sleeve. It is similar but not identical to the team inaugural patch used on the 2005 home uniform. This is the only team jersey to use this patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011–2021 Home

The Nationals change their home jersey again for 2011, replacing the old, ornate front wordmark with this stylized "curly W," their new primary logo, on the left chest. Colors are greatly simplified too, reduced to only two –red and navy blue. All of the 3D beveling previously found on the numbers is gone, and while that style looked good on paper, in color and in cloth it was hard to visualize the 3D impact that they were supposed to convey. The resulting number font without the extra beveling is just an extra bold variant of Wilson Varsity. Front numbers on the right chest do not align with the logo on the left, something that always looks odd to me. The sleeve patch is a new team disc. Knit trim on placket and sleeve ends is also two–color, red/navy. Majestic is manufacturer through 2019, Nike takes over in 2020. It is deleted after the 2021 season, replaced by the white jersey with the "Nationals" script.

Note the even–spaced ("pro spaced") buttons that sensibly omit the extra space between buttons two and three, since there is no wordmark crossing the placket there. I am surprised other teams do not adopt this feature.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011–2023 Road

2015

A couple very small changes for 2011 that only an eagle eye would notice. First, note that the wordmark has been altered to split between the letters “s” and “h” instead of right in the middle of the letter “h” as it did before. As I commented back on the previous jersey’s page, this is a common graphic designer’s issue, and while the exact center of the word might be in the center of a letter, in practice it is not a wise idea to split a letter like this in cloth as it rarely looks right. The sleeve trim is moved a fraction of an inch down on the sleeve, so it now covers the sleeve end. The sleeve patch is changed to the new–for–2011 disc patch with the “curly W” in the center. It is on the left sleeve through 2022, and switches sleeves based on player handedness in 2023. Player numbers lose their gold bevel layer and are now just red/blue/white. Majestic is manufacturer through 2019, Nike takes over in 2020.

2020

© GameWornGuides.com

2011–2023 Alternate Red

There are very minor changes made to the red alternate jersey for 2011. All knit trim changes to blue/white from the earlier white alone. The sleeve trim moves to the ends of the sleeves, a fraction of an inch lower than before. The sleeve patch changes to the new–for–2011 “W” disc from the earlier interlocking DC letters. It is on the left sleeve through 2022, and switches sleeves based on player handedness in 2023. All player lettering is simplified, reduced to two–color, white with a blue outline. Majestic is manufacturer through 2019, Nike takes over in 2020.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011–2019 Alternate Blue Stars–and–Stripes

2012

The blue "Stars and Stripes" special–occasion alternate changes, at least slightly for the better. First, the front chest logo becomes a stylized "curly W," filled in with the stars and stripes pattern. The shade of blue used for the jersey itself is slightly darker than before. The sleeve patch changes to the new–for–2011 "W" disc patch. Finally, the old bevel–blocked 3D numbers are simplified for 2011 to become two–color, white outlined with red. The font is a stylized and slightly bold version of the old standby, Wilson Varsity. 2016–2019 worn exclusively at home. It is discontinued after 2019.

2019

© GameWornGuides.com

2016: Flex Base Jersey Construction and Branding

Read the full story on MLB's adoption of Flex Base jerseys for 2016 in Chapter 2.

In 2016, all teams adopt Majestic's new "Flex Base" on–field game jerseys, which are made of Cool Base fabric, but with several new elements designed to make them lighter and more breathable. The new jerseys have mesh side panels that run the length of the jersey, and one on the back tail called the "Air Belt." They also use "Kiss Cut" layering for front decorations, names, and numbers, which Majestic says is 10–20% lighter than traditional layered twill. Finally, the MLB logo on the back neck is now a rubberized patch, called CFX by Majestic, and the heat–pressed tag on the front tail differs from Cool Base jerseys of prior years.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017–2020 Alternate Home White Stars–and–Stripes

The Nationals add yet another Stars and Stripes jersey, this one based on their white home jersey. Aside from the front “curly W” logo, which is now filled with the same stars–and–stripes pattern as the other patriotic version, the rest of the trim, patches, and lettering are identical to the home jersey. Majestic makes this jersey from 2017–2019, Nike was set to take over manufacture in 2020. Though it is in the team’s style guide for 2020, it is not worn on the field that year, essentially replaced by the new “script Nationals” home white alternate version, and it is unclear if Nike made a set at all. It is officially deleted from the lineup after the 2020 season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018–2023 Alternate Blue Script

Back in 2011, the Nationals toyed with the idea of introducing a script “Nationals” jersey, going so far as to produce a prototype that appears later in this chapter. The “Nationals” script eventually made it big on the 2017 batting practice jerseys, but in 2018, for the first time, it made its way on to the field in game action in the form of this blue alternate. Made by Majestic on a blue Flex Base jersey, the script “Nationals” appears in white/red on front, with red/white front and back numbers in the Nats’ custom font and white/red player names on back. White/red braid encircles the neck and just above sleeve openings. The team disc patch adorns the left sleeve from 2018–2022, it switches sleeves based on players’ handedness in 2023. In 2018, the MLB All–Star patch appears on the right sleeve, honoring Washington as host. This jersey cemented its place in Nationals lore during the 2019 playoff run, with the team going 11–3 in the look during the postseason, including their World Series victory over the Astros. Majestic is manufacturer through 2019 (with inventory tag code WTA4), Nike takes over in 2020 (changing the code to WT34).

© GameWornGuides.com

2020–2021 Alternate Home White Script/2022–2023 Home

For 2019 Spring Training, the Nationals took to the field with a new white version of their blue alternate introduced the year before, featuring the "Nationals" script front. In 2020, it became an official look when it was adopted for the regular season and added into the team's rotation. (Note that the "ST" code on the tag above likely stands for Spring Training, but the code on the Spring Training version was actually "WTAE.") Built on Nike's version of Majestic's Flex Base template, the "Nationals" front script appears in blue/red matching the colors of the player names on back. Front and back numbers, both in the Nationals' custom font, are red/blue. Blue/red braid encircles the neck and just above sleeve openings. It 2022, it is elevated to official home jersey, replacing the white "curly–W" jersey. Midway through the 2022 season, some jerseys began to have the sleeve trim at the very end of the sleeve, though this change was not universal on–field until 2023. The team disc patch resides on the left sleeve through 2022, then switches sleeves based on players' handedness in 2023. For 2020 season, a 2019 World Series Champs patch is on the right sleeve. In 2023, the jersey bears the "TNL" patch, in memory of late Managing Principal Owner Ted Lerner.

During the 2022 season, the Nationals moved the trim on their home jerseys from just above the sleeve end to the very end of the sleeve. The change was not consistent for every player in 2022—in fact, players appeared on–field with both versions at the same time, as seen above. By 2023, the switch to trim at the end of the sleeve became the standard.

© GameWornGuides.com

2022–2023 City Connect

The Nationals combine two springtime traditions in Washington, D.C., baseball and cherry blossom trees with their City Connect entry. This Nike Flex Base jersey is in a charcoal gray color with subtle cherry blossom pattern printed throughout. “WAS” adorns the front in a white/light pink beveled typeface, with charcoal outline and light pink drop shadow. The back numbers are in the same color configuration. The font is meant to evoke chiseled lettering on monuments, as well as the “W” of the 1924 Washington Senators uniforms. Names on back are single–color light pink. A recolored version of Washington, D.C.’s flag appears on the left sleeve, and a recolored team disc patch is on the right. The team disc sleeve patch is deleted in 2023, perhaps in preparation for an ad patch that does not materialize. Finally, an applique of a cherry blossom tree, with its petals scattering in the spring breeze, resides above the jock tag.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Nike “Vapor Premiere Elite” Jersey Template

Nike Flex Base 2020–2023

Nike Vapor Premier Elite 2024

Following league–wide sweeping changes to MLB jerseys with all teams switching from Nike’s 2020–2023 continuation of the Majestic Flex Base jersey shell to its new Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) template, the jerseys of the 2024 season become an anomaly—a “one and done” season of changes that brought intense scrutiny from players and fans alike. Based on the negative feedback, especially from MLB players, Nike rolled back some but not all of the 2024 changes in time for the 2025 season.

The full rundown of the changes is outlined earlier in “The Basics” chapter, but generally speaking, 2024’s crop of jerseys had changed from earlier versions in several key ways.

- VPE home jerseys are off–white, or light cream color. The earlier Flex Base white jerseys are a bright, purer white. Grays are standardized.
- The front placket is narrower on VPE, which often causes team wordmark lettering that crosses the placket to break differently.
- Neck and sleeve trim elements (when used) are no longer sewn on top of the jersey material, but are now “sewn–in” to the jersey at the seams. Placket trim adornment remains the same, though the trim is now spaced closer together with the narrowing in placket size.
- For improved visibility, the MLB logo on the back of the jersey is moved several inches lower onto the back, down from the collar placket area where it had been since 2000.
- VPE loses the integrated mesh side and back tail panels that had been part of the Flex Base jersey template.
- Player names on VPE are much smaller, and for many teams are done in a standardized block font, all using a much steeper, nearly semi–circular arch.
- For teams with front numbers, the new 2024 font is simply always a reduced size of the back numbers. This was not the way it had been in the past for most teams, with front numbers being a font variant (smaller but usually wider and bolder) than the back font.
- Team logo sleeve patches, and in some cases sponsor sleeve patches change from traditional raised embroidery to flat printed plastic or to sublimated cloth/twill
- All lettering is done using a new more lightweight (thinner) kind of matte–finished twill (commonly called “Nike Twill”). Most, but not all jerseys incorporate barely visible micro–perforation on the numbers, front and back.
- Universally, nameplates are no longer used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Home

Dominick Hyman Collection

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Nationals' home jersey. The most visible is the league–wide shrinking of back names and numbers, and arching the name lettering more prominently. Front numbers are deleted. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, but the team's script splits tin the same place, though the lettering is thinner and less steeply angled than before. Neck and sleeve–end trim is now sewn into the sleeve rather than on to it, which makes it visibly wider. Neck trim color order reverses from the previous version. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Road

The Nationals introduce a new road jersey for 2024, ditching script and moving to block letters for “Washington” in blue/white/red. Player names are in blue/red, while front and back numbers appear in red/blue. Blue/white/red trim encircles the neck and sleeve openings. Since this jersey is launched in VPE, it bears the hallmarks of the template, including the league–wide shrinking of back names and numbers, and arching the name lettering more prominently. Sleeve–end trim is now sewn into the sleeve rather than on to it. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Home Pullover

Stephen Kraljic Collection

The Nationals introduce a new alternate jersey for 2024, a white pullover with blue raglan sleeves. Like other VPE pullovers, it has a strange notch in the front of the collar, making it more of a "Y" neck than a "V" neck. Blue/white/red trim borders the neck opening, including the notch area, and also appears on sleeve ends. The front of the jersey includes a logo used on the team's BP and alternate caps, a "W" in white/red superimposed on a blue outline of the Capitol dome with a red star on either side. A new blue patch in the shape of the District of Columbia, bordered in red/white with "DC" in white/red over it, appears on the sleeve. Player name and back number are red/blue. Since this jersey is launched in VPE, it bears the hallmarks of the template, including the league–wide shrinking of back names and numbers, and arching the name lettering more prominently. Sleeve–end trim is now sewn into the sleeve rather than on to it. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. The style is short–lived. It is worn 11 times and then deleted after the season following just a single year of use.

Above: Note that the wash tag on some, but not all, team–spec versions of this jersey have an "09P0" code rather than the typical "09B0." Our educated guess is that the "P" is for "pullover" and the "B" is for "button–front."

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Blue

Stephen Kraljic Collection

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Nationals' blue alternate jersey. The most visible change is the league–wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. Front numbers are deleted. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, but the team's script splits tin the same place, though the lettering is thinner and less steeply angled than before. Neck and sleeve–end trim is now sewn into the sleeve rather than on to it, which makes it visibly wider. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 City Connect

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Nationals' City Connect jersey that was introduced two seasons prior. The most visible change is the league–wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. Otherwise, because this jersey has no trim on the neck, sleeves, or placket, it appears mostly the same as before. The team uses perforated numbers on this version of the jersey. The style is replaced by a new City Connect 2.0 in 2025.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Home

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non–gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. The Nationals, however, do not restore the front number on this style, last used in 2023. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. The jersey has the new–for–2025 white Nike jock tag, which is used on a handful of jerseys around the league. The team also added an ad patch starting on July 1.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Road

The 2025 season brings many changes to road gray jerseys across MLB. The 2024 VPE gray jerseys suffered from significant sweat–staining issues during games, so 2025 gray jerseys revert back to the same base fabric used for Flex Base, but applied to the VPE template (no mesh side panels or “Air Belt” back panel). Other pre–2024 elements return, including neck and sleeve trim being sewn on to jerseys again rather than sewn in. Back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes (even though this jersey did not exist in 2023), and perforated numbers are gone. VPE’s placket remains narrow, so the “Washington” lettering breaks in the same place as in 2024, that is to say, awkwardly across the “I” as seen in the photos on this page. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. The team also added an ad patch starting on July 1.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Red

The Nationals continue their tinkering in 2025, deleting their one–year–only pullover alternate, and replacing it with a red alternate instead. This jersey is very similar to the red alternate that the pullover replaced with a few small changes. The earlier alternate had blue/white trim around the collar and placket, while this one has it just around the neck opening. Further, the last red alternate had a front number, which does not appear on the 2025 version. Sleeve–end trim, formerly white/blue, is now blue/white. Despite the updates, visually, it is a very similar appearance, and in that way is something of a correction after the odd pullover of 2025. The jersey is made on the VPE template, and though in its first year, it still carries the updates made to VPE since 2024, including that back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. The team also added an ad patch starting on July 1.

Above: The previous version of the Nationals red alternate, which the team used from 2011–2023. It is the inspiration for the 2025 version, with minor modifications.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Blue

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non–gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. The Nationals, however, do not restore the front number on this style, last used in 2023. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. The team also added an ad patch starting on July 1.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 City Connect 2.0

The Nationals replace their gray, cherry blossom City Connect 1.0 set with a new uniform in 2025 that they call “the Blueprint.” According to the team’s press release: “The denim color jerseys depict the design of the city street grid. On the chest is an interlocking “DC” logo, worn by the Nats from 2005–2010. The logo’s (and back numbers’) 3D treatment is a reference to the 1956 Washington Senators. Player name is white/blue with no shadow. The circular arm patch reads “The District of Columbia” with the block “W” and Capitol Dome design.” In additional the sleeve–ends have a multi–color pattern the team says is “a mosaic pattern...that highlights the city’s diversity.” Toward the bottom of the jersey’s front and back, a “curly W” logo represents the location of the team’s ballpark within the city. “2005” is heat–pressed above the jock tag, representing the year the team was founded. Like many retail–friendly City Connect details, it is likely to be invisible when worn by actual players on the field. Numbers are not perforated. It is hard to know for sure, but it appears that the jersey may have been made on the modified VPE template that 2025 road jerseys used, in that it lacks the extra band of trim around the neck opening, and sleeve–end trim appears sewn on rather than sewn in to the jersey. Both elements may simply be a result of the intricate design on the jersey itself, and the width of the sleeve trim, more than a change in template design. More research required. The team also added an ad patch starting on July 1.

© GameWornGuides.com

Batting Practice and Spring Training Jerseys

2005 Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

The Nationals' 2005–only red bating practice jersey features the interlocked "DC" logo on the left chest in navy/gold/white. Navy blue sleeve inserts are used. Back numbers are navy/gold/white. The navy top layer is a very complex cut shape to give the appearance of being beveled. For 2005 only, the batting practice jersey has the same number style as the game jerseys. Logos and numbers front and back are similarly colored. NOB is two–color navy/white, no nameplate used.

The Nationals wore these jerseys at least once in a MLB game in 2005, on the road against the Phillies.

© GameWornGuides.com

2006 Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

For 2006, the team reversed its colors to produce a navy blue batting practice jersey with red sleeve inserts. This is also a one–year style. The front “DC” team logo changes its color alignment slightly as it changes to while/gold/red. Player names are omitted. Numbers on the back are still in the Nationals special font, but are in a simple two–color white/red, deleting the bevel–effect top layer that is used on game jerseys

© GameWornGuides.com

2007–2010 Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

In 2007, along with the rest of Major League Baseball, the Nationals change to the new Majestic Cool Base BP jersey, which is very colorful and lightweight. Features one–button neck with bright white and red side panels. The logo on the jersey front changes to the “curly W” that is used on the team’s hats. Numbers, logos and lettering are all heat–applied designs, and not sewn or embroidered tackle twill. Numbers and names are white/red. Numbers are in the Nationals’ special font style, but lack the gold, bevel effect of game jersey numbers.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011–2013 Batting Practice

MLB changed the batting practice jerseys simultaneously for all teams for the 2011 season. Button fronts with simplified contrasting trim, the Nationals' new duds are solid red with blue side panels and a blue panel above the player name on back. Player names and numbers are on back only, in two color white outlined with blue. All adornments go back to twill lettering.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014–2015 Batting Practice

2014 brings a league–wide freshening of batting practice jerseys, and the Nationals use the opportunity to make a noticeable change (mostly) to the back of their jerseys. Previously, the backs were red with a blue panel above the player name. For 2014, this is reversed, and the whole back, except for the panel above the player name, is made navy blue. The main color of all back lettering remains white as before, but the outlines switch to red from 2013's blue. Knit sleeve ends and neck opening trim are banded red and navy. Identify also by the tall jock tag on the front tail, replacing the oblong one from the prior years.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's new for 2016 Spring Training Jerseys in Chapter 8.

2016 Spring Training

For the first time in 2016, MLB introduces a Spring Training–specific jersey intended to be worn for workouts and games in the preseason. The jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features a special printed twill, decorated with "2016" and Spring Training symbols, as the main twill layer for every team. The Nationals use their regular season red alternate as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill/blue. Front numbers are the standard white/blue. The jersey also features a rubberized, CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading "2016" and "FL" representing where the Nationals spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Spring Training

Spring Training–only jerseys return for all teams in 2017 with some minor design modifications. Just as in 2016, the jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features special printed twill, this year decorated with “2017” and Spring Training symbols. However, all teams now use the same twill, in single–color white with gray printing, replacing the many team–specific combinations from the year before.

The Nationals again use their regular season red alternate as a basis for their spring training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill. Front numbers are the standard white/blue, as is used in the regular season. The jersey features a recolored version of the rubberized CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading “2017” and “FL” representing where the Nationals spend spring training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017–2019 Batting Practice

With many players opting for lightweight cage jackets, which are devoid of player identification, instead of traditional BP jerseys with player names and numbers, Majestic introduces a replacement product that may be an attempt to gain acceptance by the pros on field while being more attractive to fans at retail. New for 2017, official team batting practice jerseys are replaced with what Majestic calls a 3/4 Sleeve BP Trainer. The new hybrid is cut in a pullover jacket silhouette, including a short zipper at the neck, but made of Cool Base jersey material. The underarm and back panels are of Cool Base mesh, like the sides and tail of Flex Base jerseys. Team logos and other lettering is in what Majestic calls “lightweight twill” (as described in Chapter 8). The Majestic logo is applied to the middle of the left sleeve, and a new, heat–pressed Cool Base tag adorns the left front tail.

The Nationals jersey is red with blue back and underarm gussets. The script “Nationals” logo adorns the front in white/blue. This is the first use of the script Nationals wordmark that would be adopted in 2018 for the blue regular season alternate and later for a home white alternate. The back of the jersey is blank. Player number in white/blue in Nationals special font on left sleeve. A “curly W” patch is on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Spring Training

The 2018 Spring Training jerseys continue the general template of the previous year, again featuring all player name and number lettering using each team's regular fonts using one layer of white twill printed with special Spring Training and 2018–year–specific patterns. The Nationals use their regular–season red alternate as their base. The name and back numbers are sewn on in white patterned twill. Front numbers are the standard white/blue, as is used in the regular season. A new CFX patch, shaped like home plate and featuring "2018" and "FL" representing their Spring Training home replaces the usual team disc on that sleeve. The 2018 All–Star Game patch is sewn on the right.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 White Spring Training

The 2019 Spring Training jersey evolves to create yet another iteration of the template theme of the last three years. This time, jersey backs abandon the single–color printed twill treatment of the past and return to regular season multi–layered team–color twill like 2016, but without 2016's sublimated twill patterns. The 2019 Nationals use a jersey design unique from their regular–season standard set (but one they will adopt as a regular–season home alternate in 2020 and upgrade it to their primary home jersey in 2022) as the base for this design, carrying a new CFX patch on the right sleeve, featuring "2019" and "FLA," referencing their Spring Training home. Front "Nationals" script and player names on back are blue/red, while front and back numbers are red/blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Red Spring Training

The 2019 Spring Training jersey evolves to create yet another iteration of the template theme of the last three years. This time, jersey backs abandon the single–color printed twill treatment of the past and return to regular season multi–layered team–color twill like 2016, but without 2016's sublimated twill patterns. The 2019 Nationals use their red alternate as the base for this design, carrying a new CFX patch on the right sleeve, featuring "2019" and "FLA," referencing their Spring Training home. All front and back lettering is white/blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020–2023 White Spring Training

2020

Spring Training is simplified for 2020, league–wide. For the first time since 2016, Spring Training jerseys eliminate the special sleeve patch indicating the year and location of a team's Spring Training home, and now the lettering is the same non–patterned, multi–layered twill as the teams would wear in the regular season, making many teams' spring jerseys identical to their regular–season alternates. For 2020–2023, the Nationals use their 2019 spring training jersey, which was adopted as a regular–season home alternate for 2020 and upgraded to the primary home jersey in 2022. It is a white jersey with "Nationals" script on front, with red/blue front and back numbers and blue/red player name on back. The 2020 version of the jersey also has the 2019 World Series Champions patch (left) on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020–2023 Red Spring Training

2020

Spring Training is simplified for 2020, league–wide. For the first time since 2016, Spring Training jerseys eliminate the special sleeve patch indicating the year and location of a team's Spring Training home, and the lettering is the same non–patterned, multi–layered twill as the teams wear in the regular season, making many teams' spring jerseys identical to their regular–season alternates. For 2020–2023, the Nationals use their regular–season "curly–W" red alternate, which was their Spring Training jersey from 2016–2018. All lettering is white/blue. The 2020 version of the jersey also has the 2019 World Series Champions patch (left) on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

Special Events Jerseys

2006 Negro Leagues Tribute (1937–1938 Homestead Grays)

June 2, 2006: The Nationals visit the Brewers for a Turn Back the Clock Negro League contest. The Nationals wear 1937–1938 road uniforms of the Homestead Grays; the Brewers dress as the 1923 Milwaukee Bears. The knit uniforms were made for the teams by AIS.

© GameWornGuides.com

2006 Negro Leagues Tribute (1944 Homestead Grays)

August 11, 2006: The Nationals take their turn dressing as the Homestead Grays and invite the New York Mets for a throwback contest to the 1944 Negro Leagues. Both the Nats and Pirates often use the Grays as a throwback team uniform because the original Homestead Grays played their home games in both Washington and Pittsburgh in 1941–1944. The Mets dressed as the New York Cubans. AIS made the uniforms for both the Nationals and the Mets for this game.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007 Negro Leagues Tribute (1943 Homestead Grays)

In a home game on August 3, 2007, the Nationals dressed as the 1943 Homestead Grays, vs. the St. Louis Cardinals, who dressed as the St. Louis Stars. Chicago White Sox late–1970s “Leisure Suit” number font used on the back. Both the Nationals and the Pittsburgh Pirates dress as the Homestead Grays in many Negro League games, as the team played home games in both cities. Made by AIS, these uniforms appear identical to those worn by the Pirates in several such games.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Negro Leagues Tribute (1942 Homestead Grays)

"Grays vs. Grays": Game played at home May 3, 2008 vs. the Pirates. This game is unique in that both teams dressed as the Grays. The Pirates dressed in away uniforms as the 1935 Grays. The Grays played home games in both Pittsburgh and Washington 1941–1944.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Turn Back the Clock to 1920 Washington Senators

The Washington Nationals and Cleveland Indians wore throwback uniforms on June 12, 2010 to commemorate each city's first World Series wins in 1920 and 1924. The Nationals' uniforms were stark in their plainness. The front of the jersey is completely blank, and the only ornamentation was a navy "W" on the left sleeve. Varsity numbers used on back, which is a modern addition, as player numbers were not yet used in 1920.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Turn Back the Clock to 1970 Washington Senators

Bill Henderson Collection

June 26. 2010: the Baltimore Orioles celebrated the 40th Anniversary of their 1970 World Series triumph wearing replicas of those uniforms, as the Nationals donned Washington Senators uniforms from that season as well. These uniforms looked familiar to me, and I recalled that the Texas Rangers had worn the same style in 2008 in a Turn Back the Clock game of their own. A photo of the uniform from that game is below. Interestingly, the wordmark is not identical, the "S" is different and the overall script is fatter.

Texas Rangers May 4, 2008 Turn Back the Clock to 1968—the Senators' script is not identical to the Nationals' 2010 version

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Turn Back the Clock to 1936 Washington Senators

The Nationals visited the Padres on June 11, 2011, and both teams wore 1936–style uniforms. The Nationals wore the uniforms of the 1936 American League Washington Senators, and the Padres the 1936 Pacific Coast League Padres.

The Nationals/Senators uniforms have nothing on the front at all, featuring only a red "W" outlined with navy on the left sleeve. Back numbers are in Varsity Bold in the same color combination. Knit uniforms are made by Majestic.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Turn Back the Clock to 1924 Washington Senators

July 5, 2012: The San Francisco Giants visited Washington and the Nationals wore these replica ivory–colored knit 1924 throwbacks made by Majestic. A small, thin "W" adorns each sleeve, and the Red Sox–style numbers added to the back are a modern touch, as teams did not wear numbers in 1924. In the history of MLB, the team was officially known as the Senators only from 1901 to 1904. Then they officially became the "Washington Nationals" until the Senators nickname was restored in 1956. However, through their entire existence, the team continued to be mainly referred to as the Senators by fans and media.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012–2013 Negro Leagues Tributes (1943 Homestead Grays)

2012

2013

2012

July 28, 2012: The Nationals visit Milwaukee and play the Brewers, who dressed as the Milwaukee Bears. August 24, 2013: At Kansas City (Royals dressed as Kansas City Monarchs). AIS knit uniforms in gray that are the same style as have been worn by the Pirates in Negro League tribute games.

2012

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 Negro Leagues Tribute (1944 Homestead Grays)

June 1, 2013: The inaugural Atlanta Braves Heritage Weekend features a Negro Leagues tribute game between the Braves, dressed as the Atlanta Black Crackers, and the Nationals, dressed as the 1944 era Homestead Grays. The Grays called both Washington and Pittsburgh home during the early 1940s, playing half their home games in each city. These AIS knit uniforms replicate flannel very well in both the mottled color and the feel of the fabric. Navy lettering, tallish “W” on left sleeve, Varsity numbers (same as the Yankees home jerseys) on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's Memorial Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

2013–2014 Memorial Day

The Nationals were at home on both May 27, 2013 and May 26, 2014. MLB decreed that all teams would wear camouflage–lettered uniforms on these days. The Nationals replaced all red on their insignias, player names and numbers with U.S. Military desert camouflage twill. Game worn jerseys were auctioned on MLB.com.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Memorial Day

The Nats are on the road for Memorial Day, May 25, 2015. After two years of applying desert camo to their home jerseys, the road gray becomes the camo canvas, outlined in red and white for all back and front lettering. The white background of the home jersey with its blue outlines make that version much more legible than this one, and though the Nats' bold, serifed number font helps, the rest of the lettering nearly disappears. This incarnation features the Nationals' "10 Years" patch, and the MLB Silhouetted Batter neck tag is changed to dark green/ khaki/white rather than its typical colors from 2014.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's Independence Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

2015 Independence Day

For Independence Day 2015, all 29 U.S.–based teams adopt patriotic "Stars and Stripes" uniforms for the first time. For this day, all uniforms are re–lettered in a combination of red, white, and blue, regardless of what the team's normal color palate might be. Jersey trim and patches remain the same as the team's regular jerseys. All teams sport a stars and stripes version of the MLB Silhouetted Batter logo on the back collar. Though the Nationals already have a patriotic–themed jersey, they forego that alternate to conform to the rest of the teams taking part in this promotion. The Nationals wear their home white jerseys with the red–background version of the starred twill, which features large white stars; all lettering outlined in blue, including their front logo as well as front and back numbers. Player names on back are in blue. An American flag patch is sewn on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 St. Patrick's Day

Stephen Kraljic collection

The Nationals go green for St. Patrick's Day 2016 in a spring training game held March 17. Based on their home jersey, this Flex Base model is white, with front logo and front and back numbers in green/gray. The layer of gray is thin and light enough that it disappears from a distance. There are no player names on back. The team's left sleeve patch is reduced to shades of gray and white, while the right sleeve sports a green shamrock, a feature shared by many teams for the 2016 St. Patrick's Day promotion. The usual placket trim on the jersey is removed in favor of green knit trim around both sleeves.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Mother's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Mother's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

All teams wear special pink–trimmed uniforms for Mother's Day, May 8, 2016. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Mother's Days), while the Majestic sleeve logo is rendered in pink and the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark pink/light pink/white. The Nationals wear their road gray jerseys and the typically three–color front lettering and front and back numbers are rendered in pink with dark gray outlines while the player names on back are rendered in single–color dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of pink, gray, and white. All jersey trim, normally red/blue/red, becomes pink.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Memorial Day

The 2016 Memorial Day jerseys are constructed in the Flex Base style for the first time, and the ChromaFlex MLB logo at back neck becomes black and dark gold for all teams. The new, league–wide template, with higher–visibility woodland camo lettering and black outlines, makes this set more legible than in prior years. The Nationals apply the camouflage trimmings to their road gray jerseys for the game on May 30. The typically three–color front lettering and front and back numbers are rendered in two–color woodland camo with a black outline, and player names appear in single–color black. Like other teams, their sleeve patches are reduced to shades of green, gray, and black, and trim elements are also simplified to single–color black from the usual red/blue/red.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016–2017 Father's Day

All teams wear special light blue–trimmed uniforms for Father's Day, Sunday, June 19, 2016 and June 17–18, 2017. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized front tag applied to the front left tail. The back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark royal blue/light blue/white. The Nationals wear their road gray jerseys and the typically three–color front lettering and front and back numbers are rendered in light blue with dark gray outlines. The player names on back are single–color dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of light blue, gray, and white. All jersey trim, normally red/blue/red, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Negro Leagues Tribute (1943 Homestead Grays)

Stephen Kraljic collection

On June 25, the Nats take the field honoring the Negro League's Homestead Grays in this particular road uniform for the third time This version is the first made by Majestic, with the 2012–2013 incarnations made by AIS. Like its predecessors, player customization is limited to the number on back, in a special and ornate font, one–color navy blue twill. Majestic's front lettering appears smaller than the style used by AIS, and the sleeve and neck trim are the same size throughout, whereas sleeve trim on recent AIS jerseys was wider. The opposing Brewers countered with Milwaukee Bears Negro League jerseys for the game.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Independence Day

MLB creates yet another new Independence Day jersey template for the 2016 iteration, now built on Majestic's new Flex Base jersey construction. Each Independence Day jersey has a ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB appliqué sewn on the back of the neck. The Nationals are at home and wear their alternate red jersey.

All clubs have a choice of two styles of star–spangled lettering twill and the Nationals select the blue twill version with gray outlines for their front lettering and for their front and back numbers, with the player name in a lighter shade of gray than the outlines, allowing for somewhat better legibility. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. All jersey trim, normally white/blue, becomes single–color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Mother's Day

Pink–trimmed Mother's Day jerseys return on May 13–14, 2017. Once again, the Flex Base jerseys have the usual front left tail Majestic heat applied vinyl locker tag and team inventory tag inside the bottom of the placket. Returning as well is the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon glued on left chest; the pink Majestic sleeve logo; and the dark pink/light pink/white ChromaFlex MLB Silhouetted Batter applique stitched on the back of the collar. All multi–colored lettering is done in the lightweight–twill style. The Nationals wear their home white jerseys with the front logo lettering, and front and back numbers in pink/dark gray. All jersey trim, normally red/navy, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Memorial Day (Home)

The next incarnation of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single–color black, while the back–of–collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single–color black. The Nationals apply this style to their home white jerseys as worn on May 27–28, 2017.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017–2018 Memorial Day (Road)

The next incarnation of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single–color black, while the back–of–collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single–color black. The Nationals apply this style to their road gray jerseys on May 29, 2017 and May 26–28, 2018. In 2018, the 2018 All–Star Game patch is also on the right sleeve (in its usual colors).

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Independence Day (Road)

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less–busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two different color options for the new twill—appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 1–2, 2017, the Nationals wear their road gray jersey with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and front and back numbers. Player names on back are in single–color blue. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue. All jersey trim is single–color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017–2018 Independence Day (Home)

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less–busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two different color options for the new twill—appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 3–4, 2017 and July 2–4, 2018, the Nationals wear their home white jersey with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and front and back numbers. Player names on back are in single–color blue. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue. All jersey trim is single–color blue. In 2018, the All–Star Game patch replaces the team disc patch on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Players Weekend

To highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans, MLB introduces the colorful Players Weekend promotion. In addition to relaxed regulations on team–standard color and design of cleats, bats, and other equipment, MLB encourages players to wear nicknames on the backs of a new set of very colorful jerseys. Meant to evoke the look of youth league designs, the two–toned Cool Base pullovers feature bright and contrasting body and sleeve colors, and include a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people in their lives with handwritten black marker messages. Both the patch, and the back–of–collar logo, feature a variant of the MLB logo showing the growth of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat–pressed Majestic manufacturer and set tags are applied on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. All numbers on back are in single color Varsity, and the player names in 2 ¾" single color Block Condensed, regardless of the team's usual font. On August 25–27, 2017, the Nationals wear jerseys with navy blue bodies and red sleeves with white nicknames and red numbers on back. Sleeves and V–neck opening are lined with wide red/white/red trim. The front features the new "Nationals" in script with a tail, and the "curly W" cap logo beneath, here rendered in red/white kiss–cut lightweight twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Players Weekend

Players Weekend returns for a second year; a promotion intended to highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans. Brightly–colored jerseys are worn on the field on August 24–26, 2018, and once again, the Cool Base pullover jerseys are based on youth league designs with a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people with handwritten messages. Both the patch, and the back–of–collar logo, feature an adaptation of the MLB logo showing the evolution of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat–pressed Majestic and set tags appear on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. The Nationals wear jerseys with red bodies and navy blue sleeves with white nicknames and navy blue numbers on back. Sleeves and V–neck opening are lined with wide red/white/red trim. The front features the "Nationals" in script with a tail, and the "curly–W" cap logo beneath that they premiered for 2017 Players Weekend, here rendered in navy blue/white kiss–cut twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1969 Montreal Expos

The Nationals began life as the Montreal Expos in 1969, relocating to Washington in 2005. On what would have been the Expos 50th anniversary season in 2019, the Nats throw back to their predecessors' inaugural 1969 road uniforms (at home against the visiting Royals, who wore 1969 home throwbacks) on July 6. The original 1969 Expos set was full of "firsts" for MLB, including the first use of a custom number font, and only the second use of powder blue on the road (after the White Sox), though the Expos' 1969 road flannels were more blue–gray than true blue. The Majestic full–knit replicas lean more powder blue than blue–gray and are a fair representation of the originals.

The red/white/blue sewn–on knit trim that adorns sleeve ends is much wider than it was in 1969. The now–classic stylized "M" in three–color twill surmounts the all–lower–case blue "expos" on the left chest is slightly misproportioned shorter than the original, while single–color blue numbers reside on back and right front chest. However, the number font is a little narrower than the originals, and the back numbers are placed lower than the Expos' set in 1969. Nevertheless, these still looked wonderful in the day–game sun, especially with the Royals' clean 1969 look checking in across the diamond.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Players Weekend

The third incarnation of Players Weekend turns the colorful jersey concept on its ear, reducing all teams to monochromatic designs in either black or white, with all team sleeve patches and trim removed, leaving a clean but stark template. Gone are the contrasting sleeves and special patches with messages of inspiration. MLB says that this new approach is to emphasize the colorful, personalized cleats, bats, and other gear the players choose for the promotion, which spans August 23–25, 2019. Jerseys are now button–front Flex Base, with appropriate Majestic manufacturer and set tagging. Back–of–collar CFX MLB logo is now silver and black. All teams also wear a memorial patch for Angels pitcher Tyler Skaggs, a white “45” in a black circle, on the left sleeve. Most teams removed this patch before auctioning off the jerseys.

The Nationals wear a black version of their alternate blue “Nationals” jersey with the front lettering and back varsity numbers rendered in black/gray with gray nickname on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020 World Series “Gold Program”

Keeping with the trend of almost every World Series winner since 2004, for their home opener (and many other games throughout the season), the Nationals adorn their new white alternate jersey, minus front numbers, with the gold treatment, but in a slightly different approach than other recent victors. On back numbers, the layer of gold is added on top of the existing blue/red number. Meanwhile, for front wordmark and player name, the gold resides between the existing blue/red lettering, creating a blue/metallic gold/red look. Both the team’s logo disc patch on the left sleeve and the 2019 World Champs patch on the right are recolored in blue and gold rather than the usual red, white, and blue. And, in the style of World Cup soccer, a gold star rises above the left–sleeve patch, representing the team’s first championship.

Of note, the sleeve trim is located at the very end of each sleeve, rather than slightly above it as it is on the regular version of these jerseys. Players also wore a combination of “Black Lives Matter” and “United for Change” patches above the left–sleeve star on July 23 only. Kudos to the Nationals for finding a new way to use this time-tested adornment.

Nike brands this style of uniform as “Gold Program” starting in 2020, their first year making uniforms for MLB. The name stuck for other teams’ versions in subsequent years.

© GameWornGuides.com

Prototypes and Oddballs

2005 Prototype Home

Here is a surviving prototype of the Nationals' first home jersey made up by Majestic for the team's consideration and approval, prior to their inaugural 2005 season. It has prototype tagging inside the placket (translates roughly to Washington home jersey #5) carries the typical lettering for "Player #5" on back and has a "0062" (team issue) inside seam tag. A nice piece of history for its owner.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005 Sample Batting Practice

Here's one you don't often see – a sample jersey, with appropriate sample tagging that reads it is the "approved" sample. As the sample tag attests, this is a "NATIONALS–APPROVED SAMPLE" of their first BP jersey from their inaugural 2005 season. As would be expected, it uses "PLAYER" and "5" on back, with "5" representing the year. Like the 2007–2010 BP sample on a following page, this one lacks tail tagging. Ultimately, the team used this style for only a single season, despite going so far as to have this declarative, almost celebratory one made. A fun side note, assuming this was the only "approved sample" made, it means this would be the very first copy of the team's very first BP jersey—a "1 of 1" of sorts.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007–2010 Prototype Batting Practice?

Found on an auction site, this jersey appears to be a Majestic 2007–2010 style batting practice jersey, though it lacks tail tagging. It has a Silhouetted Batter on the back of the neck, although it is misplaced (too low). But even with these missives, I believe it is legit. It has the pre-2007 front wordmark.

Below– production jerseys from immediately before and after

For comparison, see the actual 2007–2010 batting practice (bottom left, center), and the 2006 BP (bottom right). I suspect it may be a design prototype.

© GameWornGuides.com

Oddballs: 2009 Nationals Quality Control

Zimmerman, Ledesma, and Dunn with misspelled team name

All the examples on this page (save one) happened during the first month of the 2009 season. We will reserve comment, but were amused that cartoonist Mike Ricigliando in USA Today Sports Weekly noticed too, Below is a single panel borrowed from his weekly cartoon.

©USA Today Sports Weekly, May 6–12, 2009

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Prototype Home

I quite like this Nationals 2011 home jersey prototype (note the use of player number “11” as a clue of the year it was designed.) Majestic prototype code inside placket probably decodes to “Washington home Design 2, January 2011.” I’d like to see design 1 also— or perhaps that is the version we see today on the field that they went with and used? This design was picked up for the 2017 batting practice jersey, though the “S” is different between the two versions, and the production version has the word at a steeper incline. It appears again for a 2019 Spring Training jersey, which was adopted as a regular season alternate in 2020 and ultimate as the team’s primary home jersey starting in 2022.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Sample All-Star Game

This jersey's pedigree as a sample is apparent in a few details. It is size 46, a common sample size, and the use of "PLAYER" and "18" as the name and number on back are typical of samples (where "18" represents 2018, the year this jersey was intended to be used). The jersey itself is unchanged from what the team wore on the road since 2011, so the only element here that is truly a different is the use of the 2018 All-Star Game patch on the right sleeve. It seems odd, even unnecessary, to create a sample like this for something as small as the addition of a single patch, but clearly the team and/or Majestic wanted a "proof of concept" for what this would look like. Considering, also, that the team wore the All–Star patch on all of its jerseys that season, it is possible that examples were made for each on–field style, however, this is the only one we've seen so far.

Of note, the All-Star patch shown here is CFX, the rubbery plastic type that players wore in the All–Star Game itself. The Nationals wore a standard embroidered version during the regular season (shown at right). Perhaps this jersey was a test for using the CFX patch all year, and the idea was rejected? Or, less likely, it may have been a sample of what the CFX patch would look like for that year's All-Stars. But since the host Nationals' players would have worn white for that game, and All-Stars also wore star-shaped patches indicating how many All-Star appearances each had, that is probably not the case here.

The embroidered All-Star patch the Nationals wore on-field in the 2018 regular season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Prototype City Connect 2.0

The Nationals enter City Connect 2.0 territory in 2025, with a completely new uniform that speaks to the street grid of DC, and to “American Denim.” Prior to unveiling the jersey in early 2025, Nike made up samples for team review, and this is one that appears similar to what they wore on the field, but with one subtle but major element missing.

The team’s final City Connect 2.0 jersey has a sublimated map graphic representing the DC city street grid on the body of the jersey, which this prototype lacks. It is possible that this sample dates to before that element, or this version, without the pattern, was in consideration but rejected in favor of the one with the grid design.

Aside from the grid pattern, this prototype features perforated numbers and the smaller, heavily-arched player name on back that was part of Nike’s Vapor Premiere Elite rollout in 2024.When this jersey appeared on field during the 2025 season, it no longer had perforated numbers and the player name was larger and less arched, both elements likely victims of the “market correction” against many of the reviled 2024 changes.

As we would expect, the jersey uses “PLAYER” and “25” on back, where 25 stands for the year the jersey will be used. This practice is almost universal for Nike samples of the era. Note also the sample information that is on the Nike tag, which reads “NATIONALS CC JERSEY 44 REGULAR FIT”, with 44 being the size, which was not typical in earlier Nike samples, which were usually size 46. Here, “CC” stands for City Connect, and there is also a small, handwritten “3” on the bottom corner of the tag, something that many Nike samples have, though the numbers differ. Also, the designation of “regular fit” was something not commonly seen on jersey tags, so it may have indicated the intent to use “bucket sizing” on jerseys, where there were a handful of standard cuts in different proportions available to players rather than the specific customizations of years past. Nike’s 2024 pants were also done in bucket sizing, which was very unpopular with players. It is unclear what the “HJ4615–480” text on the front tag means. It is likely it is an internal production codes, as all 2024 samples we have seen have different codes in these spots that we have not yet deciphered.

© GameWornGuides.com

Commemorative Patches

Nationals Patches

2005

September 14–23, 2007

2008

May 21, 2013

September 20, 2013

September 22, 2013 double-header: game 1 right, game 2 below left.

2015

- 2005: Nationals Inaugural year in DC, home jersey only.
- 2007: RFK Stadium farewell, last homestand of the season only September 14 through 23, home and alternate red only.
- 2008: Inaugural Season for new stadium, home and alternate red only.
- 2013, My 24: Red AIDS ribbon for “Until There’s a Cure” Day at San Francisco.
- 2013, September 20, 22: Patch for Navy Yard shooting tragedy. Oddly, worn on the chest of white uniform day 1, then on the sleeve two games later. It must have been a stick–on patch that was removed before being laundered, and then was reapplied.
- 2015: 10 Years patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

- 2017, April 1: Naval Academy Baseball Classic patch on left chest of Spring Training jersey
- 2018: All–Star Game patch, right sleeve of all jerseys.
- 2020: 2019 World Series Champions patch, right sleeve of all jerseys.
- 2023: Ted Lerner Memorial patch

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Nationals Advertising Patches

Home white

Road,
red alternate,
blue alternate,
City Connect 2.0

With the start of the 2023 season, teams were permitted to sell an advertising patch, up to four inches square, to appear on one of their jersey sleeves. The sleeve on which the patch appeared could change from player to player, and each team that sold a patch handled the placement differently.

The Nationals struck a sponsor patch deal with AARP, an interest group focusing on issues affecting those 50 and older. The patches first appeared on July 1, 2025. There are two versions of the patch, a red patch with white AARP logo for the home jersey, and a white patch with a red AARP logo and gray border for all other jerseys.

The placement of the patch varies depending on the handedness of each player. The team's normal logo patches remain on each jersey, on the opposite sleeve from the ad patch.

In 2023 and 2024, the location of the team's usual logo sleeve patch varied depending on the handedness of each player, perhaps in preparation for a sponsor that did not materialize until midway though 2025.

© GameWornGuides.com

Nationals Postseason Patches

2014 NL Division Series (right sleeve)

2019 NL Wild Card 2019 NL Division Series 2019 NL Championship Series (right sleeve, above MLB150 patch)

2016 NL Division Series (right sleeve)

2019 World Series (right sleeve, MLB150 patch removed)

2017 NL Division Series (right sleeve)

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Bryce Harper 2012 Washington Nationals Game Worn Red "Rookie of the Year" Jersey

Examination Date: February 8, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0201J22

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Majestic Cool Base six button, size 48 red alternate jersey of #34 Bryce Harper. The size is correct for Harper. Navy/white knit trim bands the ends of each sleeve and rings the placket. Curly-W Nationals logo is stitched to the left chest in white outlined with Navy Blue layered twill. Player number 34 on the right front panel and centered on the back; HARPER radially arched above, all in the same two colors. The fonts and placement are correct for the 2012 Nationals. MLB Silhouetted Bater logo patch sewn on the back of the neck in red/white/blue. Nationals team secondary logo disk stitched to the left sleeve. Harper was the National League Rookie of the Year in 2012. The jersey has a MLB hologram sticker EK 049084 which is registered in the MLB Game worn database as used on May 20, 2012. However, experience says it is likely that this jersey was worn for multiple prior games and was probably simply pulled from use on that day.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Majestic "M" direct embroidered on the end of the left sleeve. Majestic Authentic Collection tag denoting the size as 48 is heat pressed to the bottom outside of the left front tail. Pinch-stitched inside the right side seam is Majestic's style tag, showing the code 0630, which is the style number assigned to team-specification jerseys compared to this made for retail sale. 3 1/2" x 1" red serged-edge jersey-fabric team strip tag is stitched into the back of the neck, with the code "34 48 '12 638" machine embroidered into it . This decodes to Player 34, size 48, 2012, with an inventory reference code of 638 that like relates to an internal team list of issued jerseys. All tagging is correct for the team and the player, matching exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination reveals that all lettering is original and without contrivance. While the jersey remains in overall very good condition, it shows signs of wear and wash. The inside tags are weathered and puckered, the twill lettering has softened and is slightly wrinkled, and all white stitching and twill has taken on an ivory/tan cast, stained by infield dirt.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good used condition, is properly lettered , tagged and has no alterations of any kind. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications for and worn by Bryce Harper of the 2102 Washington Nationals.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Chapter 26

Baltimore Orioles

Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys

1970 - 2025, Tenth Edition

William F. Henderson

Orioles Uniform History Notes

- The St. Louis Browns moved to Baltimore in 1954 and were renamed the Orioles. Their uniforms have always been a class act, with variations on a theme over the decades but sticking with orange and black; for most years displaying the classic team script and avoiding jarring uniform redesigns.
- The design that started the 1970s knits migrated almost untouched from 1966's freshening of the team scripts both home and road.
- The Orioles were one of the few teams that "eased " into the knit era, switching gradually to home knits in 1971 and to road knits for the 1971 postseason, leaving old-time flannels in the dust for 1972.
- The Orioles wore their home white knit uniforms for the first time on opening day in 1971, then alternated with the old flannels every other home game up until the All-Star break. Knits were worn in the 1971 All-Star Game (the Orioles sent six players) and in the World Series against the Pirates (who had switched to new double knits during the 1970 season). After the All-Star Game, the team wore the new-style knit uniforms every game at home.
- The double knit road uniform appeared for the first game of the ALCS series against the Oakland A's. It sported the Baltimore script on the front just like the flannels it replaced. Spalding made the Orioles' road jerseys in the late 1960s, and continued to supply them through 1972.
- Like most other teams, the Orioles went to knits full-time for 1972. However, the team's overall look was similar. Names had been added to the jerseys in the mid-1960s. The most notable change was the new uniforms featured wide orange, white, and black striped trim on the sleeve ends and orange and black trim at the neck.
- After experimenting with garish all-orange knit button front uniforms for just a few games in 1971–1972, an orange V-neck pullover is added as an alternate jersey in 1975 and is worn through 1984, then brought back in 1987. The jersey lineup remains remarkably steady from 1972 to 1988, with only small tweaks to trim, nameplates and fonts.
- 1989 ushers in a minor refresh, with an underline added to the script Orioles wordmark and the orange pullover becoming a button down, although it's almost never worn.
- A new alternate black V-neck pullover replaces the orange alternate in 1993, and is tweaked to a 2-button Henley pullover the very next year, a portent of the dizzying jersey variations yet to come in the next decade.
- Despite having only three main jerseys (home white, road gray, alternate black), the 1995–2003 period produces a head spinning number of small variations (trim, wordmarks, patches, mesh/solid fabric, nameplates) too long to summarize on this page. Further complicating things, numerous changes are made by ownership in knee-jerk fashion just before the season, and some even during the season, seemingly on a whim. Many undocumented oddball variations continue to turn up in the hobby as well.
- The beloved cartoon bird, first banished as part of the 1989 refresh, starts to sneak back into use for the 2002 season, first as a sleeve patch. 2012 welcomed him back fully to the flock, as he again adorned the team cap. Many believe he should never have left that perch.
- 2004–2025 returns to relative stability, with a basic set of white, gray, and alternate black jerseys with minimal changes. The most notable changes include the return of a script "Baltimore" wordmark to the road gray for the first time since 1972 and the addition of an orange alternate in 2012 after a 20-year hiatus.
- In 2023, a new City Connect uniform features a stark black design. Hidden colorful patterns on the inner collar and sleeve ends symbolize the city's vibrant neighborhoods, though these details were initially meant to be revealed only if players rolled up their sleeves—an idea later abandoned after player pushback led the team to sew the cuffs with the color exposed. The block "BALTIMORE" chest lettering and "B" sleeve patch use a speckled font inspired by local art institutions
- The Orioles are a team that historically has used a lot of sleeve patches, with many variations.

To knowledgeable Orioles fans, the guy in the circular logo in the background of this page is known as the "Walsh Bird." He is named after famous advertising illustrator Stan Walsh, who created icons like Snap, Crackle & Pop for Kellogg's, and the Hamm's Beer Bear. The Walsh Bird first appeared in 1966.

The Orioles tout their latest cartoon bird as a hybrid of two earlier versions. But the bird's history is much more complex than that.

I am always looking for new information and better photographs. If you can share new information, or offer corrections to this material, please send a note to me, at gameworngguides@gmail.com. Please tell me which page you are referencing. All contributors will be recognized by name in a future edition.

© GameWornGuides.com

Year by Year Summary

1970-1971

1970-1971

1971-1988

1972

1971-1972

1973-1988

1975-1984 then 1987-1988;

Not used in these two years

Orioles Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1970	Home White Flannel	Varsity 2 color	Varsity 2 color	vertical arch block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
	Road Gray Flannel	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	vertical arch block 2 color	No	-	-	Spalding
1971 Change mid-year	Home White Flannel	Varsity 2 color	Varsity 2 color	vertical arch block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
	Home White Knit	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray Flannel	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	vertical arch block 2 color	No	-	-	Spalding
	Road Gray Knit (Postseason Only)	Front Block 2 color	Block Variant 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	Spalding
	Alt Orange Knit	Powers Block 2 color	Powers Block 2 color	Block 1 color	No	-	-	Powers
1972	Home White	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	Block Variant 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	Spalding
	Alt Orange	Powers Block 2 color	Powers Block 2 color	Block 1 color	No	-	-	Powers
1973	Home White	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	vertical arch 2 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1974	Home White	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch 2 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1975	Home White	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch 2 color	No	-	-	Wilson
	Alt Orange	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch black only	No	-	-	Wilson
1976	Home White	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch 2 color	No	-	-	Wilson
	Alt Orange	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch black only	No	-	-	Wilson
1977	Home	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch 2 color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Alt Orange	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch black only	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1978	Home	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch 2 color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Alt Orange	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch black only	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1979	Home	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch 2 color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Alt Orange	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch black	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1980	Home	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color*	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch 2 color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Alt Orange	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch black only	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1981	Home	Descente Block 2 color	Descente Block 2 color	Descente Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Descente
	Road	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Alt Orange	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch black only	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1982	Home	Descente Block 2 color	Descente Block 2 color	Descente Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Descente
	Road	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Alt Orange	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch black only	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1983	Home	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Sand Knit
	Alt Orange	Varsity 2 color	7" Varsity 2 color	vertical arch black only	Yes			Wilson
1984	Home	Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	30th Anniv/Champs	-	Rawlings
	Road	Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color*	Yes	30th Anniv/Champs	-	Sand Knit
1985	Home	Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Sand Knit
1986	Home	Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Sand Knit
1987	Home	Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Alt Orange	Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
1988	Home	Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	EBW memorial	-	Rawlings
	Road	Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	EBW memorial	-	Rawlings
	Alt Orange	Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-		Rawlings

* Rawlings Block used only on Rawlings Jerseys. Other makers used their versions of Block.
Descente-tagged set for 1980 may have been used only in Spring Training

© GameWornGuides.com

Orioles Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1989	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
1990	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
1991	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	Memorial Stadium (first week)	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
1992	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
1993	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	All Star Game	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	All Star Game	-	Russell
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	All Star Game	-	Russell
1994	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	MLB 125th	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	MLB 125th	Russell
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	-	MLB 125th	Russell
1995	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	"Ornithologically Correct" Bird	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	"Ornithologically Correct" Bird	-	Russell
	Alt Black	Front Block 3 color	8" Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	"Ornithologically Correct" Bird	-	Russell
1996	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	"Ornithologically Correct" Bird	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	"Ornithologically Correct" Bird	-	Russell
	Alt Black	Front Block 3 color	8" Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	"Ornithologically Correct" Bird	-	Russell
1997	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	"OC" bird+Baltimore 200	Jackie Robinson	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	"OC" bird+Baltimore 200	Jackie Robinson	Russell
	Alt Black	Front Block 3 color	8" Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	"OC" bird+Baltimore 200	Jackie Robinson	Russell
1998	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	One year "Robin" Style Bird	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes	One year "Robin" Style Bird	-	Russell
	Alt Black	Front Block 3 color	8" Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	One year "Robin" Style Bird	-	Russell*
1999	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Lifelike" Bird	#7 Memorial	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Lifelike" Bird	#7 Memorial	Russell
	Alt Black	Front Block 3 color	8" Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	"Lifelike" Bird	#7 Memorial	Russell
2000	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	Yes/No (both)	"Lifelike" Bird	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Lifelike" Bird	-	Majestic
	Alt Black style2@	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Lifelike" Bird	-	Majestic

* See "Oddball" pages for the 1998 Alternate that was used briefly at the beginning of the season, made by Majestic, but Majestic logo blacked out on sleeves because Russell was contracted manufacturer

 Team played exhibition game at Camden Yards against Cuba, May 3,1999. A set of home jerseys exists with BOTH Bird and #7 on left sleeve, special Cuba patch on right sleeve

* @ A set of 1999-style alternate black jerseys was sewn for 2000. Two weeks before the start of the season they were scrapped in favor of the new, all black/ no white outline style

© GameWornGuides.com

Orioles Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2001	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Lifelike" Bird	AL 100th Ann./Ripken Career*	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Lifelike" Bird	AL 100th Anniversary	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 3 color	8" Block 3 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Lifelike" Bird	AL 100th Ann./Ripken Career*	Majestic
2002	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Fun Bird"	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Fun Bird"	Pentagon Memorial	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Fun Bird"	-	Majestic
2003	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Fun Bird"	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Fun Bird"	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	"Fun Bird"	-	Majestic
2004	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	50th Anniversary	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	50th Anniversary	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	50th Anniversary	-	Majestic
2005	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Ripken Streak 9/5-9/8	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
2006	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Hendricks memorial	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Hendricks memorial	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Hendricks memorial	-	Majestic
2007	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
2008	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	McKay armband after 6/8	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	McKay armband after 6/8	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
2009	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Orioles Baseball disc	diagonal Orioles script	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Orioles Baseball disc	diagonal Baltimore script	Majestic
2010	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Orioles Baseball disc	diagonal Orioles script	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Orioles Baseball disc	diagonal Baltimore script	Majestic
2011	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Flanny patch	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Orioles Baseball disc	diagonal Orioles script/Flanny patch	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Orioles Baseball disc	diagonal Baltimore script/Flanny patch	Majestic
2012	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Orioles Park 20th Anniv	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Orioles Park 20th Anniv	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Orioles Park 20th Anniv	Majestic
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Orioles Park 20th Anniv	Majestic
2013	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Earl Weaver/4 memorial	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Earl Weaver/4 memorial	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Earl Weaver/4 memorial	Majestic
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Earl Weaver/4 memorial	Majestic
2014	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	60th Anniversary/Clancy*	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	60th Anniversary/Clancy*	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	60th Anniversary/Clancy*	Majestic
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	60th Anniversary/Clancy*	Majestic
2015	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
2016	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
2017	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Camden Yards 25th	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Camden Yards 25th	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Camden Yards 25th	Majestic
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Camden Yards 25th	Majestic
2018	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Majestic
2019	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	MLB 150th/ F. Robinson "20"	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	MLB 150th/ F. Robinson "20"	Majestic
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	MLB 150th/ F. Robinson "20"	Majestic
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	MLB 150th/ F. Robinson "20"	Majestic
2020	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Nike
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Nike
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Nike
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Nike

Change to Flex Base

* Tom Clancy patch added March 31 through end of season
 Team wore Pentagon memorial patch on game of September 11, 2002 only
* Cal Ripken Patch worn last weekend of season only

 Flanny memorial patch worn for Mike Flanagan after August 26 through end of season

© GameWornGuides.com

These four styles continue from previous years

Switch to Vapor Premiere Elite

Orioles Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2021	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Nike
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Nike
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Nike
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	-	Nike
2022	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Camden Yards 30th anniversary,	Nike
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Camden Yards 30th anniversary,	Nike
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Camden Yards 30th anniversary,	Nike
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc	Camden Yards 30th anniversary,	Nike
2023	Home White	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc‡	Brooks Robinson Memorial‡*	Nike
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc‡	Brooks Robinson Memorial‡*	Nike
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc‡	Brooks Robinson Memorial‡*	Nike
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	8" Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc‡	Brooks Robinson Memorial‡*	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 2 color	Custom 1 color	No	Script B disc‡	Brooks Robinson Memorial‡*	Nike
2024	Home White	Nike Block 2 color (perf)	Nike Block 2 color (perf)	Nike Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc‡	T. Rowe Price Ad patch‡	Nike
	Road Gray	Nike Block 2 color (perf)	Nike Block 2 color (perf)	Nike Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc‡	T. Rowe Price Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Black	Nike Block 2 color (perf)	Nike Block 2 color (perf)	Nike Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc‡	T. Rowe Price Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Orange	Nike Block 2 color (perf)	Nike Block 2 color (perf)	Nike Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc‡	T. Rowe Price Ad patch‡	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 2 color (perf)	Custom 1 color	No	Script B disc‡	T. Rowe Price Ad patch‡	Nike
2025	Home White	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc‡	T. Rowe Price Ad patch‡	Nike
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc‡	T. Rowe Price Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Black	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc‡	T. Rowe Price Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Orange	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Rawlings Block 2 color	No	Baltimore Orioles disc‡	T. Rowe Price Ad patch‡	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 2 color (perf)	Custom 1 color	No	Script B disc‡	T. Rowe Price Ad patch‡	Nike

‡ patch sleeve varies based on handedness of player

* Memorial was a "5" on black jersey Sept. 26, 2023, then a patch on all jerseys starting Sept. 27, 2023 for rest of season

 Starting June 24

© GameWornGuides.com

Home, Road and Alternate Jerseys

1970-Mid 1971 Home (Flannel)

The Orioles 1970 home whites are a classic design that had been used in this style since 1966. Flannel home uniforms were made by Wilson and were year and set tagged on the front tail. The Orioles were an early adopter of player names on back, and they were rendered in the elegant vertical arch style. Narrow orange and black uniform braid trim rings the sleeve ends and collar. Both front and back numbers were cut using Varsity, the Wilson "standard" font, and were a rather small size on the reverse, specified as a 6" number.

Flannel home uniforms were issued for 1971, and were worn every other home game for the first half of the season, alternating with the new knits. After the All-Star break, the team switched exclusively to the home knits, leaving the flannels behind.

Barry Halper Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1970-Mid 1971 Home (Flannel), continued

1971

1970

© GameWornGuides.com

1970-1971 Road

1970

Rawlings made the Orioles road uniforms in 1970–1971, and did things their own way, compared to the Wilson home uniforms. They used different style trim and their own player name and number fonts. The gray flannel road jersey featured the "Baltimore" script in orange outlined with black and an underline. Wilson Block numbers on front and reverse in the same colors. Player names in two-color Rawlings Block in a fairly steep radial arch, different from the Wilson home jerseys (one-color, vertical arch).

This basic design dates back to 1956. Though the Orioles began the switch to knits at home at the start of 1971, alternating them with the older flannels for the first half of the season, they stayed with flannels on the road up until the playoffs. When the 1971 postseason began, the Orioles unveiled knit road uniforms and never looked back.

1970

© GameWornGuides.com

1970-1971 Road, continued

1971

1971

© GameWornGuides.com

1971-1988 Home (Knit)

1973

Barry Halper Collection

1971

In 1971, white knits were worn every other home game at first, alternating with the old-style flannels, up until the All-Star break. Knits were worn in the All-Star Game, and then completely replaced the home flannels for the second half of the season. Back numbers are bigger than those on flannels they replace.

The example at top is autographed: "My 1971 Gamer" by Brooks Robinson. Assuming that he is correct and that the autograph is legitimate, we note that the Rawlings tag on the front tail is one we have identified was used in 1972 and after. The Frank Robinson jersey below shows the usual 1971 Rawlings tag. I am always suspicious of star player jersey authenticity, regardless of what a signature says.

There is no team tagging apparent on these. Note that the shirt tail is cut straight across and hemmed flat, unlike the tapered tails used in later years. This flat tail style is seen on other very early knits, 1971–1973.

© GameWornGuides.com

1971-1988 Home (Knit), continued

For the fascinating story behind this jersey, follow this link.

Home jerseys are rather consistent during this 18-year period. Orioles with no underline on the front in orange/black. Black/white/orange sleeve end knit trim.

Above: clearly with extra length tailoring, although there is not a tag noting it as such. 1977 is the first year for separate player nameplates.

Block style numbers front and back. Front numbers are two-color orange/black. Names on back are two-color orange/black. Through the 1976 season, player names were directly sewn to the jersey backs. Starting in 1977 nameplates were used.

© GameWornGuides.com

1971-1988 Home (Knit), continued

1983

When Rawlings stitched the home uniforms for the Orioles, they used the Rawlings "house fonts"—a sans serif number font shared by many other teams that we have come to refer to simply as "block", with the front numbers and back numbers in different proportions to each other. Looking at the photo-matched Ripken jersey at left, it is clear that the 8 on the front is a different design/shape than the number on the back; it is not just the same number made smaller. The Rawlings house alphabet is used, a distinctively squat font, and notably the same one as used by the Cardinals. The black outline around the Orioles lettering is thicker than that used by the Cardinals, and the reason is simply that the black outline was hand-cut using scissors after the orange letter was sewn down. The Orioles directed the black outline be thicker, and the shop obliged.

Beginning in 1977, names were sewn on nameplates for ease in removing them and re-issuing the same jerseys to other players, or for sending them without names to the minors. The Orioles preferred a very steep arch for names regardless of how short or long the name was. A steep arch allowed for the fitment of very long names without the need for a condensed version of the alphabet.

1985

© GameWornGuides.com

1971-1988 Home (Knit), continued

1987

Above: Manager Cal Ripken Sr.'s jersey with its twin inside pockets, for cigarettes and reading glasses.

Starting in 1987, Rawlings was named the "Official Uniform Supplier to Major League Baseball" and was contractually allowed to begin to display their company logo on jerseys sleeves; a first. Look carefully and you will see it direct embroidered into the black sleeve stripe on the jersey's left sleeve.

1988

1987

Right: In this period, the Orioles often use steeply arched names and low-sewn back numbers.

1987

Bill Henderson Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1971-1972 Alternate

Many thanks to collector Bruce Genther for supplying these from his personal collection

Sports Illustrated

These bright uniforms were worn a couple of times in 1971 and then a few times again in 1972 before being retired. It is almost 100% certain that the same set of jerseys was used in both years. Sold to the Orioles by Brooks Robinson Sporting Goods, uniform made by Powers Manufacturing. Shirt is button front with 3/8-inch black/white/black ribbon trim around neck opening. Orioles in black on white script slanted across jersey front.

Five-inch "Powers Style" black on white number below team logo (Powers Manufacturing's variation of Varsity.) Three-inch black/white/black polyester knit trim on end of sleeves. Player's name on back direct sewn in three-inch plain black twill letters radially arched above an 8-inch black/white "Powers Style" Varsity numbers. Pants are orange with traditional tunnel belt loops and 3/8-inch ribbon trim of black/white/black down outer seam of pants. Solid black stirrup socks worn only with this uniform. The uniforms received mixed reactions, with burly O's slugger Boog Powell grumbling he looked like a pumpkin wearing them.

Steve's Baseball Photography page

Sports Illustrated photo from 1971 shows Brooks in the complete uniform. The small caption at the bottom reads: "Glorious too is Brooks after grand-slam homer in uniform supplied by his own firm."

© GameWornGuides.com

Article credit: September 17, 1971 Gettysburg (PA) Times

Orioles Really Stand Out With Bright New Uniforms

By GORDON BEARD
Associated Press Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — "I just wish," said pitcher Dave McNally, looking at his new orange uniform, "that the guys who ordered these, would have to wear them."

The Orioles, standouts of baseball in recent years, stood out more than ever as they donned their brightly colored double-knits for the first time Thursday night.

The Orioles drew whistles from opposing New York Yankees' players and a few of the fans when they took the field for a pregame fielding drill. They had worn their normal white home uniforms for batting practice.

WERE SELF CONSCIOUS

The reaction from the players was mixed, although a majority seemed a bit self conscious even before leaving the privacy of the clubhouse.

Boog Powell, the big first baseman, stayed inside during infield practice, and right fielder Frank Robinson also was absent after changing into the new uniform.

"I'm going to stay here until the last possible minute," Boog said, as he pulled on the orange outfit with black lettering and numerals, and a white "Orioles" script trimmed in white. The trimming of the sleeves and the pants' piping is black and white, and the socks are black.

"NOT SO BAD"

"Oh, they're not so bad," reserve outfield Curt Motton said. "I think a lot of people will like them when they get used to them."

"I'm just glad to have one in my locker," said reserve Tom Shopay.

"That's right," said outfielder Merv Rettenmund. "There are some guys in Rochester and Dallas-Fort Worth (Baltimore farm clubs) who'd like to be wearing this orange. I'll wear anything as long as it says, 'Orioles' and is legal."

"I like 'em," Chico Salmon said. "It brings out the blackness in me."

The Baltimore front office looked at sample material and colors during the last off-season, but didn't place an order until about a month ago. They have three other white home uniforms.

The orange outfits are to be worn for variety both at home and on the road, perhaps once during a series. There has been no decision whether to use them in postseason play.

The Oakland Athletics, winners of the American League West who probably will oppose Baltimore in the playoffs, wear green and yellow uniforms as a departure from the traditional home whites or road grays.

At the turn of the century, the New York Giants wore all-black uniforms, while more recently the Chicago Cubs have worn baby blue and the Chicago White Sox pale blue.

"Where's my parka?" McNally said as he headed for the field and the start of the game. "I'm going to hide as much as possible."

"It makes no difference to me," said Brooks Robinson. His sporting goods store filed the order for the uniforms.

© GameWornGuides.com

1971 Postseason Road

These Spalding gray knit jerseys with wide knit sleeve end trim appeared for the first time in the 1971 postseason, in the first game of the ALCS against Oakland. The new knits have the same Baltimore script lettering on the front as the flannels of 1971, however the trim is completely different. Notice how wide the sleeve end trim is on the Spalding jerseys—much wider than that of the home jerseys made by Rawlings. The fabric is a sort of bluish gray; noticeably different looking than the old gray flannels (compare to photo at lower left). These jerseys were not recycled in 1972—as the practically identical 1972 versions had the sleeve stripes reversed, now with the black stripe closest to the shoulder.

(Many thanks to Orioles historian Mark Huesman for searching through microfilm and calling out the difference between the 1971 postseason and 1972 regular season jerseys)

© GameWornGuides.com

1972 Road

Baltimore script on front in orange/black. One-year style. Notice very wide sleeve knit trim in black/white/orange.

Gray knits were worn for the first time in the 1971 postseason for just a total of four games, but these are not the same jerseys reused from 1971! Notice that the sleeve stripes are reversed in color-order from the 1971 jerseys. Having the orange stripe at the end looks better, since most players wear it with a black undershirt. Two-color block numbers and names—orange/black, front and back. Two-color block name on back radially arched, no nameplate used. I cannot personally vouch for the originality of the McNally (above), which has oddly shaped numeral “1”s on front and back.

© GameWornGuides.com

1973-1980 Road

Wilson replaces Spalding as the manufacturer for 1973. Baltimore script is replaced with Orioles script used on home jerseys. Always two-color numbers and name, orange/black. Wide sewn-in knit sleeve ends in black-white-orange, and orange-black collar trim.

Like the home jerseys of this period, even though the shirt's basic design and the team script stay constant over the 16 years that this style road jersey was worn, the contracted manufacturer and the name/number lettering changes over the years. Each manufacturer used their own fonts to sew the sets at their factories. On these, Wilson's Varsity numbers front and back. Numbers on back are small, 7" Varsity style that are like the front numbers, just made larger. This is not typical—generally the larger back numbers for teams are proportioned differently that the front font. Player names are vertical arch during this period, direct-sewn and not on nameplates through 1977, nameplates are used after.

Wilson jerseys feature a sewn-in white linen lining on the placket and around the collar, for player comfort.

© GameWornGuides.com

1973-1980 Road, continued

Player names on back during this period were individually hand-drawn on an drafting table by a skilled artist, transferred to orange twill then cut by hand with scissors. The cut orange letter was sewn down to the black backing, then the black outline was cut completely by hand and only by eye. As a result, no two are exactly alike, and photo-match of original examples is possible from news photos of the day. I restored the name on back of the Reggie Jackson, above left, using the clearly visible ghosts of the removed name as my guide. See the linked letter of restoration.

© GameWornGuides.com

1975-1984 Alternate

Pullover orange V-neck, Orioles with no underline. Identify by black/white/orange sleeve end trim. 1975–1984 jerseys are made by Wilson. Varsity-style numbers on front, small 7" numbers on back two-color black/white. Vertical arch names direct-sewn; however many were reissued with nameplates on back to cover old names and the damage left from names being removed. In my opinion, because during each season these were so infrequently used by the team, they were reissued again and again in subsequent years, saving the team the cost of issuing full new sets. On these pages are a number of this style jersey that I have restored for collectors; each is on its second or third player name. And while in 1975–1976 these were issued without nameplates and the names direct-sewn, by 1977 they started using nameplates to make it easier to re-issue the jerseys to new players. Many of the 1975–1976 jerseys ended up with nameplates to cover the damage; holes made from the sloppy removal of old player names.

© GameWornGuides.com

1975-1984 Alternate, continued

1977 and later orange jerseys used nameplates to make it easier to change player names for re-issue. All of the examples on this page have nameplates. The D. Martinez (above) in my collection appears to be original, as does the Weaver. The Morales (bottom left) had its NOB restored by me.

© GameWornGuides.com

1981-1982 Home (Descente-made)

1981

1981

1982

1981

Looking for the 1980-Tagged Descente home Orioles jerseys?

For this edition, these have been moved to the "Oddball" section later in this chapter. Our research leads us to conclude that these jerseys were never issued and worn by the team during a major league season.

Japanese maker Descente nosed into the MLB market in 1977, providing some uniforms to the Pittsburgh Pirates through 1984. They also supplied sets of home uniforms to the Baltimore Orioles for 1980* through 1982. Descente jerseys can be identified by their unique number fonts on both front and rear. This was a quainter time in professional sports when the player number and name fonts were acceptable so long as they were the right color and were "close" to the team standard. The 1981–1982 Descente sets had revised numbers from the 1980 produced set. Based on the number of these in the hobby with player names stripped from the back, these sets surely went to the minors and were reused in Spring Training. All examples on this page have likely had their NOBs restored.

Right: While we cannot see any manufacturer tagging, The front number font tells us that these players are wearing 1981–1982 Descente uniforms in this photo.

© GameWornGuides.com

1981-1988 Road

Rawlings 1981-1982

1982

1981 marks the road jersey's switch to Block names and numbers, and the end of vertical arched player names.

1981

Rawlings replaces Wilson in 1981 as the supplier of Orioles road jerseys. Outwardly appearing generally the same as the prior Wilson issues, with the same slanted orange-on-black Orioles script and Black/white/orange sewn-in knit sleeve ends and orange/black knit neck trim, there are some changes. Inside the jersey, the linen lining inside the collar and placket is gone. Rawlings also took the liberty to change the player name and number fonts to their own house font, replacing the Wilson versions. Prior to the days of computer-graphics font standardization and intense team branding, this sort of event was common practice in baseball; teams were seemingly far less concerned with the same fonts being used on different makers' uniforms. The Rawlings block-style numbers are larger and player names are switched to a non-vertical arched Rawlings-Block alphabet. Nameplates continue to be used. Player names were very steeply arched compared to most other teams.

Rawlings was the sole supplier of the team's road jerseys in 1981–1982, and after a four-year hiatus, again in 1987–1988 (in 1983–1986 Sand-Knit was the sole supplier of Orioles road jerseys).

There are a special set of Rawlings road jerseys year tagged as 1984, and we have learned that these were made for the Orioles postseason Tour of Japan. They notably have an orange Rawlings logo tag sewn to the right sleeve end, something that would not be allowed in MLB until the 1987 season. See these in the "Special Events" section of this chapter.

1982

© GameWornGuides.com

1981-1988 Road, continued: Sand-Knit 1983-1986

1986

1985

1985

1985

When Sand-Knit took over making the Orioles' road jerseys from Rawlings for the 1983 season, they adopted the Rawlings template nearly exactly... the script was the same, and the fonts used for name and numbers were practically identical. Nameplates continued to be used. The Sand-Knit jersey body was slightly less tailored than the Rawlings one, shorter in length and wider in the waist. Sand Knit tagging was different, using their odd hollow-letter Plastisol ink lettering screened onto long white fabric tapes that were zig-zagged to inside of the jersey tail. Tagging consisted of a two-character year, then a star, then the numeric size of the garment. The size followed by a "Z" indicated special-request tailoring, usually extra length, then a strip of fabric for the player name, and finally (but not always) a small square sewn on for the player number. 1983–1985 was sometimes printed, often player name and player number were hand written in black marker. 1986 all was generally machine printed. Jerseys without a player number in the tagging were often "extra" jerseys issued to the team for ad-hoc use during the season.

© GameWornGuides.com

1981-1988 Road, continued: Rawlings 1987-1988

1988

1987 tagged, also used in 1988

The EBW Sleeve memorial was used in 1988, so the Mendoza's jersey 1987 year-tag demonstrates the Orioles' practice of reissuing and re-using jerseys year to year. The Williamson example above left does not follow the team player name font pattern exactly (look at the inside opening of the "A" for example) and it is reasonable to assume that the nameplate is a replacement. The Aase example at left is also tagged 1987. I restored its nameplate exactly using the team template.

© GameWornGuides.com

1987-1988 Alternate

Compare earlier style 1975–1984 Wilson front team script (above) which is slightly heavier in stroke than Rawlings (below). Different font is used for the player numbers.

These jerseys were infrequently worn during the regular season, and the frugal Orioles carried over some/many 1987 jerseys and re-used them in 1988. Generally, red Rawlings tags were seen in 1987, white tags in jerseys newly-issued in 1988. Many/most of these in the hobby have had their name-plates removed or restored.

Pullover orange V-neck, Orioles with no underline. Identify by black/white/orange sleeve end trim. The 1987–1988 jerseys are made by Rawlings. Rawlings' Orioles script is slightly less bold than the Wilson version; wordmark outline is thinner. Numbers are now 2-color Block with Serifs. Player names are Block and Block Condensed on nameplates, no vertical arch is used. Manufacturer's label and team tagging are sewn inside the front left tail, not visible from the outside.

© GameWornGuides.com

1989-1994 Home

1990

1992

1991

Click to See Letter of Opinion

1994

Sleeve trim starting 1991

"Orioles" with underline (added for 1989). 1989-1990 Rawlings jerseys have sewn-on black/orange/black knit trim at the ends, starting 1991 have sewn-in stretchy knit black/orange/black sleeve ends. No trim at collar. Numbers on front and back, name on back, all color keyed identically to team script, two-color orange/black. Block and Front Block numbers used exclusively. Nameplates used. Rawlings made these 1989–1991; Russell 1992–1994.

© GameWornGuides.com

1989-1994 Road

1989

1994

1991

1989-1990

1991-1994

Russell tagging is, at best, inconsistent 1992–1994.

Orioles with underline (added for 1989) on front. Back Block numbers and Front Block numbers formatted identically to team script two-color black/orange. Names on back two-color black/orange, nameplates used. In 1989–1990, sleeve ends have black/orange/black sewn-on knit trim is used. 1991–1994 features orange/black/orange sewn-in elastic knit trim. Made by Rawlings 1989–1991, and Russell from 1992–1994.

© GameWornGuides.com

1989-1992 Alternate

"T" sewn next to Rawlings tag indicates jersey has been tapered at the waist.

1992

Solid (non-mesh) orange fabric. "Orioles" underlined. 1989–1990 sleeve trim is sewn-on knit braid; 1991–1992 is sewn-in elastic knit sleeve end. Numbers switch to Block numbers on the back and Front Block numbers on front. Name two-color black/white on nameplate. Rawlings 1989–1991, Russell 1992.

Chris Creamer's (https://www.sportslogos.net) research tells us that these were worn only one game each in 1989 (July 3 vs. Detroit), and 1990 (Aug. 29 vs. NYY)

© GameWornGuides.com

1973-1990 Orioles Team Tagging

© GameWornGuides.com

1993 Alternate

Solid fabric knit black pullover with a V-neck collar replaces the seldom worn orange alternate. Orioles script with under-line, orange/white Block and Front Block numbers. Player name font uses the squatter Rawlings variant for NOB. Names are on nameplates. Russell "R" direct embroidered in orange to the end of the right sleeve. As this is used only in 1993, all team-issued or game worn jerseys should have the 1993 Baltimore All-Star Game patch on the sleeve, or at least evidence that it had once been sewn there.

© GameWornGuides.com

1994 Alternate

Huggins and Scott Auction

Huggins and Scott Auctions

Appearing almost identical to the prior year's V-neck, the 1994 alternate changes to a two-button Henley neck, presumably for player comfort. All two-color orange over white lettering, names on back in the Rawlings Block style and stitched to nameplates. Russell "R" direct embroidered in orange to the end of the right sleeve. All 1994 jerseys have the MLB 125th Anniversary patch sewn to the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

1995-2003: Orioles Home Wordmark Variations

Readers: the next 20 or so pages have an unusually large amount of detail on the 1995–2003 Orioles uniforms, all styles. The team made many small running changes to uniforms in this period which are not formally documented anywhere else.

- To the casual observer, all home jerseys from 1995 through 2003 appear the same: similar colors of all elements and similar trim. All years of this style of home jersey have both placket and sleeve end trim
- However, the front wordmark changes slightly during this style run.
- 1995–1997: Thick logo, small loop, sewn at a steeper angle of incline.
- 1998–2003 thinner stroke logo, big loop, sewn at a less-steep angle of incline

© GameWornGuides.com

1995-2000: Orioles Road Wordmark Variations

1995–1996 (small loop style, with placket trim)

1997 (small loop style, no placket trim)

1998–2000 (big loop style, no placket trim)

1995–1996

All road jerseys 1995–2000 feature a three-color front wordmark orange/black/white. All player names and numbers are two-color orange/black. They look identical, but there are variations when one looks closely.

Three subtly different style variants are used during this six year period.

1997

Jerseys in all years have black knit trim near the sleeve ends. However, the 1995–1996 version of the road jersey features this same trim on the front placket as well. This front placket trim disappears for 1997.

1998-2000

There are two versions of the Orioles wordmark used. The “small loop” style is used 1995–1997. The “big loop” style is used 1998–2000. The 1998–2000 wordmark style is less bold and sewn at a less steep incline than the 1995–1997 style.

© GameWornGuides.com

1995-1999: Orioles Alternate Wordmark Variations

1995; in 1996 issued but unworn

1996–1997

Early 1998—pullover mesh

1998-1999, in 2000 issued but unworn

•1995: Full placket orange knit trim and at sleeve ends. Three-color wordmark (orange/black/white) with the small loop in the "s" and the second "o."

•1996, team issued but not used: A set of jerseys identical to 1995's is team-tagged and issued, but before the season, team ownership decided that the orange trim on the placket looked too flashy and had to go. Reportedly the trim was removed, but I do not believe that happened to all of them. I have many photos of 1996 team-tagged orange placket trimmed jerseys in my archives. I believe these were all sold into to the hobby, probably as "team issued" but many now show up incorrectly identified as "game worn." There surely were tens of thousands of these made for retail sale, and the stock of these were almost certainly sold at retail, probably without any notation that they were different from the team's actual on-field jerseys.

The "small loop" wordmark, 1995 through early 1998

The "big loop" wordmark, used most of 1998 through 1999

The Orioles black alternate game jerseys of 1996 through 2000 have a detail history as tangled as a bird's nest. Again, to the casual observer, all the jerseys shown on this page look identical to one another, but they are not. Year by year, we will go though the variations in script and trim here.

• 1996–1997 Small loop wordmark, sleeve trim present but no placket trim of any kind.

• Early 1998: A set of "temporary" black alternates was made from batting practice jerseys. They are mesh, have the sleeve end knit trim added, with the small-loop design. Used for the first few games.

• Later 1998–1999: The front wordmark is changed to the new, "big loop" design, knit trim is used on sleeve ends only.

• Early 2000: The wordmark is changed at the last possible moment, orange outlined with black, losing the white. A set of the old-style three-color lettered jerseys is made for 2000 but not used on the field, replicating the odd situation of 1996.

© GameWornGuides.com

1995-2003 Orioles Team Sleeve Patches

Ornithologically Correct Bird
1995–1997

Robin Style Bird 1998 only

Lifelike Bird 1999–2001

Fun Bird 2002–2003

According to the Orioles publicity material:

The Baby Bird & Orioles Fun Birds: In 1997, the Orioles created a group of "fun birds" which have played a variety of roles in the Orioles organization. The Baby Bird, also known to little O's fans as the Dugout Club Bird, was designed to appeal to a younger Orioles fan. As he improves his baseball skills, the Fun Bird is illustrated executing various baseball drills.

- In 1989, the Orioles dumped the fan-favorite cartoon bird cap logo that they had worn since 1966. An old fashioned-style bird replaced him, looking much like the type that had been used on caps between 1954–1965, and also prior during the pre-MLB Orioles' time in the International League.
- 1995–1997: The bird patch is first used on the sleeve. The replacement bird had a fat body and a tiny head and was known as the Ornithologically Correct Bird. In 1995, this bird appeared on the left sleeve, where he stayed through 1997.
- 1998: The bird was redesigned to make him look even more realistic, but some claimed he now looked more like a robin than an oriole. Identify by the white crescent behind the bird's eye
- 1999: The bird was redrawn again. This style of patch used from 1999 through 2001 is known as the "Lifelike Bird."
- 2002–2003: a version of the cartoon bird returns to the left sleeve. Specifically he is known as the "Fun Bird."

© GameWornGuides.com

1995-1997 Home

1997 moves the sleeve oriole patch up higher to accommodate the one-year Baltimore 200 patch, above left.

1995

1997

For 1995, “Orioles” is now taller and thinner; more stylized with underline, and is now black/orange. This uses the“small loop” wordmark; look at the loop in the final flourish of the “s” just before the start of the tail. Compare to the “big loop” style “s” 1998–2003.

Front number colors are now reversed from other lettering. Front Block numbers. Back number and name are two-color black/orange.

© GameWornGuides.com

1998-2003 Home

Russell 1998-1999

In this revised version, the jersey is very similar to 1995–1997 style, but Orioles script is now even slightly thinner, taller and even more stylized. Look for the “big loop” of the letter S before the underline. While the style of this jersey remains basically the same 1998–2003, there are enough year-to year detail changes that we will break these out into smaller groups.

For 1998, the Orioles wordmark is generally sewn at a less steep angle of incline than in 1995–1997. Player name/number lettering is identical to earlier jersey.

The 1998 jersey is the only one to feature the “robin bird sleeve patch”, named derisively because critics said that the bird on the patch more closely resembled an American Robin than a Baltimore Oriole. This patch style lasted only one year. Player nameplates are used in 1998, the final year for them.

© GameWornGuides.com

1998-2003 Home, continued: Russell 1998-1999

Autographed 1999 team issue but not game worn, missing #7 sleeve memorial that had been worn all year by the team. See linked LOA for more.

1999

For 1999, the sleeve patch is changed to a new bird patch that is known as "the lifelike bird". Otherwise the jersey remains identical to 1998. The team wears an embroidered black with white outline "7" patch on the left sleeve to memorialize Cal Ripken Sr. who had passed during the off-season. The use of nameplates stops, and for 1999 player names on back are direct sewn. 1999 is also the final year that Russell was the team's uniform supplier and the last year that the MLB Silhouetted Batter patch is absent from the back of the collar.

This 1999 game worn example has the memorial #7 on the sleeve for Cal Ripken Sr., as well as the special patch worn for the exhibition game played at home against Cuba. Multiple examples show that these were likely a special set of jerseys made just for this game and then autographed and sold.

1999

Above: game photo shows the proper application of the "7" memorial on the right sleeve as worn all season.

© GameWornGuides.com

1998-2003 Home, continued: Majestic 2000-2003

2000

For 2000, Majestic takes over making the Orioles uniforms and besides the addition of the MLB Silhouetted Batter patch on the back of the neck (a running change for all MLB uniforms) and the Majestic logo embroidered onto the end of the left sleeve, everything else remains exactly the same as 1999. 2000 is the only year in this style-run without any memorial patches on the sleeves. As before, no nameplates are used. Majestic does not year/set/player tag jerseys, making it more difficult to ascertain if a jersey is team issued.

For 2001, the American League 100th Anniversary patch is added to the right sleeve, and following the tragic events of 9/11, an American flag is sewn over-top the batterman logo on the back of the collar. Finally, celebrating his retirement, a Cal Ripken career patch is added to the right sleeve replacing the American League 100th patch.

2001, October 5–6 only

2001

2001, October 5–6

Early 2000 jerseys with nameplates:
Above: Dated news photos show the team wearing Majestic home jerseys (only) with nameplates in April 2000, a feature they had dropped after 1998. Photos from later in the year show no nameplates (Getty Images)

© GameWornGuides.com

1998-2003 Home, continued: Majestic 2000-2003

2002

For 2002–2003, the final two years of the current uniform iteration are marked only by the change of the bird sleeve patch. The team reverts to its earlier imagery, reviving the "Walsh Bird" so popular during the 1960s–1980s. He is christened the "Fun Bird" and is shown in a new crouched batting stance on the left sleeve patch sewn just above the Majestic logo. No team tagging on these.

© GameWornGuides.com

1995-1996 Road

1996

1995

1995–1996 road jersey has black knit trim on placket, around collar and near sleeve ends. The Orioles wordmark used has the “small loop” design, three-color orange/black/white. Block style numbers, nameplates used, two-color name and numbers, front and back orange/black. “Ornithologically Correct” bird patch used both these years.

Stephen Kraljic collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1997 Road

- 1997 road jersey is a one-year variant that has no front placket trim and has the “small loop” wordmark.
- All 1997 jerseys also should have both the Baltimore 2000 patch (in gray) sewn below the bird on the sleeve (which necessitates the bird being sewn higher up than in other years) and the 1997-only Jackie Robinson “Breaking Barriers” patch on the right sleeve.
- All other aspects of trim and lettering are identical to the 1996 jersey: three-color wordmark, two color name and number, names on nameplates.

© GameWornGuides.com

1998-2000 Road

Russell 1998-1999

1998

For 1998 the wordmark changes to the three-color "big loop" style. Nameplates are used for the final time in 1998, and they disappear after that. "Robin bird" patch used for 1998 only.

Right: "Big loop" is shorthand to distinguish between the styles of this wordmark, and refers to the opening inside the S.

1998

© GameWornGuides.com

1998-2000 Road, continued: Russell 1998-1999

1999

1999 is the final year of Russell making the Orioles' uniforms. It is also the final year of MLB jerseys having no logo patch on the back of the neck. The Russell R appears embroidered on the right sleeve end, narrow black trim rings the sleeve ends only. Nameplates are discontinued for 1999. The bird patch on the sleeve changes to the style now known as the "lifelike bird" that is used through the 2001 season. A small "7" embroidered memorial patch (not twill) is sewn on the right sleeve. It is bordered with white embroidery, and we've learned from Joe Hilseberg, a stitcher who was there at the time that several iterations of these patches were made. On white and gray jerseys sometimes the patch 's white outline was darkened with black magic marker to make the patch seem all black. I can vouch for this, as I have restored one of these where the patch had been removed, leaving a black marker stain around its perimeter that was a b!tch to get off!

1999

1999

© GameWornGuides.com

1998-2000 Road, continued: Majestic 2000

For 2000, Majestic takes over for Russell as the supplier of the Orioles' uniforms. While the design remains the same as 1999, there are a few small changes. Besides the removal of the 1999 memorial "7" from the sleeve, Majestic's logo is now on the left sleeve (vs. the right sleeve where the Russell logo had appeared) and The MLB Silhouetted Batter logo patch is stitched to the back of the collar; a running change for all MLB teams. The Orioles' patch is black, white and orange, matching team colors.

© GameWornGuides.com

Early 1995 Alternate

The early 1995 on-field alternate black jersey (left) has "small loop" style of wordmark, orange knit trim on the sleeve ends, around the collar and down the placket. All lettering is orange/black/white. Front Block numbers on front, Block Standard on back. Three-color player NOB. But by July the team taken to wearing their black mesh BP jerseys in games instead.

Reportedly, for some reason, ownership had a negative issue with the orange placket trim on these and preferred the batting practice jersey be worn instead.

Team tagged 1995 Alternates with no orange placket trim (as in,1996 style?) Yes, I've seen a couple, and I question their authenticity. These are always superstar player jerseys, which I never use in isolation to verify a style. I need to see game photos and/or common player lettered jerseys before I'll consider that these are a real thing.

Sleeve patch 1995–1997

Right: Game action photos from July and August 1995 show the team wearing the mesh black BP in games, explained further on the next page. Note the lack of names on back, front numbers, and the presence of the Majestic sleeve logo, which by contractual rights should not have been displayed during games.

© GameWornGuides.com

July/August 1995 Batting Practice as Game Jersey

July–Aug 1995: Blame the heat, perhaps, but these action photos show that the Orioles wore their black mesh batting practice jerseys for some games in the hottest months of the summer in 1995. While you can't see the mesh fabric in these pictures, note the lack of front numbers, the absence of player names on back and the white Majestic logo on the right sleeve.

This was surely not a sanctioned move, as by contract, Majestic logos could not be displayed on game uniforms in that year. We wonder what Russell had to say about this.

© GameWornGuides.com

1996-1997 Alternate

This version of the sleeve patch is used only 1995–1997

1996–1997 on-field black alternate is identical to 1995 model, only without the orange placket knit trim. Knit trim remains around the sleeve ends only.

© GameWornGuides.com

Oddballs: 1996 & 2000 Black Alternate Jerseys Team Ordered but Not Game Used

1996 issued, unused

1996: The orange knit trim on the placket and around the back of the collar were never present on game used Orioles alternate jerseys. However, at least one set of them were created for the team with year tagging. The unconfirmed story is that team ownership (OK, Peter Angelos) ruled them too flashy and ordered them remade without the orange placket knit trim at the last moment.

These team-tagged 1996 jerseys often appear for sale as "game used" when they were not. Also, there were a great many of these made for retail sale, still sold in 1996 and beyond sold as "on-field authentics" even though the official on-field look had changed.

2000: Incredibly, the team did the same thing again in 2000, when they changed the black jersey at the last moment before opening day, removing the white outlines, creating a set of unusable black jerseys that appear as "game used 2000" when they were never used on the field.

One can imagine the frustration at Russell and then Majestic when the Orioles changed their minds at the last moment on what they would be wearing on the field. There must have been thousands of now obsolete jerseys in stock for retail sale, these were either sold beside the new ones, or more likely were dumped at a loss to the discounters.

And...2000 Majestic jersey issued, also unused. Majestic had newly acquired the Orioles jersey contract for 2000, and the Orioles greeted them with a problem.

Left: 1996 game photo of a certain rather infamous incident. You can see there is knit trim on the sleeve ends but not on the jersey front.

© GameWornGuides.com

Even more 1996-1998 "Orioles" Script Tweaks??

Or...How many versions of the script are there?

Left: Less often seen: aggressively leaning wordmark. Note especially the negative space between the O and R, and R and I. The less-italic variant is pictured on the other three jerseys on this page.

- Amidst all of the varieties of Orioles jerseys year-to-year in this period that would only be noticed by fanatic detail freaks (like us), discussions among collectors have been raised about if there were different variations of the Orioles scripts in use on the field at the same time.
- The claim was that there were multiple versions of the script in use concurrently in 1995–1999. I will admit that it is surely possible that old "small loop" and later "big loop" jerseys were being used simultaneously in 1998, as the changes were small and the team likely had old stock to use up.
- But are there really more versions of the wordmark than these two? Researching this chapter I have looked at many hundreds of game photos and I had to admit that it surely does appear like there were two versions of the Orioles script as collectors have suggested: one leaning aggressively forward, one appearing more nearly upright.
- I have also concluded that some these apparent differences are an illusion; appearing because jersey scripts were sewn oddly inconsistently from one another. Generally, a template is used to ensure that angles are consistent from garment to garment. But as you can see on this page, the Orioles wordmark is sewn at different angles on different jerseys, giving it a totally different look.
- Three of the four jerseys pictured at left all use the same word mark, yet all four have their wordmarks sewn at different angles onto the jersey. Was this an intentional running change? Or simply poor quality control?

© GameWornGuides.com

Early 1998 “Batting Practice Based” Mesh Alternate

Bill Henderson Collection

1998 sleeve patch: The one-year-only Robin-style Bird.

Below: Sharpie blacked-out out sleeve logo.

Early 1998: The Orioles wore these black mesh alternates only a couple of times. They were converted from batting practice jerseys, but the gamers can be distinguished from the pullover pregame jerseys in the following ways:

1. Front numbers are on game jerseys but not BP jerseys.
2. These jerseys feature the player’s name on the back which is not found on the Orioles BP jerseys.
3. Sleeve trim has been added -there is no sleeve trim on Orioles BP jerseys.
4. Oriole one-year Robin Bird style patch, found on gamers only, not on BP jerseys.
5. Majestic logo, blacked out on these jersey with permanent marker, because Russell was the official supplier of game jerseys. There was no need to black it out on the pregame jerseys, where Majestic was the official supplier.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid 1998-1999 Alternate

A set of this style jerseys was also sewn for the team's use for the 2000 season. Then, two weeks before the season began, they were scrapped to be replaced with the new for 2000 style shown in the pages ahead. A set of these jerseys exists in the hobby with 2000 team tagging, they are team issued but not game worn. An example is shown in this chapter.

New "big loop" wordmark, Nameplates in 1998, none in 1999, different bird sleeve patch if 1998 or 1999. All else remains the same as prior year. Trim stays on sleeve ends only.

© GameWornGuides.com

1995-2000 Four Puzzling Oddballs

- Ready for more? Even considering all the exceptions on the past 15 pages, these four jerseys defy description, I will leave them to your judgment.
- Top left: This supposed Bobby Bonilla game issued jersey offered for sale on eBay has both the pre-1996 front placket trim AND the 1998 and later big-loop wordmark. The tiny flag tag attached to the Russell jock tag indicates it is very likely from “team issued” stock.
- Middle left: This supposed Eddie Murray game issued jersey has front placket trim but none on the sleeve ends
- Bottom left: This game worn 1997 Rocky Coppinger game jersey has no sleeve trim.
- Near left (column): This likely team issued/tagged 1995 jersey, has 1996 tagging but no placket trim. #48 is hitting coach Rick Down. I always say, beware of famous name player jerseys (Bonilla, Murray) because they are likely to be fakes created for profit, but that does not help explain the Coppinger and Down jerseys. I suggest these are team issued inconsistencies.

© GameWornGuides.com

2000-2011 Alternate/2012-2023 Alternate Black

This jersey was used almost unchanged except for patch detail for 24 years! Team logo and all the other lettering is two-color, orange/black. The black outline is hard to see– but it is there! 2000-2008 jersey is full-weight knit. Black jersey typically worn for Friday games, home and road.

Starting 2009, Orioles' jerseys are no longer full knit fabric. Year-to-year differences limited to the sleeve patches which change constantly. On the left sleeve,

- 2000-2001 - "Lifelike Bird"
- 2002-2003 - "Fun Bird"
- 2004 - 50th Anniversary
- 2005, 2007-2008 - no patch

(continued, next page)

Left sleeve 2000–2001

Left sleeve 2009–2023

Left sleeve 2002–2003

2009 Alternate has two patches—"Orioles Baseball" on the left side, and a tiny diagonal "Baltimore" script on the right.

© GameWornGuides.com

2000-2011 Alternate/2012-2023 Alternate Black, continued

2014, with postseason patch replacing 60th Anniversary patch

Left: 2014 Postseason jersey shows removal of the 60th Anniversary from the right sleeve and replaces it with the MLB Postseason patch. Got all that?

Sleeve patches, continued:

- 2006: "44" memorial patch for Elrod Hendricks on left sleeve.
- 2009-2011: Round Orioles Baseball sleeve patch on the left sleeve and diagonal "Baltimore" script on the right sleeve.
- 2011: Flanny memorial for Mike Flanagan
- 2012: Camden Yards anniversary on right, new round "Baltimore Orioles" disc with Maryland flag colors on left.
- 2013-2023: "Baltimore Orioles" disc on the left sleeve (through 2022, and varies sleeves in 2023), but on the opposite sleeve:
    - 2013 - Earl Weaver "4" Memorial Disk
    - 2014 - 60th Anniversary and Tom Clancy patches
    - 2015-2016, 2018, 2020-2021 - no patch
    - 2017 - Camden Yards 25th patch
    - 2019 - MLB 150 and Frank Robinson "20"
    - 2022 - Camden Yards 30th anniversary
    - 2023 - Brooks Robinson memorial

© GameWornGuides.com

2000-2011 Alternate/2012-2023 Alternate Black, continued

2007

2011

2017

2020

© GameWornGuides.com

2001-2008 Road

2001: USA flag added to the back of the collar after the events of 9/11/2001.

2002–2003: Fun Bird patch now on left sleeve No patch on the right sleeve, except worn with 9/11 memorial Pentagon patch 9/11/2002 (shown)

2004: 50th Anniversary patch on left sleeve

Majestic takes over from Russell as the maker of Orioles uniforms starting with the 2001 season. On raid gray jerseys, the white outline is removed from the team script, leaving it a simpler orange over a black outline. Besides adding their embroidered black logo to the end of the left sleeve, the MLB logo "silhouetted batter" is sewn to the back of the neck, a running change for all MLB teams. Majestic ceases team-tagging jerseys, making determining team issue/game worn status more difficult.

Through the eight-year run of this style, note the following variations for each season:

- 2001—Lifelike Bird sleeve patch.
- 2002–2003—Fun Bird patch replaces Lifelike Bird.
- 2004—50th Anniversary left sleeve patch instead of cartoon bird.
- Sleeves blank—no team patches in 2005, 2007–2008.
- 2006—left sleeve features #44 Elrod Hendricks memorial patch.

2005, representative of 2007 and 2008 as well. No sleeve patches these years. Jersey back is representative of all these years

2006—left sleeve #44 Elrod Hendricks memorial patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004-2008 Home

Change to orange/black front script, once again. Numbers and names two-color, orange/black. No nameplates used.

Sleeve patches vary by year. 2004 only: the prior team bird patch on the left sleeve is replaced with 2004 50th anniversary patch. No team logo sleeve patch used 2005–2008. 2006 version has 44 Elrod Hendricks memorial patch on the left sleeve.

Year/set tagging is absent on Orioles jerseys 2004–2008.

Left: 2006 "44" memorial for Elrod Hendricks is direct-embroidered to the sleeve in black to the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2023 Home

- Nearly identical to the prior year's home jersey, the 2009 version has new black/orange/black narrow knit sleeve trim to replace the older black trim.
- New State of Maryland flag colors disc patch adorns the left sleeve through 2022, and varies sleeve placement depending on the handedness of each player in 2023. The version on the home jersey says "Baltimore Orioles" in the wording around the ring.
- Jersey back lettering is identical to prior years, orange/black block numbers and letters.
- Starting 2009, Orioles' jerseys are Cool Base only.
- Nike takes over manufacture in 2020.

- The Orioles use many memorial and commemorative patches through this jersey's run (some starting mid-season), including:
  - 2004: Orioles 50th anniversary
  - 2006: Elrod Hendricks memorial
  - 2008: Jim McKay memorial
  - 2011: Mike Flanagan memorial
  - 2012: Camden Yards 20th Anniversary
  - 2013: Earl Weaver memorial
  - 2014: Orioles 60 Years and Tom Clancy Memorial
  - 2017: Camden Yards 25th anniversary
  - 2019: Frank Robinson memorial
  - 2022: Camden Yards 30th anniversary
  - 2023: Brooks Robinson memorial

See Patches section for more detailed information.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2023 Home, continued

2014

2017

2021

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Road

To those of us living in the area, it is hard to look at the Orioles patch and not be reminded of the door of a Maryland State Police cruiser.

- Road gray jersey has “Baltimore” script for the first time since 1972. The new script is stylized in that it narrows as the word goes on, different from the home jersey script which does not have this characteristic.
- Sleeve ends have new black/orange/black trim, also found on the new-for-2009 home jersey.
- State of Maryland patch is found on the left sleeve; however this version says “Orioles Baseball” instead of “Baltimore Orioles” on the home jersey.
- On right sleeve is a small Orioles wordmark, a miniaturization of the home uniform’s front script.
- Uniform back is as before, two-color block name and numbers with no nameplates used.
- Starting 2009 Orioles’ jerseys are no longer full-weight knit fabric.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010-2011 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

- The Orioles announced no changes for their 2010 uniform, yet change it they did. This page helps explain why the Orioles chapter is close to 200 pages when the team seemingly has made no major changes to its overall look in fifty years.
- It also explains why, with each revised edition of this book, I spend dozens of hours researching the Orioles, searching through news photos: far more than any other team, poring over game pictures looking for mid-year changes that are never announced.

- Look closely at the jersey on this page. There is a tiny difference between it and the 2009 road jersey on the prior page.
- Notice that the word breaks more logically between the “L” and the “T," instead of in the middle of the “T” as it awkwardly had done before. This change increases the space between the “L” and “T” but few will notice, whereas the break right in the middle of the “T” always looked misaligned in use. This is one of the perils of using a word as long as “Baltimore” on a jersey front.
- Like the 2009 wordmark, it has a vanishing point that causes the word to grow more narrow as it gets nearer to the end of the word.
- I wonder aloud, who in the Orioles front office feels compelled to mess with such things?

© GameWornGuides.com

2012-2023 Road

Let's review:

2009
Tapered word and break in the middle of the "t."

2010–2011
Tapered word and break between the "L" and the "T."

Starting 2012: No taper to word, break between the "L" and the "T."

Got it?

2009

2010–2011

2012

- The change to the road jersey for 2012 is slight, but to me it begs the question of why the Orioles can't get things the way they want them the first time and leave them alone.
- The change is to the "Baltimore" script, which has had its angle of incline decreased and also removed its vanishing-point taper (in plain English, that means that its height stays the same from end to end, and does not taper to become more narrow toward the end of the word).
- The jersey back is unchanged from 2011.
- These changes are so small that if I didn't mention them they might go unnoticed.
- The Orioles diagonal script is removed from the right sleeve in favor of the "Baltimore Orioles" disc starting 2012.
- In 2023, the team disc patch varies which sleeve it appears on based on the handedness of each player.
- Originally made by Majestic, Nike takes over manufacture in 2020.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012-2023 Road, continued

NOTE: 2017 jersey recycled for use in 2019

- The Orioles use many memorial and commemorative patches through this jersey's run (some starting mid-season), including:
  - 2012: Camden Yards 20th Anniversary
  - 2013: Earl Weaver memorial
  - 2014: Orioles 60 Years and Tom Clancy Memorial
  - 2017: Camden Yards 25th anniversary
  - 2019: Frank Robinson memorial
  - 2022: Camden Yards 30th anniversary
  - 2023: Brooks Robinson memorial

See Patches section for more detailed information.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012-2013 Alternate Home Orange/2014-2023 Alternate Orange

Since its first brief appearance in 1971, the Orioles orange jersey has often been part of their lineup, so its return for 2012, accompanied by the nostalgic cartoon bird on the team caps, is no surprise. The jersey is typically worn on Fridays (worn only at home 2012–2013, both home and road starting 2014).

The orange jersey was last in the lineup in 1992. The new 2012 edition uses the 2012 version of the Orioles script with underline, in black outlined with white. Front Block numbers are on the front, Block numbers are on the back as are block player names, all in the same black/white combination. Majestic 2012–2019, Nike takes over in 2020.

"Baltimore Orioles"/Maryland flag disc is sewn on the left sleeve through 2022, and varies sleeve placement in 2023. . The Orioles use many memorial and commemorative patches through this jersey's run (some starting mid-season), including:

- 2012: Camden Yards 20th Anniversary
- 2013: Earl Weaver memorial
- 2014: Orioles 60 Years and Tom Clancy Memorial
- 2017: Camden Yards 25th anniversary
- 2019: Frank Robinson memorial
- 2022: Camden Yards 30th anniversary
- 2023: Brooks Robinson memorial

See Patches section for more detailed info.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012-2013 Alternate Home Orange/2014-2023 Alternate Orange, continued:

2013

2016

2020

© GameWornGuides.com

2016: Flex Base Jersey Construction and Branding

Read the full story on MLB's adoption of Flex Base jerseys for 2016 in Chapter 2.

In 2016, all teams adopt Majestic's new "Flex Base" on-field game jerseys, which are made of Cool Base fabric, but with several new elements designed to make them lighter and more breathable. The new jerseys have mesh side panels that run the length of the jersey, and one on the back tail called the "Air Belt." They also use "Kiss Cut" layering for front decorations, names, and numbers, which Majestic says is 10-20% lighter than traditional layered twill. Finally, the MLB logo on the back neck is now a rubberized patch, called CFX by Majestic, and the heat-pressed tag on the front tail differs from Cool Base jerseys of old.

© GameWornGuides.com

2023 City Connect

Baltimore checks in to the City Connect program with a predominantly black ensemble with "Players Weekend 2019" vibes. According to the team, the color choice shows the "surface level" at which people from outside of Baltimore view the city. However, the hidden pops of color, inside the collar and sleeve ends, represent the various neighborhoods of the city and their "colorful interior." The blocky typeface used for the front logo (in speckled white/black) was inspired by the Globe Collection and Press at the Maryland Institute College of Art. According to the team, "the speckles and imperfections represent the shared grit the Orioles and the Baltimore community possess." Player names on back in orange, and numbers in white/black, share a similar font, without the speckles. The patch above the jock tag reads "You Can't Clip These Wings," which is taken from a work by Baltimore poet Kondwani Fidel, representing the city always "flying to new heights." Finally, the script "B" on the jock tag patch and the sleeve patch reflects the team's road uniforms lettering.

Paul Lukas/uni-watch.com

Nike and the Orioles intended for the hidden sleeve trim to be revealed when players rolled up their sleeves, but they overestimated the number of players who would do so. Soon after the uniforms debuted, the team took the matter into their own hands according to tweets from Baltimore beat writer Andy Kostka. "The Orioles' official city connect jerseys they're wearing tonight have been altered. The cuff of the sleeve used to have the color on the inside and needed to be rolled up to show it. Now the cuff of the sleeve has color on the outside and none on the inside—no roll necessary...the cuffs were sewn up."

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Nike “Vapor Premiere Elite” Jersey Template

Nike Flex Base 2020-2023

Nike Vapor Premier Elite 2024

Jeremy Crandall Collection

Following league-wide sweeping changes to MLB jerseys with all teams switching from Nike’s 2020–2023 continuation of the Majestic Flex Base jersey shell to its new Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) template, the jerseys of the 2024 season become an anomaly—a “one and done” season of changes that brought intense scrutiny from players and fans alike. Based on the negative feedback, especially from MLB players, Nike rolled back some but not all of the 2024 changes in time for the 2025 season.

The full rundown of the changes is outlined earlier in “The Basics” chapter, but generally speaking, 2024’s crop of jerseys had changed from earlier versions in several key ways.

- VPE home jerseys are off-white, or light cream color. The earlier Flex Base white jerseys are a bright, purer white. Grays are standardized.
- The front placket is narrower on VPE, which often causes team wordmark lettering that crosses the placket to break differently.
- Neck and sleeve trim elements (when used) are no longer sewn on top of the jersey material, but are now “sewn-in” to the jersey at the seams. Placket trim adornment remains the same, though the trim is now spaced closer together with the narrowing in placket size.
- For improved visibility, the MLB logo on the back of the jersey is moved several inches lower onto the back, down from the collar placket area where it had been since 2000.
- VPE loses the integrated mesh side and back tail panels that had been part of the Flex Base jersey template.
- Player names on VPE are much smaller, and for many teams are done in a standardized block font, all using a much steeper, nearly semi-circular arch.
- For teams with front numbers, the new 2024 font is simply always a reduced size of the back numbers. This was not the way it had been in the past for most teams, with front numbers being a font variant (smaller but usually wider and bolder) than the back font.
- Team logo sleeve patches, and in some cases sponsor sleeve patches change from traditional raised embroidery to flat printed plastic or to sublimated cloth/twill
- All lettering is done using a new more lightweight (thinner) kind of matte-finished twill (commonly called “Nike Twill”). Most, but not all jerseys incorporate barely visible micro-perforation on the numbers, front and back.
- Universally, nameplates are no longer used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Home

Rob Hemstetter Collection

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Orioles home jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, but the team's front lettering still splits between the "i" and "o" as before. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn into the sleeve rather than on to it, which changes the proportions of the black and orange stripes. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. Starting June 11, the team's ad patch appears on the sleeve opposite the team disc patch.

2024 Road

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Orioles home jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, but the team's front lettering still splits the "t" rather than splitting between the "t" and "i" as before. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn into the sleeve rather than on to it, which changes the proportions of the black and orange stripes. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. Starting June 11, the team's ad patch appears on the sleeve opposite the team disc patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Black

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Orioles alternate black jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, but the team's front lettering still splits between the "i" and "o" as before. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn into the sleeve rather than on to it, which changes the proportions of the black and orange stripes. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. Starting June 11, the team's ad patch appears on the sleeve opposite the team disc patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Orange

Jeremy Crandall Collection

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Orioles orange alternate jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, but the team's front lettering still splits between the "i" and "o" as before. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn into the sleeve rather than on to it, which changes the proportions of the black and orange stripes. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. Starting June 11, the team's ad patch appears on the sleeve opposite the team disc patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024-2025 City Connect

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Orioles' City Connect jersey that was introduced just one season prior. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket, but the front lettering still splits between the "T" and "I" as before. However, this means less of the colorful trim inside the collar and down the inside of the placket - a detail almost never seen on field. The sleeve-end trim is sewn on to the sleeves rather than into them, which would be typical of VPE. But given the trim's width, which is much wider than standard VPE trim, the team takes this approach. It also ensures that it is visible for every player, contrary to the expectation that players would roll up their sleeves to show it in 2023 (which was also corrected by creative sewing). The Orioles use perforated numbers on this version of the jersey. Starting June 11, the team's ad patch appears on the jersey opposite the "B" patch sleeve. Carryover City Connect jerseys are not updated in 2025, despite the updates to the team's other jerseys for the 2025 season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Home

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Road

The 2025 season brings many changes to road gray jerseys across MLB. The 2024 VPE gray jerseys suffered from significant sweat-staining issues during games, so 2025 gray jerseys revert back to the same base fabric used for Flex Base, but applied to the VPE template (no mesh side panels or “Air Belt” back panel). Other pre-2024 elements return, including neck and sleeve trim being sewn on to jerseys again rather than sewn in. Back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. VPE’s placket remains narrow, so the “Baltimore” script breaks in the same place as in 2024. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Black

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Orange

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. In a flashback to the early 1970s, the Orioles pair these jerseys with matching orange pants for some games in 2025.

© GameWornGuides.com

Batting Practice and Spring Training Jerseys

1980 Spring Training Batting Practice

- No photos of this jersey being worn on the field, but the Sand-Knit tags tell us about their place in history. The top tag is known as the "Exclusive Sand-Knit" tag shows that these were made especially for the team and to team specs. They may have been made available for retail sale, but in this era there really was no consumer market or wide distribution of on-field team apparel.
- Jersey features heat-pressed/screened-on team script and numbers on back.
- The jersey's "Medalist Sand-Knit" tag style was used only in 1980.

© GameWornGuides.com

1985-1987 Spring Training Batting Practice

- This jersey style can be dated by the Rawlings tag with its four lines of washing instructions, only used in 1985–1987.
- All lettering and numbers are screen printed. I have seen these represented as Spring Training jerseys, regular season batting practice jerseys and minor league jerseys. In fact, they could have been used for all three.
- There is noticeable fading between the shoulders of the jersey and the tails which would normally be tucked in and kept away from the sun.

© GameWornGuides.com

1985-1986 Spring Training Batting Practice

- No photos of this jersey being worn on the field, but the Sand--Knit tags tell us much. The top tag, known as the "Exclusive Sand-Knit" tag shows that these were made especially for the team and to team specs. This style may have been made available for retail sale, but in this era there really was no consumer market or wide distribution of on-field team apparel.
- This jersey features heat-pressed/screened-on team script and numbers on back.
- This jersey's "Sand-Knit by MacGregor" tag style dates it from late 1985 or 1986.

© GameWornGuides.com

1985-1988 Black Batting Practice

I have seen these made of both mesh (right) or lightweight solid black knit fabric (above). Both have solid orange sleeve bands sewn in, not sewn on top.

One-color orange Varsity numbers on back, no names on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

Late 1980s, 1992-1994 Alternate Batting Practice Zip-Neck

Majestic made these mesh pullovers with the zippers at the neck, and offered them to all of the teams in Major League Baseball. Many declined to use them, they were offered for retail sale but are rather rare. The one at the left carries a late-1980s style wordmark. The one center has the 1993–1994 wordmark.

© GameWornGuides.com

1986-1988 Orange Batting Practice

These orange mesh Majestic and Rawlings jerseys were used by the Orioles in Spring Training and during the season as warmup jerseys, best estimate, 1986–1988. Note that Rawlings used Full Block numbers, majestic used Varsity.

The Fred Lynn baseball card shown is from 1987. This jersey is also seen in some 1989 cards, with photos taken in 1988.

1986 and later Orioles major league orange BPs have sewn-on lettering, Minor league Orioles jerseys look very similar but have heat-pressed lettering, and often have front numbers as well.

Bobby Tolan collection

Rawlings tag style changes during 1988.

© GameWornGuides.com

1989-1992 Black Batting Practice

The 1990 card at right is likely a 1989 photo and has Rawlings script on the sleeve. Like most batting practice jerseys, it is not year tagged.

These jerseys are V-neck. The Rawlings ones are likely 1989–1991 and are made of heavyweight mesh. The Russell version is lightweight solid fabric. The numbers and lettering are all sewn on. No player names on back used.

© GameWornGuides.com

1989-1992 Orange Batting Practice

Mesh fabric, black/white Orioles with underline. It matches the style of the team's 1989–1994 jersey lettering and is identical in script style to the BP jersey on the prior page. Chances are good that it is from the same years as that one. Black/white numbers sewn on, on back only. No name on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

1992-1994 Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

1992

The "fat logo" is a shorter, more squat revision of the team script looks very much like the team secondary logo script, also used only from 1992–1994 (directly below). There may be some overlap between this style and the Rawlings/Russell version used 1989–1992. Two-color orange/white logos and numbers. Examples are seen with both Block and Majestic Varsity numbers, as above.

The "Fat" logo was used only in 1992–1994. After 1994, the word "Baltimore" no longer appears in the team script logo.

© GameWornGuides.com

1995-2000 Batting Practice

2000

Heavy mesh construction, one-button neck. No numbers on front; no names on back. Three-color block numbers on back, orange/black/white.

Notice that the front wordmark stays the same, “small loop” style for all years. It does not change like the game jersey does for the 1998 season.

Sleeve patches on BPs are the same as used on game jerseys. These were worn in regular season games several times in July and August, 1995.

1997

© GameWornGuides.com

2001-2002 Batting Practice

Two-button neck pullover. Identify by two-color orange/black Orioles script on the front, sewn on mesh fabric.

Two-color orange/black numbers on the back. Black outline is impossible to see unless you are inches away. No numbers on front; no names on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003-2006 Batting Practice

New softer, non-mesh moisture-wicking fabric, black sleeve inserts, button front. One-color twill team script on front, one-color black Block numbers on back. No names on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2008 Batting Practice

Major League Baseball switches to Majestic Cool Base batting practice jerseys in 2007. New are one-button necks and white/black side insert panels. Front team script and back numbers are heat appliqués, and are not sewn tackle twill. The black lettering has a narrow orange outline that is difficult to see in these photographs. These were worn in regular season game action at least once, on June 20, 2008.

As shown in the photo, bottom center, some of these were worn during Spring Training without player names on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2010 Home Batting Practice

- Batting practice jersey is included with the Orioles' redesign for 2009. Where previously there was one style, there are now different batting practice jerseys for home and on the road.
- The home BP has its side panel colors reversed from the prior years' design-the white panel is now on the top where it had been on the bottom before.
- Front logo script is now two-color—black outlined with white.
- On back, name and numbers are black outlined with white in Block font.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2010 Road Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

Brand new for 2009 is a black batting practice jersey with the "Baltimore" tapered script from the team's new road jerseys.

Side panels are orange on bottom and white on top.

All back lettering is one-color orange. Names and numbers on back appear in Block font.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2013 Home Batting Practice

Batting practice jerseys for all teams change to button fronts for 2011. The Orioles continue with both an orange home jersey and a black road jersey. The orange batting practice jersey features black lettering with white outlines both front and back.

Solid black side panels are featured, as is a solid black panel above the name on back.

Name and numbers are in Block style. Back lettering reverts to sewn-on twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011/2012-2013 Road Batting Practice

2011 with tapered wordmark

There are two versions of this BP jersey illustrated here: the 2011, and 2012–2013 versions.

In the "game jersey" section of this chapter we covered year-to-year changes in the team's wordmark. For 2012 and 2013 the "Baltimore" wordmark changes its proportions, remaining the same height end to end instead of tapering to become narrower to the end as it had in 2011. The variants are shown here side to side to simplify the comparison.

2012—Non-tapered front wordmark.

All three years' jerseys backs are the same.

The Orioles continue with two different batting practice jerseys for 2011, orange for home and black for road, as they switch to button-front shirts.

Side panels are now solid orange, back names and numbers are also solid orange. An orange panel is above the NOB. All lettering is orange outlined with black.

2011

2012

Player names on back are used during the regular season, but not during Spring Training.

2012

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2016 Home Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

The Orioles make a slight revision to their orange home batting practice jerseys for the 2014 season, removing the back yoke and returning to a more traditional solid orange from the earlier black/orange two-tone effect. Black insert side panels are smaller than in previous years.

Numbers on back are black/white Block, no player names used 2014, then added for regular season 2015–2016. Black/orange/black trim now adorns the neck and sleeve ends. The Majestic jock tag on the front shirt tail changes to a vertical rectangular design.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2016 Road Batting Practice

The black “Baltimore” jersey receives changes for 2014 that are similar to the home orange BP jersey on the prior page. The yoke panel over the shoulders changes to black to match the body of the jersey, and the size of the orange side panels shrinks from the prior design. Orange/black/orange trim is added to neck opening and sleeve ends. Player numbers are orange over black, and no player names on back are used.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's new for 2016 Spring Training Jerseys in Chapter 8.

2016 Spring Training

Kyle Mace Collection

For the first time in 2016, MLB introduces a Spring Training-specific jersey intended to be worn for work-outs and games in the preseason. The jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features a special printed twill, decorated with "2016" and Spring Training symbols, as the main twill layer for every team. The Orioles use their regular season orange alternate as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are black patterned twill/white. Front numbers are standard black/white. The jersey also features a rubberized, CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading "2016" and "FL" representing the Orioles Spring Training home.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Spring Training

Spring Training-only jerseys return for all teams in 2017 with some minor design modifications. Just as in 2016, the jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features special printed twill, this year decorated with “2017” and Spring Training symbols. However, all teams now use the same twill, in single-color white with gray printing, replacing the many team-specific combinations from the year before. Orioles again use their regular season orange alternate as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill. Front numbers are standard black/white, as is used in the regular season. The jersey features a recolored version of the rubberized CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading “2017” and “FL” representing where the Orioles spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2019 Batting Practice

With many players opting for lightweight cage jackets, which are devoid of player identification, instead of traditional BP jerseys with player names and numbers, Majestic introduces a replacement product that may be an attempt to gain acceptance by the pros on field while being more attractive to fans at retail. New for 2017, official team batting practice jerseys are replaced with what Majestic calls a 3/4 Sleeve BP Trainer. The new hybrid is cut in a pullover jacket silhouette, including a short zipper at the neck, but made of Cool Base jersey material. The underarm and back panels are of Cool Base mesh, like the sides and tail of Flex Base jerseys. Team logos and other lettering is in what Majestic calls “lightweight twill” (as described in Chapter 8). The Majestic logo is applied to the middle of the left sleeve, and a new, heat-pressed Cool Base tag adorns the left front tail. The Orioles jersey is orange with black back and underarm gussets. The Orioles' cartoon bird logo, also seen on their caps, appears here on the front left chest. The back of the jersey is a contrasting black, and is devoid of any lettering. Player number in black/white Block instead on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Spring Training

The 2018 Spring Training jerseys continue the general design of the previous year, again featuring all player name and number lettering using each team's regular fonts using only one layer of twill printed with special Spring Training and 2018-year-specific patterns. The Orioles use their regular-season orange alternate as their base. The name and back numbers are sewn on in white patterned twill. Front numbers are standard black/white, as is used in the regular season. A new CFX patch, shaped like home plate, is stitched to the right sleeve, featuring "2018" and "FL" representing their Spring Training home.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Spring Training

The 2019 Spring Training jersey evolves to create yet another iteration of the design template of the last three years. This time, jersey backs abandon the single-color printed twill treatment of the past and return to regular season multi-layered team-color twill like 2016, yet without 2016's sublimated printed twill patterns. The Orioles use their regular-season orange alternate as the base for this design, carrying a new CFX patch on the right sleeve, featuring "2019" and "FLA," referencing their Spring Training home. The Frank Robinson memorial patch is on the left chest. All lettering is black/white.

Kyle Mace Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Spring Training

Spring Training is simplified for 2020, league-wide. For the first time since 2016, Spring Training jerseys eliminate the special sleeve patch indicating the year and location of a team's Spring Training home, and the lettering is the same non-patterned, multi-layered twill as the teams wear in the regular season, making many teams' spring jerseys identical to their regular-season alternates. For 2020–2023, the Orioles use their regular-season orange alternate jersey, with black/white name and front and back numbers.

© GameWornGuides.com

Special Events Jerseys

1984 “Tour of Japan”

Auctioned from his personal collection, Ripken’s jerseys feature their customary extra length tailoring, clearly visible here.

‘World Series’ Loses Luster in Japan

By CLYDE HABERMAN

TOKYO, Oct. 9 — For Japanese, this was going to be the “true” World Series, not the series between American teams, but the series that would confront itself to North America. This was the chance to show Japan convincingly as No. 1.

The 1983 American champions, the Baltimore Orioles, would play the winner of the 1984 Japan Series. It would have been nice; many agreed, to have had 1984's best, but the logistics were tricky, and so this arrangement was the most expeditious route for.

In the original scenario, there was little doubt that the Japanese champion would be the Yomiuri Giants, whose owner, the Yomiuri communications empire, is also the owner of the entire team. This is a wealthy and powerful sacrosanct of the Tokyo-based Giants, the country's first professional team, and for most baseball fans, the embodiment of just about all virtue. Of course, the Giants would win.

A funny thing happened, though. The Orioles finished fifth, 19 games behind the victorious Detroit Tigers in the American League's Eastern Division. And the Giants faded early in a dismal third. Goodbye, real World Series.

Instead, it is the Giants' archrivals from Hiroshima, the Carp, who have been dispatched to face the Orioles, Americans for the last few days. To many Japanese, it is as if nonsense

Cal Ripken scoring for the Orioles in a game at Tokyo. The Carp catcher is Kiyoshi Yamasaki.

Continued on Page 6A, Column 1

Over the years I have come across a few examples of Rawlings-made 1984–tagged Orioles road jerseys. My earlier assumption was that in 1984 both Sand-Knit and Rawlings shared outfitting for the team. What I have learned is that when the Orioles toured Japan after the 1984 season, playing the Japanese Giants in an exhibition series, Rawlings supplied the team’s uniforms for the trip, just as they had for the Cincinnati Reds in 1978.

All examples I have seen are Rawlings flag-tagged as 1984 Set 1, but there were apparently two sets made, judging from the fact that we have photo examples of two different Cal Ripken autographed jerseys from that event.

Notably, these special jerseys have an orange tag sewn near the end of the right sleeve with the Rawlings script embroidered on it in black. Sleeve logos were not permitted by MLB until 1987, so this gave us a taste of what was to come. The pants also have a large orange Rawlings logo on the backside.

While the program for the Series was filled with stock photos of the two teams taken earlier, a commemorative magazine was issued afterwards that contains photos taken during the series. In one of them we can clearly see the orange Rawlings tag on Ripken’s jersey sleeve. My educated guess is that the players were allowed to keep these uniforms after the trip, and a few—including both the Ripken jerseys (both tagged as “Set 1”)—have surfaced at auction.

© GameWornGuides.com

1991 Turn Back The Clock to 1966

Original 1969 for comparison

The Orioles were among the first teams to have a Turn Back the Clock day. on June 19, 1991 against the visiting Minnesota Twins.

The original 1966 flannel jersey was recreated by Rawlings in knit for the contest in the 1966–1971 style. Block with Serifs numbers are used, though original was Varsity, player names are Vertical Arched Block - a nice touch.

At right, Boog Powell's (nearly identical) 1969 home uniform, also #26, likely with NOB restored.

© GameWornGuides.com

1993 Turn Back the Clock to 1954

This 1993 Turn Back the Clock game on June 19, 1993 vs. the Cleveland Indians. These were made by Russell in double knit as were other MLB teams' 1993 Turn Back the Clock uniforms. Gray jerseys devoid of trim with Orioles script in 2-color twill, one color numbers on back with no player names.

Left: An actual 1954 (home) jersey shows that the reproductions were very good indeed.

Fernando Valenzuela 190

PITCHER

The most heartwarming saga in baseball in '93 was the resurrection of Fernando. Written off by just about everyone after the '91 season, he hooked on with the Orioles after throwing 14 scoreless innings in spring training.

Fernando added a cut fastball to his famed screwball and regained his arm strength. He gained his first win since '90 in mid-May, at one point had four straight victories and was voted the July AL Pitcher of the Month.

Bats: Left
Throws: Left
Weight: 202
Height: 5'11"
Born: 11/1/60
Navajoa, Sonora, Mexico

YEAR	TEAM	W	L	ERA	G	CG	IP	H	R	BB	SO
1980	DODGERS	2	0	0.00	10	6	18	8	2	5	16
1981	DODGERS	13	7	2.48	25	11	192	140	55	61	180
1982	DODGERS	19	13	2.87	37	18	285	247	105	83	199
1983	DODGERS	15	10	3.75	35	9	257	245	122	99	189
1984	DODGERS	12	17	3.03	34	12	261	218	109	106	240
1985	DODGERS	17	10	2.45	35	14	272.1	211	92	101	208
1986	DODGERS	21	11	3.14	34	20	269.1	226	104	85	242
1987	DODGERS	14	14	3.98	34	12	251	254	120	124	190
1988	DODGERS	5	8	4.24	25	3	142.1	142	71	76	64
1989	DODGERS	20	13	3.43	31	3	196.2	185	80	98	116
1990	DODGERS	13	13	4.59	33	5	204	223	112	77	115
1991	ANGELS	0	2	12.15	2	0	6.2	14	10	3	5
1993	ORIOLES	8	10	4.94	32	5	178.2	179	104	79	78
CAREER TOTALS		149	128	3.45	365	112	2554	2292	1095	997	1842

BASE RUNNERS/9 INN.: 13.2 OPP. BATTING AVG.: .266 GAMES STARTED: 31

©1993 PINNACLE BRANDS, INC. PRINTED IN U.S.A.

© GameWornGuides.com

1994 Turn Back the Clock to 1970

Stephen Kraljic collection

This version of the Baltimore-script road jersey is made by Mitchell & Ness for a Turn Back the Clock game played on August 4, 1994, but this time in knit, not flannel.

Replica is nearly dead-on accurate, save for numbers which are Block with Serifs compared to original Block Standard.

The game was played in Milwaukee against the Brewers, who also dressed in 1970 uniforms.

1970 Original for comparison

© GameWornGuides.com

1995 Turn Back the Clock to 1961

Game jersey photos courtesy James Sheu

The Angels very first game in 1961 was against the Orioles in Baltimore, and this game held on August 26, 1995 was a recreation of this contest, though played in Anaheim in 1995.

The excellent gray knit uniforms were made by Mitchell & Ness with simply a year tag at the bottom of the tail that reads ”1961." Except for the 1961 sleeve patch and zipper front, these appear identical to the uniforms Mitchell & Ness made for the prior year’s Turn Back the Clock to 1970 game.

From an Angels press release:
“The Angels will celebrate their 35th anniversary with a "Turn Back the Clock Night," in which the Angels and Orioles will wear replicas of their 1961 jerseys for tonight's 7 o'clock game. The game is a sellout, the Angels' second of the season.”

From a period news report:
“The Orioles and Angels will play in their 1961 uniforms in a turn-back-the-clock night tomorrow. Some of the Orioles tried on their uniforms yesterday, the shirts sporting a cartoon bird on the left sleeve and a zipper up the front. "There won't be any sliding there," said catcher Chris Hoiles.”

© GameWornGuides.com

1996 Turn Back the Clock to 1930s Int'l League Orioles

Played at Texas against the Rangers April 21, 1996. The Orioles wore these Mitchell & Ness knit replicas of 1930s Baltimore Orioles of the International League.

The front wordmark on this jersey is chain stitched in the St. Louis Cardinals style. Design support was provided to Mitchell & Ness by Ebbets Field Flannels for the creation of this uniform.

© GameWornGuides.com

1997 Negro Leagues Tribute (1949 Baltimore Elite Giants)

On July 5, 1997 the Orioles played in their first Negro Leagues tribute game, on the road at Detroit as the 1949 Baltimore Elite Giants. The home team opponent was the Tigers, dressed as the 1920 Detroit Stars.

Uniforms are rendered in double knit by AIS. All uniforms from this game are autographed and auctioned for charity.

Top: Autographs: #12 Roberto Alomar, #25 Rafael Palmeiro

© GameWornGuides.com

1999 Turn Ahead the Clock

One of the few retail jerseys made, lacks silver trim and embroidered Russell R on right sleeve opening.

Shown is the Orioles' version of this ill-received promotional game from July 25, 1999. The Orioles jersey used the team's 1999 lettering and art, but rendered it in sliver/black/white. Sleeves and neck are trimmed with metallic silver braid.

Unlike other teams' jerseys, that had logos simply sublimated into the weave of the fabric, this Orioles jersey features ornate, three-layer tackle twill with glitter fabric for all lettering and numbers.

Retail versions of the jersey, of which very few were made, are minus the silver trim of the game jerseys, also have slightly different front lettering and lack the Russell "R" on the sleeve.

Ball girls wore jerseys numbered 2050 (for the year 2050) with the name "orb girl" on the backs.

Video highlights of the game here: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8gDqjl63X4I

© GameWornGuides.com

2000 Turn Back the Clock to 1970

Original 1970

Game on May 29, 2000 in Tampa Bay vs. the Rays, who dressed as the 1965 minor league St. Petersburg Saints.

This version of the Baltimore-script road jersey is made by Mitchell & Ness, this time in flannel just like the original. As usual, highly accurate reproductions from Mitchell & Ness (original 1970 jersey, inset).

Note the “hacked” sleeve ends on the DeShields jersey above at right/center. Often players who have gotten used to specific tailoring on their game jerseys will take a proactive pregame scissors exercise to Turn Back the Clock uniforms that displease them.

© GameWornGuides.com

2001 Turn Back the Clock to 1979

Stephen Kraljic collection

As the tag on the jersey indicates, this one was intended to be worn on July 18, 2001 in game two of a twin bill against the Rangers, who were to have worn reproductions of their 1976–1980 road blue jerseys. However, when a train carrying hazardous materials derailed near Camden Yards, this game, and two following it, were postponed (bottom right). Though the Rangers do not appear to have had the chance to wear their throwbacks, the Orioles made good use of these for an August 15 home game against the Royals, who wore their regular uniforms.

Mitchell & Ness made the jerseys for this game. Examples we have seen appear to be rather short and wide in construction, certainly not cut like the originals which were typically worn nearly skin-tight. Comparing the reproductions to the originals there are a number of differences (see original, inset). The copies have a front wordmark that is slightly smaller and less bold than the original, looking more like the 1987–1988 version. The originals used Varsity numbers front and back; the copies incorrectly use Block. Front numbers are too small, back numbers are too big. Names on back should be vertical arch and they are not.

Original 1979

Train fire postpones third straight Orioles game

By David Ginsburg, Excerpted from CBC Sports, July 20, 2001

A persistent fire aboard a derailed train forced postponement of Friday night's scheduled Angels-Orioles game at Camden Yards, the third game knocked out by the accident.

The derailment occurred late Wednesday afternoon between games of a scheduled day-night doubleheader against the Rangers. Because the accident took place deep in a lengthy tunnel, cleanup operations have been slow and arduous.

The 60-car freight train was carrying hydrochloric acid and other hazardous chemicals.

The second game of Wednesday's doubleheader was postponed, and a split doubleheader between the Orioles and Texas on Thursday also was called off.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003 Turn Back the Clock to 1944 St. Louis Browns

*As far as accuracy is concerned, there is not much comparison between the actual uniform and the Majestic version, sad to say. Actual 1944 road jersey shown (bottom right).

Original 1944

Saturday, June 7, 2003, the St. Louis Cardinals hosted the Baltimore Orioles with the two teams wearing retro 1944 St. Louis Cardinals and St. Louis Browns uniforms. The Browns were the pre-move name of today's Orioles.

This was the first time the Orioles had "returned" there since they left as the Browns after the 1953 season. This game was a recreation of the 1944 World Series between the two teams.

Original flannels rendered here in double knit fabric. The scoreboard that day referred to the Orioles as the "Browns" and the stadium announcer announced the Orioles throughout the day as the Browns as well.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003 Turn Back the Clock to 1983

Majestic jerseys were used to represent 1983 in 2003. The visitor was the Phillies, the Orioles opponent in the 1983 World Series. Games played 6/28 and 6/29.

Perhaps picky—but in these earlier years, the jerseys used larger, nearly 5” front numbers rather than the style used here, which is identical to the then-current 2003 home jerseys. Notice use of old-style white front panel batting helmets.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Turn Back the Clock to 1954

Mark Huesman worked for the local Baltimore shop that lettered Orioles game jerseys for many years. Of these 1954 jerseys, he recalls, "The 1954 jerseys showed up (from Majestic) with player names on them, and only THEN was I asked if the jerseys were supposed to have them. The answer was "no," so ALL of the jerseys had the names removed before the game started." Close-up photos of jerseys from this game show low numbers and the marks from the removed-NOBs.

2004 is the Orioles 50th anniversary, and the team scheduled five Turn Back the Clock games; one for each decade of the team's past.

May 8, 2004 as the first-year 1954 Orioles. This originally flannel uniform design is replicated by Majestic in double knit.

Actual 1954 jerseys had one-color, black numbers; these have two-color numbers.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Turn Back the Clock to 1968

Kyle Mace Collection

Turn Back the Clock day remembering the 1968 Orioles, vs. the 1968 Braves played on June 26–27 at home. This original flannel vest design is rendered by Majestic in double knit.

Reasonably faithful copy of the originals, but numbers should be Varsity style; Block style is used on reproductions. Names on back are properly radially arched, although not exact same font. Two-color narrow knit trim on replicas does not match the three-color orange/black/orange style that was used on originals.

The Orioles saved money by using the same pants they wore in the 1975 Turn Back the Clock game later that season, and the side trim is not correct for 1968.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Turn Back the Clock to 1979

Original features wide white outline on the wordmark, Varsity numbers and vertical arched NOB

Two games, held on July 24–25, 2004 in Baltimore against the Minnesota Twins. The Twins also dressed in 1979 garb.

Majestic made these jerseys, and they are close but not exact copies of the originals. Compared to the originals, the new ones use a properly sized wordmark but with a white outline that is too thin (see the centers of the L, E, and S), more like the 1987–1988 version. Numbers are Block when they should be Varsity. Names on back are indeed on nameplates as the originals, and are done properly in vertical arch, a welcome but unusual attention to detail in modern times!

In 2004, there was one Turn Back the Clock game for each decade of the Orioles history. The 5th game was to be on August 21, 2004 but photos from that day show the team wearing their 2004 home uniforms with the 50th anniversary patch instead. It is unclear if a 1990s throwback game occurred.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Turn Back the Clock to 1983

- Majestic jerseys were again used to represent 1983 in 2004. These jerseys appear identical to the 2003 edition.
- Again, same comment as the prior year's jerseys; perhaps picky, but in these earlier years the jerseys used larger nearly-5" front numbers. The number style used here is the smaller size, identical to the then-current 2004 home jerseys.

Below*: Original 1974–1975 jersey for comparison

August 7–8, 2004: The opponents are the Texas Rangers who wore 1975 powder blue road uniforms. Note Orioles' use of their current modern dark batting helmets unlike the old fashioned set with front white panels used in 2003, shown on a prior page.

Notice that the 2004 game used then-current batting helmets, while the 2003 game had old-style ones.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007 Negro Leagues Tribute (1932 Baltimore Black Sox)

- Game was played on September 6, 2007 against the Boston Red Sox, commemorating the 75th anniversary of the Negro Leagues Black Sox' 1932 championship season.
- Ebbets Field Flannels made these Negro League uniforms with traditional flannel. Notice the half sleeves common with uniforms of the 1930s era, and notice how catcher Ramon Hernandez (#55) hacked off the sleeve ends which most likely irritated him.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Turn Back the Clock to 1979

Game played June 13, 2008 against the Pirates, honoring the Orioles-Pirates matchup in the 1979 World Series.

Notice the black armbands which are not part of the original throwback uniform, they are added to the 2008 version by the Orioles for the death of sportscaster Jim McKay. Front numbers are an inch smaller than the originals were.

This game was a late addition to the promotion schedule—announced at the end of May—giving the teams fewer than two weeks to prepare. Perhaps this is why the Pirates wore their current, modern road gray uniforms in the contest.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Turn Back the Clock to 1983

Game played on July 23, 2008 in Baltimore against the visiting Blue Jays who wore their 1983 powder blue road uniforms. Commemorated the 25th anniversary of the Orioles World Series Championship win against the Phillies.

It is possible that these are the same uniforms as had been used just a few weeks prior in the Turn Back the Clock game of June 13, but with a commemorative patch sewn on the sleeve for this event. Note the presence of the black armband (for sportscaster Jim McKay) on the game action photos on the bottom row.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Negro Leagues Tribute (1939-1949 Elite Giants)

- In a Negro Leagues tribute game on September 5, 2009, the Orioles dressed as the Baltimore Elite Giants.
- Double knit uniforms likely made by AIS.
- They played the Texas Rangers, who dressed in their normal royal blue jerseys and gray pants.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Turn Back the Clock to 1970

- In an interleague contest between close neighbors, the Orioles hosted a Turn Back the Clock game on June 26, 2010 and invited the Washington Nationals.
- Both teams wore 1970s throwback uniforms made by Majestic. The Nationals dressed as the 1970 Washington Senators.
- Commemorative patch on left sleeve.
- Back numbers should be smaller, names should be vertical arched and they are not.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Negro Leagues Tribute (1950s Baltimore Elite Giants)

Stephen Kraljic collection

Game played Saturday July 31, 2010, Orioles vs. Royals, who wore home uniforms of the 1949 Kansas City Monarchs. Knit uniforms made by AIS.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Turn Back the Clock to 1971-1972

August 13, 2010: The Rays hosted a Turn Back the Clock game, and invited the Orioles to participate. The Rays wore the 1970 Tampa Tarpons (minor league) uniforms. The Orioles wore all-orange uniforms that were worn only a few times in 1971 and 1972.

According to the Baltimore Sun, Buck Showalter didn't seem all too pleased by having to wear the throw-back, saying "I'll break out the jacket today." After the game, Showalter vowed that the team would not wear these uniforms again, which was somewhat the same reaction that the team's management had back in the early 1970s.

Recall that as manager of the Dia-mondbacks, Showalter had a similar negative reaction to wearing purple pinstripes and the D-Backs' purple alternate uniforms.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Turn Back the Clock to 1971

- The Pirates hosted a Turn Back the Clock game to 1971 on June 21, 2011. Both teams wore Majestic recreations of their 1971 knit uniforms.
- The Orioles first wore these knit uniforms in the 1971 World Series against the Pirates, and I am shocked to see that the sleeve stripes are in the correct order for the unique 1971 jersey! This same style uniform was worn in 1972, but the sleeve stripes had changed order over the winter, putting the orange stripe at the sleeve end.
- This is an admirable job of research for this Turn Back the Clock jersey, especially impressive because it is a road jersey and therefore was ordered by the home team Pirates.

Above: Knit road gray jersey as worn in 1971 postseason (left); 1972 road gray jersey features sleeve stripes in reverse order (right).

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Military Appreciation Day

The Orioles "Camo" jersey for the day prior to Memorial Day 2012 has an interesting feature which had not seen before in MLB. Instead of the jersey body being made of camouflage fabric, only the team wordmark is such. The player names and numbers are in a complimentary olive color, outlined with brown. Narrow knit trim on the jersey is in olive and brown. The American Flag patch is worn on the left sleeve, and the Orioles 2012 Camden Yards commemorative patch is on the right. The only item "out of place" is the orange and black stripe on the pants. MLB was so "taken" with this concept that they ordained the style for all teams for future Memorial Day games, with arguably poor results.

From the Orioles Website:

The Orioles will host a special Military Appreciation day on Sunday, May 27 for their game against the Kansas City Royals. All Orioles uniformed personnel will wear special jerseys with the Orioles script in camouflage and numbers and names in dark green. The game-worn jerseys will be autographed, authenticated and auctioned off at www.orioles.com/military to benefit the Fort Meade Alliance's Foundation.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's Memorial Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

2013-2014 Memorial Day

2013

2014

2013

Recall that the Orioles originated the "Camouflage Twill Wordmark" idea with their Military Appreciation Day 2012 uniforms. In 2013, MLB adopted the idea league-wide. The Orioles were the road team for Memorial Day in both years, playing respectively in Washington (Nationals) May 28, 2013, and Milwaukee (Brewers) May 27, 2014. Both years they wore the same road gray jersey with all lettering in camo. Unlike in 2012, where the wordmark was camo and the player name/numbers were olive twill, all lettering is desert camouflage. Camo on gray is very difficult to see, and the only saving grace is that all lettering is outlined in black.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 “Army Birthday” Celebration

June 14, 2013: Desiring a home repeat of the 2012 event, the Orioles converted a set of home uniforms to camouflage wordmarks, but this year they also make player names and numbers of camouflage twill as well. The Earl Weaver memorial patch is on the right sleeve of all game used jerseys. Sleeve-end trim is black/ orange/black just like the 2013 home jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Negro Leagues Tribute (Baltimore Black Sox)

Stephen Kraljic collection

Visiting Kansas City on May 18 for the Royals' annual Negro Leagues tribute game, the Orioles dressed as an unspecified year of the Baltimore Black Sox. The very plain gray uniforms were made for the occasion by Majestic, and auctioned by the Royals after the game. All adornment is single-color Block Font black twill.

(Probably) 1929 Baltimore Black Sox

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Civil Rights Game (Baltimore Elite Giants)

For the first time in the short history of the Civil Rights Game, Negro Leagues throwback uniforms were worn. This year's contest was played on May 30 at Houston's Minute Maid Park between the Orioles and Astros. The Orioles wore the uniforms of the Baltimore Elite Giants, made by Majestic. Team uniforms were auctioned on MLB.com after the game.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Turn Back the Clock to 1954

Kyle Mace Collection

Celebrating the 60th anniversary of the team's arrival in Baltimore, the Orioles held a Turn Back the Clock game on August 8. The visiting St. Louis Cardinals wore their regular uniforms. This is the second time the Orioles have reprised the 1954 season, having done so ten years prior in 2004, but on the road that time. These cream-colored, full-weight knit uniforms are more accurate than the earlier set, as you can see from comparing to the actual 1954 uniform, inset. Back numbers are correctly one-color this time, though they are not the exact font, nor are they bold enough, but overall a fine effort.

Original 1954 Rawlings jersey for comparison

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Turn Back the Clock to 1994

As part of the Cubs' year-long celebration of Wrigley Field's 100th birthday, the Orioles participated in a throwback game to 1994 on August 24 against the Cubs at Wrigley. The Majestic uniforms are near perfect, including nice touches like player nameplates on back and the proper Rawlings Block NOB font (no one has bothered with this detail before, and I am impressed), as well as including the 1994-only 125th MLB Anniversary patch sewn to the right sleeve. These are nearly indistinguishable from the originals.

Though we focus especially on jerseys in this Guide, purists point out that the striped orange/black stirrups that were a part of this throwback uniform are incorrect. The Orioles wore plain black stirrups in 1994.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 “Stars and Stripes”

The nationally televised against the Yankees on September 14, 2014 was specially planned to mark the 200th anniversary of the writing of the Star-Spangled Banner by Francis Scott Key of Baltimore. The song became the United States’ National Anthem in 1931. The Orioles’ white Majestic uniforms featured the road “Baltimore” wordmark emblazoned in unique star-spangled twill. All player name and number lettering was changed to red outlined with blue, and all uniform trim was also changed to red/blue/red for the day. An American flag patch adorned the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 “Baltimore” Home Jersey

Bill Henderson Recreation

In the wake of rioting that spread across Baltimore in April 2015, the Orioles canceled games, played three “home” games in Tampa against the Rays (in their white home uniforms), and even played one home game that was closed to the public, with an official attendance of zero. Once order was restored and the team was able to return to Camden Yards and their fans on May 11, the Orioles honored their community by wearing “Baltimore” on their home jerseys instead of the usual “Orioles.” Other than the road wordmark, the rest of the jersey is the same as usual. The example shown above is not an original, it is an exact duplicate I made in my shop. It will need to suffice for illustration purposes until we can locate an original one to share.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Memorial Day

For the Orioles' Memorial Day home game on May 25, the team applies the desert camo treatment to its home white uniforms. Very similar to the "Army Birthday" jerseys of 2014; however, the camo twill is outlined in orange on these. This detail is unusual, as most other teams simply replace their top layer of twill with camo for these jerseys, but the Orioles' usual outline color is black. Either way, the effect isn't quite as bad as other Memorial Day entries, retaining a modicum of legibility, even from a distance. In 2015, the MLB Silhouetted Batter neck tag is changed to dark green/khaki/white rather than its typical colors from 2014.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's Independence Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

2015 Independence Day

For Independence Day 2015, all 29 U.S.-based teams adopt patriotic "Stars and Stripes" uniforms for the first time. For this day, all uniforms are re-lettered in a combination of red, white, and blue, regardless of what the team's normal color palate might be. Jersey trim and patches remain the same as the team's regular jerseys, which causes a clash with the preexisting orange and black trim. All teams sport a stars and stripes version of the MLB Silhouetted Batter logo on the back collar. The Orioles wear their road gray jerseys with the blue-background version of the starred twill, which features large white stars; all lettering outlined in red, including their front logo as well as front and back numbers. Player names on back are in red. An American flag patch is sewn on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 St. Patrick's Day

The Orioles go green for St. Patrick's Day 2016 in a Spring Training game held March 17. This Flex Base jersey is in white, with front logo and back numbers in green/gray and player name in green. The layer of gray is thin and light enough that it disappears from a distance. The right sleeve sports a green shamrock, a feature shared by many teams for the 2016 St. Patrick's Day promotion. The Orioles' left-sleeve team disc patch is rendered in shades of black, gray, and white (unusual, as it entirely changes the representation of a state flag's familiar colors). Green knit trim encircles both sleeves.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Mother's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Mother's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

For the first time in 2016, all teams wear special pink-trimmed uniforms Mother's Day, Sunday, May 8. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Mother's Days), while the Majestic sleeve logo is rendered in pink and the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark pink/light pink/white.

The Orioles wear their home white jerseys with the front logo lettering in pink with dark gray outlines. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while front and back numbers are pink/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of pink, gray, and white (unusual, as it changes the representation of a state flag's familiar colors). All jersey trim, normally black/orange/black, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Memorial Day

The 2016 Memorial Day jerseys are constructed in the Flex Base style for the first time, and the ChromaFlex MLB logo at back neck becomes black and dark gold for all teams. The new, league-wide template, with higher visibility woodland camo lettering and black outlines, makes this set more legible than in prior years. The Orioles apply the camouflage trimmings to their home white jerseys for the game on May 30. The front lettering and front and back numbers are rendered in woodland camo with a black outline, and player names appear in single-color black. Like other teams, their sleeve patches are reduced to shades of green, gray, and black (unusual, as it changes the representation of a state flag with very familiar colors), and trim elements are also simplified to single-color black from the standard black/orange/black.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2017 Father's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Father's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

All teams wear special light blue trimmed uniforms for Father's Day June 19, 2016 and June 17–18, 2017. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized front tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Father's Days), while the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted batter patch appears in dark royal blue/light blue/white. The Orioles wear their home white jerseys with the front logo lettering in light blue with dark gray outlines. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while front and back numbers are light blue/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of light blue, gray, and white (unusual, as it changes the representation of a state flag's familiar colors). All jersey trim, normally black/orange/black, becomes dark gray.

Kyle Mace Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Independence Day

MLB creates yet another new Independence Day jersey template for the 2016 iteration, now built on Majestic's new Flex Base jersey construction. Each Independence Day jersey has a ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB appliqué sewn on the back of the neck. The Orioles are on the road and wear their road jersey. All clubs have a choice of two styles of star-spangled lettering twill and the Orioles select the blue twill version with red outlines for their front lettering and for their front and back numbers, with a red player name on back. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. New for 2016, team sleeve patches are now embroidered in red, white, and blue, which means the representation of the Maryland flag on the Orioles patch is now different from the flag itself. This creates an unusual situation where MLB is changing the colors of a state flag (not unlike they did with the Rangers' patch) to honor America. All jersey trim, normally black/orange/black becomes single-color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Turn Back the Clock to 1966

To celebrate the 50th anniversary of their 1966 World Series victory, the Orioles revisit that year's home jersey on July 8. The Majestic knit jerseys feature the wordmark and front and back Varsity numbers in orange/black with a black name on back. Orange/black/orange braid circles the neck and sleeve ends, and a 50th anniversary patch graces the left sleeve. Names on the backs of the 1966 originals were vertically arched, but are not on this version. The wordmark is very close to accurate, though the originals had the negative space inside "les" filled with black rather than open as they are in the throwback

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Mother's Day

Pink-trimmed Mother's Day jerseys return on May 13–14, 2017. Once again, the Flex Base jerseys have the usual front left tail Majestic heat applied vinyl locker tag and team inventory tag inside the bottom of the placket. Returning as well is the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon glued on left chest; the pink Majestic sleeve logo; and the dark pink/light pink/white ChromaFlex MLB Silhouetted Batter applique stitched on the back of the collar. All multi-colored lettering is done in the lightweight-twill style. The Orioles wear their road gray jerseys with the front logo lettering in pink/dark gray. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while front and back numbers are pink/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of pink, gray, and white. All jersey trim, normally black/orange/black, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Celebrate Maryland Day

This example is not game worn; Hellickson joined the team after this game had taken place!

Marylanders are exceptionally proud of their state flag, and they should be; a thing of beauty. The Orioles already honor the flag in their sleeve patches, and on May 20, 2017, they expand the celebration all over their home jerseys. Where all the lettering is usually orange/black, the orange on these Majestic Flex Base jerseys gives way to twill printed with the state flag on the front and back numbers and "Orioles" front script. Player names on back are red outlined with black. What works on a rectangle, however, gets busy on lettering (perhaps why the smaller NOB lettering is left as-is), but it hardly matters – the flag is one of the prides of Maryland, and the Orioles are their team.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Memorial Day (Road)

The next incarnation of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single-color black, while the back-of-collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Orioles apply this style to their road gray jerseys as worn on May 27–28, 2017 and May 26–27, 2018.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Memorial Day (Home)

The next incarnation of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single-color black, while the back-of-collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Orioles apply this style to their home white jerseys as worn on May 29, 2017 and May 28, 2018.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Independence Day (Home)

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less-busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two different color options for the new twill – appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 1–2, 2017, the Orioles wear their home white jersey with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and front and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color blue. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue. All jersey trim is single-color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Independence Day (Road)

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less-busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two different color options for the new twill–appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 3–4, 2017 the Orioles wear their road gray jersey with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and front and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color blue. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue. All jersey trim is single-color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Turn Back the Clock to 1992

Camden Yards started a welcome trend of vintage-inspired, anti-cookie-cutter ballparks when it opened in 1992, and as part of the park's 25th anniversary celebration in 2017, the Orioles threw back to their 1992 home jerseys on August 19. Aside from the 2017 anniversary patch on the right sleeve, these Majestic full-knit jerseys are excellent reproductions of the originals. One inaccuracy, in 1992, the black/orange/black knit trim on the sleeve ends would have been a sewn-in, stretchy knit sleeve end vs. the sewn-on knit braid used here. Numbers on front and back and name on back are all colored identically to the team logo script, orange/black. Block and Front Block numbers just like the originals. You can see the difference between these two fonts on the #9 example at left. Names appear on nameplates as they did in 1992 as well. Overall, almost indistinguishable from the set from two-and-a-half decades before.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Players Weekend

To highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans, MLB introduces the colorful Players Weekend promotion. In addition to relaxed regulations on team-standard color and design of cleats, bats, and other equipment, MLB encourages players to wear nicknames on the backs of a new set of very colorful jerseys. Meant to evoke the look of youth league designs, the two-toned Cool Base pullovers feature bright and contrasting body and sleeve colors, and include a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people in their lives with handwritten black marker messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature a variant of the MLB logo showing the growth of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat-pressed Majestic manufacturer and set tags are applied on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. All numbers on back are in single color Varsity, and the player names in 2 ¾" single color Block Condensed, regardless of the team's usual font. On August 25–27, 2017, the Orioles wear jerseys with gray bodies and orange sleeves with white nicknames and orange numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide orange/white/orange trim. The front features their home jersey script, here rendered in orange/black kiss-cut lightweight twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Earth Day

On Earth Day, April 22, 2018, the Orioles celebrate by color-shifting their home jerseys from orange to green. All typically orange elements on these Majestic Flex Base jerseys, including the middle color of sleeve trim, and all front and back lettering, take on green as a main color with black outlines. The left-sleeve team patch appears in shades of black, white, and green, similar to the St. Patrick's Day jersey from 2016, but with black taking the place of gray. This results in the Maryland state flag taking on an unusual green color scheme, but celebrating Earth seems to take precedence over celebrating Maryland on this day, and the Orioles have other days to honor Maryland anyway. Overall, this is a surprisingly sharp set, and the use of black and green makes for a more attractive presentation than the league-wide use of gray and green on St. Patrick's Day, in this writer's opinion. The team, did not, however, get new pants or helmets (which is understandable) so the orange elements in those accouterments look out of place.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Independence Day

For July 2-4, 2018, the Orioles' Independence Day jerseys is a subtle change to the 2017 road entry. Here, the printed twill on the uniforms appears in blue patterned twill/red for front lettering and front and back numbers, switching the layout from the year before. Similarly, the player name on back is now red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. The Orioles wear their road gray jersey. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue. All jersey trim is single-color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Celebrate Maryland Day

For the second entry on Celebrate Maryland Day on July 14, 2018, the Orioles bring back the Maryland flag-themed twill, this time applied to their Majestic Flex Base black alternate jerseys rather than last year's home jerseys. While all lettering on the usual black alternate is orange/black (yes, black outlines on a black jersey), all but the player name are here rendered in Maryland flag twill, outlined in orange, while players names are solid orange.

Against a white jersey, the flag twill is busy, but on black, it takes on more of a camouflage feel, with the black parts of the twill melting into the jersey base and the red flag elements spilling into the orange outlines. The black outlines from the year before pulled this set together in a stronger way, but one imagines that Orioles fans still loved the tribute.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Players Weekend

Players Weekend returns for a second year; a promotion intended to highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans. Brightly-colored jerseys are worn on the field on August 24–26, 2018, and once again, the Cool Base pullover jerseys are based on youth league designs with a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people with handwritten messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature an adaptation of the MLB logo showing the evolution of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat-pressed Majestic and set tags appear on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. The Orioles wear jerseys with orange bodies and black sleeves with white nicknames and black numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide orange/black/orange trim. The front features their home jersey script, here rendered in black twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Braille

The National Federation for the Blind celebrated its 40th anniversary in Baltimore in 2018, and the Orioles paid tribute by being the first pro team to wear Braille on their jerseys on September 18. The team's front wordmark and player names on back were both rendered in Braille, with team name and front an back numbers in orange/black and player name in orange. For player names, a solid strip of orange twill was covered with a solid one of white, with the dots cut in the proper places, allowing the orange to show through, to spell the player name. Team name on front appears to be kiss-cut twill on a white patch. Though there are also Braille numbers, of course, it is likely the team decided to keep their typical orange/black front and back numbers so the players would be more easily identifiable for fans and broadcasters.

Whoops!

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1969

The Orioles don 1969 throwbacks on the road to era-match their hosts the Mariners, who wear Seattle Pilots uniforms on June 22, 2019. The full-knit Majestic replicas are close, getting some details right, like the black knit trim around neck and placket and the 1969 MLB anniversary patch. The front wordmark is a faithful representation too, but the player names on back were more arched in 1969, while black outlines on all lettering was more pronounced a half-century before.

The remake also features the “20” disc honoring Frank Robinson, which of course, was not on the originals.

Though not from 1969, this jersey is indicative of that year’s style

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Celebrate Maryland Day

Kyle Mace Collection

After two years of flag-pattern twill on Celebrate Maryland Day, the orioles mark the occasion on June 29, 2019 with a whole new approach. The flag pattern now moves to the raglan sleeves of these Majestic Flex Base jerseys, while all other lettering appears in black/orange. Of note, the Orioles normally wear set-in sleeves, so this sleeve construction is exclusive to this event. As with their other jerseys that year, the right sleeve bears the “20” circle patch in honor of Frank Robinson, though it is very hard to see on the flag-adorned sleeves.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1989

Again, as in 2017, when the Orioles supposedly turned the clock back to 1992, they wore essentially the same jersey as seen here, now represented as the 1989 home jersey to mark the 30th anniversary of the "Why Not?" Orioles on August 9. These Majestic Cool-base fabric but NOT Flex base constructed jerseys (no vented side panels or special tail, standard Majestic tagging on the front) are excellent reproductions of the originals, though the black/orange/black knit trim on the sleeve ends was set slightly higher in 1989. Numbers on front and back and name on back are all colored identically to the team logo script, orange/black. Block and Front Block numbers just like the originals as well. Names appear on nameplates as they did in 1989.

Overall, almost indistinguishable from the set from three decades before, and the throwback from two years before. Which should sound familiar if you had read that page. These feature the Frank Robinson memorial on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Players Weekend

The third incarnation of Players Weekend turns the colorful jersey concept on its ear, reducing all teams to monochromatic designs in either black or white, with all team sleeve patches and trim removed, leaving a clean but stark template. Gone are the contrasting sleeves and special patches with messages of inspiration. MLB says that this new approach is to emphasize the colorful, personalized cleats, bats, and other gear the players choose for the promotion, which spans August 23–25, 2019. Jerseys are now button-front Flex Base, with appropriate Majestic manufacturer and set tagging. Back-of-collar CFX MLB logo is now silver and black. All teams also wear a memorial patch for Angels pitcher Tyler Skaggs, a white “45” in a black circle, on the left sleeve, and the Orioles add the Frank Robinson memorial patch on the right. They removed both before auctioning off the jerseys. The Orioles wear a black version of their home jersey with the front lettering and back varsity numbers rendered in black/gray with gray nickname on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

Prototypes and Oddballs

1972 Sample Home?

The Orioles gradually transitioned to knit home jerseys during the 1971 season, mixing them with flannels to start, and adopting them full-time after the All-Star break. Here is a sample of an early Orioles home knit jersey, identifiable by the sample tagging in the neck. There are a few odd elements to this one. First, it features a Rawlings tag that was more often used in 1972 and after, which dates to a year or so past when the team switched to knits. The sample tag, however, reveals that the fabric content of the jersey is 60% nylon and 40% cotton—an unusual mix for early pro Rawlings knits, which were more often 95% polyester and 5% nylon. Perhaps after a season of using heavier polyester jerseys in 1971, the team requested a version that may have been lighter for the 1972 season? Aside from the fabric, the jersey appears identical to others of the era, including the flat-hemmed bottom that was typical of Orioles Rawlings jerseys of the time. This jersey is appears to be quite yellowed, more so than others of the era, which may be a result of the fabric. When Russell made 100% nylon jerseys in the early 1990s (branded as “Intera”) they yellowed considerably faster than standard polyester knit.

© GameWornGuides.com

1971 Prototype Orange Flannel?

In 1971, Wilson created flannel prototypes of an orange jersey, but so far as we know, never produced them in quantity and the team never wore them in a game. Here are two different examples in different styles and apparently two different shades of orange. The version on the left, paler without white outlines on the lettering, has a neck tag reading "5-42-1-71" for the uniform number, size, version, and year. Tagging on the other version (if present) is not visible.

The eventual orange uniform worn in 1971 was made of the new miracle double knit fabric instead of the old wool flannel.

© GameWornGuides.com

1975 Prototype Alternate (Wilson)

The Orioles introduced an orange alternate jersey for use in the 1975 season. This is very likely the Wilson prototype that was created to show the club what it might look like.

Below, an actual game used Don Baylor jersey for 1975 shows removal of the original player nameplate, and the clumsy reattachment of direct-sewn NOB with too-large letters in an incorrect two-color font.

Wilson sewed a white tag in the collar of their prototypes listing codes for its characteristics. In this case, the garment is described as a “polyester warp knit," probably with internal numeric codes for color and trim, noted with team lettering on the front, including a 4” front number and a 6” back number. Varsity, Wilson’s “house font” is used.

As a custom, they often used the number of a popular player or sometimes of the team manager on prototype jerseys. #25 on the Orioles was Don Baylor. Save for the fact that the final product used a player NOB, this prototype is identical to the orange jersey as used for 1975 (right).

© GameWornGuides.com

1975 Prototype Alternate (Rawlings)

Offered here is another mid-70s orange Orioles jersey, this time by Rawlings. It appears to be a sample for the second iteration of their orange jerseys, a pullover introduced in 1975. At the time, Rawlings made the team's home jerseys, but Wilson had the market cornered on their road and orange alternates.

Ultimately, the team went with Wilson for this style, which had "Orioles" on front, rather than "Baltimore" as shown here. The Baltimore lettering on this example is a crude reproduction of what the team used on its road jerseys, but since Rawlings didn't make those, they likely hand-drew and cut something "close enough" to show the team the sample.

© GameWornGuides.com

1980 Home Descente-made Unused

We have encountered more than a few 1980-tagged Descente jerseys in the hobby. Our Orioles experts tell us their recollection is that these 1980 uniforms did not meet with team approval, and that they do not believe they were ever issued to MLB players during the 1980 season. It is likely that they were stripped of nameplates and were sent to the minors. All surviving examples of 1980 Descente jerseys we have encountered are either without nameplates on back or have had nameplates recreated for them.

We continue to look for photo evidence of these in use during the 1980 season or even in Spring Training.

The number font on the Descente 1980-tagged jerseys is somewhat like that used by the Tokyo's Yomiuri Giants of Nippon Professional Baseball's Central League (above, far right). One wonders what miscommunication may have occurred and how this font found its way all the way to the Orioles yet being so far "off" the Orioles standard. It seems to have been an expensive mistake.

© GameWornGuides.com

1987 Prototypes Home/Road

I am going to assume that these are MLB Orioles prototypes, made by Rawlings, mostly because they have an MLB roster player's name on back. Otherwise I might consider them minor league jerseys or prototypes. Larry Sheets appeared in 135 games for the 1987 Baltimore Orioles, so this is not likely a minor-league rehab assignment jersey either, but we can't rule that out.

They have an old-time feel, with a deep drop shadow on all elements except player name, a style reminiscent of the 1940s St. Louis Browns, who were the Orioles' predecessors. Orioles swinging bird patch on the left sleeve, Rawlings logo on right. Orange/black/orange sewn on knit trim at sleeve ends, around collar and extending down the placket complete the look.

A reader sent this ghostly photo which shows a drop shadow style jersey missing the placket trim of the example above. I can't account for this and I've never seen another. "For your consideration only."

Original 1940s St. Louis Browns jerseys; a possible point of inspiration?

© GameWornGuides.com

1987 Prototype Road

Stephen Kraljic Collection

Here we have another 1987 Orioles road prototype from Rawlings, one a little less ornate than those shown on the page prior. Though the team did move to road jerseys that looked similar to this one in future years, the team ultimately did not select this option for 1987.

Note that all of the 1987 samples on this and the prior page used a whimsical version of the "Fun Bird" patch (this example is nicely chain stitched). Another version of this bird would finally make it on to Orioles uniforms in 2002.

© GameWornGuides.com

1989 Prototype Road Batting Practice?

If it was any other team than the Orioles (or maybe the Giants) we would dismiss a BP jersey with late 1980s tagging and screened on lettering as a retail item, or at best minor league, not an MLB product. But the Orioles didn't seem averse to screened-on lettering, the jersey features the city script, usually seen only on MLB issues, and it has the Rawlings pro tail tag and sleeve logo seen on game issue jerseys. This one looks new and unused, and since we've never seen one in a player photo, we'll guess it is a prototype not used by the club. The sewn-in side stripes are an interesting feature.

© GameWornGuides.com

1995 Prototype Road

This jersey is a Russell prototype, most likely from 1995. It features small differences from that year's eventual production jersey. On this one, the sleeve knit trim is orange instead of black, the knit trim is added to the placket and collar, and the roughly drawn bird patch on the sleeve shows the cartoon bird making a catch instead of using the realistic looking bird patches that were actually used in those years. It may also have been a minor league prototype, as this style bird has been used there.

Also, note that the white outlining on the team script is slightly different from the production version, notice the white-filled areas between the "R" and "I" and the "L" and "E".

© GameWornGuides.com

1996 Turn Back the Clock Prototype?

In 1996, the Orioles threw back to the1930s International League Orioles in a road game at Texas. The jerseys featured a beautifully chain stitched Orioles version of a “Birds on Bat” logo now most familiar to us from the Cardinals. Mitchell and Ness made the uniforms for that game, but here we have an example of that style, made by Powers Manufacturing. Though in business since 1902, Powers has had very little footprint in MLB jerseys, except for a one-year association with the Orioles, making their first orange alternate jerseys. The chain-stitched logo on this Powers jersey is almost identical to that on the Mitchell and Ness version, except for the use of a yellow bat here rather than black. Back numbers are also in a different font from what was used on the field. Given that home teams usually order throwback uniforms, it is curious to see this version from a manufacturer whose only association was a brief connection to the road team. During this time, however, a team’s regular-season uniform manufacturer had right of first refusal on throwbacks, and if they did not want to make them, the team was free to seek out other options. It is possible this was made up as a sample for consideration, or was simply a promotional jersey for one of the teams, or even a Minor League issue. More research is required.

Below: The jersey as used on-field in 1996, made by Mitchell and Ness.

© GameWornGuides.com

Oddball Orange Batting Practice Jersey

These are Diamond Collection tagged and use the front lettering style seen on game jerseys starting in 1995. They feature three-color number on back only, black/orange/white. Name on back one-color, black, no nameplate. I am told by my Orioles experts that these were used in Fantasy Camp and never by the team in the regular season.

© GameWornGuides.com

Oddballs– Earl Weaver and Cal Ripken Sr. Smoking Uniforms

Look carefully at these two game worn Earl Weaver jerseys and see the pocket on each sewn on the inside behind the front number to hold his ever present cigarette pack! The same treatment is given to the Cal Ripken, Sr. orange jersey at the right.

© GameWornGuides.com

1997 Mesh Oddballs

It's hard to say what these are, so I simply offer them for your consideration. We know that the Orioles turned a set of black mesh batting practice jerseys into game jerseys in 1998, and these two jerseys found up for sale originating at different ends of the earth (one in Japan) are eerily similar and equally hard to explain.

They are black mesh Russell BP-style jerseys with a Henley style two-button neck. One has a narrow ribbon of orange sleeve trim, and the other does not. They are identically year tagged for 1997, have the full set of (3) team patches correct for 1997 on the sleeves. The players are from the 1997 roster and their names are on mesh nameplates with serged edges. One even has special tailoring noted (and observed) on a neck tag typical of what would be done at the factory. Notably, size 46 (the Tarasco) was not a retail-offered size; it was made only for use by the team.

Two other odd things to note: One is that the back numbers are much smaller than team spec, with custom proportions and outlines, and the two jerseys have numbers that are clearly from the same pattern. And when we checked with friends who were stitchers for the Orioles at that time, they have no recollection of these at all. Majestic made the team's BP jerseys in 1997, and names were not used on the team's mesh jerseys, and they cannot recall digitally-printed date tags on any Russell BP jerseys.

If these are home-made, someone went to a lot of trouble and chose to make two of them for non-star players, including adding team tagging and doing special tailoring. All we can say is that the Orioles are the masters of the perplexing and odd. In short, these are professionally executed but we have no record of them being issued or worn.

© GameWornGuides.com

Oops.

Far left: Anyone remember to put thread in that sewing machine? The loose number eventually fell off during the game.

Above Right: On what letter does that tilde accent really belong?

Left: Doesn't he spell his name with a "z" at the end?

© GameWornGuides.com

Curious Button-Front Black Mesh Batting Practice

I honestly thought we were done with finding exceptions to the Orioles jerseys…. But we found two more from the personal collection of player Tom Lawless. While the #9 example has two-color back lettering, his is all one-color lettering with no outline. Note the different fonts on the backs of both of his.

Where does this style fit?? It is at least 2000 or post-2000, since it has the silhouetted batter patch. One of the Lawless examples has a 2000s style Rawlings tag on it.

I did a casual search for Spring Training photos, and I do not see this in use 2000, 2001, 2002. It is the same style wordmark and number outlining as 2001–2002.

Note that this is a ”0006” coded jersey, which means “on-field.”

And, these are pre-2003 Cool Base BP. Could be minor league.

Thoughts?

© GameWornGuides.com

2023 Prototype Home/Road

Right: A detail of the odd-color sleeve-end trim.

RGVDEAL on eBay

RGVDEAL on eBay

Soon after Nike took over MLB jersey manufacturing in 2020, they had intended to release their Nike Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) template as early as 2022. However, a source told Uni-Watch in 2022 that the plans were "pushed back at least to 2023, and possibly even 2024." Ultimately, the new template was delayed to 2024, but here we have evidence that prototypes were made in advance of the 2023 season, if not earlier.

These Orioles jerseys are mostly the same as what they wore before and after the switch from Nike's version of Flex Base to VPE. Closer inspection reveals that the template is VPE - including the lower MLB logo on back, smaller player name lettering, the band of fabric around the neck opening, sewn-in sleeve-end trim, a lightweight sleeve patch, and perforated back numbers. The tell-tale "Player" and "23" on back reinforce this as a sample, intended for the 2023 season.

Oddly, the sleeve-end trim on the home version appears in colors that the Orioles did not wear, royal blue/white/powder blue. Perhaps at the sample stage, this was all that was available.

The heat-pressed inventory tags also reveal some info, and leaves some mysteries. The home reads "DH1620 OLE 2023 CONV. JERSEY HOME P2"; the road says "DH1620 OLE 2023 CONV. JERSEY ROAD P2."

There is also a small, handwritten "1" on the bottom corner of each tag. Here, "OLE" is a code Nike has used elsewhere for the Orioles, and "2023", "HOME", and "ROAD" are self explanatory. The "DH1620" indication is not clear, although Nike has used a "DX" prefix for four-digit style numbers in its Vapor Premier Elite line for colleges, so this may be an internal model number for the pro jerseys. The use of "Conv. Jersey" and "P2" is also unclear, unless it refers to converting from the Flex Base template to this one, and this is a second iteration of a sample.

© GameWornGuides.com

Ad(d) or Subtract? 2024 Ad Patch Problems

The Orioles 2024 ad patches arrived mid-season, and as far as we can tell, were heat-pressed on to the jerseys. As such, we have come across a couple of instances of patch issues that likely didn't make their sponsors (or clubhouse staff) too happy.

On June 15, just a few days after the patch debuted, Orioles catcher Adley Rutschman's ad patch was half-detached from his orange alternate jersey during the second inning. It looks like the shoulder pad from his chest protector may have been the culprit. It was fixed later in the game.

On August 6, Jackson Holliday's road jersey was missing the patch entirely. It does not appear as if the patch was fixed during the game, but he did have it back on his sleeve the following night.

© GameWornGuides.com

Commemorative Patches

Orioles Patches

1984

1988

1991

The Memorial Stadium patch was supposed to be worn on home jerseys all year in 1991 to commemorate the team's final year at the old ballpark. However, after an early season losing "streak" of only two games, the patch was blamed, ordered banished, and it was removed.

1993

- 1984: 30th Anniversary of 1983 World Champs
- 1988: EBW memorial sleeve lettering for owner E.B. Williams. Letters are heat pressed vinyl.
- 1991 Memorial Stadium Final Year
- 1993: All-Star Game
- 1997: Baltimore 200 – in white, gray or black background

1997

1997

The Baltimore 200 patch was made in three color combinations, one for each of the jerseys used in 1997. It was designed so that the background was the same color as the jersey fabric, so that when applied, only the logo would be visible.

© GameWornGuides.com

1999 memorial 7 as worn only in Cuban game

May 3, 1999

October 5-6, 2001

September 11, 2002

2003 Spring Training only

- 1999: May 3: Cuban Exhibition Game sleeve patch worn on right sleeve of home jersey for exhibition game only, Ripken "7" memorial moved to left sleeve for the game.
- 1999: Cal Ripken Sr. Memorial 7 on right sleeve. Of the black numerals, some were twill and some were glued and sewn flock. All the numerals for the black jerseys were twill. For black jerseys, three-color twill: Black/orange/white. These specific numbers were hand-cut and applied by the Orioles' local lettering shop.
- 2001, October 5-6: Cal Ripken Retirement
- 2002, September 11: Pentagon 9/11 Memorial patch, (road game in NYC).
- 2003 Spring Training: On BP only, #51 memorial disk for Pitcher Steve Bechler who died during Spring Training while participating in conditioning drills, later attributed to his use of a weight loss supplement, which eventually resulted in an FDA ban on the substance, Ephedra.
- 2004: 50th anniversary (white, gray and black background versions made).
- 2005, September 5-7: Cal Ripken 10thAnniversary of "The Streak."

2004 home jersey version

2004 road jersey version

2004 alternate black jersey version

September 5-7, 2005

© GameWornGuides.com

2006

2012

2013

2013

- 2006: Flock material glued-on 44 for death of Elrod Hendricks on right sleeve, worn all year long on all uniforms.
- 2008, after June 8: (Sportscaster) Jim McKay Armband on home and road uniforms.
- 2011, after August 26: “Flanny” memorial patch for Mike Flanagan former pitcher, Orioles executive, and broadcaster.
- 2012: 20th Anniversary of Oriole Park at Camden Yards patch worn on all uniforms.
- 2013: Earl Weaver memorial #4 disk, which was so large that it presented curling problems on players’ sleeves.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 – Earlier in season

2014 – Later in season

2014: Orioles 60 Years patch, same version worn on all color of uniforms.

AND…this entry seems to be a beautiful summarization of this history of Orioles' uniforms. A team that on the surface appears consistent, but where the devil is in the details, and those details seem to change weekly.

Shown here are EIGHT distinct versions of the Tom Clancy patch worn to commemorate the death of the author and Orioles investor worn after March 31, 2014. First, there was a different Clancy patch for each color jersey, sewn beneath the "Orioles 60" patch.

But next notice that the top row of patches has the first letters of the first and last name in a larger font than the rest of the word. Apparently, these are jerseys from earlier in the season.

Below that we feature patches with the letters in the Clancy patch all the same size. These are from later in the season.

Notice that the postseason sleeve patch replaced the anniversary patch, but the Clancy patch remains.

© GameWornGuides.com

- 2016, July 5 and 6: 50th anniversary of 1966 World Series, right sleeve of road jersey, also July 7 on throwback jersey
- 2017: Camden Yards 25th anniversary, right sleeve on all uniforms

- 2019: Frank Robinson “20” memorial, worn on right sleeve during season, and on left chest in Spring Training
- 2019, March 2-3 and 2020, March 8: Athletes and Artists patch, a charity that supports arts education and girls’ empowerment

© GameWornGuides.com

- 2020, September 6: 25th Anniversary of Cal Ripken's 2131st consecutive game
- 2022: Camden Yards 30th anniversary, right sleeve on all uniforms
- 2023, August 5: 40th Anniversary of 1983 World Series Championship
- 2023, September 26: Orange/black "5" on sleeves in memory of Brooks Robinson, who died that day. It appears to be heat pressed or a decal rather than a patch, twill, or embroidery.
- 2023, starting September 27: "5" disc patch in memory of Brooks Robinson

Reproduction of the original patch, created by your author on commission from the original art. We've never seen an original one in the cloth. These were not produced as souvenirs.

© GameWornGuides.com

2023-2025 Orioles Advertising Patches

Home, road, orange alternate

Black alternate, City Connect

With the start of the 2023 season, teams were permitted to sell an advertising patch, up to four inches square, to appear on one of their jersey sleeves. The sleeve on which the patch appeared could change from player to player, and each team that sold a patch handled the placement differently.

The Orioles struck a patch deal with T. Rowe Price, a wealth management services company. The patches first appeared on June 11, 2024. The patch includes the company's logo, a bighorn sheep, in white and navy on a light blue circle, surrounded by a navy circle with the company's name in white on the home, road, and orange jerseys. On the black jersey and the City Connect, the field behind the sheep is navy and the circle around the logo is light blue with the company name in white.

The placement of the patch varies depending on the handedness of each player. It is heat-pressed on to the jersey, so instances of patches missing or falling off in-game have occurred.

In 2023, the location of the team's usual logo sleeve patch varied depending on the handedness of each player, despite not having a patch sponsor until mid-way through 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

Orioles Postseason Patches

2014 AL Division Series
2014 AL Championship Series
(right sleeve, above "Tom Clancy" patch, replacing anniversary patch)

2016 AL Wild Card
(right sleeve)

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Jim Palmer Baltimore Orioles 1970 Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: January 15, 2025 Certification Number: 25-0115J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Spalding-tagged Baltimore Orioles 1970 size 46 (marked and measured) road gray flannel jersey, #22. Black soutache rings the placket, Baltimore script with underline stitched on the front. Player numbers on left front chest and on back; player name above on back in steep arch consistent with team standard. All lettering is in straight-stitched orange felt over black felt. Seven original dark gray four-hole pearl buttons, six-hole diamond-shaped underarm gussets, side vents on the tails. Palmer's autograph in black marker on the front below the numbers. I have no professional opinion on the autograph. Size 46 is correct for Palmer matching exemplars at this stage of his career.

Jim Palmer played 19 years in Major League Baseball (MLB) for the Baltimore Orioles (1965–1967, 1969–1984). Palmer was the winningest MLB pitcher in the 1970s, with 186 wins. He also won at least 20 games in eight different seasons and won three Cy Young Awards and four Gold Gloves during the decade. His 268 Orioles victories are the most in team history. A six-time American League (AL) All-Star, he was also one of the rare pitchers who never allowed a grand slam in any major league contest. Palmer appeared in the postseason eight times and was a vital member of three World Series Champions, six AL pennant winners and seven Eastern Division titleholders. He is the only pitcher in history to earn a win in a World Series game in three different decades. He is also the youngest to pitch a complete-game shutout in a World Series, doing so nine days before his 21st birthday in 1966, in which he defeated Sandy Koufax in Koufax's last appearance. He was one of the starters on the last rotation to feature four 20-game winners in a single season in 1971. He was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1990 in his first year of eligibility.

In 1970, Palmer appeared in 39 regular season games for the Orioles, all as a starter, going 20-10 with a 2.71 ERA. He also appeared in three games of the 1970 postseason, going 2-0. The Orioles won the World Series in 1970, beating the Cincinnati Reds four games to one. (Wikipedia, Baseball Almanac)

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

As received, original and intact except for missing player name on back. Below, photo-enhanced negative image of the the name on back ghost as seen on the light table. Other photos on this pages are exemplars and tagging from other 1971 Orioles road jerseys.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good condition: the front and back numbers are all original, only the name on back is a replacement, properly restored with lettering near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Hall of Fame pitcher Jim Palmer of the 1971 Baltimore Orioles.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Document of Restoration

Baltimore Orioles 1971 BOSWELL #32 Home Jersey

Examination Date: July 3, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0703R02

This letter documents work we have performed in our shop; It is not a letter of authenticity.

Description: Baltimore Orioles Wilson button-front cream colored flannel with 1971 SET 1 tagging. Orioles Script on the front in Orange twill over black felt. Player numbers on front and back in the same fabrics. Player name on back in black felt. Orange/black/orange nylon uniform braid trim at the neck and sleeve ends.

Restoration Performed: As received, jersey bore what appear to be its original numbers front and back and NOB BOSWELL in felt in an incorrect font. I stripped the name on back, and placing the garment on the light table, while there were not clear ghosts of the same name on back, setting the name in the proper Orioles/Wilson fonts and overlaying it onto the image of the shirt provided at least six points where the removal of the old name had left holes (red circles). I cut the NOB in the proper font and re-sewed using the same zig sag stitch, then steamed the jersey fabric to help erase the most obvious old stitching holes from the earlier incorrect lettering.

As completed, it is in very good restored condition, with normal wear and a few small stains. Evidence of the older inaccurate restoration is visible with a light table examination. The new lettering is placed directly over the original ghosts, as seen in the photos included.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Tom Dukes 1971 Baltimore Orioles Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: September 12, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0912J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Spalding tagged Baltimore Orioles 1971 size 44 road gray flannel jersey, #36. Black soutache rings the placket, Baltimore script with underline stitched on the front in hybrid-style orange twill over black felt. During the late 1960s and through the end of the flannel era in 1972, some teams used a combination of felt and twill together on their jerseys. 1971 was the final year of Orioles flannels; in fact, the team switched to knits for the 1971 postseason, leaving the old era behind.

Pitcher Tom Dukes was issued #36 in 1971, his only year with the MLB Orioles. At 6" 2" and 185 lbs, this jersey is a reasonable size to have been worn by him. That year he appeared in 28 games, pitching 38.1 innings as a reliever with a 3.54 ERA, compiling a 1-5 record with four saves. He also appeared in two games of the 1971 World Series. He did not make the 1972 Orioles club, and after starting the 1972 season in AAA Rochester, was traded to the California Angels on May 29, 1972 (Baseball Almanac, Wikipedia)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Spalding tagging is sewn on the outside left tail. In 1971, Orioles road jersey were made by Spalding, in their next-to-last year of serving MLB. Interestingly, this jersey has the "new" style of Spalding tag introduced sometime in 1971 and most often seen on 1972 knits. There is a gray felt strip tag sewn into the back of the collar, hand chain stitched in black, "44 SET 2-71 36" noting the size (44) the set number (2) the year (71) and the player number it was issued with (36). The tagging matches exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that this jersey is original without contrivance. The jersey displays at least a full season of wash and wear, and shows signs of fading especially on the tops of the sleeves and above the waist where it was most exposed to the sun. The lettering is burnished and puckered but is intact. The player name on back was removed and the outline ghosts of of the five steeply arched letters can be seen on the light table, along with two small holes that falls on the outline of the "U" and the final "S". The numbers on back and front are original to the garment. Because it retains its original "Baltimore" front script, this jersey likely lived on in spring training with the MLB club during at least 1972 when prior-season flannels were used, and after Dukes had been traded from the club. (City name MLB road jerseys sent to the minors generally had the city name removed.)

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Restoration Performed: Missing its name on back, I recreated it using the original team pattern for that year, using orange twill over black felt. To make the new orange fabric better match the old and worn lettering, I media blasted it and organically dyed it to simulate the patina of use and wear. Using the light table, I stitched it with color-matched thread directly over the ghosts of the removed letters from the back

As received, original and intact except for missing player name on back. Below, exemplar tagging from another reliably authenticated 1971 Orioles

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good condition: the front and back numbers are all original, only the name on back is a replacement, properly restored with lettering near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher Tom Dukes of the 1971 Baltimore Orioles.

William F. Henderson

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Don Baylor Rookie Year 1972 Baltimore Orioles Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: October 8, 2024 Certification Number: 24-1008J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Spalding-tagged Baltimore Orioles 1972 size 40 (measures as a 42) road gray six-button first-year double knit jersey, #25. Baltimore script with underline stitched on the front in orange over black tackle twill. 3 1/2" wide sewn-on knit sleeve end trim in orange/white/black. Sewn-in 3/4" knit crew neck trim in black/orange. Flat-bottom tails with side vents as is typical of early Spalding knits. Player number 25 on front and back in the same orange over black twill, roster number as issued to outfielder Don Baylor. Listed as 6' 1" and 195, multiple game worn Baylor examples are in our reference library from early in his career as both size 40 and 42. "Baylor" sewn arched on back also in orange over black, the light table shows that it is a replacement though in fairly accurate font and placement.

While he was called up very briefly by the MLB Orioles in 1970 and 1971, 1972 was Don Baylor's first full season. He appeared in 102 games batting .253 with 11 home runs. During his 19 seasons in Major League Baseball (MLB), Baylor was a respected power hitter. He played for six different American League (AL) teams, primarily the Baltimore Orioles and California Angels, but he also played for the Oakland Athletics, New York Yankees, Minnesota Twins, and Boston Red Sox. In 1979, Baylor was an All-Star and won the AL Most Valuable Player Award. He won three Silver Slugger Awards, the Roberto Clemente Award, and was a member of the 1987 World Series champion Minnesota Twins.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Spalding tagging is sewn on the inside center of the back tail. In 1972, Orioles road jersey were made exclusively by Spalding, in their final year of supplying MLB. Blue square silver-embroidered "72" tag to the left of the Spalding tag, small red on white square tag noting the size as 40 to the right. There was no player name/number/set tagging used on 1972 jerseys. This tagging matches exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: This jersey is in remarkably good condition. It is clean and unfaded with knit trim that is still bright and vibrant. A light table examination shows that the team crest on the font and the numbers both back and front are bright and original, with only minor puckering of the fabric beneath it. The stitching is still tight and un-frayed. This jersey has a replacement name on back. The black light table shows staining from another name that had been stitched here at one point, and while it is mostly covered by the BAYLOR name, it appears to have been six letters "*x*TOK*xx*". I was unable to find any roster Orioles player who had a name that matches. Further, Baylor was on the team 1970-1975, and no one else was issued #25 while he was on the team. The Baltimore scripted front crest was used only in 1972 and in 1973 spring training. Notably, road jerseys with the city name on them are generally not useful in the minors leagues without first being stripped of their city wordmark.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Document of Restoration

Baltimore Orioles 1982 “Storm” Davis Road Jersey

This is not a letter of authenticity. Its purpose is to document the history of an alteration of a jersey in our shop.

As Received: Baltimore Orioles gray knit button front jersey lettered #32, STONE. A preliminary light table investigation shows a great deal of wear and prior alteration. Owner wanted it restored to be presentable for display and to reflect its original owner.

Work Performed: Stripping the nameplate and the numeral “2” which was clearly not original, allowed a better view of what had been on it in the past. We determined that the jersey had been issued previously to pitcher “Storm” Davis, who wore both #34 and #39 in 1982. The leading 3 on the jersey front and back is original. The most clear imprints in the second position were of a 4. We elected to make it Davis’ #39 to cover the numerous scars and fabric perforations that would have remained exposed had we put a “4” in the second spot.

Because the original “3s” were falling apart from thread failure, I removed them, removed all the thread remnants then stitched them back together and returned them to their exact places on the jersey. I recreated the “9s” for front and back, then media blasted them and distressed to match the old. I did the same with the “Davis” on the new nameplate, which I made from a pair of period Orioles pants. I hand-darned closed the worst of the holes that remained from the old number removal on front and back. I also carefully hand re-dyed the thread holding the Orioles wordmark on front to its original black.

William F. Henderson
Restoration Specialist and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications
Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
The Dream Shop: MLB Jersey Restorations

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Cal Ripken Sr. 1987 Baltimore Orioles Home (Manager) Game Jersey

Examination Date: April 3, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0403-J05

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1987 Baltimore Orioles, Rawlings home white size 40 (marked and measured) six-button full weight double knit jersey issued to #7, team manager Cal Ripken Sr. It is a reasonable size for the manager. All lettering and numbers are two-layer tackle twill, orange with a black outline. 2" black/white/orange sewn-in knit sleeve end trim, black and orange knit collar trim. Front has "Orioles" word mark scripted across both panels in the team script. The player number "7" is stitched on the left side under the team name. Name plate with "RIPKEN" in the Orioles team-specific block font variant, steeply radially arched as is the team standard for 1987 on a serged edge nameplate. Player number "7" is directly below, sewn 8" from the collar edge. He was a heavy smoker, and there are two custom hidden pockets sewn inside the jersey, one over each breast, one likely shaped for eyeglasses and the other for a pack of cigarettes.

As a manager in the minor leagues for 13 years, Ripken won 964 games, and later compiled a 68-101 record managing the Orioles. Several of his students, including Jim Palmer, Eddie Murray, and most prominently his son Cal Jr., went on to Hall of Fame careers. He was credited for helping sculpt his team's tradition of excellence known as "The Oriole Way." In 1987, Ripken became the first—and still only—father to manage two sons simultaneously in the majors, as his son Billy was called up at the All-Star break. Ripken managed Cal Jr. and Billy for the first time on July 11, in a 2–1 loss to the Minnesota Twins. (Wikipedia, Baseball Almanac)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: First-year of appearance of the Rawlings script is embroidered in white on the black band of the right sleeve end trim. A red Rawlings manufacturer size 40 tag, correct for 1987, is sewn in the inside front tail of the jersey. A rectangle of twill is stitched directly below with "1 87" machine embroidered on it, matching exemplars. Light table analysis shows that all tagging and lettering is original and without alternation.

Wear & Repairs: Jersey shows little or no signs of wash or wear: It is bright white and all elements are crisp and unblemished, there is no puckering or any elements and the tagging is crisp and unwrinkled. This was likely the manager's backup jersey in 1987.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly sized, tagged and lettered, It is consistent with known exemplars. While it shows little or no evidence of use, its unique special tailoring leaves little doubt that it was made for and issued to manager Cal Ripken, Sr.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Document of Restoration

Baltimore Orioles "R. Jackson" Gray Road Jersey

Examination Date: January 23, 2023 Certification Number:23-0123J02

This letter is a documentation of a restoration performed in our shop.

Description: 1976 Orioles road Wilson gray jersey with black/white/orange neck and sleeve trim, size 42, 1976 Set 1 tagging in the tail, orange and black Orioles scripted on front, number 9 on front and back. Autograph and inscription on the front.

Restoration Performed: The clear glue shadows of "R. Jackson" were apparent on back. I recreated exact lettering to match in black and orange layered twill, then media blasted and organically dyed the letters to match the color and patina of the other, original lettering before sewing to the jersey over the exact spots, carefully matching the stitching to the original.

Conclusion: I certify that this jersey has now been properly and correctly restored to represent its original appearance.

Above: Top row, the jersey as received, left and center. At right, The lettering repaired and replaced. Bottom row- the scanned pattern of the original jersey showing the removal glue shadows, at right my cutting pattern to replicate the original.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Document of Restoration

Orioles 1975 Grimsley Orange Game Jersey

This is not a letter of authenticity. Its purpose is to document the history of an alteration of a jersey in our shop.

As Received: Orange 1975 year tagged Orioles jersey lettered and numbered for #3, GRITCH. Wear, puckering and fading of lettering and thread indicate that the jersey was washed many times in its "as received" condition

Work Performed: a light table exam with the current number still in place shows that Grimsley's name was previously there, direct sewn, It also had what appears to be both 48 and 38 on it. The GRITCH #3 was stripped off, the jersey received a light cleaning and steaming to close the holes from prior stitching. The light table images are shared below, they are admittedly difficult to see on the printed page.

Replacement numbers and player name lettering that match both the Orioles 1975 orange jersey template and matched the ghosts of the old lettering as seen on the light table were cut, then media blasted lightly, to simulate age and wear and to make the sheen of the new lettering more approximately match that of the old. The replacement lettering was positioned while on the light table to accurately ensure the lettering was properly positioned to cover the ghosts. Note the odd spacing of the letters in the last name, clearly more widely spaced at the end of the name than the beginning. Also, the final "Y" in the name was originally placed 1/4" too high so that it was not in line with the arc. We elected to correct this misplacement in the restoration. These sorts of artifacts in spacing and placement are common with jerseys lettered in the pre-computer graphics period, when all cutting and layout were done "by hand".

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications
Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
The Dream Shop: MLB Jersey Restorations
http://GameWornGuides.com http://TheDream.Shop

Back

Document of Restoration

Baltimore Orioles 1975 Grant Jackson Alternate Jersey

This is not a letter of authenticity. Its purpose is to document the history of an alteration of a jersey in our shop.

As Received: Baltimore Orioles orange knit pullover jersey lettered #53, DURHAM.. A preliminary light table investigation showed a great deal of prior alteration. Owner wanted it restored to be presentable for display and to reflect its original owner. A light table investigation revealed the earlier presence of back numbers stitched several inches higher than the current ones, as well as evidence of multiple names on back.

Work Performed: Stripping the nameplate and back numbers which were clearly mis-placed, allowed a better view of what had been on it in the past. "R. May" was direct sewn underneath the nameplate, also unoriginal. The light table assisted in determining that the jersey had been issued originally to pitcher Grant Jackson who wore #23 in 1975. The "3" on the jersey front and back is the original.

Right number shows twill dyed to match the old.

Because the original "3s" were falling apart from thread failure, I removed them, stripped all the thread remnants then stitched them back together and returned them to their exact original places on the jersey. I recreated the "2s" for front and back to match, then media blasted them and dyed them to match the old. The vertically arched JACKSON name on back was hand-matched to the original ghosts. I repaired a cut in the upper back with fabric interfacing and twill.

William F. Henderson
Restoration Specialist and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications
Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
The Dream Shop: MLB Jersey Restorations
http://GameWornGuides.com http://TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Jose Morales 1981 Baltimore Orioles Orange Alternate Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: August 11, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0811J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Orange, size 44 (marked and measured) Baltimore Orioles Wilson-made pullover jersey of #34, infielder and DH Jose Morales. Black/white/orange 1- 3/4" sewn-in knit sleeve end trim, black/white/black 1" V-neck trim. "Orioles" script slanted on the front in black over white, layered twill. Number 34 on the left front and on the back center, correct 4" on the front, 5 3/4" on the back. Name on back is vertically arched in the unique font and style used on Orioles orange jerseys, and sewn to an orange nameplate that is un-hemmed and zig zag stitched to the back. In 1981, Morales wore #34 for the Orioles and was the only player that year to have been assigned that number.

Morales was on the team roster all season long, appeared in 38 games for the 1981 Orioles and had 86 at bats mainly as a a designated hitter and a pinch hitter. He hit .244 with two home runs. Morales enjoyed a nine-year MLB career, mostly with the Expos and Twins, spending a single year each with the Orioles and Dodgers at the end of his career.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson tag in the correct style for 1981 showing the size 44, is stitched into the inside back of the collar. A small rectangle of the same orange jersey fabric is stitched to the outside lower left tail with "81 1" (1981 set 1) hand-chain stitched in the familiar handwriting of the Wilson factory stitcher.

Restoration Performed, Wear & Repairs: As received the jersey had an orange nameplate with black "F. Verdi" sewn on back. Frank Verdi was a career minor league player and manager in the Baltimore Orioles organization. While he was never listed as an Orioles MLB coach, he was the manager of the Orioles' AAA Rochester Red Wings in the early 1980s, and may have attended Spring training with the MLB Orioles. Removing his nameplate, a clear prior ghost exists that is the proper length to fit Morales' name. A light table examination shows that all other sewn elements are original and unaltered. In whatever circumstance this jersey might have been used by Verdi, The jersey shows even wear throughout with some slight graying of the white elements, minor bleaching of attaching thread and slight softening/fraying of the edges of the twill lettering. As received it had a large dark brown stain on its left front side that I was able to mostly remove. Using the light table to capture the exact shape of the original plate, I recreated a Morales nameplate using another orange Orioles jersey for donor fabric, and stitched it in place without a serged edge, as was done originally.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good used condition, is properly lettered, and other than having had its nameplate restored, it appears to have no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Jose Morales of the 1981 Baltimore Orioles.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Earl Weaver 1977 Baltimore Orioles Orange Alternate Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: December 17. 2020 Certification Number: 20-1217J04

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Orange, size 40 Baltimore Orioles Wilson-made pullover jersey of #4, manager Earl Weaver. Black/white/orange 1-3/4" sewn-in knit sleeve end trim, black/white/black 1" V-neck trim. "Orioles" script slanted on the front in black over white, layered twill. Number 4 on the left front and on the back center, correct 4" on the front, 5 4/4" on the back. Name on back WEAVER is vertically arched in the unique font and style used on Orioles orange jerseys, and sewn to an orange nameplate that is un-hemmed and zig zag stitched to the back. The jersey is autographed on the front left. (I have no opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.) A unique feature of many Weaver's jerseys is the custom-inclusion of a hand-made pocket sewn inside the jersey behind the front number for his ever-present pack of Raleigh cigarettes. There are multiple examples of authenticated size 40 Weaver jerseys in our exemplar library.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson tag in the correct style for 1977 showing the size 40 is stitched into the inside back of the collar. A small rectangle of the same orange jersey fabric is stitched to the outside lower left tail with "77 1" (1977 set 1) hand-chain stitched in the familiar handwriting of the Wilson factory stitcher.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all sewn elements are original and unaltered. This jersey seems to have avoided a trip to the minor leagues for a second life which was so common of Orioles jerseys of this vintage. The jersey shows even wear throughout with some graying of the white elements, bleaching of attaching thread and slight softening/fraying of the edges of the twill lettering

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in excellent used condition, is properly lettered and numbered, and appears to have no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Earl Weaver of the 1977 Baltimore Orioles.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Don Buford 1994 Baltimore Orioles Autographed Home Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: May 2, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0502J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: White, six button, size 44 Russell Baltimore Orioles home jersey, #13 bench coach and member of the Orioles Hall of Fame, Don Buford. Sewn-in orange/black/orange 3/4" knit sleeve end trim. White pearl four-hole buttons, "Orioles" script with underline slanted across both front panels in orange tackle twill outlined with black. Player name and number lettering is in the same two colors. #13 on the left chest and centered on the back, name on back "BUFORD" is radially arched in the correct name font used by the team, in the proper arc on a matching white nameplate with surged edges. The 1994-only MLB 125th patch is stitched to the right sleeve. The jersey is autographed in black marker on the right side on front, with the inscription "O's Hall of Fame 1993" I offer no opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.

Buford played in MLB as an outfielder ten seasons, from 1963 through 1972, most notably as the leadoff hitter for the Baltimore Orioles dynasty that won three consecutive American League pennants from 1969 to 1971 and, won the World Series in 1970. In 1970 Buford batted .272 with 17 home runs and a career high 109 walks. Buford, playing in four games of the 1970 Series went 4-for-15, including a home run in Game Three, which Baltimore won 9-3. In 1971 Buford batted .290 with a career-high 19 home runs. He was also selected to the All-Star team for the only time in his career. In the 1970 World Series, Buford collected six hits, two of them were home runs. (Wikipedia, Baseball Almanac)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Russell Diamond Collection locker tag in the style used in 1994, small white "100% Polyester" tag pinched underneath, a second tag reads "-1/2" armhole opening"; these tags plus the absence of a size tag in the neck are hallmarks of team-issue specification Russell jersey as opposed to those made for retail sale. Russell logo is direct-embroidered in black thread near the end of the right sleeve. Under the Russell tail tag is a computer printed and faded rectangular mylar tag with the code "13 Buford 94-2" printed in black. This tagging matches exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all lettering on this jersey is original and untampered with. It has all the correct elements of a team issued jersey. It exhibits moderate wash use with graying and curling of the tags and puckering of the twill lettering. There is a reddish stain of unknown origin on the back below the number 1.

Conclusion: This jersey is properly stitched and in all ways matches exemplars. It has no signs of contrivance. It is properly sized for the individual and shows a season of wear when used by a coach. In my opinion this is an authentic game worn 1994 jersey of Orioles bench coach Don Buford.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Billy Ripken 1992 Orioles Game Used Orange Alternate Jersey

Examination Date: December 8, 2020 Certification Number: 20-1217J13

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Bright orange, six button, size 44 Russell Baltimore Orioles alternate jersey, issued to #3 Billy Ripken. Sewn-in black/orange/black 1" knit sleeve end trim. Orange two-hole buttons, "Orioles" script with underline slanted across both front panels in black outlined with white. Player lettering is also in the same two colors, #3 on the left chest and centered on the back. Name on back "RIPKEN" is radially arched on a matching orange nameplate with surged edges. Size 44 is appropriate for use by Bill Ripken and matches exemplars.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Russell "Diamond Collection" tail locker tag in the style used 1992-1994, small 100% polyester flag tap pinched underneath, and without neck size tag as is correct for team issue. Rectangular white knit team tag sewn below the Russell tail tag with a bold 92-1 printed on it in Plastisol ink, indicating 1992, set 1.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows appropriate wear commensurate with an alternate jersey's season's worth of occasional use. There is some graying of the white twill elements from washing, ands minor puckering of the sewn elements and tagging, as well as some orange-color bleed-through onto the Orioles wordmark outlining as is commonly seen on this model game jersey. A light table examination shows that all sewn elements are original and without alteration. There is some yellowish brown staining on the "N" on the back name.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged, lettered, and numbered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It exhibits game use and wash wear, and appears to have no alterations of any kind. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine and was worn by Billy Ripken of the Baltimore Orioles during the 1992 season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Cal Ripken 1989 Baltimore Orioles Gray Road Game Jersey

Examination Date: February 23, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0223J06

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Gray, six button, size 46 (marked and measured) with special 3" extra length tailoring noted, Rawlings Baltimore Orioles road jersey, issued for #8 Cal Ripken. Sewn-on orange/black/orange 1/2" knit sleeve end trim. Grey pearl four-hole buttons, "Orioles" script with underline slanted across both front panels in black tackle twill outlined with orange. A supplemental Velcro closure is included on the placket under the middle "O" in Orioles. Player name and number lettering is in the same two colors. #8 on the left chest and centered on the back, name on back "RIPKEN" is radially arched in the correct Rawlings name font used by the team, in the proper arc on a matching gray nameplate with surged edges and proper borders. The jersey is 36" in length, reflecting the marked special tailoring.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings white rectangular locker tag in the style used in 1989, small white "3 Inch Extra Length" tag pinched underneath the bottom edge. "Set 1 1989" white flag tab is pinch-sewn under the right edge. Rawlings logo script is direct-embroidered in black thread near the end of the right sleeve. Size 46 with tapered tailoring and three inches extra length (Size 46 is a reasonable size for Ripken in 1989, he wore 44 jerseys earlier, and soon thereafter wore exclusively size 48. Ripken always specified extra length, though the general designation seen on other jerseys for him is typically 2")

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all lettering on this jersey is original and untampered with. It has all the correct elements of a team issued jersey matching exemplars, and displays signs of use and wash-wear. The tagging is relatively crisp, the lettering is all slightly softened, mildly puckered and with a few frayed edges and loose threads.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged and lettered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It is clearly team-prepared to the exact player specifications of Cal Ripken, and has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine team issue prepared for Cal Ripken of the Baltimore Orioles in the 1989 season, and shows use.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Bill Ripken 1991 Orioles Road Gray Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: February 23, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0223J05

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Gray, six button, size 42 (marked and measured) Rawlings Baltimore Orioles road jersey, issued to #3 Billy Ripken. Sewn-in orange/black/orange 1/2" sewn-in (not sewn on top) knit sleeve end trim, a style unique to 1991. Grey pearl four-hole buttons, "Orioles" script with underline slanted across both front panels in black tackle twill outlined with orange. A supplemental Velcro closure is included on the placket under the middle "O" in Orioles. Player name and number lettering is in the same two colors. #3 on the left chest and centered on the back, name on back "RIPKEN" is radially arched in the correct Rawlings name font used by the team, in the proper arc on a matching gray nameplate with serged edges and proper width borders. Bill Ripken wore size 42 and 44 jerseys, so the size is deemed reasonable for his use. This jersey appears to be a clubhouse creation, and not one player-lettered at Rawlings. Several factors lead me to this conclusion. First, the numbers are sewn-through to the jersey with both colors of thread, and are done somewhat hurriedly and sloppily with rounded off corners that are not typical of work done at Rawlings. Secondly, the back number is sewn far lower than the team template, almost 11 inches from the collar. Finally, the nameplate is sewn crooked, clocked slightly to the right.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings white locker tag in the style used in 1991 is stitched inside the left front tail. Set 1 1991 white flag tab is pinch-sewn on its right edge. Rawlings logo script is direct-embroidered in black thread near the end of the right sleeve. Team tagging matches exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all lettering on this jersey is original and untampered with. As noted, the numbers have been stitched through to the jersey with both colors of thread, somewhat less crisply than typical, and some of the thread on the front number has worn away from use It has all the correct elements of a team issued jersey, and displays strong and obvious signs of use, including burnished lettering, thread wear/bleaching, and loose strings with frayed edges on the lettering.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged, and lettered. It is team-prepared for Billy Ripken, and has no alterations or contrivances of any kind, and shows strong use. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine team issue prepared for Billy Ripken of the Baltimore Orioles in the 1991 season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

B.J. Surhoff 1997 Baltimore Orioles Autographed Game Worn Home Jersey

Examination Date: February 23, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0223J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: White Russell Diamond Collection size 48 with 2" extra length tailoring, (both size and tailoring are measured as marked) full weight knit, 6-button Baltimore Orioles home jersey , #17 B.J. Surhoff. Orioles wordmark slanted upwards with underline on the front in layered black over orange twill, 3/16" black knit sewn on the placket and on each sleeve end 1" from the end. On the left sleeve, the proper "Ornithologically Correct bird" Oriole team patch as used in 1997, sewn higher than usual that year to allow the 1997-only Baltimore 200 patch to be stitched below. Jackie Robinson "Breaking Barriers" patch is stitched to the right sleeve. These characteristics all match Orioles home jerseys used in 1997. Orange over black player number 17 on front left chest and again in black over orange centered on back; player name sewn arched above on a serged-edge plate on back in the same colors. All fonts match team patterns.

The jersey is autographed in black Sharpie on the front below the numbers. I have no professional opinion on the autograph. The jersey is accompanied by a 1998-dated photocopied certificate designating that the jersey was won in a 1998 FanFest silent auction, it identifies "BJ Surhoff Autographed 1997 Jersey", without reference to game use, and it is not serialized or otherwise linked to the jersey, however I would reasonably assume it is legitimate and belongs with this jersey. In the 11 season of his 19 year MLB career, in 1997 Surhoff batted .284 with 18 home runs.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Russell Diamond collection locker tag in the correct style for use in 1997 noting the size as 48 is stitched to the outer left front tail. There is no neck size flag-tag, and a 100% polyester flag tab its sewn pinched below the locker tag- both hallmarks of team-spec and issued jerseys. Layered under the 100% polyester tag is a tag noting 2" Extra Body Length. A rectangular white mylar-fabric tag is stitched beneath the Russell locker tag, on it is "1997" in very faded black matrix printing, again matching other examples in our library of 1997 team issue. The Russell R logo is embroidered to the end of the right sleeve and shows fading to a purplish tint, characteristic of the jersey being washed with bleach.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all sewn elements are original without signs of alteration. The jersey shows heavy use. All elements are firmly attached and show some puckering, The tagging is heavily faded, frayed and curled. There is a notable 1"fabric pull on the back between the numbers, and there is a great deal of fabric piling on the right chest that is typical of wear from repetitive batting motion.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good but well-used condition, is properly lettered, and has no alterations of any kind. It has correct team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made for and worn by B.J. Surhoff of the 1997 Baltimore Orioles.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Albert Belle 1999 Baltimore Orioles Autographed Game Model Jersey

Examination Date: June 21, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0621J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: White Russell Diamond Collection size 50 with extra length tailoring, full weight knit, 6-button Baltimore Orioles home jersey , #88 Albert Belle. Orioles wordmark slanted upwards with underline on the front in layered black over orange twill, 3/16" black knit sewn on the placket and on each sleeve end 1" from the end. "Lifelike bird" Oriole team patch sewn to left sleeve. These characteristics all match Orioles road jerseys used in 1999. Orange over black player number 88 on front left chest and in black over orange centered on back; player name on back in the same colors, arched above. Game-worn 1999 Orioles jerseys had the memorial number "7" for Cal Ripken Sr. sewn on the right sleeve all season. This jersey is missing the memorial, and there is no sign that it had ever been sewn there. The jersey is autographed between the back numbers, between the name and numbers. (I have no opinion on the autograph.) Size 50 with extra length is a reasonable size for Belle to have worn in 1999, he wore 48 and 50s both with and without extra length throughout his career. This jersey measures nearly 36" in length, which reflects the special tailoring shown on the tagging.

Belle joined the Orioles in 1999 to much fanfare after a celebrated career as a slugger with both the Indians and White Sox. He played well in 1999-2000 with the O's; in 1999 161 games with 37 home runs and a .297 average. Unfortunately, he was forced into retirement at age 34 after the 2000 season by degenerative hip osteoarthritis. (Wikipedia)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Russell Diamond collection locker tag in the correct style for use in 1999 noting the size as 50 is stitched to the outer left front tail. There is no neck size flag-tag, and a 100% polyester flag tab its sewn pinched below the locker tag- both hallmarks of team-spec and issued jerseys. Layered under the 100% polyester tag is a tag noting 2" Extra Body Length. A rectangular white mylar-fabric tag is stitched beneath the Russell locker tag, on it is "1999" in unfaded black matrix printing, again matching other examples in our library of 1999 team issue.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all sewn elements are original without signs of alteration. The jersey shows very light use if any. All elements are still crisp including the tagging which is very slightly curled.

Conclusion: While the jersey is properly lettered and sized, including the special tailoring for Belle, the fact that it is missing the sleeve memorial patch makes it very unlikely that it was ever worn on field. The Orioles wore the #7 sleeve memorial every game of the 1999 season. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made for Albert Belle of the 1999 Baltimore Orioles but that it was not game worn.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Albert Belle 2000 Baltimore Orioles Home Game Jersey

Examination Date: February 23, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0223J04

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: White Majestic Authentic Collection size 50 with extra-length tailoring observed but not marked; full weight knit, 6-button Baltimore Orioles home jersey , #88 Albert Belle. Orioles wordmark slanted upwards with underline on the front in layered black over orange twill, 3/16" black knit sewn on the placket and on each sleeve end 1" from the end. Correct "Lifelike bird" Oriole team patch sewn to left sleeve. MLB Silhouetted Batter patch stitched to the center of the back of the neck, as first used in 2000. These characteristics all match Orioles home jerseys used in 2000. Orange over black player number 88 on front left chest and in black over orange centered on back; player name on back in the same colors, arched above, direct sewn and without a nameplate. Belle wore wore sizes 48 and 50, both with and without extra length throughout his career. This jersey measures 35" in length, which is 1" longer than standard. The jersey was presented without provenance.

Belle joined the Orioles in 1999 to much fanfare after a celebrated career as a slugger with both the Indians and White Sox. He played well in 1999-2000 with the O's; in 2000, appearing in 141 games with 23 home runs and a .281 batting average. Unfortunately, he was forced into retirement at age 34 after the 2000 season by degenerative hip osteoarthritis. (Wikipedia)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Majestic Authentic Collection locker tag in the correct style for use in 2000 (Majestic's first year as the team uniform supplier) noting the size as 50 is stitched to the outer left front tail. There is no neck size flag-tag. 2000 Orioles jerseys were not set, year or player tagged in any way by Majestic. On the inside side seam is pinched the white fabric garment style tag that shows the jersey model as "0062" in barely legible print due to washing and fraying. This code appears on jerseys made to team specs for player use.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all sewn elements are original without signs of alteration. The jersey shows strong wash and wear use. All elements are slightly puckered, significantly softened and with frayed edges indicating many washings.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good, well-used condition, is properly lettered, and has no alterations of any kind. While there is no team tagging as is correct for 2000, It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made for use by Albert Belle of the 2000 Baltimore Orioles.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Rafael Palmeiro 1998 Baltimore Orioles Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: June 30, 2021 Certification Number: 20-0630J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Gray Russell Diamond Collection size 46 (marked and measured) full-weight knit 6-button Baltimore Orioles road jersey , #25 Rafael Palmeiro. Orioles wordmark slanted upwards with underline on the front in layered orange, black and white twill, sewn black soutache is sewn ringing each sleeve, 1" from the end. 1998-only "Robin-style bird" Oriole team patch sewn to left sleeve. These characteristics all match Orioles road jerseys used in 1998. Player number 25 on front left chest and centered on back; player name on back arched above. All player specific lettering in orange over black. I will note that the player nameplate on back does not have a serged edge as is generally standard for Orioles jerseys that year, and is instead sewn to the shirt along its raw edge with a tight zig zag stitch. The plate is made of the proper fabric and all other aspects are consistent; I would judge this to be a simple and acceptable abnormality.

In 1998, he played in all 162 games for the Orioles and batting .296 with 43 home runs; was selected to the American League All-Star team, and won both Gold Glove and Silver Slugger awards that season. During his career, Palmeiro was named to the MLB All-Star Team four times, and won the Gold Glove three times. He is one of only seven players in MLB history to be a member of both the 500 home run club and the 3,000 hit club. (Baseball Almanac, Wikipedia)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Russell Diamond collection locker tag in the correct style for use in 1998 noting the size as 46 is stitched to the outer left front tail. There is no neck size flag-tag, and a 100% polyester flag tab its sewn pinched below the locker tag, a rectangular white fabric tag is stitched beneath the Russell locker tag, on it is "1998" in black matrix printing, again matching other examples in our library of 1998 team issue. In 1998 the Orioles did not designate player names, numbers or set numbers on jersey tagging, only the 4-digit year. The Russell "R" trademark is embroidered in black on the right sleeve end.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all sewn elements are original without signs of alteration. It shows signs of obvious use.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in excellent condition, is properly lettered, and has no alterations of any kind. It has correct team-issue tagging and displays appropriate use. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was issued to and used by Raphael Palmeiro of the 1998 Baltimore Orioles.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Jeff Conine 1999 Baltimore Orioles Game Used Autographed Road jersey

Examination Date:December 8. 2020 Certification Number: 20-1217J11

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Gray Russell Diamond Collection size 48, full weight knit 6-button Baltimore Orioles road jersey , #18 Jeff Conine. Orioles wordmark slanted upwards with underline on the front in layered orange, black and white twill, sewn black soutache rings each sleeve end 1" from the end. "Lifelike bird" Oriole team patch sewn to left sleeve. These characteristics all match Orioles road jerseys used in 1999. Player number 18 on front left chest and centered on back; player name on back arched above. All player specific lettering in orange over black. "7" black memorial stitched to the right sleeve, 1999-only memorial for Cal Ripken Sr. The jersey is autographed "Jeff Conine 18" on the back "8". (I have no opinion on the autograph.) Size 48 is a reasonable size for Conine to have worn in 1999.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Russell Diamond collection locker tag in the correct style for use in 1999 noting the size as 48 is stitched to the outer left front tail. There is no neck size flag-tag, and a 100% polyester flag tab its sewn pinched below the locker tag- both hallmarks of team-spec and issued jerseys. A rectangular white mylar-fabric tag is stitched beneath the Russell locker tag, on it is "1999" in faded black matrix printing, again matching other examples in our library of 1999 team issue.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all sewn elements are original without signs of alteration. The jersey shows moderately heavy wear indicating a full season of use. While it displays well, all of the lettering is puckered and faded, with softened edges and loose threads, all showing evidence of being washed many times. The thread holding the memorial 7 on the sleeve has been mostly bleached to white. The bottommost shirt button is missing.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good, well-used condition, is properly lettered, and numbered, and has no alterations of any kind. It has correct team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made for and worn by Jeff Conine of the 1999 Baltimore Orioles.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Earl Weaver 1980 Baltimore Orioles Road Gray Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: August 1, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0801J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Gray, size 40 (marked and measured) Baltimore Orioles Wilson-made seven-button jersey of #4, manager Earl Weaver. Black/white/orange 1- 3/4" sewn-in knit sleeve end trim, black/orange 1" V-neck trim. "Orioles" script slanted on the front in orange over black, layered twill. Number 4 on the left front and on the back center, correct Wilson font 4 1/4" on the front, 6 1/8" on the back. Name on back WEAVER is vertically arched in the unique font and style used on Orioles road jerseys, and sewn to an gray nameplate that is un-hemmed and was originally zig zag stitched to the back. The jersey is autographed on the front left. (I have no opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.) A unique feature of many Weaver's jerseys is the custom-inclusion of a hand-made pocket sewn inside the jersey behind the front number for his ever-present pack of Raleigh cigarettes. (See comments on pocket, below.) There are multiple examples of authenticated size 40 Weaver jerseys in our exemplar library. The jersey is autographed by Weaver on the lower left tail in black marker; I have no professional opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.

Regarding the identifiable characteristics of this jersey- 1980 was the final year of Wilson making the team's road jerseys and 1978-1980 road jerseys had nameplates, where prior years did not. The Wilson fonts are used for the numbers and the hand-drawn vertical arched name on back appear authentic and hand cut as was the way these were made back in the day. Talking to those who were there at the time, the Orioles were notoriously frugal and elected not to invest in die cut patterns for team lettering, so the team script was created using a velum/tissue paper pattern dusted with powder then cut out with a sharp pair of scissors. Additionally, all of the black outlines for lettering were hand cut without any patterns, the orange lettering was stitched to a black background, and then someone with a pair of scissors simply cut the outlines by eye.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson tag showing heavy abrasion wear in the correct style for 1980 showing the size 40, correct for Weaver, is stitched into the inside back of the collar. A small rectangle of the same gray jersey fabric is stitched to the outside lower left tail with "80 1" (1980 set 1) hand-chain stitched in the familiar handwriting of the Wilson factory stitcher, with the embroidery thread showing fading from washing.

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Wear & Repairs: While the jersey fabric seams are still tight, the knit sleeve end trim is still bright and the jersey fabric is not severely bleached, faded or damaged otherwise. this jersey shows heavy wear, evidenced by near total sewn-element thread-failure on both the back and front. Nearly all of the zig-zag stitching has failed, that had originally attached the layers of the twill lettering to each other, the lettering to the jersey, the name lettering to the nameplate, and the nameplate to the jersey back. However, a light table examination shows that all sewn lettering elements are original and unaltered, in that there are no ghosts of other lettering ever having been on this jersey. To mitigate the stitching loss, all of the lettering has been spot re-sewn with straight stitches of black or orange thread to keep things from falling completely off the shirt. This includes restitching the name on back, in spots, straight through the nameplate and onto the jersey. The shirt is missing its buttons 2 and 3 from the top. There is significant dirt/sweat staining to the linen placket lining inside the back of the collar, but the stitching remains intact as does the fabric of the lining.

Additional Observations: My observation on the wear to this jersey is that it is unusual to see such massive thread failure without corresponding failure to other stitched elements of the jersey including the linen lining. Some plausible explanation may be from the fact that, as the manager, Weaver was probably easy on his uniforms, probably wore this uniform all year, and they likely received far more wear in the washing machine then they did from any use on the field. Nevertheless it is uncommon to see this sort of fraying and missing thread around stitched elements on a jersey that does not itself show more fading and other wear. It is also entirely possible that the thread that was used to stitch this originally was of a substandard quality and disintegrated more rapidly than would be expected in the wash. Two common and plausible explanations for the advanced wear to a jersey could be offered, but neither play out for this one. The first is that he could have worn this jersey for more than one season. That is highly unlikely considering that in 1981 the Orioles switched to Rawlings as their road supplier and the fonts of the numbers changed notably. 1981-dated photos of Weaver on the field show him wearing an updated uniform. At best it was used again in spring training of 1981 before being retired. The second way that a uniform could gain this type of excessive wear like this is from being demoted to the minor leagues where it could've been used over and over again. But because I don't believe the WEAVER nameplate was ever removed from this jersey, which makes it highly unlikely if not strictly improbable that this jersey ever found its way to the minor leagues.

Notice the thread failure and subsequent "repairs" made with haphazard straight stitching

One item that I must call out is the cigarette packet in inside the front of the jersey behind the player number. I do not believe that this element was original to the shirt. The fabric does not exactly match the color or texture of the rest of the jersey or the nameplate, and most importantly when the pocket is pulled open inside you can see that beneath it the stitching on the numbers has been touched up just like it has on the rest of the shirt. It is impossible to stitch through the jersey without also going through the pocket: meaning to me that the pocket was not present when the jersey stitching was touched up. A light table examination does not show clear evidence of stitching from another pocket having been here before, though it is possible another one was there with its perimeter falling inside of the one stitched in place now. There is also a very small hole at the top right corner that could have come from the removal of the original pocket. The stitching that was used to hold this in place is a very tiny straight stitch, and given the amount of wash –wear that there is on this jersey it is entirely possible that an original pocket could've been here, was removed and replaced. I do not see any other stitching holes. I can only conclude that this specific pocket is not original to this garment.

Below, notice more examples of thread repair and the detail of the cigarette pocket. For the stitching behind the pocket to have been repaired in this manner, the pocket would have had to have been absent from the shirt. I do not see clear signs of an earlier pocket having been there unless its outline falls inside the perimeter of the current pocket sewn there. It is possible that the small hole marked with a green circle is from the removal of an earlier pocket, but this is not confirmed.*

I emphasize that I do not engage in professional photo matching however an undated photograph on Getty Images showing Weaver engaging in his favorite practice of arguing with an umpire, the back of the jersey is clearly visible and has many points of distinct commonality with the jersey in review, which I have highlighted below for your consideration.

At left, an unaltered photo from Getty Images showing Weaver in "discussion" with an umpire (Getty #718045231H3394.JPG) which shows matching characteristics of the nameplate shape, letter spacing and number shape and placement of all elements that are worth noting. Notice also the small dark stain highlighted with a white circle visible on both images. The hand-cut back number 4 has distinctly uneven "feet", matching on both.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in overall fair condition (jersey body is good, lettering is poor) showing heavy use and many examples of what I would say are team repairs. It has a team-issue style tagging. Its wear is unusual, because while the jersey body is in good condition, nearly all of the thread attaching the sewn on lettering elements has failed, old thread has been pulled out in places and all the lettering has been roughly and sloppily touched up with what I would describe as clubhouse-quality stitching. I do not believe the cigarette pocket inside the front is original to the garment. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Earl Weaver of the 1980 Baltimore Orioles.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Dennis Martinez 1981 Baltimore Orioles Gray Road Game Jersey

Examination Date: April 1, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0401J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Gray, six button, size 42 (marked and measured) with special 1" extra length tailoring tagging, though at 35" in length, the jersey is actually 2-3" longer than standard, Rawlings Baltimore Orioles road jersey, issued for #30, pitcher Dennis Martinez. Sewn-in black/white/ orange 1 7/8" knit sleeve end trim and 7/8" black/orange knit neck trim, Grey pearl four-hole buttons, "Orioles" script with underline slanted across both front panels in orange tackle twill outlined with black. Player name and number lettering is in the Rawlings fonts and in the same two colors. #30 on the left chest and centered on the back, name on back "D. MARTINEZ" is radially arched in the extra-condensed Rawlings name font (the first initial added because pitcher Tippy Martinez was on the roster also during the early 1980s), in the proper arc on an exactly matching gray nameplate with a single needle surged edge and with proper width borders. Until I handled this jersey, I was unaware the Orioles used the extra condensed font for long player names on 1981 player jerseys, but a period photo of Martinez verifies that indeed they did.

Dennis Martinez enjoyed a long and productive 23 year career pitching for five teams in MLB 1976-1998. A four-time All-Star, he was the first Nicaraguan to play in the majors. In 1981 he appeared in 25 games, all but one as a starter. He compiled a 14-5 record with a 3.32 ERA and 88 strike outs, having nine complete games with two shutouts. He led the American League in wins that year. The final three years of his career he held the record as the oldest player in the majors (1996–1998).

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings red rectangular "The Mark of a Pro" locker tag in the style used in 1981 is stitched on the inside of the bottom right tail, small white "1 Inch Extra Length" tag pinched underneath the bottom edge. "Set 1 1981" white flag tab is pinch-sewn under the right edge. A survey of Martinez jerseys worn throughout his long career show that his size increased dramatically, from size 40 in his early career to size 48 twenty-three years later at his career's end. This one is consistently sized with others in our survey library from this stage of his career.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all lettering on this jersey, including the nameplate, is original and untampered with. It has all the correct elements of a team issued jersey matching exemplars, and displays strong use and wash-wear. The tagging is wrinkled and worn, the lettering is all slightly softened, mildly puckered and with a few frayed edges and loose threads. There is little to no puckering of the fabric behind the lettering and alls stitching is still tight and unbleached. There is a 1" diagonal pale white streak on the back jersey tail that may be paint or glue. It appears that this jersey was pulled from service at season's end and avoided a second tour of service in the minor leagues which was the fate of most Orioles MLB issues.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged and lettered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It is team-prepared to the exact player specifications of Dennis Martinez, and has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine team issue and game used, prepared for Dennis Martinez of the Baltimore Orioles in the 1981 season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Chapter 27

San Diego Padres

Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys

1970-2025, Tenth Edition

This Chapter Includes all Padres Jerseys 1969-2025

William F. Henderson

Padres Uniform History Notes

- The Padres franchise joined Major League Baseball in 1969, taking the name of the Pacific Coast League team that had called San Diego home since 1936. The PCL Padres gave many MLB players their starts -- among them, Ted Williams.
- The team's 1969 inaugural uniforms were given subdued colors; with all lettering brown with gold outlines. The home flannel jersey was cream colored, and the road jerseys were tan flannel—unique in the major leagues, where road uniforms were usually either gray or blue-gray. The only other MLB team that wore tan on the road was the 1937 Dodgers.
- The Padres spent their first three years in flannel, and switched to knits for the 1972 season.
- Many MLB teams slipped into the double knit era almost unnoticed, by taking their flannel looks and adapting them without much change to the new miracle fabric. But the Padres were wild innovators. Leaving behind a traditional style of flannel home and road uniforms in 1971, the Padres' 1972 uniforms were the talk of baseball.
- The new uniforms featured screaming banana-yellow pants and jerseys, with bold brown lettering on the front, adorned with wide brown trim and sleeve stripes. Home and road uniforms were identical, except for the lettering on the front. No other team in baseball could be confused with these giant yellow and brown canaries when they took the field.
- But the Padres could not stick with a design to save their souls. Tampering with the uniform nearly every year, the team wore a dizzying array of styles during the next two decades. Even batting practice jerseys changed frequently within the "run" of a particular uniform style. In a chapter preface, I normally attempt to give a year-to-year narrative; but for the Padres I suggest you peruse the chapter to note all the changes.
- The team had six distinct uniform design identities during the 1970s, utilizing 14 different game jerseys. They changed their look two more times during the 1980s, then perhaps amazingly, kept the same basic team identity from 1991 through 2003.
- They went from traditional to wild and Mod during the 1970s and 1980s, then back to traditional for the 1990s and trendy for the 2000s; then back to traditional for 2012. Ironically, even with all of these changes, the Padres' lineup featured few alternate jerseys until 1997.
- Oddly, given all this variety, the team didn't host its first Turn Back the Clock game until 1998.
- 1991 was an identity pivot year, as it was the first time ever that brown was absent from team jerseys, after yellow was previously relegated in 1985. For the next 13 years, through 2003, navy blue and orange would become the dominant colors, ushering in a long period of relatively conservative (at least by Padres standards) uniforms.
- A solid blue alternate is introduced in 1997 and would remain in the team's rotation despite numerous changes until 2019.
- In 2004, sand is introduced to the palette and becomes one of the teams primary colors through 2011, including a unique sand-colored road jersey.
- The 2012-2019 brings a return to traditional (boring?) jersey designs, certainly not indicative of the eccentric Padres we had come to know.
- 2016 does bring some intrigue with a one-year home design that incorporates yellow trim, along with a new nostalgic brown alternate jersey, the first time brown is seen on a Padres uniform in 26 years.
- The 2020 season brings a full redesign that restores brown as the primary color, along with yellow trim, much to the pleasure of Padres fans. The set includes a brown primary road jersey and a pinstriped white home and tan road alternate with new lettering in custom fonts. The fonts are carried over to two new camo jerseys, one in tan and one in forest green. A new "Swingin' Friar" patch appears on all jerseys as well.
- Speaking of camo jerseys, the Padres are the unquestionable leader in this category, having worn them at least once every season since 1996. They were also the first team to ever wear them in a game. Camos have officially been in their regular jersey lineup since 2007 and since 2016 have had two different colored camo jerseys in rotation. Apropos, as San Diego is home to a high number of military personnel.
- 2022 brings City Connect uniforms, a radical departure from the traditional team color palette, embracing vibrant neon colors to celebrate the cultural blend of San Diego and Baja California. The design features hot pink and mint green sleeves, a "SAN DIEGO" chest wordmark in a custom font reminiscent of palm trees, and yellow accents on the collar and nameplate. Numbers are outlined in a subtle horizontal gradient, and player names appear in yellow with a soft drop shadow. While colorful and full of flair, the jerseys were also widely noted for being difficult to read on the field.
- Of all the teams researched, the Padres were arguably the most difficult. They are the all-time champs of "look" makeovers, new logos, multiple uniform varieties, and yearly uniform changes. When you consider that San Diego is a smaller market than many, with the team rarely in contention, finding older period color game photos is challenging.

I am always looking for new information and better photographs. If you can share new information, or offer corrections to this material, please send a note to me, at gameworngnuides@gmail.com. Please tell me which page you are referencing. All contributors will be recognized by name in a future edition.

© GameWornGuides.com

Year by Year Summary

Padres Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1969	Home White Flannel	No	Block with Serifs 2-color	No	-	MLB Centennial		Rawlings
	Road Tan "Padres"	No	Varsity 2 color	No	-	San Diego 200th Anniv		Wilson
	Road Tan "San Diego"	No	Varsity 2 color	No	-	San Diego 200th Anniv		Wilson
1970	Home White Flannel	No	Block with Serifs 2-color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Tan "Padres"	No	Varsity 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road Tan "San Diego"	No	Varsity 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1971	Home White Flannel	No	Block with Serifs 2-color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Tan Flannel	No	Varsity 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1972	Home Gold	No	Modified Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings*
	Road Gold	No	Modified Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1973	Home Gold	No	Modified Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings*
	Road Gold	No	Modified Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1974	Home White	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Vertical Arch 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Block 2 color	Modified Varsity 2 color	Vertical Arch 2 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1975	Home White	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Vertical Arch 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings/Wilson
	Road Gray	Block 2 color	Modified Varsity 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1976	Home White	Sand Knit Varsity 2 clr	Sand Knit Modified Varsity 2 color	Vertical Arch 2 Color	Yes	-	NL Centennial	Sand-Knit
	Road Brown	No	Modified Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	NL Centennial	Wilson
1977	Home White	Sand Knit Varsity 2 color	Sand Knit Varsity 2 Color	Vertical Arch 2 Color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road Brown	No	Modified Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1978	Home White	Padres Mod 2 color	Padres Mod 2 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	All Star Game	Wilson
	Road Brown	Padres Mod 1 color	Padres Mod 1 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	All Star Game	Wilson
	Alternate Yellow	Padres Mod 1 color	Padres Mod 1 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	All Star Game	Wilson
1979	Home White	Padres Mod 2 color	Padres Mod 2 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road Brown	Padres Mod 2 color	Padres Mod 2 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	-	Wilson

* I have seen several Wilson jerseys of the 1972-1973 style but without team tagging. I strongly suspect that these were salesman's samples and not game used jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

1991-2001

1991-2003

1998-2003

1997-2003

The Gwynn patch was worn October 2-7 only.

Padres Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1980	Home White	-	Padres Mod 3 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road Brown	-	Padres Mod 2 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1981	Home White	-	Padres Mod 3 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road Brown	-	Padres Mod 2 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1982	Home White	-	Padres Mod 3 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road Brown	-	Padres Mod 2 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1983	Home White	-	Padres Mod 3 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road Brown	-	Padres Mod 2 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1984	Home White	-	Padres Mod 3 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	RAK Memorial	-	Wilson
	Road Brown	-	Padres Mod 2 color	Vertical Arch 1 Color	Yes	RAK Memorial	-	Wilson
1985	Home White PS	No	Padres New Font 2 color	Padres New Font 2 color	No	RAK Memorial	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Padres New Font 2 color	Padres New Font 2 color	No	RAK Memorial	-	Wilson
1986	Home White PS	No	Padres New Font 2 color	Padres New Font 2 color	No	RAK Memorial	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Padres New Font 2 color	Padres New Font 2 color	No	RAK Memorial	-	Wilson
1987	Home White PS	No	Padres New Font 2 color	Padres New Font 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	No	Padres New Font 2 color	Padres New Font 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
1988	Home White PS	No	Padres New Font 2 color	Padres New Font 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	No	Padres New Font 2 color	Padres New Font 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
1989	Home White PS	No	Padres New Font 2 color	Padres New Font 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	No	Padres New Font 2 color	Padres New Font 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
1990	Home White PS	No	Padres New Font 2 color	Padres New Font 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	No	Padres New Font 2 color	Padres New Font 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
1991	Home White PS	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	-	-	Goodman
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
1992	Home White PS	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	All-Star Game	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	All-Star Game	-	Russell
1993	Home White PS	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres 25th Anniv	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres 25th Anniv	-	Russell
1994	Home White PS	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	-	MLB 125th Anniv	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	-	MLB 125th Anniv	Russell
1995	Home White PS	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	-	-	Russell
1996	Home White PS	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
1997	Home White PS	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	Jackie Robinson	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	Jackie Robinson	Russell
	Alt Navy	No	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	No	Swinging Friar	Jackie Robinson	Russell
1998	Home White PS	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
	Alt White	No	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
	Alt Navy	No	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	No	Swinging Friar	-	Russell
1999	Home White PS	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres 30 years	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres 30 years	-	Russell
	Alt White	Dodgers bold 1 color	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres 30 years	-	Russell
	Alt Navy	Dodgers bold 1 color	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres 30 years	-	Russell
2000	Home White PS	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
	Alt White	Dodgers bold 1 color	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
	Alt Navy	Dodgers bold 1 color	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
2001	Home White	Dodgers bold 1 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	Gwynn Patch	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
	Home White PS	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
	Alt Navy	Dodgers bold 1 color	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	No	-	Gwynn Patch	Russell
2002	Home White	Dodgers bold 2 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	M Darr 26 Mem	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	M Darr 26 Mem	Russell
	Alt Navy	Dodgers bold 1 color	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	No	-	M Darr 26 Mem	Russell
2003	Home White	Dodgers bold 1 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Padres Team Disc	-	Russell
	Alt Navy	Dodgers bold 1 color	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	No	-	-	Russell

© GameWornGuides.com

Padres Game Jerseys

2004-2011

2004-2010

2004-2011

2007-2010

2011 ONLY

2011-2015

Style ends with 2011

Style continues onward

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2004	Home White	No	Padres Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Road Tan	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Alt Navy	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Swinging Friar	-	Majestic
2005	Home White	No	Padres Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Road Tan	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Alt Navy	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Swinging Friar	-	Majestic
2006	Home White	No	Padres Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Road Tan	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Alt Navy	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Swinging Friar	American Flag	Majestic
2007	Home White	No	Padres Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Road Tan	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Alt Navy	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Swinging Friar	-	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage (x)	No	Padres Block 1 color	Block 1 color	No	"SD" Logo	American Flag	Majestic
2008	Home White	No	Padres Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Road Tan	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Alt Navy	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Swinging Friar	-	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage	No	Padres Block 1 color	Block 1 color	No	"SD" Logo	American Flag	Majestic
2009	Home White	No	Padres Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	40th Anniversary	Majestic
	Road Tan	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	40th Anniversary	Majestic
	Alt Navy	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Swinging Friar	40th Anniversary	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage	No	Padres Block 1 color	Block 1 color	No	"SD" Logo		Majestic
2010	Home White	No	Padres Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Road Tan	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Alt Navy	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Swinging Friar	-	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage	No	Padres Block 1 color	Block 1 color	No	"SD" Logo	American Flag	Majestic
2011	Home White	No	Padres Block 3 color	Block 1 color	No	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Road Gray (change from tan)	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	No	Team Shield	-	Majestic
	Alt Navy	No	Padres Bock 2 color	Block 1 color	No	Swinging Friar	-	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage	No	Padres Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	American Flag	"SD" Logo	Majestic

(x) The Camouflage jerseys had been worn only once per year 2006 and prior; 2007 was the first time the team listed them in the MLB Style Guide as an official alternate jersey choice.

There were no fewer than 45 varieties of Padres game jerseys 1972 through 2025, including camouflage game jerseys, but not counting special events and batting practice jerseys. How many can you identify from this peek into the closet?

© GameWornGuides.com

Padres Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2012	Home White	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	"48" disk*	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	Padres Secondary Logo	"48" disk*	Majestic
	Alt Navy	No	Varsity 1 color	Padres Block 1 color	No	Padres Secondary Logo	"48" disk*	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	American Flag/"48" disk	"SD" Logo	Majestic
2013	Home White	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	Padres Secondary Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Navy	No	Varsity 1 color	Padres Block 1 color	No	Padres Secondary Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	American Flag	"SD" Logo	Majestic
2014	Home White	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	JC patch sleeve/"19" left chest	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	Padres Secondary Logo	JC patch sleeve/"19" left chest	Majestic
	Alt Navy	No	Varsity 1 color	Padres Block 1 color	No	Padres Secondary Logo	JC patch sleeve/"19" left chest	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	American Flag/JC patch	"SD" Logo, "19" left chest	Majestic
2015	Home White	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	Padres Secondary Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Navy	No	Varsity 1 color	Padres Block 1 color	No	Padres Secondary Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	American Flag	"SD" Logo	Majestic
2016	Home White "SD"	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	2016 All Star Game	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	2016 All Star Game	-	Majestic
	Alt Home Brown	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 1 color	No	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue SD	No	Varsity 1 color	Padres Block 1 color	No	2016 All Star Game	-	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage (Brown)	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	American Flag	"SD" Logo	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage (Blue)	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	American Flag	-	Majestic
2017	Home White "Padres"	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	"SD" Logo	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	"SD" Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Home Brown	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 1 color	No	"SD" Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue SD	No	Varsity 1 color	Padres Block 1 color	No	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage (Brown)	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	American Flag	"SD" Logo	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage (Blue)	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	American Flag	"SD" Logo	Majestic
2018	Home White "Padres"	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	"SD" Logo	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	"SD" Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Home Brown	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 1 color	No	"SD" Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue SD	No	Varsity 1 color	Padres Block 1 color	No	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage (Brown)	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	American Flag	"SD" Logo	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage (Blue)	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	American Flag	"SD" Logo	Majestic
2019	Home White "Padres"	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	"SD" Logo	50th Anniversary/MLB 150th	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	"SD" Logo	50th Anniversary/MLB 150th	Majestic
	Alt Home Brown	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 1 color	No	"SD" Logo	50th Anniversary/MLB 150th	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue SD	No	Varsity 1 color	Padres Block 1 color	No	-	50th Anniversary/MLB 150th	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage (Brown)	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	American Flag	50th Anniversary/MLB 150th	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage (Blue)	No	Varsity 2 color	Padres Block 2 color	No	American Flag	50th Anniversary/MLB 150th	Majestic
2020	Home Pinstripe "Padres"	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	-	Nike
	Road Brown "San Diego"	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	-	Nike
	Alt Road Tan Pinstripe	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	-	Nike
	Alt Camouflage (Jungle Green)	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	American Flag	Swinging Friar Disc	Nike
	Alt Camouflage (Desert Tan)	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	American Flag	Swinging Friar Disc	Nike

* "48" Patch to honor Darrel Akerfelds; worn starting June 26.
 JC Star patch worn all season; "19" patch worn on left chest for Tony Gwynn, starting June 18.

© GameWornGuides.com

These five styles continue from previous years

Padres Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2021	Home Pinstripe	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	-	Nike
	Road Brown	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	-	Nike
	Alt Road Pinstripe	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	-	Nike
	Alt Green Camo	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	American Flag	Swinging Friar Disc	Nike
	Alt Brown Camo	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	American Flag	Swinging Friar Disc	Nike
2022	Home Pinstripe	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	-	Nike
	Road Brown	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	-	Nike
	Alt Road Pinstripe	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc	-	Nike
	Alt Green Camo	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	American Flag	Swinging Friar Disc	Nike
	Alt Brown Camo	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	American Flag	Swinging Friar Disc	Nike
	City Connect	Custom 1 color	Custom 1 color	Block 1 color	No	Recolored Swinging Friar	-	Nike
2023	Home Pinstripe	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc‡	Motorola Ad patch‡	Nike
	Road Brown	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc‡	Motorola Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Road Pinstripe	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc‡	Motorola Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Green Camo	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	American Flag‡	Motorola Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Brown Camo	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	American Flag‡	Motorola Ad patch‡	Nike
	City Connect	Custom 1 color	Custom 1 color	Block 1 color	No	Recolored Swinging Friar‡	Motorola Ad patch‡	Nike
2024	Home Pinstripe	No	Special Font 2 color (no perf)	Special Font 2 color	No	Petco Park 20th Anniversary‡	Motorola Ad patch‡/Peter Seidler Memorial (left chest)	Nike
	Road Brown	No	Special Font 2 color (perf)	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc‡	Motorola Ad patch‡/Peter Seidler Memorial (left chest)	Nike
	Alt Road Pinstripe	No	Special Font 2 color (no perf)	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc‡	Motorola Ad patch‡/Peter Seidler Memorial (left chest)	Nike
	Alt Green Camo^	No	Special Font 2 color (perf?)	Special Font 2 color	No	American Flag‡	Motorola Ad patch‡/Peter Seidler Memorial (left chest)	Nike
	Alt Brown Camo	No	Special Font 2 color (perf?)	Special Font 2 color	No	American Flag‡	Motorola Ad patch‡/Peter Seidler Memorial (left chest)	Nike
	City Connect	Custom 1 color (perf)	Custom 1 color (perf)	Nike Block 1 color	No	Recolored Swinging Friar‡	Motorola Ad patch‡/Peter Seidler Memorial (left chest)	Nike
2025	Home Pinstripe	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc‡	Motorola Ad patch‡	Nike
	Road Brown	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc‡	Motorola Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Road Pinstripe	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	Swinging Friar Disc‡	Motorola Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Green Camo^	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	American Flag‡	Motorola Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Brown Camo	No	Special Font 2 color	Special Font 2 color	No	American Flag‡	Motorola Ad patch‡	Nike
	City Connect	Custom 1 color (perf)	Custom 1 color (perf)	Nike Block 1 color	No	Recolored Swinging Friar‡	Motorola Ad patch‡	Nike

‡ patch sleeve varies based on handedness of player

^ Though in the MLB Style Guide as an option, this style was not worn on-field in 2024 or in 2025 through press time

© GameWornGuides.com

Home, Road and Alternate Jerseys

1969-1971 Home

The Padres' cream-colored flannel inaugural home uniforms of 1969 were made by Rawlings, and were used for the team's first three seasons, unchanged. The lettering applied to front and back was old-time felt, in brown outlined with yellow. The player number font used is "Block with Serifs," different from the other jerseys in the set. Player size, last name, and number is embroidered freehand on the front shirttail. The 1969 set of these jerseys has the MLB 100th anniversary patch sewn to the left sleeve. That patch was not used on the other two jerseys in the set.

© GameWornGuides.com

1969-1970 Road "Padres"

1970

In 1969 and 1970, the Padres had two sets of jerseys with "PADRES" on the front: one white and one tan. The tan ones were made by Wilson. In period news/baseball card photos, almost always in black and white, it is practically impossible to tell if this style uniform is "home" or "away." The Baseball Hall of Fame website currently lists it as a home jersey, but other sources list it as the standard road uniform jersey. Game photo evidence is slim, and I would need photo evidence to see where/when it was worn. The lettering and the player numbers on the reverse are all made from brown and yellow felt, not twill. These Wilson-made jerseys are numbered using Wilson's "house" font, Wilson Varsity—different than the Block with Serifs used for the white jerseys. In those days, for standardization was not deemed important by most teams. Whomever lettered the jerseys got to choose.

The 1969 set of these jerseys has no sleeve-end trim, and has the "San Diego 200th Anniversary" patch sewn to the left sleeve. 1970 has brown/yellow/brown sleeve end trim and no patches on the sleeves. The jersey is retired after 1970.

1969

Stephen Kraljic Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1969-1970 Road “San Diego”/1971 Road

1969

Stephen Kraljic Collection

The tan flannel “SAN DIEGO” road jersey is used by the Padres from 1969–1971. Some sources list it as the standard road jersey; others call it a “road alternate.” They are made by Wilson, and therefore are numbered by Wilson using Varsity font—different from the white home jersey. All two-color felt lettering in brown/yellow. Tagged with the year on the front tail below the Wilson manufacturer’s tag. Player names are generally embroidered on small pieces of fabric, then sewn inside the neck. The jersey has plain sleeve ends and neck opening; no trim.

I have photos of this jersey being used with the “San Diego 200th Anniversary” patch. The Baseball Hall of Fame shows the MLB 100th anniversary patch on the right sleeve. I do not have any period photos showing the MLB 100th patch on this jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

1969-1970 Road "San Diego"/1971 Road, continued

1969, repurposed for 1970

1970–1971: Brown/yellow/brown sewn-on knit trim is added at collar and sleeve ends. All lettering is still two-color felt, brown/yellow. No sleeve patches are used. Some of these 1970 jerseys were repurposed 1969 jerseys like the one here, at left. The sleeve patch from 1969 was removed and the neck and sleeve end trim was added. 1969 tail tagging remains.

1970

1970

1971

© GameWornGuides.com

1972-1973 Home

1972

1973

The Padres began 20 years of wild double-knit experimentation with these all yellow-gold uniforms in 1972. So different were they from other teams that the home and road uniforms were identical except for the team lettering on the front. Padres players were not likely to get mixed-up with anyone else, at home or on the road! Seven-button front with flat-hemmed tails; side stripes and sleeve end trim is sewn-in, not sewn-on.

No names used on the back; numbers are one-color brown and are a team-specific Rawlings hybrid of Varsity and Block styles. Notable is the diagonal stroke on the “2” Similar to the style used on late 1980s and early 1990s Cincinnati Reds jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

1972-1973 Road

1973

Likely restored numbers on back.

Identical to the home jersey except that “San Diego” replaces the “Padres” on the front. No names on back; numbers are one-color brown, a hybrid of Varsity and Block styles. These are not flat hemmed like home jerseys.

1972

© GameWornGuides.com

1974-1975 Home

Rawlings 1974-1975

1974

1975

Returning to a more traditional look, the Padres adopted this button-front jersey with a Dodger-like script with underline for 1974. All lettering is brown/yellow. No nameplates are used; Rawlings is the only supplier in 1974; notice the use of the Rawlings-standard block numbers an front and back. Names are direct-sewn in the same font as used by the Orioles and Cardinals, without nameplates.

We have seen some of these with 1975 tagging like the McNamara example (far left). This must mean that both Wilson and Rawlings supplied sets of 1975 jerseys with non-matching fonts (see next page). Period photos are scarce so it is difficult to see if both styles were worn on the field at the same time.

© GameWornGuides.com

1974-1975 Home, continued: Wilson 1975

1975

If we are to believe the tagging seen on some jerseys in the hobby, both Wilson and Rawlings made sets of 1975 jerseys. Wilson seems to have made these in 1975 only. The trim is the same, but the Wilson neck is now shaped more like a "V" when buttoned compared to the Rawlings "U" shaped neck on the 1974 version.

The number font is unique and is somewhat inconsistent comparing jersey fronts to backs. The Wilson-specification font hand-drawn vertical arch names are used by Wilson, on nameplates. Linen lining in the placket and the back of the neck. These jerseys were used to death in the minor leagues. The gold twill used is of a substandard variety that loses its color after many washings making it look almost white on unrestored jerseys.

1975

Left: Rawlings script top, Wilson script below. Not identical.

Rawlings script is taller and slightly narrower, less italic and with narrower gold outline leaving openings in the centers of the letters "A", "D" and "E" that are lacking in the Wilson rendition. Clearly, player number fonts are different as well.

© GameWornGuides.com

1974-1975 Road

1974

1974

A brief return to tradition, these gray road jerseys are used only two seasons. 1974: two-color names and numbers; brown/yellow vertical arch; no nameplates, names direct sewn. 1975: NOB eliminated.

Player numbers are a modified Padres font with characteristics of Varsity and Block. They are not Wilson's standard Varsity pattern as used by the Padres 1969–1971. For detail on Davenport jersey (top right), see "Padres Jerseys Demoted to the Minor Leagues" several pages ahead.

1975

1975

© GameWornGuides.com

1976 Home

Home jerseys switch to pull-overs, and are made by Sand-Knit. Numbers on front and back; two-color brown/yellow—a Sand-Knit hybrid of Varsity and Block (left and right, note how the front numbers and back numbers differ).

Names on back of all home jerseys, two-color vertical arch, brown/gold, nameplates used. Note odd V-neck, with trim that seems to disappear into the jersey at the V's bottom.

All of these jerseys likely have had their NOBs replaced at some time because of use in the minors after their MLB service was through. I restored the name, numbers and sleeve patch on the Sisler (coach) and Davis jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

1977 Home

Stephen Kraljic Collection

For 1976, Wilson takes over the manufacturing of Padres home jerseys. The V-neck shape changes slightly to a more normal shape (compare to preceding page) and the brown middle stripe on the sleeve end trim is slightly wider than before; both minor but notable changes.

When Wilson makes the jerseys, they typically letter them with player names and numbers, too. Wilson's "house font" has always been Wilson Varsity. But oddly, it appears that 1977 home jerseys are lettered with the Sand-Knit variant of Varsity—an identical style of vertical arch player names as 1976, true also of the 1974–1975 Wilson road jerseys. We have enough examples of original 1977 jerseys to show that this is, in fact, the way they were originally made. Perhaps Sand-Knit provided the patterns to Wilson?

© GameWornGuides.com

1976-1977 Road

Brown jersey body with yellow raglan-style sleeves. Brown and gold knit trim at the ends of the sleeves, gold V-neck. ”San Diego” arched on front similar to, but not exactly like, the 1972–1973 road jersey. One-color gold Modified Padres Varsity numbers on road jersey.

Oddly, no names on back of road jerseys for 1976–1977, but NOBs are used on those years’ home jerseys (also the case in 1975). The reverse of what is typical.

© GameWornGuides.com

1978 Home

Manuel Barrera Collection

Vertical-arched brown names on back; nameplates used. Numbers are Padres new-for-1978 “Mod” font, two-color yellow/brown, and are on the left front and on back.

Most of these jerseys were shipped to the minors after their use by the MLB club, and the “San Diego” was stripped from the front and nameplates removed (see photo above). Most presentable originals in the hobby have been restored in some fashion.

© GameWornGuides.com

1978 Home, continued

© GameWornGuides.com

1978 Road

A midseason acquisition, Eric Rasmussen was issued jerseys that had previously belonged to other players. This explains the "5" on the year tag.

The 1978 road jersey is solid "Padre Brown" with bright yellow-gold sleeves, lettering, and trim. All 1978 jerseys feature both the city and team name on them—an unusual feature. Mixed-and-matched with white or gold pants.

One-color gold numbers on front and back; special new-for-1978 Padres "Mod" font style. Notice how bold the team wordmark is on these jerseys.

Names on back reappear on road jerseys for first time since 1974. Name is one-color, gold vertical arch. Nameplates are used for easy removal when the jerseys are sent to the minors. The tiny "San Diego" lettering on jersey fronts is almost always missing or restored on examples seen today, as few unrestored originals remain.

© GameWornGuides.com

1978 Road, continued

Manuel Barrere Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1978 Alternate Gold

Stephen Kraljic Collection

Sometimes worn with matching gold pants, these uniforms were wild—even for the anything-goes disco '70s.

One-color brown numbers on front and back; special new-for-1978 Padres "Mod" font. Notice that the sleeve end stripe is single-color gold and the V-neck trim is brown.

NOB is one-color brown, usually vertical arched (but not always! Note the non-vertically arched player name on the photo at center). Nameplates are used, so they can be easily removed when the jerseys are sent to the minors—which these were. Few originals remain, for certain. The 1978 All Star Game patch is sewn on all original jerseys of this style.

© GameWornGuides.com

1979 Home

1979 is another one-year exercise. The unlettered 1979 jersey body is identical to the 1978 version, but the lettering is changed slightly: the team lettering is arched, and the tiny "San Diego" lettering is deleted from the front. Special Padres "Mod" numbers used again on front and back; two-color yellow-gold/brown. One-color brown vertical arch names on back, on nameplates. These jerseys also were shipped to the minor leagues, and few originals are seen today. Most have had their lettering restored in some way.

Manuel Barrere Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1979 Road

Guy Hankel Collection

One-year style. Numbers in special Padres-only Mod style. Numbers are two-color, front and back, gold/white. Name is vertical arch style, one-color yellow-gold on nameplate.

These uniforms were sent to the minors and stripped of their wordmarks, player names and in some cases, their numbers. I restored the one above. I have not yet come across an original example.

© GameWornGuides.com

Padres Jerseys Demoted to the Minor Leagues

Top left: For the full story on this 1974 road jersey restoration follow this link to Facebook.

Top right: This brown 1976 road jersey also went to Reno, where it became an Aces road jersey from another season. The black light and Photoshop filters uncover its secret backstory.

Bottom left: This 1979 home jersey shows the (photo enhanced) outline of a cloth cover-up sewn over the Padres logo so it could be re-used without stripping all the front lettering.

Bottom right: This rare and desirable 1979 road jersey went to a Padres minor league affiliate and had a simple “Padres” crest sewn on front after the “San Diego” had been stripped. The original MLB numbers were left untouched during use in the minors.

© GameWornGuides.com

1980-1983 Home

Kyle Bonamo Collection

Original 1980, reissued 1982

1980

Bill Henderson Collection

Note the positioning of the numbers "6" and "9" on game worn jerseys. The numerals are rotated so that the top is not flat. There probably was no enforced standard; placement was left up to the seamstress.

1983

1983

1983

Tight Wilson V-neck pullovers were early-'80s disco wild and represented the 7th Padres uniform design in 10 years' time—a record that may never be surpassed.

Brown/orange/yellow neck and sleeve end trim. Three color orange/yellow/brown numbers in the custom, Padres bold Mod style font introduced in 1978.

Numbers on back only, in orange/yellow/brown; Names in brown, vertical arch style; nameplates used.

© GameWornGuides.com

1980-1983 Road

Manuel Barrere Collection

Above: Notice renumbering glue and new nameplate scar, jersey was originally #28.

The road jersey for 1980–1983 remains a nontraditional brown, and like the home jersey, is a pullover design. Team wordmark and back player numbers are in the Padres' fancy "Mod" style introduced in 1978, and on the brown jersey are two-color yellow/orange.

Player names are vertical arch and sewn on nameplates. Wide orange/yellow knit trim is used at the sleeve ends and for the V-neck.

Bill Henderson Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1984 Home

1984 home jersey is identical in lettering and appearance to the 1980–1983 styles, except is changed to a button-front design. Notice that the "d" in Padres splits in the middle.

"RAK" worn on the sleeve of both 1984 jerseys; memorial to Ray Kroc, team owner, who died in January 1984.

© GameWornGuides.com

1984 Postseason Home

In the 1984 World Series, I noticed way back then when watching on TV that a few players were wearing jerseys without vertical arch names on back, among them first baseman Steve Garvey, third baseman Graig Nettles, and manager Dick Williams. The NOB font used for these players is odd and not standard to Wilson, and my guess is they were lettered locally for the players, rather than by Wilson at the factory. Why is this significant? Should one of these “oddball” jerseys be presented for authentication, it would be very easy for the authenticator to immediately conclude it was a fabrication, when available media, if reviewed, could show that it was actually a recorded aberration. The further one goes back in time, the more often these oddities popped up, when things were just not as regimented and as professional as they have become today, controlled by corporate giants.

© GameWornGuides.com

1984 Road

1984 jerseys are identical to the 1980–1983 styles in lettering and overall appearance, except that 1984 (only) are button-front jerseys, oddly altered for their fifth and final year of use before the next Padres style change.

"RAK" worn on the sleeve of 1984 jerseys; memorial to Ray Kroc, team owner, who died in January 1984.

Stephen Kraljic collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1985-1990 Home

Left: Rawlings one-year-only 1987 tagging is found on some Padres jerseys.

Home jersey team tagging ends after 1990.

The return to traditional style begins: pants with belt loops, button-up shirts. Brown and orange remain the team colors, and the jersey has brown pinstripes. Names and numbers in a custom Padres-only font (numbers similar to 1990s Giants, but narrower). Two-color names and numbers brown/orange. No nameplates used.

RAK (Ray Kroc memorial) letters on sleeve 1985–1986.

© GameWornGuides.com

1985-1990 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

Below: Notice that the 1988 Rawlings tag shown has a plain, and not pin-striped background, as it is sewn on the inside of the garment. The pinstripes are visible only on the outside of the jersey.

Critics note that the Padres' new road jersey bears more than a passing resemblance to the upstate San Francisco Giants' uniforms that were introduced in 1983.

Brown/orange remain the team colors, and the gray road jersey has brown pinstripes.

Names and numbers in a custom Padres-only font (numbers similar to 1990s Giants, but narrower) in brown, outlined with orange. No nameplates used.

Stephen Kraljic collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1991 Home

All traces of the wild era are gone. The team's signature brown pinstripes and lettering are replaced by navy lettering and pinstripes. No numbers on the front. Block numbers on back, three-color (navy/white/orange). Block names one-color navy. No nameplates used..

1991 home jerseys (only) were made by Goodman & Sons—the only time the Padres used this Southern California uniform maker for its home game jerseys. For 1992 the identical style continued with Russell as the manufacturer when that maker took over as official supplier to MLB.

While we do not specialize in photo matching, the alignment of the pinstripes on the 1991 card certainly suggest that this is the same jersey (right).

© GameWornGuides.com

1991-2003 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

Left sleeve patch, all years except 1999

1999 only

1999

Almost as traditional as it can get: the Padres' road jersey is redesigned for 1991. No trim, gray jersey with three--color vertical arch, 3D drop shadowed "San Diego" arched across the front. Three-color block numbers on back only (navy/white/orange).Block names one-color navy. Nameplates not used.

Team logo sleeve patch 1994 through 2003, except 1999, when 30th Anniversary patch is used. There is no team tagging used on road jerseys after 1991.

© GameWornGuides.com

1992-2001 Home

1998

Click here for a link to the actual Letter of Opinion

Russell is awarded the contract in 1992 to be the official outfitter of MLB, and while teams are not forced to comply, the Padres dutifully switch over, and starting in 1992 the Russell "R" logo is displayed embroidered on the right sleeve.

Though this style jersey is listed as the primary home jersey for 2001, we have been unable to find any photos of team wearing them in 2001. They wore either the white or navy uniforms at home.

1996

© GameWornGuides.com

1997-2003 Alternate Navy

1998

1997-1998

1999

1999

1997-1998: No front numbers

1999

2000 only

2000

2002

- 1997–1998: No numbers on the front. Swinging Friar patch on the sleeve.
- 1999: One-color white extra-bold “Dodgers-like” (but not exactly the same) front numbers appear, and Friar disappears. The 30th anniversary patch is worn in 1999, then is replaced with the team logo patch in 2000 only. No sleeve team patch 2001–2003.
- Every year: White block name on back; no nameplate. Two-color (orange/white) Block numbers on back. No team year/set tagging on this jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

1998-2001 Alternate Home White/2002-2003 Home

1999

This is known as a "Stat Jersey." This embroidery was added after the jersey was game worn. Tony Gwynn changed jerseys after every hit late in his career, as he was breaking hitting records.

2003

This 1998–2001 alternate home white jersey officially became the team's primary home jersey in 2002, replacing the pinstripe style, though photo evidence suggests it was used as the primary home jersey in 2001 as well.

Front number is a bold font that is similar to but not exactly like the Dodgers', navy with no outline. Back numbers are always navy Block style outlined in white. One-color navy name; no nameplates.

Logo sleeve patch used 1998 and 2000–2003. 30th Anniversary patch used 1999.

Above: Sleeve patch 1998, 2000-2003.

Above right: Sleeve patch 1999 only.

Right: No team tagging used during this period, but team issued jerseys will generally have this small flag tag on the front tail in lieu of a size tag inside the collar.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004-2011 Home

Stephen Kraljic collection

2004–2006: Navy drop shadow on tail

2007–2011: Tan drop shadow on tail

Sleeve patch 2004–2008 has "San Diego"

Sleeve patch 2009–2011 omits city name

2005

After staying with the same image/logo/identity for a Padres-record 13 seasons (1991–2003), the whole package changes again for 2004. Numbers on back only; new Padres-only typeface, three-color (navy/white/Padres Sand [tan]).

Names on back are Block on nameplates 2004–2010. NOB changes to direct sewn in 2011. Note that the second outline, in white, on player number is thinner than the third outline, in tan.

A small detail: the drop shadow on the front underline is navy 2004–2006 but changed to tan 2007–2011.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004-2010 Road

2004

The new road uniform's color is called Sand, sort of a tan-gray, inspired by the team's road flannels pre-1972. Numbers on back only, Block-style name, two-color (navy/white). Names are in a block variant unique to the Padres, one-color Navy on a nameplate.

The first time these uniforms were worn, the pitchers found that they could not see catcher Ramon Hernandez' signs—the color of the pants was too close to the color of his fingers. The solution that night was for Hernandez to paint his fingers white!

Sleeve patch 2004–2008 with "San Diego"

Sleeve patch 2009–2011 omits city name

© GameWornGuides.com

2004-2011 Alternate Blue

2005

Navy jersey body with tan/blue/tan knit trim at neck and sleeve ends. Swinging Friar patch on left sleeve. Numbers on back only, custom Padres typeface, two-color ("Padres Sand"/ white). Block names, one-color (sand). NOB on a nameplate 2001–2010. For 2011 only, NOB is direct sewn.

During the run of this style, MLB converted to Cool Base fabrics. This jersey was seen in both styles. On this page, the Hernandez #55 jersey is full-weight polyester, and the Ashby #43 is Cool Base. Notice the underarm panels.

2006

© GameWornGuides.com

2006*/2007-2010 Alternate Home Camouflage

Game worn jerseys have the American flag patch on the right sleeve. The official Style Guide does not show the patch, and the patch is not seen often on retail sale versions of the jersey.

Interlocking green SD on left sleeve.

In 2006, the fabric color changes to lighter Desert Camouflage from the earlier darker Jungle Camouflage*.

For 2007, the Camouflage jersey is listed as an official alternate jersey choice in the MLB Style Guide for the first time.

Numbers on back are in Padres style; names and numbers are one-color (green).

2006–2007 jerseys are rendered in mesh; 2008–2010 are made from Cool Base fabric.

*Although this style of jersey was listed for the first time as an "official alternate jersey" in 2007, It was worn in 2006 as a one-off. I am Including it here to avoid listing it twice in this chapter. You will find the other, earlier-style camouflage jerseys in the "Special Events" section; they were worn without ever being declared as an official team alternate jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Road

- After being used since 2004 in khaki/sand color, the road jersey is changed to gray for its final year of use.
- Everything else remains constant from the 2010 edition. Front lettering is navy outlined with white, as are the back numbers. Names on back are solid navy.
- Names on back are direct sewn
- Padres patch on the sleeve.

Left: 2011 Jackie Robinson Day jerseys are all numbered #42 and lack names on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2013/2014-2015 Alternate Home Camouflage

A reader who is a Padres employee involved with selling their game used jerseys, contacted me to note that the team changed to a warmer camouflage color and lettering for the 2014 season. He said the team had to send back the first set of 2014 jerseys, because Majestic did them in the old color. I had to laugh. I had been trying to color correct the photos to make them all look the same, and I was having a terrible time. This explains the issue! They are shown here side-by-side, to highlight the minor differences.

2011: The Padres update their camouflage jerseys to the MARPAT digital pattern used by the Marine Corps, and eliminate the green tones of the earlier styles of camouflage used. These jerseys are worn on Sundays at home.

2011: Padres-font numbers on back.

2012–2015: Varsity-font numbers on back.

Numbers are brown, outlined with white; NOB is white, outlined with brown. It may seem funny, but the wordmark and numbers (especially on the 2011 version) are difficult to see against the camouflage background.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012-2015 Home

Padres do a uniform redesign without a full image change—reminiscent, perhaps, of 1991, when they changed team colors but kept the same basic theme and logo design. Blue knit trim is added to the front and neck of the jersey, and also to the sleeve ends. Tan is now used as the outline color around the Padres wordmark and player numbers. Padres wordmark is simplified a bit, losing its drop shadow. Numbers on back are Wilson Varsity; the stylized Padres font used for the past eight years disappears.

Names on back are direct sewn two-color, blue/tan. Player names are in a special Block font used only by the Padres; bolder and more square than standard Block.

A new blue and white Swinging Friar patch is used on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012-2016 Road

2016

2012-2015

2015

Jersey body is solid gray, with navy knit trim on placket and collar. Double navy stripes on sleeve ends spaced about an inch apart. “San Diego” in navy outlined with white in new consistent-size lettering (compared to previous wordmark that was thinner in the center and taller at the ends). Varsity style player numbers in navy/white; Padres special Block-style name in same colors.

Through 2015, Padres players could decide the style of jersey they wanted to wear: Cool Base or full-weight knit.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012-2015 Alternate Blue/2016-2019 Alternate Road

2014

Bill Henderson Collection

2012–2015

2019

2012–2015: This jersey can be worn at home or on the road.

2016–2019: It becomes a road alternate only.

Interlocking “SD” featured on left chest in white; jersey body is navy. White knit trim on placket, around neck, and in double stripes at the ends of the sleeves.

New team secondary logo patch used on the left sleeve through 2015. The team patch is replaced by the 2016 All-Star Game patch that year. From 2017–2019, the left sleeve is blank.

White Wilson Varsity numbers and Padres-style Block player name on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016: Flex Base Jersey Construction and Branding

Read the full story on MLB's adoption of Flex Base jerseys for 2016 in Chapter 2.

Bill Henderson Collection

In 2016, all teams adopt Majestic's new "Flex Base" on-field game jerseys, which are made of Cool Base fabric, but with several new elements designed to make them lighter and more breathable. The new jerseys have mesh side panels that run the length of the jersey, and one on the back tail called the "Air Belt." They also use "Kiss Cut" layering for front decorations, names, and numbers, which Majestic says is 10-20% lighter than traditional layered twill. Finally, the MLB logo on the back neck is now a rubberized patch, called CFX by Majestic, and the heat-pressed tag on the front tail differs from Cool Base jerseys of old.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Home

The Padres' 2016 Flex Base home jersey, with its restrained, retro navy and yellow theme, was oddly announced as a one-year-only design; a commemorative jersey of sorts for the All-Star Game to be played in San Diego that summer (the only time a team has ever done this). But consider the number of other alternate uniforms in the Padres' wardrobe for 2016 (three) and all the special uniform dates to be held in 2016 (Mother's Day, Father's Day, Turn back the Clock, etc.), plus 1990s "Way Back Wednesdays", Camouflage Jersey Sundays, The number of dates that this "standard" jersey might be worn was limited from the start.

Soon after the end of the 2016 season, the Padres not only announced that there would be new home and road jerseys for the 2017 season, but to the disappointment of many fans, that yellow would be banished from the team's color palette … except for the brown/gold nostalgia jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2019 Alternate Home Brown

After considerable fan pressure, the Padres "Bring Back the Brown" … sort of. Instead of reintroducing brown as a team color, the team creates a brown alternate to fit in with their uniforms that premiered in 2012. Yellow also makes a comeback here as the main color for all lettering, outlined in white for the front wordmark and back numbers. (yellow was added as an official team color for 2016, then removed again in 2017, though it remained for this jersey only). Name on back is single-color yellow without a nameplate. The neck and sleeve ends are also ringed with yellow knit trim. Because the Padres love to tinker, they add an interlocking SD left-sleeve patch, in yellow outlined with white, starting in 2017. The jersey is typically worn for Friday home games.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2019 Alternate Home Brown Camouflage

2016

The Padres have worn camo jerseys in one form or another since 1996, and the team refreshes its tan camo entry for the 2016 season. The digital camouflage pattern is similar to the version they have worn since 2014; however, the front lettering is updated to mesh with their overall look since 2012. What doesn't mesh well is the new mesh sides and "Air Belt" of the Flex Base jersey, which are not printed with the camo pattern, leaving them a plain brown.

Front wordmark and back numbers are brown/white Block, whereas back names are white/brown Padres Block. An American flag adorns the left sleeve, and an interlocking SD logo in brown/white appears on the right. Though worn on the field in 2016, this jersey does not appear in the club's official style guide until 2017.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2019 Alternate Home Blue Camouflage

Daniel Jackson Collection

Apparently one camouflage jersey is not enough for the Padres. Starting in 2016, they add a blue camo jersey to represent the pattern worn by the U.S. Navy, which has a strong presence in the San Diego community. Like the new brown version, the Flex Base jersey's sides and tail remain a solid color. All lettering appears in blue/white, which essentially nearly disappears to invisible over the blue camo base. The jersey features an American flag on the left sleeve, and in 2017, an interlocking SD patch in blue/white on the right.

2016

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2019 Home

For the second time in as many years, the Padres introduce a new home jersey. This one drops the “SD” front logo and all traces of yellow from the year before, in favor of the same “Padres” wordmark used on their other jerseys, here in blue/white. The Flex Base jersey has navy knit trim at both sleeve ends and around the collar and placket. Player names and numbers on back are navy/white. A navy/white interlocking SD patch adorns the left sleeve.

The reaction on social media is swift and negative. Tyler Kepner, baseball writer for The New York Times, wrote on Twitter: “The Padres have such a fun, colorful, unique uni history but choose to look like Penn State most games. I’ll never understand it.” Darren Rovell of ESPN Sports Business added: “If the Padres were aiming for no buzz with their new uniforms, they sure nailed it.”

2018

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2019 Road

2019

Stephen Kraljic collection

The Padres also introduce a new road jersey in 2017, essentially bringing back their entirely forgettable 2011 road gray entry. The Flex Base jersey has navy knit trim at both sleeve ends and around the neck and placket. The “bow tie” San Diego wordmark appears in blue/white. Player names and numbers on back in blue/white, and a blue/white interlocking “SD” patch adorns the left sleeve. Other than the sleeve patch, the player number font on back, the solid navy knit trim vs. the 2011 blue/white, and the Flex Base jersey construction, it appears identical to the 2011 model. As described on the prior page, fan reaction ranged from dismissive to negative. My opinion: How good it would have been to have made the 2016 one-off All-Star Game road gray jersey the team’s standard?

2011 Road Jersey for comparison

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Home

After years—YEARS—of fan feedback, the Padres finally bring back brown as the primary color for the first time since 1990. Built on Nike's version of Majestic's Flex Base template, the brown-pinstriped home white jerseys feature a new custom font in brown/yellow for the slightly arched front "PADRES" wordmark and back player names and numbers. Yellow/brown braid encircles sleeve ends and neck opening. An updated version of the iconic "Swingin' Friar" takes residence on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Road

It's all about the brown again in 2020, when the Padres introduce a completely new set of uniforms that tout a solid-brown primary road jersey. Built on Nike's version of Majestic's Flex Base template, this jersey features a new custom font in yellow/white for the slightly arched front "SAN DIEGO" wordmark and back player names and numbers. Thick yellow braid encircles sleeve ends and neck opening. An updated version of the iconic "Swingin' Friar" takes residence on the left sleeve through 2022, and varies sleeve based on player handedness in 2023.

(Middle right) The brown base jersey for this set is darker than the one used for the previous alternate jersey

Above: The brown material for this road jersey is now darker than the shade that was used for the previous alternate jersey from 2016-2019. (Photo from sportslogos.net)

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Alternate Road

This Padres' 2020 road alternate road jersey was a last-minute addition to the collection, spurned on by the problem of having only planned to use a solid-brown jersey on the road with no way to switch to a different jersey if a host team decided to go with a solid, dark color as well. Originally a finalist for the road uniform, this gray jersey with brown pinstripes is built on Nike's version of Majestic's Flex Base template. The new, custom Padres font appears in brown/yellow on the slightly arched front "SAN DIEGO" wordmark and back player names and numbers. Yellow/brown braid encircles sleeve ends and neck opening. An updated version of the iconic "Swingin' Friar" takes residence on the left sleeve through 2022, and varied sleeves based on player handedness in 2023.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Alternate Home Brown Camouflage

The Padres continue their tradition of wearing camo as an alternate, started in 1996, and carry over the brown/tan camo from previous years to the 2020 refresh. What changes on this Nike version of Majestic's Flex Base jersey is the lettering style, now updated to the Padres new font in brown/white for the slightly arched front "PADRES" wordmark and back player names and numbers. An updated version of the iconic "Swingin' Friar" takes residence on the right sleeve, while an American flag adorns the left. The Friar patch was removed prior to the 2023 season to make room for the ad patch, which varies sleeve based on player handedness. The American flag patch appears on the sleeve opposite the ad patch. U.S. Flag Code specifies that the flag should always appear moving forward, with the blue field in "front" in the direction of motion. As such, the blue field on the flag patch is on the left for players who wear it on their left sleeve, and on the right for players who wear it on the right sleeve.

2020-2022

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Alternate Home Green Camouflage

2020–2022

For the Padres, what's better than a camo alternate? Two camo alternates! This predominantly green camo jersey, based on Nike version of Majestic's Flex Base template, rounds out the 2020 updates. Aside from the base jersey color, the rest of the look duplicates the brown camo alternate. The Padres new font appears throughout in brown/white for the slightly arched front "PADRES" wordmark and back player names and numbers. An updated version of the iconic "Swingin' Friar" takes residence on the right sleeve, while an American flag adorns the left. The Friar patch was removed prior to the 2023 season to make room for the ad patch, which varies sleeve based on player handedness. The American flag patch appears on the sleeve opposite the ad patch. U.S. Flag Code specifies that the flag should always appear moving forward, with the blue field in "front" in the direction of motion. As such, the blue field on the flag patch is on the left for players who wear it on their left sleeve, and on the right for players with it on the right sleeve. Note that the code on the front tag also changes from "PY3N to "03W8" in 2023.

© GameWornGuides.com

2022-2023 City Connect

For a team hailing from vibrant, sunny San Diego, brown has always seemed an unusual color choice. But if brown has an opposite, it is these jerseys. The Padres press release about the uniforms says, “A sizable portion of the team’s fan base hails from Tijuana, Mexico, and the surrounding areas in Baja California.” These jerseys are intended to be a bridge between those communities and San Diego. The white Nike Flex Base jersey has a mint green left sleeve and bright pink right sleeve, with a yellow and pink version of the Swingin’ Friar patch on the left. Wide yellow braid encircles each sleeve end and the neck opening. Team “SAN DIEGO” lettering on front is in a brush-print style, split horizontally pink/mint green, outlined in white with a yellow drop shadow. Front and back numbers in a custom font (which seems to evoke palm trees) in pink, player names on back in yellow, which are difficult to read. The jerseys, however, are difficult to forget.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Nike “Vapor Premiere Elite” Jersey Template

Nike Flex Base 2020-2023

Nike Vapor Premier Elite 2024

Following league-wide sweeping changes to MLB jerseys with all teams switching from Nike’s 2020-2023 continuation of the Majestic Flex Base jersey shell to its new Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) template, the jerseys of the 2024 season become an anomaly - a “one and done” season of changes that brought intense scrutiny from players and fans alike. Based on the negative feedback, especially from MLB players, Nike rolled back some but not all of the 2024 changes in time for the 2025 season.

The full rundown of the changes is outlined earlier in “The Basics” chapter, but generally speaking, 2024’s crop of jerseys had changed from earlier versions in several key ways.

- VPE home jerseys are off-white, or light cream color. The earlier Flex Base white jerseys are a bright, purer white. Grays are standardized.
- The front placket is narrower on VPE, which often causes team wordmark lettering that crosses the placket to break differently.
- Neck and sleeve trim elements (when used) are no longer sewn on top of the jersey material, but are now “sewn-in” to the jersey at the seams. Placket trim adornment remains the same, though the trim is now spaced closer together with the narrowing in placket size.
- For improved visibility, the MLB logo on the back of the jersey is moved several inches lower onto the back, down from the collar placket area where it had been since 2000.
- VPE loses the integrated mesh side and back tail panels that had been part of the Flex Base jersey template.
- Player names on VPE are much smaller, and for many teams are done in a standardized block font, all using a much steeper, nearly semi-circular arch.
- For teams with front numbers, the new 2024 font is simply always a reduced size of the back numbers. This was not the way it had been in the past for most teams, with front numbers being a font variant (smaller but usually wider and bolder) than the back font.
- Team logo sleeve patches, and in some cases sponsor sleeve patches change from traditional raised embroidery to flat printed plastic or to sublimated cloth/twill
- All lettering is done using a new more lightweight (thinner) kind of matte-finished twill (commonly called “Nike Twill”). Most, but not all jerseys incorporate barely visible micro-perforation on the numbers, front and back.
- Universally, nameplates are no longer used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Home

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Padres home jersey introduced in 2020. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the "D" in "PADRES" now splits in a different place. Neck and sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears slightly wider than before. The team does not use perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. The heart-shaped "PS" memorial patch for owner Peter Seidler appeared on the left chest all season. The Petco Park anniversary patch was on the sleeve of this jersey only, replacing the Friar.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Road

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Padres distinctive brown road jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the lettering now splits the "D" in "DIEGO" rather than between the two words. Neck and sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears slightly narrower than before. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. The heart-shaped "PS" memorial patch for owner Peter Seidler appeared on the left chest all season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Road

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Padres pinstriped alternate brown road jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the lettering now splits the "D" in "DIEGO" rather than between the two words. Neck and sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears slightly wider than before. The team does not use perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. The heart-shaped "PS" memorial patch for owner Peter Seidler appeared on the left chest all season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Home Brown Camouflage

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Padres alternate brown camo jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the lettering now splits the "D" in "DIEGO" rather than between the two words. Neck and sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears slightly wider than before. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. The heart-shaped "PS" memorial patch for owner Peter Seidler appeared on the left chest all season. An American flag patch appears on one sleeve opposite a sponsor patch. Because the sleeve patches move based on player handedness, there are two different versions of the flag patch. U.S. Flag Code specifies that the flag should always appear moving forward, with the blue field in "front" in the direction of motion. As such, the blue field is on the left for players who wear it on their left sleeve, and on the right for players with it on the right sleeve. The MLB Style Guide does not show two versions of the patch, but they do appear in both orientations on-field. It is unclear if numbers are perforated on this style.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024-2025 Alternate Home Green Camouflage

2024

2025

Though the Padres include the green camo alternate in the 2024 and 2025 MLB Style Guides (see images above), it was not worn in any games during the 2024 season, nor in any 2025 games through press time. Nike and Fanatics had a great deal of difficulty supplying certain jerseys and pants early in the 2024 season, and it may be possible that no green camo jerseys were produced at all. Further, there was no sign of any green camo jersey available for retail sale in authentic or replica versions at Fanatics or MLB Shop. The Padres are one of the few teams allowed to have five jerseys in their lineup plus a City Connect, so in a transition year, it is possible that style was put on hold, perhaps even deleted, even though it was officially listed as an option for the season. We do not know if numbers would have been perforated on this style in 2024. Note the change in back lettering size for 2025, which shows that the team and MLB consciously updated the art in line with other changes across all teams for the 2025 season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024-2025 City Connect

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Padres everything-but-brown City Connect jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the lettering now splits the "D" in a different place. Neck and sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears that the neck trim is slightly narrower while the sleeve trim is slightly wider than before. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. A special version of the heart-shaped "PS" memorial patch for owner Peter Seidler, with the letters rendered in pink to match the jersey, appeared on the left chest all season. Carryover City Connect jerseys are not updated in 2025, despite the updates to the team's other jerseys for the 2025 season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Home

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. The Swingin' Friar patch returns for 2025, after being replaced by the team's anniversary patch in 2024. Note that this jersey also uses Nike's new-for-2025 white jock tag, seen at far right. A handful of jerseys across the league use this new tag.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Road

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

Of note, gray jerseys received many updates across MLB in 2025, in response to sweat-staining issues and player feedback. Despite having two road jerseys, the Padres do not have a traditional gray jersey. As a result, none of their jerseys move to the updated version of the VPE template (which uses Flex Base fabric, eliminates the extra band of fabric on the neck opening, and replaces sewn-in trim for sewn-on trim) in 2025.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Road

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

Of note, the 2025 season brings many changes to road gray jerseys across MLB, in response to sweat-staining issues and player feedback. Despite having two road jerseys, the Padres do not have a traditional gray jersey. As a result, none of their jerseys move to the updated version of the VPE template (which uses Flex Base fabric, eliminates the extra fabric on the neck opening, and replaces sewn-in trim for sewn-on trim) in 2025.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Home Brown Camouflage

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

Batting Practice and Spring Training Jerseys

1978-1979 Batting Practice

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

1979

1979

These are the earliest Padres batting practice jerseys, used certainly in 1979 and perhaps earlier. I am still looking for dated photos from earlier than 1979; my memory tells me that these were worn in 1978 as well. They appear for the first time on 1980 baseball cards (which, as we have established before, usually show the prior year's photos) and in a few dated news photos from 1979. Prior to 1979, baseball cards feature game uniforms only.

Varsity numbers in brown on the left sleeve. These were all most likely issued with Varsity numbers on back as well.

© GameWornGuides.com

1980-1985 Batting Practice

Varsity numbers on BP sleeves 1980-1982. Example at right looks like a re-lettering job.

Interlocking "SD" on front in brown tackle twill, outlined in orange.

Brown/orange/yellow trim on sleeve ends, brown V-neck trim. Brown Padre Mod-style numbers on the back, and no player names until 1984. I have seen examples of these tagged 1981 and 1983, yearbook photos show they were used as early as 1980.

Names on back appear to have been used at most times; perhaps those with no NOB are from Spring Training, though not confirmed.

© GameWornGuides.com

1982-1984 Alternate Batting Practice

Above: Careful examination shows this #21 jersey clearly had Jody Lansford's (1982–1983) NOB removed, letter by letter.

Front "SD" logo reverses colors to become orange outlined with brown. Two-color numbers in a custom, Padres-only style. Numbers on back only, in orange/brown. Names used, brown vertical arch style. Nameplates may be used. These jerseys were made by Roman Sport of California. From historical photographs, I believe these were used exclusively 1982–1984.

© GameWornGuides.com

1982-1984 Alternate Batting Practice Zip-Neck

All of these original examples use two-color Padres Mod numbers in to match the logo on the front, NOB in Block style, no vertical arch, and no nameplate.

Without question, this style of jersey is irritating to wear. It is short, and the elastic bottom causes it to ride up on the wearer every time he moves his arms. This period of time was known for its tight-fitting clothing. This short, zipper-neck-style jersey with the fancy trim was made by Majestic and Roman Sport. Some are tagged “1984." They have elastic knit waist trim that matches the sleeve ends. There is a 6-inch zipper at the neck.

© GameWornGuides.com

1985-1990 Batting Practice

Early 1985 only(?) This Majestic variant has odd shoulder design with a horizontal seam across the whole garment above player NOB.

More traditional V-neck design by Rawlings is more commonly found (bottom left) and was probably from 1986–1989.

Brown mesh, one-color Padres 1985–1989 style orange numbers, names in orange Block font. All lettering is orange tackle twill. Odd: numbers are in the San Francisco Giants' player number font, not the Padres' jersey font!

The only brown batting practice jersey ever used in MLB.

© GameWornGuides.com

1991-1998 Batting Practice

Two-color tackle twill Block numbers on back, orange/white. Russell jerseys use Block numbers (Stillwell); Majestic jerseys have Majestic Block numbers (Mulligan).

NOB one-color white. However, sets of these jerseys exist without names on the back; likely Spring Training issues. These style jerseys were also used in 1999 Spring Training.

Worn at least once in a regular season game, May 18, 1994 on the road vs. the Cubs.

Bill Henderson Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1991-1996 Alternate Batting Practice Zip-Neck

- The Padres also had their own Majestic Gamewarmer zip-neck batting practice jersey. We assume they were issued only to players who wanted them; they are relatively uncommon.
- These were used lettered (like the top example) and plain-backed (like the bottom example).
- Mesh construction with elastic at sleeve ends and at waist, Majestic wordmark embroidered on right sleeve end and screened on front slash pocket-like trim.
- Exact years of use have not yet been determined.

© GameWornGuides.com

1999-2001 Batting Practice

1999

Bill Henderson Collection

- 1999 through 2001 jerseys are mesh pullovers; navy mesh with a two-button neck.
- One-color white numbers on front and back. Back numbers are Block bold on Russell jerseys, Varsity on Majestic jerseys. Front numbers are Dodgers Bold.
- Names used on back.
- Identify 2000–2001 jerseys by the addition of the Silhouetted Batter patch on the back of the collar.

© GameWornGuides.com

2002 Batting Practice

Nearly identical to the 2001 jersey; 2002 jersey is a mesh button-front instead of a pullover.

One-color white numbers on front and back. Back numbers are Block bold style. Front numbers are Dodgers Bold. “SD” patch on the left sleeve.

Player names used on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003 Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

- 2003 was the first year that MLB changed to the new, early moisture-wicking tech fabric jersey for all teams.
- 2003 was the last year the Padres used this lettering style on their jerseys, before the redesign of 2004. Therefore, this is a seldom seen, one-year-style jersey.
- Solid, non-mesh soft fabric. Note thin orange piping sewn into the seam on the shoulders
- Block numbers on front and back. Extra Bold Block numbers on the back. Block bold names on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

- This is the third consecutive one-year-only batting practice jersey. The Padres use a simple white rendition of their wordmark, with a light blue drop shadow under the front “wave” only.
- Numbers on back only; new custom Padres-only typeface; one-color white.
- Names are in Block font. One-color white, no nameplate.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005-2006 Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

- Subtle changes for 2005. Entire front lettering gains a navy blue outline and tan drop shadow. Tan piping runs from the tops of the shoulders to the sleeve ends.
- Interlocking “SD” logo mark is added to the left sleeve.
- Back lettering remains the same as 2004; one-color white Padres custom font numbers with white Block names; no nameplates.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007 Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

Padres' 2007 warmup jersey has the same basic look as the 2006 version, with some detail changes. The front lettering loses its complicated drop shadow as used in 2005–2006, and now assumes a subtle, tan outline around the white wordmark. Side panels are an attractive combination of white on bottom and tan on top. No sleeve patches and no trim. Custom Padres numbers on back are white outlined with tan; player names are solid white. All lettering and logos are heat-applied, not sewn twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008-2010 Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

Seemingly unable to get anything the way they really want it on the first try, the Padres change the new Cool Base batting practice jersey's design after just one year.

The new jersey's side panels are navy/tan, compared to white/tan on the 2007 model.

Team script and player numbers are two-color tan/white. NOB is one-color tan. These colors are reversed from the prior year's design, which used white as the primary lettering color, and tan as the outline. All lettering and logos are heat-applied, not sewn twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Batting Practice

I suppose if there were ever a competition for the team that changed its batting practice jerseys most frequently, the Padres would win.

For 2011, the previous one-button batting practice jersey—with the navy side panels and the tan panels under the arms—becomes a button-front jersey.

Side panels are now solid tan. Names on back are in tan Block; numbers are Padres-style tan outlined with white.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012-2013 Home Batting Practice

After a single year, the Padres change their home BP jersey again, removing the tan side panels that had been color-keyed to the front script and back lettering—and replacing it with plain blue mesh sides. This was a truly last minute change, made just before the start of Spring Training 2012—too late to make any of the 2012 press release material. They wore this solid blue jersey at home only, introducing a separate road batting practice jersey, pictured on the next page.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012-2013 Road Batting Practice

The Padres' batting practice jerseys change again for 2012. Still button-front in design, all that is tan on the home BP is now a gray that accompanies the Padres' other uniform changes for 2012. Numbers and names on back are gray outlined with white. Numbers are Wilson Varsity in a nod to tradition, and player names are a new font that resembles standard Block but is not. Bolder and more square, it is unique to the Padres and is used on of all their 2012 uniforms.

2012-2013 road and home BP jerseys side-by-side. Road is gray/white lettered; home is tan/white lettered.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2015 Home Batting Practice

The 2014 all-MLB batting practice jersey redesign by Majestic adds banded knit trim to sleeve ends and the neck opening. The Padres maintain separate home and road batting practice jerseys. The home model has gold/white lettering, adds gold underarm panels, and has navy/gold striped knit trim. Jersey is a button-front design.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2015 Road Batting Practice

The 2014 all-MLB batting practice jersey redesign by Majestic adds knit trim to sleeve ends and the neck opening. The Padres maintain separate home and road BP jerseys. The road model has gray/white lettering, adds gray underarm panels, and has navy/gray striped knit trim. Jersey is a button-front design. The team believes that the gray trim and lettering matches the road gray pants better than the gold-trimmed version.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Spring Training

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

2016: For the first time, MLB introduces a jersey specifically for Spring Training, intended to be worn for workouts and games in the pre-season. The jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template, and features a special printed twill, decorated with “2016” and Spring Training symbols, as the main twill layer for every team.

The Padres use their regular season blue alternate as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill. The jersey also features a rubberized CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate Highway sign, reading “2016” and “AZ” representing where the Padres spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Home Batting Practice

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

As part of the 2016 club brand refresh, the Padres update their batting practice jerseys again. Based on the league-wide 2014 jersey construction template, these full-button Majestic jerseys retain the banded knit trim on sleeve ends and the neck opening. The home model has navy/white lettering for front and back, with white underarm panels and navy/white striped knit trim.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Road Batting Practice

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

In keeping with their custom, the Padres maintain having only slightly different home and road batting practice jerseys. The road version is very similar to the home version on the prior page, with the exception of the gray lettering and the gray side panels. Based on the 2014 template, these full-button Majestic jerseys retain the banded knit trim on sleeve ends and the neck opening. The road model has gray/white lettering for front and back, with gray underarm panels and navy/gray striped knit trim. And in typical Padres tradition, these are short lived, lasting only a year before they are relegated to history.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Spring Training

Spring Training-only jerseys return for all teams in 2017, with some minor design modifications. As in 2016, the jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template, and features special printed twill, this year decorated with “2017” and Spring Training symbols. However, all teams now use the same twill, in single-color white with gray printing, replacing the many team-specific combinations from the year before. Since the Padres’ lettering on their blue alternates is single-color white to begin with, the 2017 change to the lettering does not have an impact on their Spring Training jerseys.

The Padres again use their regular season blue alternate as a basis for their spring training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill. The jersey features a recolored version of the rubberized CFX patch on the right sleeve, in the style of an Interstate Highway sign, reading “2017” and “AZ” representing where the Padres spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2019 Batting Practice

With many players opting for lightweight cage jackets—which are void of player identification—instead of traditional BP jerseys with player names and numbers, Majestic introduces a replacement product that may be an attempt to gain acceptance by the pros on the field while being more attractive to fans at retail. New for 2017, official team batting practice jerseys are replaced with what Majestic calls a 3/4 Sleeve BP Trainer. The new hybrid is cut in a pullover jacket silhouette, including a short zipper at the neck, but made from Cool Base jersey material. The underarm and back panels are Cool Base mesh, like the sides and tail of Flex Base jerseys. Team logos and other lettering is in what Majestic calls “lightweight twill” (as described in Chapter 8). The Majestic logo is applied to the middle of the left sleeve, and a new, heat-pressed Cool Base tag adorns the left front tail. The Padres jersey is blue with white back and underarm gussets. The interlocking "SD" of their caps and regular jersey sleeve patches appears on the front left chest in white. The back of the jersey is blank. Player number in white Varsity on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Spring Training

The 2018 Spring Training jerseys continue the general design of the previous year, again featuring all player name and number lettering using each team's regular fonts in one layer of twill printed with special Spring Training and 2018-year-specific patterns. The Padres use their regular-season blue alternate as their base. The name and back numbers are sewn on in white patterned twill. A new CFX patch, shaped like home plate, is stitched to the right sleeve, featuring "2018" and "AZ" representing their Spring Training home.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Spring Training

The 2019 Spring Training jersey template evolves to create yet another iteration of the theme of the last three years. This time, jersey backs abandon the printed twill treatment of the past and return to regular season team-color twill like 2016, yet without 2016's printed patterns. The Padres use their regular-season blue alternate as the base for this design, carrying a new CFX patch on the right sleeve, featuring "2019" and "ARZ," referencing their Spring Training home. The name and back numbers are white.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2022 Spring Training

Spring Training is simplified for 2020, league-wide. For the first time since 2016, Spring Training jerseys eliminate the special sleeve patch indicating the year and location of a team's Spring Training home, and now the lettering is the same non-patterned, multi-layered twill as the teams wear in the regular season, making many teams' spring jerseys identical to their regular-season alternates. For 2020, the Padres use a design separate from their new, regular-season standard set, but similar to their brown alternate, placing the SD cap logo in yellow/white on the front left chest instead of PADRES lettering, with yellow/white name and back numbers. This style is discontinued after 2022.

© GameWornGuides.com

2023 Spring Training

As part of Nike's drive for simplification, several teams that had Spring Training-specific jerseys in prior years start using one of their alternates instead in 2023. For the Padres, this means their regular season brown road jersey also becomes their Spring Training top. Built on Nike's version of Majestic's Flex Base template, this jersey features a yellow/white for the slightly arched front "SAN DIEGO" wordmark and back player names and numbers. Thick yellow braid encircles sleeve ends and neck opening. An updated version of the iconic "Swingin' Friar" takes residence on one sleeve, while the other features the white-background Motorola advertising patch (the sleeves on which these two patches appear changes based on the players' handedness).

© GameWornGuides.com

Special Events Jerseys

1996-2003 Armed Forces Day

Earlier bright white lettering

Later off-white lettering

Side by Side

Off-white lettering

Armed Forces Day jersey, worn each year in mid-May to honor members of the military – and as a promotion, since San Diego is the home to many military personnel. During these years, these “jungle” camo jerseys were never listed in the team’s guide as an alternate, because they appeared only once each year. Numbers are Block Bold; names are Block; no nameplates.

The color of the lettering and the sleeve patch changed from bright white to off-white ivory toward the end of the run, though we don’t yet have an exact year the change happened. Note the subtle shading of the white vs. ivory sleeve patches side by side at left.

Oddly, the one-game camo jerseys 1996–2003 lacked a manufacturer’s sleeve logo. Not until the team began wearing these style jerseys every Sunday in 2006 did a maker’s mark appear on the sleeve end.

© GameWornGuides.com

1998 Turn Back The Clock to 1978

June 26, 1998: With more than two dozen uniform styles from which to choose, the Padres played their share of Turn Back the Clock games … and could choose to dress differently every day for a month if they wished! However, this is the first Padres TBTC game, vs. the 1978-attired California Angels in San Diego.

These are Mitchell & Ness 1978 TBTC jerseys used in 1998—but in error they have used the 1985–1990 style numbers on them instead of the Padres' distinctive "Mod" numbers of this period. Names on back should also be vertical arch (and on nameplates) and they are not. An unfortunate and unnecessary strikeout in my book.

© GameWornGuides.com

1999 Turn Ahead the Clock

Regarded by many fans as the silliest promotion ever, many (but not all) teams participated in a Century 21 sponsored game in 1999 that mused, “what will baseball look like in the 21st Century?" Most who saw these games would conclude that all common sense would have evaporated in the Future; nearly all of the uniforms worn for this promotion were awful.

We have finally located photos of game worn Padres jerseys from this game, played July 21, 1999, in San Francisco, and we share it here. The Padres’ design is particularly uninspired and looks like perhaps the art department gave it a few moments’ thought over a sandwich before submitting the final design. Back numbers are metallic silver/navy/white; player NOB is vertically stacked and is white. The special “futuristic” font used was shared for this event by the Mets, A’s, Mariners, and Royals.

© GameWornGuides.com

2000 Turn Back the Clock to 1969

2000 Bret Boone Game Used and Signed San Diego Padres Turn Back the Clock Jersey (Boone LOA)

2000 Bret Boone Game Used and Signed San Diego Padres Turn Back the Clock Jersey (Boone LOA)

The Padres visited the Pirates, who ordered the uniforms for the game. The Pirates wore 1960 uniforms to commemorate their 1960 World Series win. The Padres did not exist as an MLB team until 1969, so their suits were the inaugural year road tan uniform made by Mitchell & Ness. It has the San Diego 200th anniversary patch that seems to have been used on this style of jersey in lieu of the MLB 100th Anniversary patch worn by all other teams. It is also made of wool flannel and not knit—an itchy nod to realism that happens less and less frequently in Turn Back the Clock games now.

The commentary in the San Diego Press the following day was classic, and is shown in the sidebar at right.

"… The Padres visited their ugly past last night and played accordingly. Wearing tan and brown uniforms similar to those of the 1969 Padres, who lost 110 games, the modern Padres flopped around and lost 10-2 to the Pittsburgh Pirates. "Those guys had to wear UPS uniforms, and it carried over into the game," cracked Pirates star Brian Giles, who drilled two doubles and three singles.

The uniforms were as thick as burlap. Just the trick in muggy Pittsburgh."

© GameWornGuides.com

2003 Turn Back the Clock to 1969

In August 2003, no one knew where the Expos would be playing in the future, but it was a sure bet it would no longer be in Montreal. The decision to move the team to Washington, DC for the 2005 season finally came at the end of the 2004 season, after much delay. It seemed appropriate for the Padres to host a Turn Back the Clock game for the Expos on August 22, 2003, in San Diego. The Expos and the Padres were linked in birth as the teams that joined the National League for its 1969 expansion. For the occasion, both teams wore 1969 throwback uniforms with the 100th Anniversary patch on the left sleeve. The Padres' uniforms were beautifully made by Russell, in cream-colored knit. The team wordmark on the front is perfectly rendered, in brown outlined with yellow. Block with serif numerals were used on the reverse, which is correct as on the original Rawlings uniforms of 1969. No player names are used, which is also correct. As far as Turn Back the Clock uniforms go, these are about as good as it gets.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004-2005 Military Appreciation Day

2005

2005

For 2004 and 2005, the Padres used their new-style lettering in white on jungle camouflage.

As in prior years, this jersey was for one game, Military Appreciation Day, and this style was not listed by the team as an official alternate jersey in the MLB Style Guide.

"SD" Patch on the left sleeve; right sleeve is bare. All lettering, and the sleeve patch are ivory colored, not bright white.

Oddly, the one-game camo jerseys 1996–2003 lacked a manufacturer's sleeve logo. Not until the team began wearing these style jerseys every Sunday in 2006 did a maker's mark appear on the sleeve end.

2004

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Turn Back The Clock to 1984

May 14, 2004: The Padres played a game dressed in 1984 uniforms, marking their first World Series year. They played the Cubs, who were disagreeable to the idea and would not participate in the TBTC fun for this game (because the Padres beat them in the 1984 NLCS). The Cubs wore their standard 2004 road uniforms.

The replica uniforms were made by Majestic. The front wordmark looks pretty accurate, this time using the proper break of the wordmark right in the middle of the letter “D”, but the player numbers are not at all correct. Names on back should be vertical arch and are not (although nameplate use is correct); RAK on sleeve is too tall.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005 Turn Back the Clock to 1936 PCL Padres

Saturday, June 25: Playing the Mariners, who were attired as the Pacific Coast League Seattle Rainiers, the Padres suited up in these knit reproductions of the old uniforms. Note the old-time ¾ length sleeves.

© GameWornGuides.com

2006 Turn Back the Clock to 1948 PCL Padres

- From the Padres' press release: "Saturday's 7:05 p.m. PT matchup with the Cubs (May 6, 2006) marks the Padres' Third Annual Salute to the Negro Leagues. The Padres will sport 1948 Pacific Coast League uniforms in honor of San Diego native Johnny Ritchey, who broke the PCL color barrier while playing for the Padres that season."
- The manufacturer is Majestic. Looking at the few photos I have from the game, and comparing to 1948 originals, it certainly appears the copies are accurate.
- Cream-colored knit with navy knit trim on placket and sleeve ends. "Padres" script with underline in navy, outlined in red. The back numbers were two-color, just like the front script, and no player names were used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2006 Turn Back the Clock to 1976

August 3, 2006: The Padres played the Astros, with both teams recreating the look from 30 years prior.

These 1976 Padres throwbacks are beautifully recreated by Majestic. They are nearly flawless replicas of the Sand-Knit originals, including the odd V-neck and 1976-only NL Centennial patch on the right sleeve.

Wilson Varsity is used for player numbers, in substitute for the authentic Sand-Knit Varsity style. In 1976, the player numbers were styled differently on front and on the back (probably not intentionally).

© GameWornGuides.com

2007 Turn Back the Clock to 1972

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

- May 11, 2007: The Padres turned back the clock 35 years to 1972, when their all-yellow/gold knit uniforms shocked baseball. They played the 1972-attired St. Louis Cardinals.
- Majestic made these nearly flawless replicas, though they used Wilson Varsity for the back numbers, as opposed to the original Padres-only variant of Varsity used in 1972.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007 Turn Back the Clock to 1982

- Their opponents, the Red Sox wore mid-1980s uniforms for the game that were not terribly accurate for the period either.
- Capping that, with uniforms worn in the 2007 baggy style, the teams didn't much resemble their 1982 counterparts all that much.

- June 22, 2007: The Padres played the Red Sox in a Turn Back the Clock game wearing 1980-1983 style uniforms.
- Inexplicably, after 2006's masterful TBTC recreations by Majestic and the Padres, the 2007 uniforms were woefully inaccurate—featuring a front wordmark that is mis-sized and improperly straight-across instead of arced; numbers that are hardly close to the originals; and names on back not vertical arch like the originals. It is the same incorrect font used by Majestic for the 2004 Turn Back the Clock game.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007 Turn Back the Clock to 1998

The only clue that these are TBTC jerseys is the Majestic logo on the sleeve. Russell was the manufacturer of these jerseys for 12 years of their 13-year run (Goodman for one)—the longest the team ever wore a single style without a makeover.

- September 14, 2007: The Padres played the San Francisco Giants in a Turn Back the Clock game to 1998—the second time the Padres were in the World Series.
- Making these uniforms was no sweat for Majestic; it had only been six years since the Padres last wore these pinstripes.
- To me, this seems like pushing the nostalgia concept a bit far. I wonder how many people watching the game even realized this was a Turn Back the Clock night?

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Turn Back the Clock to 1978 (Road)

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

Left: Randy Jones in 1978, wearing an original uniform. Notice the difference in the team name lettering thickness compared to the replicas.

- June 14, 2008 in Cleveland. Both teams wore TBTC uniforms. The Padres wore their road brown jerseys, made by Majestic. Names on nameplates. Opponent was the 1978-attired Cleveland Indians.
- Uniforms are reasonably close copies of the 1978 originals. The team name on front was fatter/bolder on the originals; NOB on originals was vertical arch, and it is not on the recreations. Player numbers are accurate; I suspect that Majestic used my patterns for these.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Turn Back the Clock to 1978 (Home)

June 27, 2008 at home vs. the Seattle Mariners. Both teams wore Majestic replicas of their 1978 uniforms. The Padres' were accurate, except that the NOB lettering was not vertical arch. This always puzzles me, as today with computers, generating vertical arch lettering is a snap—and it looks so classy—yet no teams do it anymore. In 1978, vertical arch lettering had to be laid out by hand, using many sets of patterns and a trained eye, yet several teams used it.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Turn Back the Clock to 1969

April 25, 2009: The Padres had Turn Back the Clock Day to 1969, their inaugural year in the National League. Their opponent was the Pittsburgh Pirates. Majestic made the double knit replicas. From the front, the recreation was nothing short of perfect. Lettering in brown over yellow twill. The 1969 MLB 100th Anniversary patch correctly adorns the left sleeve. From the back, they are just plain wrong. The Padres never used the number font on these jerseys (except on the equally incorrect 1983 Turn Back the Clock uniforms made by Majestic in 2007). 1969's font was Wilson Varsity. No player names on back were used in 1969.Soapbox time: I don't know who submits and approves the designs, and whether they know the designs are inaccurate or just don't care, but it is confounding how sometimes the Majestic recreations are spot-on, and other times they are historically inaccurate, like this example.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Turn Back the Clock to 1978 “Throwback Thursdays”

The brown uniform was not worn at home by the Padres in 1978; it was their road uniform. Nevertheless, the 1978 road throwback uniform was worn at home by the Padres on four dates:

- May 27 vs. Cardinals
- July 29 vs. Dodgers
- August 12 vs. Pirates (who wore 1977 pinstripe jerseys/black pants)
- August 26 vs. Diamondbacks

This was a good replica by Majestic. Correct player number font, but front wordmark should be just a bit bolder to match original. NOB should be vertical arch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Turn Back the Clock to 1984 "Throwback Thursdays"

Original 1984: "d" splits in the middle, at buttons; 2010 replica does not.

Below: As worn on September 30 and then auctioned.*

The Padres wore their one-year 1984-style button front jerseys on two dates in 2010. They were two different sets of jerseys:

- April 15, 2010: Jackie Robinson Day, against the 1984 road uniform attired Atlanta Braves. All player jerseys had the number "42" on back; no player names.
- September 30, 2010 vs. the Cubs. These uniforms had player NOB on nameplate, and also featured a "Shirts off Their Backs" MDA charity patch on the left chest above the Padres wordmark.

These are "just OK" reproductions of the 1984 uniform, by Majestic. The front wordmark is too small; the "d" in Padres should split in the middle to match 1984's design; and the RAK sleeve memorial is too tall.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Turn Back the Clock to 1936 PCL Padres

Playing the Nationals on June 11, the Padres hosted a Turn Back the Clock contest, with the home team wearing the uniforms of the Pacific Coast League (PCL) Padres of 1936. The Nationals wore the uniforms of the 1936 Washington Senators.

The Majestic cream-colored navy pinstriped uniforms have the word "San Diego" vertically arched across the front. Player numbers are in block font on the reverse in single-color navy. No player names are used.

Left: 18-year old Ted Williams as a 1936 PCL Padre.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Turn Back the Clock to 1983

July 1, 2011: The Padres were the guests of the Seattle Mariners for a Turn Back the Clock to 1983 game. In an earlier edition, we guessed … wrongly … that these were the same set of jerseys used 13 days later at home for another, nearly identical Turn Back the Clock game. Since then, we have verified that they were indeed a separate set. The home team orders, and then has the right to sell, Turn Back the Clock uniforms for both teams in games held at their park. So while perhaps it was just a scheduling or unintentional communications issue between the teams, more likely this was a moneymaking opportunity for the Mariners that they did not want to pass up!

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Turn Back the Clock to 1983

July 14, 2011: Pullover 1983-style road jerseys were worn on Turn Back the Clock Night vs. the Giants. The Padres commemorated the passing of Dick Williams, their manager from 1982–1985, by wearing a round patch with his initials, "RHW" on it for this game only. Williams was the first manager to lead the Padres to a Division Championship in 1984 as well as their first World Series appearance.

The Padres 1983 replica jerseys were V-neck pullovers, and are not the same ones as the brown jerseys worn on two other dates during the 2011 season (just before and after this game). Compared to originals, the front wordmark is too small; NOB should be vertical arch and is not.

The jersey above retains the RHW sleeve patch that was worn only July 14.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Turn Back the Clock to 1984

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

These Cool Base copies of the Padres' 1984 brown button-front jerseys were ordered for a Turn Back the Clock game in Philadelphia on July 22.

These uniforms are nice copes of the 1984 originals, with the proper player number font in yellow and orange on back. Oddly, the "D" in "Padres" splits in the middle; it did not on the 2010 version of the same year's home jersey.

The yellow player names are sewn on nameplates, as was done in 1984. However, they are not vertical-arch-style as they should be. This is a simple-to-do touch with computers generating all the graphics for letter-cutting patterns in 2011, yet it is nearly always skipped by teams when they do Turn Back the Clock games. The "RAK" Ray Kroc memorial initials of 1984 are correctly sewn on the left sleeve in yellow twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Turn Back the Clock to 1978

May 18, 2012: Majestic recreations of 1978 pullover home uniforms were worn for this home contest against the Angels. They seem to be identical to the jerseys Majestic made for the Padres for a 2008 contest. Accurate, except for the lack of vertical arch player names on back, and the fact that the players wore them baggy— quite unlike the way they were worn in 1978.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Turn Back the Clock to 1988

August 3, 2012, vs. NY Mets at San Diego.

For the first time, the Padres "turned back the clock" to the 1985–1990 era, the one that featured the Padres logo in brown and orange on a brown pinstriped jersey. The Majestic uniforms were faithfully reproduced, including the correct, unique player name and number lettering rendered in a special Padres-only font, in brown twill outlined with orange. An "A+" effort.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Turn Back the Clock to 1991

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

This game was played September 14, 2012, at home vs. the visiting Rockies, who wore their regular uniforms. Padres' suits are visually identical to the ones worn in the September 14, 2007 Turn Back the Clock game. These Majestic uniforms are almost perfect. Navy pinstripes on full-weight knit fabric; the front wordmark and back numbers are navy/white/orange; the player NOB is navy. The only inaccuracy is that the player name font used here compared to 1991 is slightly different; the original is shorter and wider than the reproduction. The font used for these is, instead, the then-current (2012) Majestic block NOB font used for many teams.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 Turn Back the Clock to 1984

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

May 17, 2013 vs. the visiting (and non-throwback-attired) Washington Nationals. These seem to be visually identical to the set of uniforms worn by the Padres in a 2010 Turn Back the Clock contest, and are most likely made from the same patterns. However, they lack the “RAK” sleeve memorial lettering that was worn in 1984 and in 2010.

Button-front design, as worn in 1984 only. Compared to actual 1984 jerseys, the wordmark’s letter “d” is not split in the middle at the placket as it should be. Instead, the whole wordmark is shifted slightly to the right and is made slightly smaller. Wordmark is slightly too small. NOB should be vertical arch to match originals.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013-2014 Memorial Day

2013: With regular team patch on left sleeve.

2014: Adds "JC" patch on right sleeve

May 27, 2013 & May 26, 2014: Major League Baseball mandated uniforms for all teams with camouflage wordmarks on these days, and some pulled it off better than others. The Padres fell victim to the terrible combination of gray jersey fabric and pale camo wordmarks with white outlining -rendering all lettering invisible and making their jerseys look blank from the seats. And because they were the road team both years, they wore the same awful uniform twice. Perhaps, like the Pirates, they could have changed for the second year to the navy alternate jersey, where the lettering would actually have been seen. The 2014 jersey is distinguished by having the "JC" star on its right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 Turn Back the Clock to 1998

June 14, 2013 vs. the visiting Diamondbacks, who did not dress specially for the occasion. 1998 was the second time the Padres were in the World Series. And as they did for one game in that series, they wore their blue alternate jerseys. These Majestic throwbacks are nearly perfect, properly leaving off the white front numbers as is correct for 1998. The only thing that distinguishes them from the Russell originals is the addition of the Majestic logo to the left sleeve end.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 Turn Back the Clock to 1948 PCL Padres

July 12, 2013 vs. the visiting Giants, who wore their normal road uniforms. Before the San Diego Padres were named an expansion team for the 1969 season, the team name had been used to represent the town's Pacific Coast League minor league team. It seemed a natural choice for the MLB franchise.

In this game, the National League Padres turned the clock back to the 1948 PCL Padres. The uniforms are a virtual repeat of those worn in the May 6, 2006, game, made by Majestic. The cream-colored knit 2013 jerseys are also made by Majestic.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Turn Back the Clock to 1984 (Home)

Worn May 22 against the visiting Cubs, who dressed in their normal blue alternates. These Majestic jerseys use the same patterns as used for the past few 1984 Turn Back the Clock games. I would not probably bother to list them again separately here, except for one small difference: the “RAK” memorial sleeve lettering worn in 1984 is again present on this set of uniforms (it had been overlooked and left off the last time these were worn, in 2013). Names are correctly on nameplates, but should be vertical arch and are not.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Turn Back the Clock to 1984 (Road)

Three Turn Back the Clock games were played in these uniforms:

- May 23-24 against the visiting and non-throwback attired Cubs;
- September 20 against the Giants.

Although this basic jersey style was worn from 1980-1984, 1984's model was the only year that had a button front instead of being a pullover.

The Padres wore similar Turn Back the Clock uniforms in 2011 in a road game against the Phillies, with one notable difference to uniform collectors: The wordmark is split between the "a" and the "d," unlike the originals and the 2011 jerseys, which have the split in the middle of the "a." The improper split causes the wordmark to be slightly off-center, but is doubtless easier to align and sew. These jerseys feature a smaller front wordmark than the originals from 1984, and RAK memorial letters are properly added to the left sleeve, though they are too large. Names on back should be vertical arch, and they are not. But they are on nameplates—an accurate touch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Turn Back the Clock to 1985-1990
"Way Back Wednesdays"

http://www.sportingnews.com/mlb/story/2015-01-28/san-diego-padres-brown-uniforms-2015-season-throwback-alternate?eadid=SOC/fb/SNMain

Prior to the start of the 2015 season, the Padres announced that they would wear throwback brown-pinstriped 1985-1990 style uniforms for five games in 2015—all a part of a "Way Back Wednesday" promotion.

The jerseys were flawlessly reproduced for the Padres by Majestic in full-weight knit with replicas of the team wordmark in brown, outlined with orange, as well as using a perfect reproduction of the period Padres-only name and number font.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Memorial Day

For three consecutive years, the Padres are on the road for Memorial Day, but the camo is now applied to their new road jersey template. The desert camo layer replaces the top layer of twill, and now has a navy outline— much more readable than the white from previous years. The look is still almost impossible to see from a distance—especially the bold front wordmark. In 2015, the MLB Silhouetted Batter neck tag is changed to dark green/ khaki/white, rather than its typical colors from 2014.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Independence Day

For Independence Day 2015, all 29 US-based teams adopt patriotic “Stars and Stripes” uniforms for the first time. All uniforms are lettered in red, white, and blue, regardless of the team’s normal color palette.

Jersey trim and patches remain the same as the teams’ regular jerseys.

All teams sport a stars and stripes version of the MLB Silhouetted Batter logo on back collar. The Padres wear their road gray jerseys with the blue-background version of the starred twill, which features large white stars; all lettering outlined in red, including their front logo as well as back numbers. Player names on back are in red. An American flag patch is sewn on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2018 Turn Back the Clock to 1990s
“Way Back Wednesdays”

The Padres have no shortage of past jerseys to use for throwbacks—many of which are wildly colorful and unusual. Odd, then, that this would be the third time they would bring back this comparatively simple style, 15 years since they had worn it daily. Worn on several home “Way Back Wednesdays” during 2016–2018, this Majestic Cool Base jersey is built on a knit jersey template (no side or underarm gussets) with the knit-style sewn-on front tagging as well. Like previous versions, these are excellent reproductions of the originals. The front wordmark and back numbers are navy/white/orange, and the player name on back is navy. In 2018, it is worn with the KT|RP memorial patch on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Mother's Day

Sunday, May 8, 2016: For the first time, all teams wear special pink-trimmed uniforms Mother's Day. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction, with the rubberized tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Mother's Days); the Majestic sleeve logo is rendered in pink, and the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark pink/light pink/white. The Padres wear their alternate blue camo jerseys, with the front logo lettering in pink with white outlines. The player names on back are rendered in single-color white; back numbers are pink/white. Thankfully, the American flag patch on the left sleeve retains its usual coloring, and does not switch to Mother's Day colors as other team patches do. The jersey trim remains white on the blue camo jersey, unlike other teams that change to gray or pink.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Memorial Day

The 2016 Memorial Day jerseys are constructed in the Flex Base style for the first time, and the ChromaFlex MLB logo at back neck becomes black and dark gold for all teams. The new league-wide template, with higher-visibility woodland camo lettering and black outlines, makes this set more legible than in previous years. The Padres add the camouflage trimmings to their road gray jerseys for the game on May 30. The front lettering and back numbers are rendered in woodland camo with a black outline, and player names appear in single-color black. Like other teams, their trim elements are also changed to single-color black from the usual blue. The jersey lacks the 2016 All Star Game patch, normally found on their road uniforms.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Father's Day

June 19, 2016: For the first time, all teams wear special light-blue-trimmed uniforms Father's Day. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction, with the rubberized front tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Father's Days); the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted batter patch appears in dark royal blue/light blue/white. The Padres wear their alternate blue camo jerseys, with the front logo lettering in light blue with white outlines. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray; back numbers are light blue/white. Using white for outlines, the Padres are one of the few teams to have one of their original twill colors remain the same. However, it was likely the best (and perhaps only) choice for visibility against the blue camo. In addition, the American flag patch on the left sleeve retains its usual coloring and does not switch to Father's Day colors like other teams' patches do. The jersey trim remains white on the blue camo jersey, unlike other teams that change to dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Independence Day

MLB creates another new Independence Day jersey template for the 2016 iteration, now built on Majestic's new Flex Base jersey construction. Each Independence Day jersey has a ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB appliqué sewn on the back of the neck. The Padres are on the road, and wear their blue alternate road jerseys. All clubs have a choice of two styles of star-spangled lettering twill, and the Padres select the red twill version with gray outlines for the front lettering and for their back numbers, with a gray player name on back. The Padres are one of only three teams (with the Dodgers and Royals) to have additional layers of twill added to their typical single-layer jerseys. In contrast, several other teams have their multilayer designs simplified to two colors. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. All jersey trim -- normally white -- becomes red.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 All-Star Game-Only Road

The 2016 All-Star Game was held at the Padres' Petco Park. The All-Star Game home team alternates each year, and in 2016, the AL was the home team in an NL ballpark. The Padres saw an opportunity to add yet another jersey: a gray version of their home jersey, exclusively for use by the Padres all-stars, playing a "road" game in their home park. In contrast to their white home jerseys, the gray version sports the All-Star Patch on the right sleeve, where most of the other all-stars wore it. It also had stars on either side of the MLB Silhouetted Batter logo on the back of the collar, a recent addition to All-Star Game jerseys. Only two players—Wil Myers and Drew Pomeranz (and Padres manager Andy Green, who was on the coaching staff for the exhibition)—wore the one-game-only model.

Your author rarely offers opinions, but this is what the Padres road jersey should be. It is simply perfect, with understated graphic simplicity and classy colors.

The jersey pictured above is my own hand-made recreation of this style that was not made available to fans. I made it using a gray road jersey which I stripped of all lettering and trim, then transplanted onto it the trim and lettering from a white SD home jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Turn Back the Clock to 1936 PCL Padres

For the third time, the Padres pay tribute to the other San Diego Padres, their 1936 Pacific Coast League predecessors. In a September 7 game against the visiting Red Sox, who wear 1936 road jerseys, the teams honor Hall of Famer Ted Williams, a Red Sox legend who was a member of the 1936 PCL Padres. Once again, the Majestic cream-colored navy-pinstriped uniforms have “San Diego” vertically arched across the front. Player numbers are in Block font on the reverse in single-color navy. No player names are used. In contrast to previous versions, this one is made from Cool Base material, but in a knit jersey template (no mesh underarm gussets), and carries traditional knit jersey Majestic tail tagging.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Mother's Day

Pink-trimmed Mother's Day jerseys return on May 13-14, 2017. Once again, the Flex Base jerseys have the usual front left tail Majestic heat applied vinyl locker tag and team inventory tag inside the bottom of the placket. Returning as well is the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon glued on left chest; the pink Majestic sleeve logo; and the dark pink/light pink/white ChromaFlex MLB Silhouetted Batter applique stitched on the back of the collar. All multi-colored lettering is done in the lightweight-twill style. The Padres wear their road gray jerseys with the front logo lettering in pink/dark gray. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while back numbers are pink/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of pink, gray, and white. All jersey trim, normally blue, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Memorial Day (Road)

The next incarnation of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single-color black, while the back-of-collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Padres apply this style to their road gray jerseys as worn on May 27-28, 2017 and May 26-27, 2018.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Memorial Day (Home)

The next incarnation of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single-color black, while the back-of-collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Padres apply this style to their home white jerseys as worn on May 29, 2017 and May 28, 2018.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Father's Day

Light blue-trimmed Father's Day jerseys return on June 17-18, 2017. Once again, the Flex Base jerseys have the usual front left tail Majestic tagging and set tagging at the inside bottom of the placket. Returning as well is the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon glued on left chest, the light blue Majestic embroidered sleeve logo, and the dark royal blue/light blue/white back collar ChromaFlex MLB Silhouetted Batter patch. The Padres wear road gray with the front logo lettering in light blue/dark gray. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while back numbers are light blue/dark gray. All jersey trim, normally blue, becomes dark gray. The team's SD sleeve patch is also changed to light blue/dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Independence Day (Home)

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less-busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two color options for the new twill – appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 1-2, 2017, the Padres wear their home white jersey with blue patterned twill/red front logo lettering and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color red. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue. All jersey trim is single-color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Independence Day (Road)

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less-busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two different color options for the new twill – appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 4, 2017 and July 2-4, 2018, the Padres wear their road gray jersey with blue patterned twill/red front logo lettering and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color red. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue. All jersey trim is single-color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Turn Back the Clock to 1983

Padres fans love the team's brown era, and this throwback, worn on July 7 and 9, 2017 in Philadelphia, celebrates the 1983 road incarnation of the team's last pullover style. The team wordmark and back player numbers are in the Padres' "Mod" font in yellow/orange. Wide yellow/orange knit trim surrounds the sleeve ands and V-neck.

Like the last version of this Majestic full-knit throwback from 2011, compared to the originals the front wordmark is too small and the yellow name on back should be vertical arch and is not.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Players Weekend

To highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans, MLB introduces the colorful Players Weekend promotion. In addition to relaxed regulations on team-standard color and design of cleats, bats, and other equipment, MLB encourages players to wear nicknames on the backs of a new set of very colorful jerseys. Meant to evoke the look of youth league designs, the two-toned Cool Base pullovers feature bright and contrasting body and sleeve colors, and include a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people in their lives with handwritten black marker messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature a variant of the MLB logo showing the growth of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat-pressed Majestic manufacturer and set tags are applied on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. All numbers on back are in single color Varsity, and the player names in 2 ¾" single color Block Condensed, regardless of the team's usual font. On August 25-27, 2017, the Padres wear jerseys with navy blue bodies and yellow sleeves with white nicknames and yellow numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide yellow/white/yellow trim. The front features their home jersey lettering, here rendered in yellow/white kiss-cut lightweight twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Players Weekend

Players Weekend returns for a second year; a promotion intended to highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans. Brightly-colored jerseys are worn on the field on August 24-26, 2018, and once again, the Cool Base pullover jerseys are based on youth league designs with a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people with handwritten messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature an adaptation of the MLB logo showing the evolution of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat-pressed Majestic and set tags appear on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. The Padres wear jerseys with gray bodies and yellow sleeves with white nicknames and yellow numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide yellow/white/yellow trim. The front features their home jersey lettering, here rendered in yellow/white kiss-cut twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Players Weekend

The third incarnation of Players Weekend turns the colorful jersey concept on its ear, reducing all teams to monochromatic designs in either black or white, with all team sleeve patches and trim removed, leaving a clean but stark template. Gone are the contrasting sleeves and special patches with messages of inspiration. MLB says that this new approach is to emphasize the colorful, personalized cleats, bats, and other gear the players choose for the promotion, which spans August 23-25, 2019. Jerseys are now button-front Flex Base, with appropriate Majestic manufacturer and set tagging. Back-of-collar CFX MLB logo is now silver and black. All teams also wear a memorial patch for Angels pitcher Tyler Skaggs, a white “45” in a black circle, on the left sleeve. Most teams removed this patch before auctioning off the jerseys. The Padres wear a white version of their home jersey with the front lettering and back varsity numbers rendered in white/gray with gray nickname on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2023 Turn Back the Clock to 1948 PCL Padres

Stephen Kraljic collection

For a third time, the Padres throw back to the 1948 Pacific Coast League San Diego Padres, their namesake. This instance, on April 17, celebrates the 75th anniversary of Johnny Ritchey breaking the professional baseball color barrier on the West Coast. Ritchey, who would have also been celebrating his 100th birthday the same week as the game, was a catcher with the Padres in 1948 and 1949, becoming the first African American player in the PCL to be with his hometown team.

Made by Nike for the first time, these cream-colored knit jerseys have navy knit trim on neck opening, placket, and two rows at the sleeve ends. “Padres” script and back numbers in navy/red twill, with no player names on back. These appear to be identical to the first two times the team wore this style (2006 and 2013) and are close to what the PCL Padres themselves wore 75 years earlier, though that uniform may have had three-color braid trim rather than single-color knit trim, based on photos from the era.

Johnny Ritchey, 1948

© GameWornGuides.com

Prototypes and Oddballs

Pre-1972 Prototype Gold

In these undated photos, Nate Colbert (Padres 1969-1974) is wearing a gold Padres jersey that has detail differences from the ones the team started wearing for the 1972 season. The vertically ribbed knit collar has a gray highlight stripe running through its middle, not found on the smooth, solid-brown knit collar trim on the 1972 uniform. The sleeve end trim here is gold/brown/gold, not the approved brown/gold. And his number on back appears to be outlined with white, unlike the plain brown numbers used in 1972. From the photo backgrounds, we might imagine this was Spring Training, and that he was perhaps modeling a prototype uniform for photographers, as the blurred players in the background appear to be wearing earlier white flannels.

Colbert wore #17, yet the jersey he is wearing here has the number 5 on the back. For reasons unknown to me, manufacturers often number prototype sample jerseys with the numeral 5. Another clue, perhaps, that this was a prototype design.

© GameWornGuides.com

1974 Washington Stars

The Padres were widely rumored to be planning a move to Washington DC for the 1974 season. From information gathered over the years, during the 1973 season Padres ' general manager Peter "Buzzie" Bavasi told his staff privately that the team would be moving to DC for the 1974 season at the latest -- perhaps even before the end of the 1973 season -- and that owner C. Arnold Smith was broke.

Although Bavasi admonished his staff to keep their meeting quiet, the story broke in the papers the next day. Joe Danzansky, president of Giant Foods, was going to purchase the Padres. The team would remain in San Diego for the rest of the year, unless "financial concerns" forced them to move later that summer.

For the rest of the summer, baseball fans in Washington were on Cloud Nine. It was not a matter of "if things work out" or "assuming all parties agree" It was assumed to be a done deal, and everyone - everyone - was talking of the move as a certainty (although no one had signed anything at this point).

San Diego fans were so sure the team was leaving that they stopped going to games. In fact, they drew just 1,400 fans to one game that September. Topps was so sure the Padres were moving that they created the famous (at least to collectors) "Washington National League" cards – because schedules dictated the first card series had to be printed before the expected official announcement was to be made.

in December, Danzansky announced that he and a group of partners were ready to purchase the Padres. He was given three weeks by MLB to complete the deal. But sometime during that time, San Diego's city attorney obtained a court order to force the team to pay off the remainder of the stadium lease to the city, even if it moved. That lease was to run for fifteen more years.

With the court order in place, the banks that were planning to finance Danzansky's deal pulled out. They were afraid the team couldn't be profitable if they were forced to pay for two stadiums. Suddenly, this previously-sure-thing deal was dead.

Major League Baseball said it was ready to assume ownership of the Padres if Smith was unable to keep his financial obligations. Before that could happen, McDonald's' co-founder Ray Kroc came forward and purchased the team, keeping it in San Diego.

Topps preemptively created generic "Washington Nat'l League" cards in advance of the 1974 season. Notice the airbrushed SD logo on McCovey's cap; he had just been acquired from the San Francisco Giants after the 1973 season.

All of this happened so close to the beginning of the 1974 season that it is easy to imagine that details such as team uniforms were in place. Look at the card below. This uniform on pitching prospect Dave Freisleben is real, and here are the studio color shots to prove it. Below: Perhaps the same prototype jersey on display in the club level of the Washington Nationals stadium, submitted by reader Tom Turner.

Some of the text above is paraphrased from personal remembrances posted on "The Beltway Boys" Blog on the Web.

© GameWornGuides.com

1978 Alternate Gold Prototype

Offered at left is a jersey said to be a Padres prototype, most likely for their one-year 1978 gold alternate. Made by Sand-Knit, which had also made the team's 1976 home jerseys, this version looks like a mashup of the 1976 home entry and the eventual 1978 alternate that was made by Wilson instead. The fact that Sand-Knit had worked with the Padres, and had done so around the time they may have been considering a uniform change for 1978, lends credence to this jersey as a possible sample. All front and back lettering is screened on, which may sometimes be a sign of a hastily created sample. There is no name on the back, but it appears that there is space for one. The use of "22" is curious, as the number belonged to pitcher Brent Strom, though he was a San Diego native, so perhaps that explains it (or it was just selected at random). We don't know for sure if this ever made it into any real consideration by the team, but if it did, it was clear the Padres wanted something bolder for their alternates that season, and this design was left behind.

Above: A 1976 home jersey, made by Sand-Knit.
Below: The 1978 gold alternate by Wilson that was used on-field.

© GameWornGuides.com

1985 Prototypes

Collector Kyle Bonamo shares his prototype 1985 Padres jersey made by Sand-Knit. It is an orange pinstriped pullover with dark brown and orange lettering. Sewn-on brown/orange/yellow knit trim is on the tops of the shoulders. This design proposal lost out to the brown pinstriped design with which we are all familiar. Notice the contemporary-styled Friar patch on the sleeve. ”Tagging” in tail says ”84 Garvey 44S”; interesting because Garvey was #6. Perhaps the stitcher didn’t realize, and sewed the numbers upside down? Prototype jerseys are often sewn using the number and name of a famous player.

Can’t help noticing the resemblance of the prototype to this 1984 Padres minor league Las Vegas Stars jersey, made by Wilson.

© GameWornGuides.com

1985 Prototypes, continued

Excerpted from "More about that Padres Prototype Jersey"

By jbox Dec 16, 2016, gaslampball.com

When the Padres signed [Steve] Garvey, the team took a significant turn and gained national prominence. As Andy [Strasberg, formerly of the Padres' marketing office] told me, "we were getting a lot of complaints from the players" about the uniforms at the time. The players didn't feel professional wearing a uniform whose major color was brown. You may remember Steve Garvey saying of the uniforms "The Padre uniform me look like a taco."

After some information gathering, Andy took the lead and was the one who contacted the design firm of Sidjakov, Berman and Gomez in San Francisco to create the uniforms. They had designed the Giants uniforms, so it was no coincidence that the uniforms so closely resembled each other.

Of the prototype [Andy] said, "It wasn't the only one. I would say, there had to be at least a half a dozen uniforms and designs. Out of those designs there were variations of colors." When I pressed him further, he unfortunately didn't remember the other colors or variations. It was after all 30 years ago.

Thanks to collectors Alejandro and Diego Pineda, here are a look at a number of these 1985 prototypes from their amazing collection.

© GameWornGuides.com

1985 Prototypes, continued

While these all retain some brown as part of their designs, it is considerably toned down and the uniforms are much more conservative. On this page, bottom left is a gray pinstriped road uniform that is just like the home uniform adopted for 1985, save for the base color of the fabric.

© GameWornGuides.com

1985 Prototypes, continued

© GameWornGuides.com

1989 Prototype Home

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

W.A. Goodman and Sons was a small, privately held local Southern California company who outfitted the Los Angeles Dodgers and California Angels for many years. They also occasionally made uniforms and team jackets for the New York Mets, Houston Astros and Cincinnati Reds. They submitted this design proposal for what one must assume was another Padres uniform reshuffling. At the time this blue-pinstripe prototype was made, the team was using brown-pinstriped jerseys with a brown/orange wordmark. This Goodman proposal has blue pinstripes and a blue/orange wordmark with two-color Block numbers on the back. The Padres did switch to a blue-pinstriped theme for 1991, with similar, but not identical graphics to this Goodman proposal, and for the first year alone, they used Goodman as the maker of their home jerseys before switching to Russell in 1992.

Design as adopted in 1991 features three-color wordmark with a drop shadow and three-color numbers on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

1991-1992 Benito Santiago #09

1992

1992

Benito Santiago before (left) and after (center) his switch to "09" with the Padres, and also wearing the number with the Marlins (right).

Twenty-season veteran catcher Benito Santiago started wearing number 9 in his second Major League season, during which he won the Rookie of the Year Award. Given that he was also born on March 9, why did he switch to the unusual choice of "09" in 1991? Simple. The vertical strap of his chest protector covered the number, and he wanted to make sure it was visible. Santiago's decision carried from the end of his tenure with the Padres in 1992 through his two following seasons with the Marlins in 1993 and 1994. The rest of his long career, he wore various other numbers for eight other teams (including "9" without the leading zero). And even though he wore the number for only a fraction of his playing days, it is frequently associated with him. Aside from a handful of players who wore "00" he is the only player we know of who has worn a leading zero in a jersey number.

Of note, outfielder Glenallen Hill once asked to wear "01" after being traded to Cleveland on June 27, 1991, but his request was denied, perhaps because manager John McNamara was then wearing "1". McNamara was fired two weeks later, and Hill took over "1" - without a zero - the next season.

© GameWornGuides.com

1994 Madres Oddball

The Madres were formed in 1972 as a civic volunteer organization. Their initial focus was supporting youth baseball and softball teams in the San Diego area. By 2006 they were supporting more than 30,000 children in youth leagues. They participate in many other activities in the community and at the ballpark, including assisting with the annual Friar Fest; doing corporate mailings; running silent auctions; and managing the Padres' "Shirts Off Their Backs" promotion.

This jersey is certainly professionally crafted. Someone took the time and trouble to draw the logo, create patterns, and sew the complicated design. Creating the sleeve patch took an investment of time, talent, and money.

I wrote to the Madres organization to ask if they had any knowledge of the history of this jersey, and after discussing it among their board members, no one had any recollection of this jersey or where it may have come from. Tom Werner owned the Padres in 1994, and it is likely that is his name represented on the back.

© GameWornGuides.com

White and Gray Spring Training Jerseys

These white and gray mesh batting practice jerseys show up frequently in the hobby. They are Spring Training jerseys. The white one at far left is made by Majestic. I have gray ones in my collection, made by Majestic and Rawlings. It was not uncommon for teams to have BP jerseys from multiple vendors.

© GameWornGuides.com

1999 Prototype Alternate

This prototype jersey is said by its owner to be from 1999. The Padres were again considering a style change. What they came up with eventually became the front lettering style for the 2004 gray road jersey. Note the experimentation with a new “P” logo with a palm tree superimposed inside. This logo was not adopted by the team.

On the back, one-color white names are in Block, and numbers are in a display font that was not adopted. It looks somewhat like the Padres’ late-1980s font mixed with the early-1990s Astros number font, two-color gold/white. Notice that they picked the name and number of 1970s Padres pitcher Randy Jones.

© GameWornGuides.com

2001 Tony Gwynn Retirement Ceremony

In previous editions of this book, we have reported this jersey as evidence of the Padres' first Turn Back the Clock game, where they wore this style of jersey. Now it appears that these were not worn in a game at all, but were part of a pregame retirement ceremony for Tony Gwynn.

The date on the jersey of September 21, 2001, is inaccurate; any special event planned for that date was canceled following the tragic events of 9/11/2001. Instead, the pregame retirement ceremony was held October 7, 2001 -- the last day of the 2001 season (a season that had been extended for a week by these events).

A video once posted on YouTube (but now gone) of the ceremony. Lezcano appears likely wearing this jersey, comes in from right field and hugs Gwynn.

The uniforms for this ceremony were made by Mitchell & Ness, and were well done and generally accurate, except for the lack of vertical arch player names as would have been correct.

© GameWornGuides.com

Oddballs: 2004 Russell Preproduction, Retail Sale "Prototype" Jerseys

Bill Henderson Collection

(Above) Player name font as used on the field was different than the specification in the MLB Style Guide.

Bill Henderson Collection

Bill Henderson Collection

For 2004, Majestic was named the official uniform supplier to MLB, and the only company authorized to place its logo on jerseys sold at retail. Russell was expecting to be the Padres' supplier for 2004, as they had been in previous years. These 2004 Russell jerseys were lettered on the back using a custom NOB typeface that the Padres had selected. But Majestic won the contract, and the Padres used the old standard, block NOB font they had used for years. Hundreds (thousands?) of these Russell jerseys were dumped to the discounters in early 2004, and many of them showed up for sale on eBay.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005 Prototype Home Vest

Stephen Kraljic Collection

The Padres refreshed their uniforms in 2004, bringing in script and the color “sand” - really tan - after a relatively quiet period of consistency. This sample suggests they weren’t don tinkering, even just a year after their rebrand. Here we have a vest version of their home jersey, complete with blue undershirt that includes the “SD” ligature sewn on the left sleeve. The tagging sewn inside the lower placket reads “PAD-Home-Vest-05-1” with “05” being the year and “1” representing the version number. It is possible there were other iterations as well, because the Padres really like to try new things. On back, “PLAYER” and “5” are typical for samples, though the “5” here could just as easily stand for the year as much as it is a nod to the tradition of using that player number for samples. Note that the drop shadow on the front team script is tan, an element that the team’s sleeved home jerseys did not adopt until 2007. Perhaps this sample influenced that decision.

© GameWornGuides.com

2006 Prototype Camouflage

Found on eBay, this jersey is surely a Majestic pre-production prototype that did not make the cut. The tagging visible in the close-up photo has a code that translates most probably to “Padres Camouflage 2006 sample #1.”

2006 was the first year that the Padres listed this uniform as a true alternate, and was the year they switched to mesh desert-style camo, replacing the earlier jungle camouflage fabric used since the late 1990s. On this version, all of the lettering, and even the Majestic sleeve logo, is brown. The final version that was accepted by the team had all of these details sewn in dark green, adding some contrast to the intentionally drab design, and making the lettering easier to see.

© GameWornGuides.com

2000s Prototype Turn Back the Clock to 1978

This entry appears to be a Majestic sample for a throwback game that would have featured the Padres' colorful 1978 alternate jersey. The "Player" for name on back, use of the year "78" for the number, and the non-retail size 46 are all hallmarks of such samples. Tagging puts this one somewhere between 2000-2011, and the Padres did throwback to their 1978 uniforms a few times over that period, but only their home whites or road browns (a sample of which is shown on a following page); never this gold alternate. Perhaps it is for the best, as this isn't particularly faithful to the original. The throwback's front logo lettering is not bold enough, and the "SAN DIEGO" lettering is not quite in the right position. Name on back should be vertically arched and on a nameplate, but is not. The yellow trim on the sleeve ends is on the wrong place, and the V-neck should be brown instead of gold. Finally, the sleeve construction differs from the Wilson originals, shown at left.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 or 2010 Prototype Turn Back the Clock to 1978

A companion to the 1978 alternate sample on the previous page, this entry appears to be a Majestic sample for a throwback game that used the Padres' brown 1978 road jersey. The "Player" for name on back, use of the year "78" for the number, and the non-retail size 46 are all hallmarks of such samples. Tagging puts this one somewhere between 2000-2011, and the Padres did throwback to their 1978 road uniforms in 2008 and 2011, making one of these games the likely source of this sample. However, in contrast to its sibling sample on the previous page, this one is reasonably close to the original, seen at right (maybe that is why it was chosen and the gold version was scrapped?). But if we're getting picky (and that's what we do), the throwback sample's front logo lettering is not bold enough, and the name on back should be vertically arched, but is not.

1978

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Prototype Alternate

Stephen Kraljic Collection

During the first phase of the Padres' "sand" era (2004-2011), the team continued to tinker with its uniform lineup. Here's another example in the form of a 2008 prototype alternate jersey. The team had just introduced a blue alternate in 2004, but restless as they are, they gave a look at this one too. Here, the Padres' "SD" ligature appears on the left chest in white/tan, with a white/tan player number parallel to it on right chest. On the back, player name appears in white, with number matching the white/tan combo of the front. Neck and placket have white knit trim while the sleeves are trimmed in white/navy/tan braid. The Swingin' Friar takes residence on the left sleeve. This one has a team-issue "0062" code on the wash tag, and a sample tag with "PAD-ALT-J-08" attesting to its pedigree as a prototype. As always, "PLAYER" and the year on back and size 46 are also the norm for this sort of preview of a new design. All things considered, this is a nice looking jersey, a little more traditional than their actual alternate navy jersey of the time. Though it was not brought into the fold, it may have been inspiration for the team's even simpler 2012-2019 alternate, which was introduced after the sand phase had ended.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Prototype Alternates

Stephen Kraljic Collection

Stephen Kraljic Collection

Stephen Kraljic Collection

Left: The team's sleeve patch, introduced in 2004, with a tiny hint of light blue that may have influenced the color of the bottom two samples.

Still in the midst of their 2004-2011 uniform set, the Padres continue to tinker, once again to no avail. Here we have three unadopted prototypes for the 2009 season, in Cool Base for the first time, one navy and two in light blue.

The top jersey, with sample tag reading "PAD-ALT-09-J-2" (suggesting this is a second version of the sample) is closely based on the 2008 navy sample earlier in this chapter. Here, the SD ligature is now tan/white, and the knit trim around the neck is now tan. The front number on the right chest is lower than the 2008 version as well. All else remains the same.

The middle jersey looks like an interpretation of team's then-current navy alternate recolored on a light blue jersey. Neck and sleeve trim is navy/white/navy, with front lettering and back numbers in navy/white, with a white player name on a nameplate. The sample tag for this one reads "PADB-ALT-09-J-2" suggesting this is version "B" and a second iteration of it.

The bottom jersey, also in light blue, more resembles the team's then-current home jersey, with navy/white/tan drop shadow front script, navy/white/tan player numbers and a navy player name on a nameplate. Neck and sleeve trim are navy/white/tan as well. The sample tag has been removed from this one.

Light blue/powder blue has no historical precedent with the Padres, so it is interesting to see the color used here. There was a touch of the color in the team's sleeve patch logo as early as 2004, so it was not completely foreign. The Royals brought back powder blue in 2008 to great fan acclaim, so that may have also been an inspiration for these samples.

The use of Jake Peavy's name and number here is atypical of the era, when "PLAYER" and a year were more often used. However, Peavy had won the Cy Young Award in 2007, not long before these samples were made up in advance of possible use in 2009.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Prototype Homes

Stephen Kraljic Collection

Here are two samples for the Padres 2012 home jersey update. As is typical of Cool Base prototypes, the jerseys are size 46, have a team issued 0063 code on the wash tag, and use “Player” for player name and “12” - the year of issue for the jersey.

Both include sample tagging with different numbers showing which designs and iterations the are. These two are PAD-HJ-D2-1-2012 on top and PAD-HJ-D2-2-2012 on bottom. These can be understood as Padres Home Jersey, design two, versions 1 and 2, for 2012

The base jerseys and trim are identical on both. The top version, D2-1, has navy/gray lettering throughout while the bottom, D2-2, uses navy/tan. The player number font differs as well, with the top jersey appearing to use a bolder version of the Padres’ early 1970s Varsity numbers, while the bottom jersey uses Wilson Varsity.

Ultimately, the Padres chose the bottom sample, D2-2, to use on-field in 2012. However, neither jersey appears to have the team’s left-sleeve patch, which was a feature of this jersey for that season. Conspicuously, the MLB logo patch is not present on the back of the neck of the bottom sample, but it is possible that time constraints, or not having any of those patches to match this color scheme, led to it being left off.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Prototype Roads

Stephen Kraljic Collection

Stephen Kraljic Collection

Companions to those on an earlier page, here are three samples for the Padres 2012 road jersey update. As is typical of Cool Base prototypes, the jerseys are size 46, have a team issued 0063 code on the wash tag, and use “Player” for player name and “12” - the year of issue for the jersey.

All three include sample tagging with different numbers showing which designs and iterations the are. From top to bottom, they are PAD-RJ-D1-1-2012; PAD-RJ-D2-1-2012; and PAD-RJ-D2-2-2012 on bottom. PAD-RJ is Padres Road Jersey, and 2012 is the year. D1-1 (top) is design one, version one; while D2-1 (middle) and D2-2 are design two, versions one and two respectively.

The base jerseys and trim are identical on all. The top version, D1-1, has navy/red lettering throughout while the middle and bottom, D2-1 and D2-2, use navy/white, except for the bottom having a navy name. Despite the top and middle being considered different designs, the lettering colors are the only differences between them. Both have surprisingly small and squat “SAN DIEGO” vertically arched lettering, while player numbers on back appearing to be a bolder version of the Padres’ early 1970s Varsity numbers. The front wordmark on the bottom version matches what the team chose to use, as do the player numbers in Wilson Varsity.

Ultimately, the bottom sample, D2-2, was the closest to the one used on-field in 2012, lacking only the white outline on the player name. However, none of these samples appear to have the team’s left-sleeve patch, which was a feature of this jersey for that season. Conspicuously, the MLB logo patch is not present on the back of the neck of the bottom sample, but it is possible that time constraints led to it being left off.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 Prototype Mexican Heritage

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

This prototype jersey tagged "PAD-Heritage D1-1-2013" (likely code for design exercise #1) and dated 2013, has all of the lettering, patches, and trim sewn in red and green. It certainly appears that the Padres were planning a Mexican Heritage game that never happened. The jersey is Cool Base, and as is traditional with prototype jerseys, it is lettered with the player NOB "Player" and the player number as the calendar year. Note that the team sleeve patch is embroidered in red and white. The trend toward recoloring team patches to match the uniform event theme was ahead of its time for 2013. It was not until 2016 that MLB applied this technique for all teams when making Independence Day, Memorial Day, Mother's Day, and Father's Day jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Prototype Batting Practice

For a while there, the Padres made a LOT of changes to their uniforms, which in turn created a LOT of prototypes for us to discuss. Many of the samples we have seen have closely mirrored what the team adopted for on-field use, but this one is an exception. This is a prototype for the teams 2014 BP jersey. As with many other samples, the jersey is size 46 and includes sample tagging reading PAD-BP-D1-1-2014 for Padres batting practice jersey, design 1, 2014. The use of “Player” for player name and “14” - the intended year of issue for the jersey - as player number are typical as well. This version of the jersey was not chosen, and though it has some similarities to what was used on field, the images at right of the actual jerseys shows that this sample was little more than a starting point.

2014 Home BP

2014 Road BP

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Prototype Camo-on-Camo??

David Haimes Collection

Whether this is a prototype or simply a sewing mistake, this 2015 “camo on camo” jersey carries a team issue inventory tag. Even the most liberal among us might have to concede that this exercise takes the theme a little bit too far.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Prototype Home

WHY, PADRES, WHY? You may have noticed there's a page very similar to this one earlier in this chapter showing a 2012 home prototype. And another one later showing almost this exact, same jersey tagged as a 2016 prototype too. And you're correct to think how odd it is that the same jersey seems to be prototyped almost every year. But....the Padres.

The Padres had the same home jersey from 2012-2015, and it was basically this very jersey. So why have a look at it as a prototype again in 2015 when it has been on the field for the last few years? The only this we can guess was that this sample has the navy "SD" mark on the sleeve, where the 2012-2015 jersey had a Swingin' Friar patch there instead. So, yes, the Padres had a complete prototype jersey made just to test a patch. And they chose not to make the change.

As is typical of Cool Base prototypes, the jersey is size 46, has a team issued 0630 code on the wash tag, and includes sample tagging reading PAD-HJ-D1-1-2015 for Padres home jersey, design 1, 2015. The use of "Player" for player name and "15" - the year of issue for the jersey - as player number are typical as well.

© GameWornGuides.com

Aug. 6, 2016 "Player 91" Prototype Jersey in a Game

August 6, 2016: Pitcher Paul Clemens started the game against the Phillies wearing his usual #47. But midway into the game, he appeared on the mound wearing a jersey lettered with "Player 91." Readers of this book know that a jersey so lettered is the prototype jersey made for team approval before the whole set of team jerseys is sewn (see top right). I happened to be watching this game, and as the announcers wondered aloud what had happened, I assumed what later was confirmed: his game jersey was discovered to have a foreign substance on it that caused a complaint, forcing the mid-game change. Fellow pitcher Jon Edwards had fun at Clemens' expense in the dugout, taping over his own name and renaming himself "Player #2."

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Sample Home

Here is a sample of a 2016 Padres jersey that was never used. Clearly, the team was considering carrying over its 2012-2015 home jersey set into 2016 when Majestic launched the Flex Base template. Ultimately, they went with a (very nice) one-year style instead to celebrate hosting the All-Star Game in 2016. This sample bears all the usual hallmarks of such jerseys: “Player” as the player name and the year as the jersey number, the jersey being size 46, and the long code on the set tag, here reading ”PDR-HJ-D1-1-2016.” Of note, the Flex Base tag on the front hem has large “MADE IN THE U.S.A.” type below the Authentic Collection logo, which did not appear on Flex Base jerseys in production. It seems Majestic had sample tags as well at this point in Flex Base prototypes.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Prototype Home/Road

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

The parade of Padres prototypes continues with this suite of jerseys made up for 2016. These home and road versions not only show the team what the then-new Flex Base template would look like, but they show that the team was considering a complete refresh of its look. The options shown here combine the lettering style of their 2004-2011 road jerseys (applied to both home and road) with the navy blue and gold colors they eventually adopted only for their one-year-style 2016 home jersey.

We only have a view of tagging for the road version of the jersey, which reads PAD-RJ-D1-2-2016 (ND), meaning Padres road jersey, design 1 (the “2” likely means the second iteration of this design), 2016. The “ND” here is mysterious, and it not something normally seen on samples. As usual, the use of “Player” for the player name and “16 - representing the intended year of issue - is common for prototypes, as is the jersey’s size of 46. Of note, the Flex Base tags heat pressed to the hem of both jerseys has “Made in the U.S.A.” text that was not present on the final jerseys. We have seen this on other such Flex Base prototypes as well.

Aside from the photos at left, we have also come across the image below, which shows a different home prototype we assume was issued with these jerseys (it included some of the other jerseys on this and following pages). Here, the colors of the “Padres” lettering is reversed from the sample at top left, but the jersey does have gold/navy braid on it that mirrors what the team’s actual 2016 home jersey used. That jersey, however, had a navy/gold “SD” logo on front left chest rather than the full “Padres” lettering.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2017 Prototype Alternates

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

Alejandro & Diego Pineda Collection

Here are two more Padres prototypes from 2016-2017, showing proposed designs for alternate jerseys the team did not adopt.

The gold alternate at top combines the lettering style of their 2004-2011 road jerseys with the navy blue and gold colors they eventually adopted only their one-year-style 2016 home jersey. Yellow jerseys have been a part of the Padres' look, but this gold base color would have been quite a departure for the team. As usual, the use of "Player" for the player name and "16 - representing the intended year of issue - is common for prototypes, as is the jersey's size of 46.

The blue jersey on bottom is also size 46, but has "17" on back, suggesting it was proposed for use a year after the gold jersey at top. It mimics the 2016 one-year-only home jersey and 2012-2019 blue alternate by using the "SD" ligature on front left chest. Neither of those jerseys have the S and D in different colors as seen here, however, a treatment last seen on early-90s BP jerseys

Of note, the Flex Base tags heat pressed to the hem of both jerseys has "Made in the U.S.A." text that was not present on the final jerseys. We have seen this on other such Flex Base prototypes as well.

Ultimately, the Padres chose to add a brown alternate jersey with yellow/white lettering in 2016, hinting toward their eventual full return to brown as a primary color in 2020. These fanciful examples, as colorful as they are, were eclipsed by the team's, and their fans', love of the Padres' original color scheme of decades earlier.

As a side note, the 2016 jersey has a Flex Base jock tag with "Made in the U.S.A." on it, where the 2017 jersey's tag lacks that line. That text was used on earlier samples (see other pages in this chapter) but we presume that by the time samples for the 2017 season were made, after the official introduction of Flex Base, typical Flex Base tags were used, and those did not have "Made in the U.S.A." when released.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Prototype Home/Road

The Padres just couldn't help themselves in the mid-2010s, changing uniform styles, colors, lettering, over and over again. The 2017 season brought new home and road uniforms for the team, which meant more prototypes to consider.

At top left, a sample home jersey with all the usual sample hallmarks: size 46, 0730 team issue code on the wash tag, and Player 17 for player name and number, where "17" indicates the year of issue. A sample tag reading PAD-HJ-D1-5-2017 for Padres home jersey, design 1 (sample 5) 2017 is inside the lower placket. The sample basically mimics the design ultimately chosen for the season, with different colors for the MLB logo on the back of the collar, and minus navy blue knit trim around the collar and placket. The navy trim close to the sleeve ends and around the neck opening were retained from the sample. An example of the final product is at top right.

Bottom left is a sample road jersey, and the sample indicators are all here again: size 46, 0730 team issue code on the wash tag, and Player 17 for player name and number, where "17" indicates the year of issue. A sample tag reading PAD-RJ-D1-3-2017 for Padres road jersey, design 1 (sample 3) 2017 is inside the lower placket. The third time must have been the charm for this one, as it is identical to the chosen on-field jersey for that year, shown bottom right.

Of note, both of these jerseys has Flex Base jock tags without "Made in the U.S.A." on them. That line was used on earlier samples (see other pages in this chapter) but we presume that these jerseys, made after the official introduction of Flex Base, used the final Flex Base tagging.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Prototype Alternate

Three things in life are certain: death, taxes, and Padres prototypes. The Padres wore this style of jersey from 2012-2019. It had a short-lived team patch on the left sleeve from 2012-2015, then the All-Star Game patch took its place in 2016. From 2017 to 2019, the sleeve was blank.

And, so far as we can tell, the deletion of the sleeve patch was the sole reason for creating this sample jersey. As is expected of Flex Base prototypes, the jersey has a team issued 0730 code on the wash tag, and includes sample tagging reading PAD-AJNAVY-D1-1-2017 for Padres alternate jersey navy, design 1, 2017. The use of “Player” for player name and “17” - the year of issue for the jersey - as player number are typical as well.

What is not typical about this one is that the jersey is a size 42! Not totally unheard of, but certainly not the norm, which is size 46. The Padres always keep us guessing.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020 Prototype Home

Above, another home example, this one white with blue pinstripes, and all lettering navy/white, including the "SD" logo on the left sleeve. This one is lettered "Gwynn 19" for Padres legend Tony Gwynn, as are the rest of the examples here and on the next page, save for the one at top, described at right.

In December 2016, MLB announced that long-time uniform supplier Majestic would be replaced by Under Armour as the official manufacturer of MLB on-field jerseys for the 2020 season. Only two years later, after a significant drop in company revenue, Under Armour backed out of the deal without producing any on-field MLB jerseys. But prior to that point, they did produce prototypes for the Padres.

These sample jerseys give us insight not only into possible changes that the Padres may have made to their uniforms for 2020, but also changes in jersey templates and construction that Under Armour was suggesting as part of their MLB contract. Ultimately, none of them came to pass, leaving Under Armour, and these designs, a mere footnote in MLB uniform history.

At top, a white jersey with gold/blue braid around next and sleeves (like the 2016 home jersey) with the same blue/white SD logo on front chest and left sleeve. The UA logo is on the front, right chest, where the Nike logo eventually ended up. This is the only one of these jerseys for which we have images of tags. The patent number on the wash tag of D733,998 is the same as Majestic Flex Base jerseys, but the back of the wash tag clearly reads "UA-1040, Option 7" referring to this being one of (at least) seven samples provided. This is reinforced by the heat-pressed team tagging (in rare, tall style that was also seen in 2020 Nike prototypes) reading UA-PAD-HJ-D1-7-2020, meaning Under Armour Padres home jersey, design 1 (option 7) 2020. Very obvious in the top, right photo was UA's intent to feature a diamond-pattern mesh pattern on the back of the jersey. Thought it is hard to see, it exists on all of the sample 2020 jerseys on these pages. This is the only sample of the lot without a name/number on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020 Prototype Road

Here are two road prototypes provided by Under Armour.

The top is a plain gray base jersey with no trim. All lettering is blue/white, including the then-familiar “San Diego” type on front. Like several other prototypes, this one also has “Gwynn 19” on back in honor of Padres legend Tony Gwynn. It has the UA logo on front right chest, and the back of the jersey is the same diamond-pattern mesh as the jerseys on the previous page.

At bottom, another gray road jersey that leans into the Padres’ early 1980s brown and orange color scheme. Neck and sleeve opening are ringed with orange/brown braid, while front and back lettering appear in brown/orange.

Both of these jerseys show tantalizing peeks at the sample tagging inside the lower placket, but we have not (yet?) seen closeups of these tags, nor the wash tags, to glean any more information.

This photo shows three of the jerseys with some proposed pant options. We assume the white pants with the orange/brown trim (far right) were not intended to be paired with the gray road jersey. It is possible there are even more variations of these jerseys and pants out there. Thus far, however, we have not seen any UA prototypes for any team but the Padres. As this chapter will attest, the Padres like to change things, and they like to see lots of prototypes when they do.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024: An Incredibly Small Mistake (In a Year of Big Ones)

Above: The tag from the jersey at left, showing PYRD, the code for a road jersey.

Below: A tag with the proper tag code for a 2024 Padres home jersey, "PRHO".

It goes without saying that 2024 was a tough year for Nike and Fanatics with the challenging rollout and fierce aftermath of the switch to the Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) uniform template. From the tiny player name lettering, the transparency of jerseys and pants, mismatched shades of gray, extensive sweat staining, and issues getting teams all of their uniforms in time for the start of the season (to name a few), 2024 was a trial. So, it seems very picky to point out another error, one so small that it probably deserves to go unnoticed. But calling out the small and obscure is what we do, so at the risk of piling on, here we go...

Padres bullpen coach Ben Fritz has been a coach in the organization for several years, after a career in the minors as a pitcher. Like any other member of the uniformed staff, Fritz was issued a set of jerseys in advance of the 2024 season. The one shown here likely never saw the field, as it lacks the team's anniversary and memorial patches, as shown in his head shot at right. It looks just like any other Padres VPE home jersey, except for one small detail, the style code on the tag. This one reads "PYRD" the code for a Padres road jersey, where it should have "PYHO" instead. It is unclear if this happened with any other Padres jerseys in 2024 (though we have seen at least one other team with other early-season 2024 tagging errors), but is a curious, and admittedly very picky, footnote nonetheless.

© GameWornGuides.com

Oops.

2011 road jersey with upside-down- sewn “O” in “San Diego"

May 18, 1994 Padres wear their batting practice jerseys in a game.

Singular Celebration

While the rest of the team celebrated St. Patrick’s day 2015 with green caps, pitcher Dennis Patrick O’Grady took it a step farther, providing his own green Padres jersey.

In 2001, Dave Winfield was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame, and the Padres were elated that he was inducted as a Padre, even though he played for several other teams. To celebrate, the club asked players to wear the 1970s-style brown and gold caps with their white and blue uniforms on the day of the HOF induction. The players refused, saying that the hats were unspeakably ugly.

© GameWornGuides.com

Commemorative Patches

Padres Patches

1969

1978

1984-1986

1992

1993

August 16-18, 1996

1999

October 2-7, 2001

- 1969: San Diego 200th Anniversary patch on both tan jerseys, “Padres” and “San Diego,” but not home white.
- 1978: All-Star Game. This was the first year in MLB that all the players of a hosting team wore a patch on their jerseys promoting the mid-season game that was to be held at their park.
- 1984,1985, 1986: “RAK” on sleeve in memory of Ray Kroc.
- 1992: All Star Game
- 1993: 25th Anniversary
- 1996, August 16-18: La Primera Serie patch worn by Padres and Mets during games played in Monterrey, Mexico. This was the first time an MLB regular season game was played outside of the US or Canada.
- 1999: Anniversary Patch, in place of team disc.
- 2001, October 2-7: Tony Gwynn Retirement (worn for final home-stand of the season only).

© GameWornGuides.com

San Diego Padres

2011: July 14

September 22-28, 2003

March 15-16, 2008

2009

- 2002: #26 Memorial patch for player Mike Darr on right sleeve.
- 2003, September 22-28: "Goodbye to the Q" old Stadium, last homestand of season
- 2006, July 23: AIDS ribbon for "Until There's a Cure Day" in SF
- 2008, March 15-16: China Series two games vs. Dodgers in China.
- 2008, May 28: AIDS ribbon for "Until There's a Cure Day" in SF
- 2009: 40th Anniversary on home, away and alternate blue.
- 2010, September 9: "Stand up to Cancer."
- 2011, July 14: RHW patch worn for Dick Williams.

Shirts off Their Backs: Padres Foundation annual fundraiser

Starting in 2002, the Padres have held an annual "Shirts off Their Backs" promotion, where winning-bidder fans get a player's game worn uniform at the end of the game. These uniforms have a special patch, every year except for 2013-2014. A selection is shown here.

© GameWornGuides.com

Padres press release, March 30, 2014 SAN DIEGO

….As was previously announced, all season long, Padres players and coaches will wear a jersey patch featuring Coleman's initials inside of his trademark star.
For years, when the Padres made a great defensive play, all fans in the ballpark would look to the press box to see if Coleman's gold star would be hung from the radio booth. Now, once again, fans will be able to look to the press box following a great play, to see if a star will hang. If it is, fans at Petco Park will also hear the playing of Coleman's signature call: "Oh, Doctor! You can hang a star on that, baby!"
Having spent 42 seasons in the radio booth for the Padres, with the exception of one year when he left to manage the team, Coleman is a monumental figure in the history of the Padres franchise.

- 2012, starting June 26: “48” memorial patch for coach Darryl Akerfelds, who had just died from pancreatic cancer.
- 2014, April 30: AIDS ribbon for “Until There’s a Cure Day” in SF
- 2014: “JC” star patch for Jerry Coleman, all season on right sleeve, in navy/white for home, road, alternate jerseys; in brown/white for alternate camouflage jersey.
- 2014, June 16-17: Temporary Tony Gwynn armband right sleeve, road gray jersey only.
- 2014, starting June 18: Tony Gwynn patch, on left chest on all jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018: May 18, June 6 & 20, July 11, August 15 & 29

August 16-19, 2018

- 2016, May 30: AIDS ribbon for "Until There's a Cure Day" in SF
- 2016: All Star Game patch, left sleeve on home, road, and blue alternate road.
- 2018: May 18, June 6 & 20, July 11, August 15 &
- 29: KT|RP patch for longtime General Manager Kevin Towers and coach Rob Picciolo, both of whom passed away January 2018. Worn on throwback jersey only.
- 2018, August 16-19: Trevor Hoffman Hall of Fame celebration patch
- 2023, April 29-30: For games in Mexico vs. Giants, Banorte sponsor patch left sleeve and MLB World Tour Mexico City Series patch right sleeve. Worn on City Connect jersey April 29 and home jersey on April 30, both with regular team patches omitted.
- 2024, March 17-21: MLB World Tour Seoul Series patch and Coupang Play ad patch for games in South Korea

2019 – Padres 50th anniversary patch, three versions

- Blue/white on right sleeve of home, road, blue alternate, and blue camo

- Brown/gold on right sleeve of brown alternate

- Brown/tan on right sleeve of brown camo

April 29-30, 2023

March 17-21, 2024

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 home jersey only

2024, all jerseys except City Connect

2024 City Connect

- 2024: Memorial for owner Peter Seidler, who passed away before the season, left chest all jerseys, brown “PS” on all jerseys except City Connect, which has pink “PS” letters
- 2024: Petco Park 20th Anniversary patch, home white jerseys only

© GameWornGuides.com

2023-2025 Padres Advertising Patches

With the start of the 2023 season, teams were permitted to sell an advertising patch, up to four inches square, to appear on one of their jersey sleeves. The sleeve on which the patch appeared could change from player to player, and each team that sold a patch handled the placement differently.

The Padres struck a sponsor patch deal with Motorola, a telecommunications company. The patches first appeared in Spring Training 2023. There are two versions of the patch. One is a brown circle with a white Motorola logo, used on the home and road alternate pinstripe jerseys. The other is a white circle with a brown Motorola logo used on the road brown, tan camo, green camo, and City Connect jerseys. The brown version was used on the PCL throwbacks in 2023.

The placement of the patch varies depending on the handedness of each player. The team's normal logo patches remain on each jersey, on the opposite sleeve from the ad patch. On the two camouflage jerseys, the Swinging Friar patch was removed prior to the 2023 season to make room for the ad patch, and an American flag patch appears on one sleeve opposite the ad patch. U.S. Flag Code specifies that the flag should always appear moving forward, with the blue field in "front" in the direction of motion. As such, the blue field on the flag patch is on the left for players who wear it on their left sleeve, and on the right for players with it on the right sleeve.

When the partnership was announced in April 2022 (a year before the patches arrived on-field) the example patch shown was a brown circle with a white border and a white Motorola logo. The white border was deleted before the patch was used in 2023.

Home, road alternate (pinstripes)

Road (brown), tan camo, green camo, City Connect

"Press release" version, not used on field

© GameWornGuides.com

Padres Postseason Patches

1998 World Series
(right sleeve)

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

1969 San Diego Padres First Season Primary Road Game Jersey

Examination Date: March 13, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0313J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Wilson made, seven button, year tagged 1969 San Diego Padres first season primary-style road tan flannel jersey . (The Padres had an alternate "San Diego" lettered road jersey in that season as well) Tagged as a size 44, its chest measures as a 46, typical of a jersey that has not been washed much or at all. "Padres" across both front panels in brown felt over gold twill, all zig-zag stitched. There are six gusseted vent holes in each diamond shaped underarm panel. Player number "1" is sewn to the back, in the same fabrics and colors as the front wordmark. There was very slight impression evidence of the outline of the disk patch on the left sleeve, which would have been the the one-year San Diego Centennial commemorative patch.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson tag correct for 1969 showing the size as 44, stitched to the outer left front tail. The year, "1969" is hand chain stitched below in brown thread, precisely matching exemplars. 1969 Padres jerseys generally had the player's last name hand chain stitched onto a flannel tag sewn into the back of the neck, and this jersey does not have that tag. In 1969, #1 was issued to Hall of Famer and Padres third base coach Sparky Anderson, in his first season coaching at the MLB level. Anderson typically wore a jersey smaller than this one, a survey of jerseys attributed to him during this period showed he was more likely to wear a size 40, or sometimes a 42.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination reveals that this jersey is all original. It is likely this jersey was unused. In fact, a careful examination of the "1969" chain stitching shows that that the tear-away interfacing paper backing that is put there during embroidery to prevent the fabric from puckering is still mostly intact. In my experience, this paper would have been

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

destroyed in the very first washing of the jersey, and would have simply disappeared. Numbered as "1" it might have been a sample, or if issued to Anderson, it may have been too big and he was given a different jersey to wear. Our research shows that, in fact, he was issued #10 in 1969 Spring Training and the jersey he wore was a size 42. (That particular jersey was authenticated reliably by MEARS/Dave Grob). He was almost certainly issued a different jersey with #1 on the back to wear during the regular season. Very likely the unique San Diego patch was harvested from the jersey in review and used elsewhere. Our research shows that most of the 1969 Padres jerseys were reissued for use in 1970. Gold and brown sleeve end and neck trim was added to them for 1970, and yet this jersey is without this 1970 trim and no sign exists that it was ever present here. How this jersey avoided being reissued is unknown, the Padres were a frugal organization that let nothing go to waste. In short, however it managed to have survived, this is probably the finest condition, most pristine first-year Padres jersey remaining in existence. Its owner commissioned the reproduction of the 1969 San Diego 200 Years sleeve patch, and I recreated it exactly using period photographs of the few surviving examples, then sewed it to the left sleeve over the faint ghost.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is an authentic team prepared 1969 San Diego Padres inaugural season primary road jersey. Aside from the reproduction commemorative patch that has been replaced on its sleeve, it is all original without contrivance. While Sparky Anderson wore #1 during the 1969 season, I would judge that this jersey would have been a too large for the coach. Its lack of wear including evidence that it was likely never washed indicates to me that it was spared reissue and I would judge it to likely be the finest condition example of its kind existent.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Restoration

Al Santorini 1969 San Diego Padres First Season Road Alternate Game Jersey

Examination Date: April 22, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0422J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Wilson made, seven button, year tagged 1969 San Diego Padres first season third alternate style road tan flannel jersey. (The Padres had a road tan "Padres" lettered road jersey in that season as well that was their primary road jersey.) Tagged and measured as a size 42. "San Diego" across both front panels in brown felt over gold twill, all zig-zag stitched. There are six gusseted vent holes in each diamond shaped underarm panel. Player number "23" is sewn to the back, in the same fabrics and colors as the front wordmark. Pitcher Al Santorini was issued that number. At 190 lbs and 6' 0" tall, Santorini would have reasonably fit into this jersey, which has doubtlessly shrunk a bit from washing.

As Received: The jersey showed evidence of having been reissued after 1969. The brown/gold/brown uniform braid had been added to both the sleeve ends and the neck opening as this style of jersey was worn in 1970-71. It had the number 55 on the back, yet the light table clearly showed ghosts confirming that these were replacement numbers. There was no #55 on the roster (or coaching staff) of the Padres in any of the three years that this style of jersey had been worn (1969-1971). A vintage (not reproduction) MLB 100th Anniversary patch had been sewn to the right sleeve, almost surely at some point later, as this patch was never worn on this style jersey by the team in 1969. There was very slight impression evidence of the outline of a disk patch on the left sleeve, which would have been the the one-year San Diego Centennial commemorative patch worn on both of the team's road jerseys in 1969.

Restoration Performed: Removing the back numbers 55, the light table revealed the original back number to be #23, pitcher Al Santorini, who was on the 1969 and 1970 Padres as #23. (In 1971, #23 was outfielder Ollie Brown). Using the original team patterns and matching the ghosts, a replacement number set was cut from medium brown wool felt over gold twill and zig-zag stitched in place once the fabric had been steamed to remove the puckering and wrinkles. I had been commissioned to make the reproduction of the 1969 San Diego 200 Years sleeve patch; I recreated it exactly using period photographs using the few surviving examples, then sewed it to the left sleeve over the faint ghost. The 1970-1971 style trim was carefully removed and the incorrect 1969 MLB Centennial patch was removed from the sleeve.

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Left, as received with replacement back numbers, 1970-71 trim added and incorrect 1969 sleeve patch. Above, photo- enhanced image of the left sleeve patch ghost shadow. Below, the back numbers removed and showing the ghost outlines of the original number 23.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson tag correct for 1969 showing the size as 42, stitched to the outer left front tail. The year, "1969" is hand chain stitched below in brown thread, precisely matching exemplars. 1969 Padres jerseys had the player's last name hand chain stitched onto a jersey-flannel tag sewn into the back of the neck, and this jersey is missing that tag, but the stitching outline remains. The tag is the proper length for "Santorini" (i.e: longer than usual) Instead, written in black marker across the inside of the back collar is the name (Gilbert)Scharringhausen, a draftee who pitched with Padres' minor league affiliates in 1969-70, making it as high as AAA in 1970 with the Salt Lake City Bees. It is an educated guess, but it is very likely Santorini wore this jersey for the 1969 season and then Scharringhausen was issued it in camp as a non roster player in 1970, with number changed from 23 to 55.

Wear & Repairs: This jersey is in very good condition, without damage, showing moderate use/fabric thinning, with evidence that it was worn for a season and then was likely reissued at least for spring training in 1970. A light table examination shows that this jersey is without contrivance. The front of the jersey is all original, the back numbers have been restored to look as original. The player name tag in the collar is missing as previously mentioned, the trim has been reverted to 1969 style and the 1969 sleeve patch in reproduction has been re-sewn.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is a game worn 1969 San Diego Padres inaugural season alternate road jersey. While the front is all original, it is missing its original player name tag inside the neck, and aspects have been restored, including the back numbers, sleeve and neck trim and the sleeve patch. Its wear is reasonable for a jersey issued to a pitcher and then to a player in spring training. I would judge this jersey to be a surviving example of a game worn inaugural year San Diego Padres jersey, of which there are few examples remaining.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Dave Winfield 1975 San Diego Padres Home Game Jersey with Matching Pants

Examination Date: December 13, 2024 Certification Number: 24-1213J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Jersey: Wilson size 44 (marked and measured) six-button-front white jersey with brown/gold knit trim at the neck and 2" gold/brown/gold knit trim sewn in at the sleeve ends. "Padres" script across both front panels with underline in brown over gold. Player number 31 on the left front and on the back, "WINFIELD" name above on back in the same colors, sewn to a matching non-serged nameplate which is then zig-zag stitched to the jersey back. The inside of the placket of the jersey is lined with white linen for player comfort , a characteristic of Wilson professional jerseys of the1970s and 1980s. A light table evaluation shows that all sewn elements are original, a rarity with this era's Padres jerseys, as these were heavily recycled into the minor leagues and almost universally show removed nameplates and even changed numbers.

Pants: The pants are made of the same white knit fabric with 2 3/4" elastic waistband with drawstring and two snaps. 2" brown/gold/brown knit trim is stitched down the outside of each leg, there are two slash pockets with buttons intact on the seat. True to form, the Wilson pro pants are lined with satin panels on both sides between the waistband and the knee. The original Talon zipper at the fly is intact and working.

This jersey/pants are presented without provenance, but the sizes are reasonable for Winfield early in his career..

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Jersey: The Wilson manufacturer tag is stitched into the back of the neck with the thread that attaches it sewn through only the inside layer of the fabric, meaning that it was properly stitched there before the placket was sewn closed and is original. The tag is still tightly attached by its original thread, though the tag itself shows abrasion from wear. On the outside of the lower left tail is a 3" knit strip tag with the numbers "31 75 44" hand chain-stitched on it ins the familiar handwriting of the Wilson factory stitcher. (Player number 31, 1975, size 44). This is all consistent with other examples in my library.

Pants: The Wilson pants are a custom size 35" waist and that designation is hand-chain-stitched onto the Wilson tag inside the waistband. A 3 3/4"white knit strip tag inside the waistband reads 31 75 34 28 (Player 31, 1975, waist 34, 28" inseam) and is appropriate for the tall player. The tagging is sewn through only one layer of the knit waistband, again showing that it was attached there prior to the pants being completed and sewn shut, as is appropriate. I will note that it is uncommon to find and evaluate a matched set of jersey and pants like this— usually the pants offered are the same style but from another player.

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Wear & Repairs: Jersey: This jersey shows heavy wear consistent with a full season's use (and probably at least spring training of the following year as well). The once-white fabric has dulled to a grayish off white. The gold twill that outlines the team wordmark and the player name on back has lost almost all of its gold color, consistent with all others I have evaluated. This fabric was of a consistent substandard quality and shed its color through washing. Conversely, the payer numbers use a different twill that still retains its gold color. This is also a common characteristic of these 1975 Padres jerseys. The brown top layer of all of the lettering is burnished and puckered, and shows heavy wear. Much of the twill is abraded to the point of fabric failure, with the edges frayed and in some cases split. In places, the gold edge-attaching thread has begun to fail and is missing or loose when the jersey is turned inside out. The thread failure is consistent for all elements, and the jersey is puckered beneath the sewn elements showing that the lettering is original to the garment. In only a very few places, the thread has been touched up previously where it had likely become most disconnected.

Pants: The pants are only slightly whiter than the jersey. There is a major team repair the the back of the left seat, clearly repairing damage from sliding. The pants bottom elastics are still stretchy, and the colorful trim is still especially bright.

Conclusion: The jersey and pants set in review matches exemplars for a game worn 1975 home Padres uniform, shows evidence of heavy use and is a reasonable size for the player. There are no apparent alterations or contrivances. The nameplate is in place and appears to be original. It is my considered opinion that this is genuine matched set game jersey and pants prepared for and used by Dave Winfield of the San Diego Padres during the 1975 season.

William F. Henderson

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Document of Restoration

San Diego Padres 1974 Road Jersey- Freisleben

This is not a letter of authenticity. Its purpose is to document the history of an alteration of a jersey in our shop.

As Received: San Diego Padres uncommon two year style Wilson-made 1974 road jersey. As received it was #49 and without a name on back. Jersey is tail tagged 74-42, but there is no real sign of it having been #42. The "4" appears original, and the replacement 9's on both front and back are noticeably larger than the 4's. Most likely was stripped of NOB and number change was made for spring training use.

Work Performed: Removed the 9's from front and back, replaced with new "3's" using team font and matching to the shadow of the original numbers "3". Replaced name on back exactly matching the vertical arch shadows clearly visible on the jersey fabric. Twill lettering was media blasted prior to stitching to jersey to reduce the sheen for a better match to the original lettering, and all was sewn with bleached thread for a better match.

William F. Henderson
Restoration Specialist and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications
Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
The Dream Shop: MLB Jersey Restorations
http://GameWornGuides.com http://TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Doug Rader San Diego Padres 1977 Game Used Home Jersey

Examination Date: December 10, 2022 Certification Number: 22-1210J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Wilson-made size 46 white pullover 1977 San Diego Padres jersey of third baseman Doug Rader. Gold/brown/gold knit trim sewn-in at the sleeve ends and gold/brown trim on the V-Neck. "Padres" with underline scripted and stitched at an upward angle on the chest, number 12 on the left front chest and again on the back. Notably, the 1977 Padres used a different font for front and back on their team jerseys, and this one shows it well with two different variations on the numeral "2". As received, this jersey was missing its nameplate on back, though a visible ghost of where it had been stitched, remained. These jerseys were sent to the minor leagues where they were reissued and used again, without player names on back. The jersey size is reasonable for the 6' 3" 215 lb. player and matches other examples he wore during his career.

In his 11 year MLB career Rader hit .251 in 1465 games with 155 home runs. He was a standout fielder, winning five Gold Glove awards 1970-1974. 1977 was Doug Rader's final season as a player. He played 52 games for the 1977 Padres batting .271 with 5 home runs. His contract was purchased by the expansion Toronto Blue Jays June 8, 1977, and finished out the season there.. He went on to manage the Rangers, White Sox and Rangers between 1983-1991. (Wikipedia, Baseball Almanac)

Restoration Performed: It is uncommon to find Padres jerseys of this vintage in any useable condition at all, let alone as nicely preserved as this one is. The jersey body is intact and free of damage, and remains an even, clean cream-colored white. The original team crest and numbers are present as well, remaining intact, and tightly stitched: also not typical. These Padres jerseys seem to have been sewn with twill lettering that was not as durable as most other teams, susceptible to fading. Both the brown and gold tend to be somewhat chalky on all examples I have seen, though this one is in better condition than most. The thread used to stitch them was also odd— it tended to bleach to nearly white, again a consistent characteristic of this year Padres jerseys. Given the original condition of the team crest and numbers, its owner asked me to restore the nameplate on back "to match". To do this, I media-blasted the lettering aggressively, and sewed it in place with thread that matched the bleached color of the rest of the jersey. The nameplate was made from a pair of matching, similar aged team pants and was sewn carefully over the visible ghost of the original.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson manufacturer tag noting the size as 46 (marked and measured), appropriate style for use in 1977 is stitched inside the back of the neck. On the outside left front tail is a rectangle of jersey fabric, zig zag stitched to the shirt with the numbers "12 77" (Player #12, 1977) hand chain stitched in the familiar hand of the Wilson factory stitcher. The tagging is consistent with exemplars in our library.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good condition: aside from the nameplate, it is all original, and the player name is properly restored with lettering near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Doug Rader of the 1977 San Diego Padres.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Document of Restoration

San Diego Padres 1977 Home Jersey #37

This is not a letter of authenticity. Its purpose is to document the history of an alteration of a jersey in our shop.

As Received: San Diego Padres Wilson-made 1977 home jersey. As received it was #53 and without a name on back. Jersey is tail tagged 37-77. Clear glue/shadow evidence exists of the original #37 on back and front, as well as the removal of a nameplate, likely for use in spring training of the minor leagues. All thread holding on the front word mark is bleached nearly white.

Work Performed: Removed the numbers from front and back, replaced with new ones using team font and matching to the shadow of the original numbers. Replaced name on back per 1977 roster on nameplate exactly matching the team alphabet font and vertical arch lettering style. Nameplate was made from a pair of used game pants. Twill lettering was media blasted prior to stitching to jersey to reduce the sheen for a better match to the original lettering, and all was sewn with bleached-color thread for a better match. Spot hand re-dyed the existing bleached brown thread.

William F. Henderson
Restoration Specialist and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications
Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
The Dream Shop: MLB Jersey Restorations

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Alan Foster #21 San Diego Padres 1976 Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: May 18, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0518J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Wilson pullover jersey, size 42 brown double-knit body with gold raglan-style sleeves and gold knit style V-Neck, 2" gold/brown knit trim sewn into the end of each sleeve. "San Diego" arched across the front in gold, in the team's wordmark font. On back, the restored number 21 in gold, using the team's unique font. On the right sleeve is sewn the 1976 National League 100th Anniversary patch, worn by all NL clubs that year. The patch appears to be an original. The jersey is signed on the front of the V-neck "Randy Jones #35" I have no opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.

Pitcher Alan Foster wore #21 in 1976. The size of the jersey was reasonable to have been worn by (6' 0", 180 lb.) pitcher. He played for five teams over ten years, 1967-1976. In 1976, Foster's final season, he appeared in 26 games for the Padres both as a starter and a reliever, compiling a 3-6 record with a respectable 3.22 ERA. But, this jersey is perhaps more notable for what its post-MLB history is, rather than the fact that it was Foster's jersey in 1976.

Padres jerseys of the 1970s are among the most difficult to find in original condition in the hobby. The reason is simple: a frugal organization, the team sent its equipment, including it used uniforms, to its minor league clubs to be repurposed and used again. While this practice was common in baseball at the time, the Padres' situation was unique: of their minor league clubs, most had names other than "Padres". This meant that the old team uniforms were usually stripped bare so they could be re-lettered with the team name of the minor league club. Road uniforms were the most likely to be universally violated, since they wore the city name of the big league club, and were useless for re-use unless stripped. As a result, the vast majority of Padres jerseys of the 1970s have disappeared into dust: first re-lettered for a minor league club, used beyond the point of utility, then discarded without any thought or realization that they had once been game-worn MLB jerseys.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

This jersey first came to my attention, presented as an autographed and game worn Randy Jones jersey, represented as having been included in the massive and heralded Barry Halper Auction, held by Sotheby's Auctions in 1998. From Wikipedia: "Halper's baseball memorabilia collection was thought of as the finest, being both extensive and unusual… Sotheby's released a three-volume book, The Barry Halper Collection of Baseball Memorabilia, that included over 1,500 color photographs of the collection, giving history for many of the items, details about Halper's collection through the years, and a history of baseball. In 1998, Halper sold the collection, with Major League Baseball purchasing many items, donating them to the Baseball Hall of Fame. The rest were auctioned off by Sotheby's for a record 21.8 million USD." (The sum also has been reported to be over $40 million)

I used photos of this jersey, borrowed from the auction listing in early editions of my own Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys, recognized as the industry reference book for collectors of MLB jerseys. At that time, prior to 2000, the Internet was in its infancy and researching authenticity of game-worn memorabilia was much different (and more difficult) than today. So, when a major auction house listed such an item as original and authentic, I did not question its provenance.

Apparently, neither did its 1998 purchaser. This jersey was bought for an unrecorded sum by a collector, and resided in his collection for many years. Meanwhile, as the years passed and my research continued, I surmised from game photos that the 1976 Padres did not wear names on the back of their road jerseys, and this one had JONES arched above the numbers. The player numbers also looked incorrect to me, too tall and narrow. I removed the photos of the Jones jersey from my authentication guide.

Within a few years, the stories started coming out that many items from the Halper collection were counterfeit and fraudulent. I won't recount the stories here, but in very messy legal proceedings, many damaging details were revealed about some of the most expensive items in the sale, and while surely many of the items in the collection were valid, the entire collection was tarnished by the case.

Fast forward ahead 20 years, and this jersey was sent to me by its buyer, asking me to authenticate it. By putting it on the light table, I was able to immediately tell that it had once worn number 21 on the back, and the jersey had been stripped and re-lettered by someone at some point prior to the 1998 Halper sale. My examination show that the front crest and the sleeve patch appeared original, a rarity for 1976 Padres road jerseys. Disappointed with my evaluation, the owner sold the jersey to another collector, who subsequently asked me to restore it to original.

Top left: This jersey in photographs as it appeared in the Southey auction listing of 1998, and top right, as it was received here. Below, with back lettering removed, the light table coupled with photo enhancement reveals the original back numbers.

Restoration Performed: I removed the back lettering and found that the replacement lettering had been applied with excessive heat, fusing the adhesive from the tackle twill lettering thickly into the brown fabric. Carefully, I worked with solvent to remove the glue, finally steaming the jersey to make it presentable as possible. Once cleanly stripped, the light table clearly revealed the exact shape and position of the original back number, #21. I used matching gold twill to make the back lettering, the ghosts of which matched my records of team font and size exactly. Before sewing, I media blasted and age-dyed the lettering to better match the front wordmark.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The Wilson manufacturer's tag in the correct style for 1976, noting the size as 42, is stitched in the proper place into the back of the neck just below the gold knit collar. Below the Wilson tag is a small square of brown knit jersey material with the number "76" hand chain stitched onto it. No other verifiable 1976 Padres jerseys that I have viewed have this year tag, and my assumption is that this tag might have been added as a contrivance, but I am quick to add that there are very few such jerseys in my collection of exemplars, so I cannot be sure. In detail, it does not exactly match other tags of this style created by the Wilson factory stitcher for other teams. We elected to leave it in place, along with the Randy Jones collar autograph, when we restored the shirt.

Wear & Repairs: As mentioned before, this jersey has its original front SAN DIEGO crest intact, an extreme rarity in the hobby. The jersey is in good condition, though the back is somewhat shiny from excessive heat used to apply the incorrect and now removed back lettering. There are some ghost marks remaining visible from the removal of the JONES 35 from the back.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good condition: the front appears all original, with an original sleeve patch and the back now properly restored with lettering near-identical to original. There remain some light glue marks on the back which is lightly damaged from heat. The sewn-in year tag has been left in the neck, though its origin is unconfirmed. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher Alan Foster of the 1976 San Diego Padres.

William F. Henderson

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Roger Craig San Diego Padres 1978 Game Worn Home Jersey

Examination Date: January 22, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0122J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: This is team manager Roger Craig's 1978 San Diego Padres home jersey. Size 46 Wilson white jersey body with brown raglan sleeves, sleeve ends with with 1.5" gold knit sewn-in trim, 1" gold V-Neck trim. One-year style lettering design, gold outlined with brown "Padres" on front with 3 7/8" tall #38 in Padres font on front. Small SAN DIEGO lettering stitched above the Padres wordmark in one color, brown. On back, 7.5" tall gold with brown outlined number 38 in the Padres special font, and above that, "CRAIG" sewn to a plate in brown, block vertical arched font.

Restoration Performed: As received, this jersey retained its original PADRES crest on front as well as its original back and front numbers. The small front "SAN DIEGO" had been removed as had the original nameplate for its re-issue in the team's minor league system. Using team templates and confirmed with shadow images from the light table, I recreated the missing front lettering and nameplate using closely-matching knit fabric of the same aged, off-white color. I media blasted the new lettering to eliminate the sheen, then stitched it in place using bleached thread to better match with the original lettering. The nameplate is unbacked and the edges are left un-serged like the original would have been, and the nameplate was sewed with a zig zag stitch to the jersey over the ghost of the removed plate as was still visible on the light table. A modern reproduction 1978 All Star Game patch was sewn to the left sleeve over the ghost of the original that had been removed. Stitching holding on the back numbers was lightly touched up—adding some stitches where the numbers were very loose, again using bleached thread for a better match.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: 1978 Padres jerseys were made by Wilson. The Wilson tag appropriate for 1978 noting the size as 46 (reasonable for Craig to have worn) is stitched in the back of the neck. On the lower left outside front tail is a 1" x 2.25" piece of jersey-matching white knit fabric with the numbers "38 78" hand chain-stitched on it using brown thread in the familiar hand of the Wilson factory stitcher. All tagging matches exemplars and is free of contrivance.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Above and at right, as received.

At left, restoration detail.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey is in good original condition, showing wash and wear representative of a full season's use in the majors with subsequent reuse in the minor leagues for another season or probably more, yet it remains intact without damage and with its original wordmark and numbers in place. The white jersey body has weathered to an off-white cream color, and all of the lettering is faded and burnished from washing in detergents, with all the brown thread bleached to a color close to lavender purple. I have already noted my replacement of the missing elements, above.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good condition: intact and mostly all original, with missing elements properly restored with lettering and patch, matching original configuration. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has correct team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Roger Craig, manager of the 1978 San Diego Padres.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

George Hendrick San Diego Padres 1978 Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: April 19, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0419J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description/As Received: Wilson size 42 (both tagged and measured) brown pullover jersey with gold raglan sleeves, 2" brown and gold knit at the ends. Gold V-Neck. PADRES straight across the front in bold gold lettering. The number 8 is on the left front and centered on the back. No name is on back but the less-faded plate shadow for a rather short name is visible on back. As is typical on most 1978 Padres jerseys, the small "San Diego" lettering that had been on the right side above the team wordmark is missing; the light table clearly reveals the stitching holes of its ghost. It is also missing its left sleeve 1978 All Star Game sleeve patch, a seemingly universal occurrence on unrestored 1978 Padres jerseys.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson team tag in the center of the back of the neck appropriate for 1978 marks the jersey as a size 42. Someone has written the number "119" in black marker across this tag, likely from its second life in the minor leagues. On the front outer left tail is sewn a knit rectangular piece for brown jersey fabric, approximately 1x 3 with the numbers 25 78 on it, chain stitched in gold thread in the familiar hand of the Wilson factory stitcher from that time. That designation means that the jersey was originally issued as #25 in 1978.

Restoration Performed: A light table evaluation shows the faintest ghosts of 25 having been on both front and back. The outlines are so faint as to be practically invisible, which tells me that the jersey wore that number only very briefly and for very few washings at best before it was removed. Also barely visible are the stitching outlines of a long nameplate. An examination of the Padres 1984 roster indeed shows that George Hendrick, a tall and very slim outfielder started the season as #25 with the Padres. He then was traded away 36 games into the season. #8 was Barry Evans, a rookie September call-up to the team. In my opinion, Hendrick wore this jersey a few times, when he was traded it was stripped of his number and was renumbered "8" with a nameplate that would match the size of the more prominent nameplate ghost on the jersey back.

Removal of the 8's from front and back reveals clear less-faded darker brown shadows beneath, and that coupled with the evidence of the removed SAN DIEGO lettering on the front leads me to assume that this jersey was used again in the minor leagues by the Padres with Evans' numbers 8 still in place.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

The numbers 8 were removed from the front and back, the glue cleaned, and using team templates and an asset from the light table new numbers 25 were reapplied to the front and the back exactly covering the original faint ghosts. A replacement nameplate was crafted, using the team fonts and templating it in brown double knit to the shape of the original nameplate ghost from the jersey. True to the original, the plate was left unbacked and without a finished edge, and was sewed with a customary large zig zag stitch directly to the jersey over the original ghost. Replacement SAN DIEGO lettering was cut and sewn to the front, using the original team pattern and exactly covering the ghosts from its earlier removal.

Wear & Repairs: This jersey is in remarkably good condition for a Padres 1978 game jersey. While it exhibits some minor sun fading, it is very clean and intact with no repairs. Many of these jerseys were used past the point of reason, and relatively few are accounted for ing the hobby. As restored, this is a fine and uncommon example of a period 1970s Padres pullover.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good restored condition: the main word of the team crest is all original, the SAN DIEGO lettering has been restored, as has the original 1978 player-specific lettering that is near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by both George Hendrick and Barry Evans of the 1978 San Diego Padres

Light table photos assisted in the restoration. The removed San Diego (upper left) is relatively easy to see. As is the outline of the removed sleeve patch above center. The removed original numbers 25 are much harder to see except in very high resolution photographs, here the front numbers (above) and the back numbers (below) have their original outlines highlighted.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Randy Jones San Diego Padres 1978 Game Worn Gold Alternate Jersey

Examination Date: December 13, 2024 Certification Number: 24-1213J04

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: This is pitcher Randy Jones's 1978 San Diego Padres alternate gold jersey. Wilson-made Size 40 (marked and measured) bright gold jersey body with brown raglan sleeves, sleeve ends with with 1.5" gold knit sewn-in trim, 1" brown V-Neck trim. One-year style lettering design, bold brown "Padres" on front with 3.5" tall #35 in Padres font on front. Small brown SAN DIEGO lettering stitched above the Padres wordmark. On back, 7" tall brown number 35 in the Padres special font, and above that, "Jones" sewn to a plate in brown, Block/vertical arched font. Randy Jones wore size 40 jerseys early in his career and switched to size 42 towards the end of his playing days. A light table evaluation shows that the front team crest and the player numbers are original and untampered with. This includes the small "SAN DIEGO" lettering which is often removed from these when they were sent to the minor leagues for reuse after their MLB service was through. These jerseys were a one year style, used by the Padres in 1978 only. Jersey is autographed on the right front below the team name in black Sharpie "Randy Jones #35 1976 N.L. Cy Young" and again on the back #5, with the same basic inscription in silver Sharpie. I have no professional opinion on autographs. The 1978 All-Star game patch is stitched to the left sleeve. This jersey was presented without provenance.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: 1978 Padres jerseys were made by Wilson. The Wilson tag appropriate for 1978 noting the size as 40 is stitched in the back of the neck. On the lower left outside front tail is a 1" x 2.5" piece of jersey-matching white knit fabric with the numbers "35 78" hand chain-stitched on it using brown thread in the familiar hand of the Wilson factory stitcher ("loopy style"as there were two different styles of handwriting then, likely from two different people). All tagging is original, is untampered with and matches exemplars and is free of contrivance.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey is in good original condition, showing wash and wear representative of a limited full season's use in the majors. The gold jerseys were infrequently worn by the team during their only season of use, and there were two sets of them. While the team crest and the player numbers are original, there is evidence that the player nameplate was removed and was then re-sewn, as there is some evidence of mismatch of the sewing lines. Careful examination suggests that the original nameplate may have been removed and then re-sewn over the spot, as the wear and stitching details of the plate match too closely for a typical restoration. In my estimation— this jersey was likely batch-stripped of its player nameplate along with all of the others from the team at the end of the season, but it was rescued by someone, likely given Jones' stardom, and re-united with its original nameplate; this happening before the "SAN DIEGO" lettering was stripped from the front as typically was the case before these shirts were reissued in the minors.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good condition: intact and original, with perhaps its original nameplate re-sewn over the original spot. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has correct team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher Randy Jones of the 1978 San Diego Padres.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Document of Restoration

San Diego Padres 1978 Alternate Gold Jersey- D'Acquisto

This is not a letter of authenticity. Its purpose is to document the history of an alteration of a jersey in our shop.

As Received: San Diego Padres uncommon one-year style Wilson-made 1978 alternate gold jersey. As received it was #16 and with the name "D'Acquisto" improperly restored on back, direct sewn instead of on a plate. Jersey is tail tagged 49-78, but there is no remaining sign of it having ever been #49.

Work Performed: Removed the incorrect NOB, replaced with name properly sewn using Padres 1978-spec vertical arch style font in brown on a matching gold and serged edge nameplate made from a pair of game pants. The plate was made to match the size and shape of the original plate's shadow. Twill lettering was media blasted prior to stitching to jersey to reduce the sheen for a better match to the original lettering. The front of the jersey was left unchanged.

William F. Henderson
Restoration Specialist and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications
Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
The Dream Shop: MLB Jersey Restorations
http://GameWornGuides.com http://TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

San Diego Padres 1979 John D'Acquisto Home Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: April 6, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0406J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: White pullover with brown raglan sleeves, size 44 by Wilson. Bright gold knit trim bands the V-Neck and the sleeve ends. "Padres" is arched across the front in the team's stylized font in gold outlined with brown. Player number 16 is stitched below and also centered on back. The jersey shows wear from at least a season's use, but is in remarkably good condition considering that most Padres jerseys of this vintage were reissued, reused and abused to the point of destruction . There are very few surviving examples in the hobby, let alone in this kind of original condition.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson year-correct manufacturer tag noting the size as 42 (reasonable for D'Acquisto) is stitched to the proper place on the outer left tail. Directly above it is a strip tag with the code "16 79" hand-chain stitched in brown thread, and in the familiar hand of the Wilson factory stitcher, indicating the original player number and the year.

Restoration Performed: As received, the jersey was in good condition missing only the nameplate on back. The Padres sent their MLB jerseys to the minor leagues after their big-league service was through. This style was used only in 1979 by the Padres, who during the 1970s and 1980 changed uniform styles frequently. A light table examination shows that all other elements of the jersey are original, the front crest had been undisturbed and the numbers were the original ones.

A light table examination shows a unique characteristic: the removed nameplate has two pronounced "bumps" on its perimeter, as the original plate had been closely trimmed to the name sewn on it. The bumps are in the places where the apostrophe ascends and the tail of the Q descends from the word. Using a pair of well-used team pants with similar color characteristics, I cut a replacement plate exactly the same shape as the old, and recreated the name on back in the Padres vertical arch style, using available period photos of the player in uniform. The twill was media blasted to age it to match, and stitched down with tone-matching faded brown thread. The plate was sewn to the jersey in the original style, without a serged edging.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good restored condition: the crest and numbers are all original, and the nameplate on back is properly restored with lettering near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher John D'Acquisto of the 1979 Padres.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Document of Restoration

San Diego Padres 1979 Road Jersey- Kinney

This is not a letter of authenticity. Its purpose is to document the history of an alteration of a jersey in our shop.

As Received: San Diego Padres uncommon one year style Wilson-made 1979 road jersey. As received it was #48 and without a name on back. Jersey is tail tagged 48-79, and the numbers front and back appear original. NOB on a plate was stripped and front "San Diego" was stripped and replaced with "Padres" for minor league use.

Work Performed: Replaced the San Diego lettering on front matching to shadows, NOB in correct style on a plate matched to the shadow of the removed plate. Twill was media blasted and organically dyed to make it match the aged originals.

William F. Henderson
Restoration Specialist and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications
Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
The Dream Shop: MLB Jersey Restorations
http://GameWornGuides.com http://TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Restoration/Professional Opinion of Authenticity

1982 Tony Gwynn Spring Training "Pre-Rookie" Jersey

Examination Date: September 1, 2020 Certification Number: 200901J1

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: As received, 1980 Padres home Wilson year-tagged jersey that clearly had been used and issued multiple times by the team. On the back, there is light table evidence of at least two nameplates having been sewn, (one approximately 12" long; one about 18") there was none now. The numbers: what appears to be an original leading "5" and then in the second spot a well worn but oddly-shaped and non-spec "8" of unknown origin that had been sewn haphazardly over the glue-ghost of an earlier number. Removal of the non-original "8" clearly showed that other number(s) had been sewn in that spot before. Most prominent due to heavy, dark outline glue stains was a properly-sized number "8", but there could also have been another similarly shaped round number (3, 6, 9) that had been sewn there before as well. Clear and obvious evidence of any other specific number from ghosts was lacking in my examination.

Manufacturer and Team Labeling: Proper style 1980-vintage Wilson tag is sewn in the neck showing the size 42. On the outside left tail is a rectangle of knit fabric with "53 80" hand chain-stitched onto it in the familiar "handwriting" of the Wilson factory stitcher. The tag decodes to player number 53, 1980. The tag is zig zag stitched to the tail, and a careful examination of the tag and its stitching on the light table allow me to conclude that it is original and unaltered.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey is in good condition for one that was clearly used and reissued one or more times. The thread holding on the team wordmark on the front and the original #5 on the back is intact and only mildly bleach/wash-faded.

Background Research: This style of jersey was new for the MLB Padres in 1980. There was neither a roster player nor coach issued #53 during 1980-1982. This style jersey was assumedly worn in spring training for the first time in 1981; In 1980 spring training the club wore its recycled 1979 jerseys. The Walla Walla (Washington) Padres (single A) team began to wear this style in 1982 using hand-me-downs from the MLB club.

Besides baseball, Tony Gwynn was a standout basketball star in college and while being drafted by the Padres was also drafted by the San Diego Clippers (NBA). The jersey is a size 42. In our exemplar library we have evidence of Gwynn wearing a size 44 jersey in 1984. It is not unreasonable that he was wearing size 42 pullover as a 21-year-old in the Spring of 1982, two years prior.

Gwynn is pictured on his Topps 1983 Rookie Card clearly wearing a #53 jersey, a photo almost certainly taken during 1982 Spring Training when he was issued #53. (see attached photos of 1982 Spring Training roster) He never wore that number in the majors; he was issued #19 when he was called up on July 19, 1982.

Above: Jersey after the completion of restoration

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys

Restoration Performed: I removed the current replacement non-spec "8" from the back revealing the dark glue outline of a correctly shaped numeral 8 that had once been there. I cleaned the glue only from the areas that would not be covered by the originally assigned "3" that belonged there indicated from the front team tag. The jersey was pre-treated for stains and laundered, which evened its color and brightened it considerably. For the most authentically-harmonious appearance, the "3" was harvested from another period Padres jersey of a common player, and was stitched in place exactly over the shadows of the previously removed "8". The "3" was stitched on using off-color brown thread chosen to more closely match the faded thread that attached other original elements to the jersey.

The nameplate was recreated using fabric harvested from another perfectly matching period warp knit jersey. The letter spacing was replicated using three data points as its model: 1) Visual evidence of where the name GWYNN aligned with the leading edge of the number 5 from the rookie card; 2) Light table evidence of the size and shape of the smaller of the two original nameplates that had been sewn there. 3) photo evidence of the arch and spacing of Gwynn's nameplate on another jersey from 1983 or 1984, as seen in a press photo (attached). The nameplate was made as original, using dark brown tackle twill vertically arched at a shallow (19 degree) arc with wide letter-spacing. The lettering was sewn with the same faded-shade thread, and duplicating the style of original Padres nameplates of 1980-1983 it was unbacked with interfacing, the edge was left raw and un-surged, and the plate was held to the jersey with a wide zig zag stitch that caused signature and characteristic minor puckering of the edges of the plate.

Conclusion: It is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine team issue and was very likely worn by Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres during Spring Training of the 1982 season.

Clockwise from lower left: Gwynn's 1983 Topps Rookie card showing him wearing #53 in Spring Training of 1982/ A copy of a Spring Training 1982 program, showing Gwynn as #53. / The jersey as received with the odd replacement #8 on back/ The jersey with the odd 8 removed showing the shadow of an earlier glued-on 8. / A game-action photo of Gwynn in 1983 or 1984 showing the wide spacing of his vertically-arched name letters and the shallow arc used.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Document of Restoration

San Diego Padres 1980 Road Jersey- #18

This is not a letter of authenticity. Its purpose is to document the history of an alteration of a jersey in our shop.

As Received: San Diego Padres 1980 year tagged Wilson-made road jersey. As received it was #28 and without a name on back. Jersey is tail tagged 80-18 indicating its original issue number was 18. Gene Tenace was #18 on the 1980-81 Padres. Front wordmark had been heavily reinforced with a second corse of orange thread.

Work Performed: Stripped both back numbers from the jersey. A light table examination shows that this jersey was likely issued three times in the Majors, as it shows clear outlines of 18, 28 and #5, plus three nameplates having been removed. Nameplates were used by the MLB Padres but not to our knowledge by their minor league clubs. The jersey was properly restored to #18 with TENACE, name on back applied to a non-backed, non-surged edge brown knit nameplate which was then zig zag stitched to the jersey as per the original method.

William F. Henderson
Restoration Specialist and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications
Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
The Dream Shop: MLB Jersey Restorations
http://GameWornGuides.com http://TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Tony Gwynn 1985 San Diego Padres Game Model Home Jersey

Examination Date: April 25, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0424J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: San Diego Padres Wilson-made size 42 game model home jersey (both marked and measured) six buttons with brown pinstripes. PADRES three-layered on the front in brown outlined with orange, then with a brown 3D drop shadow. On back, #19 with player name above in the team's special font, new for 1985. No trim or patches on this jersey. In 1985 the Padres wore a black RAK memorial on their left sleeves all season. This jersey lacks that memorial and is without any signs that it was ever there. While Gwynn wore much larger size jerseys throughout much of his career, for the first few years he wore size 42 and 44 jerseys. I would deem this size to be acceptable for Gwynn in 1985.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson tag correct for 1985 is in the back of the collar, noting the size as 42. Linen lining is sewn inside of the placket, and the Wilson tag in the neck is correctly sewn to the first layer of the placket only, so that when it was sewn closed at the factory, the stitching holding the tag in place is invisible from the outside back of the collar. On the outer lower front left tail there is a rectangle of jersey-knit fabric with "19 85" (player 19; 1985) hand-chain-stitched in the familiar handwriting of the Wilson factory stitcher. This matches exemplars for other 1985 Wilson Padres jerseys.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows light wear, with a few loose threads on the front wordmark, some very minor overall age-yellowing of the fabric and minimal yellowing of the placket lining. There are no stains. All of the twill is crisp and tightly sewn, without puckering to the lettering or the fabric beneath it.

Conclusion: This jersey is in excellent condition, is properly lettered, and has no alterations of any kind. It is reasonably sized, and has the correct team tagging, but it lacks the sleeve memorial that the team wore all year on the field. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications as an extra jersey for Tony Gwynn of the 1985 San Diego Padres.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Tony Gwynn 1998 San Diego Padres Autographed and Inscribed Game Worn Home Jersey

Examination Date: January 29, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0201J02R

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: San Diego Padres home white with Navy pinstripes jersey of "Mr. Padre", Tony Gwynn, #19. Russell, size 50 full-weight knit six-button jersey. The jersey is the proper size that Gwynn wore at this point in his career. PADRES diagonally slanted wordmark on front in navy outlined with white and an orange drop shadow; Padres team disk patch on the left sleeve. The player number "19" is sewn on the back in Navy outlined with white and orange, and Gwynn's name is arched above it in Navy-Blue, direct sewn twill. All fonts and styles are correct for team issue. It is autographed boldly "Tony Gwynn" in blue Sharpie below the back numbers. It is accompanied by a Beckett Letter of Authenticity related to the autograph on back; I have no further opinion on the signature.

During 1998, Gwynn was in hot pursuit of his 3000th hit. Period news articles referenced how he would be marking and saving items of his equipment referencing each hit in pursuit of the milestone. At this time, there was no MLB certification of game-used items, and Gywnn and his wife set up a business to catalog and sell his game-used items. He was said to have changed jerseys after each hit, tagging each with the hit number that was registered while wearing it. This one is inscribed in black Sharpie on the front tail tag: "L.A. Dodgers Home 6-16 #2857". The Padres played the Dodgers at home on 6/16/98, and Gwynn had two hits in that game. Since this one is marked for only one of those hits, one can logically assume he wore a different jersey for the other hit. Gwynn got his 3000th hit on August 6. According to Wikipedia, "He reached 3,000 in 2,284 games, the third-fewest games among the 22 players to reach the mark behind Cobb (2,135) and Nap Lajoie (2,224). No player born after 1900 got there in fewer games or at-bats (8,874) than Gwynn.."

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Provenance: This jersey is accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity signed by Gywnn's manager and by his wife, attesting to its originality. Also reviewed was a 1998-dated bill of sale for said item, accurately describing it and its inscription.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The Russell "R" Logo is embroidered at the end of the right sleeve. A Russell "Diamond Collection" locker tag is sewn to the outer left tail showing that the jersey is a size 50. It lacks a neck size tag as would be found on retail jerseys. These two characteristics are key identifiers of Russell-team specification jerseys, compared to store-bought Authentics. The Padres did not team-tag jerseys in this period. We can narrow the issue of this jersey to 1998 because of the hand-written inscription on the front tag noting the game opponent and date.While I am not an expert in handwriting, the writing on the front tag inscription is much like those found on other authenticated Gywnn game-worn items.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all lettering appears original and untampered with. Appropriate if Gwynn was changing jerseys after every hit, the jersey shows a lack of wash and wear; this jersey saw very limited use.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged and lettered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It exhibits appropriate wear, and appears to have no alterations of any kind. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine and was issued to and worn by Tony Gwynn in the 1998 season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Tony Gwynn 1999 San Diego Padres Autographed and Inscribed Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: November 3, 2021 Certification Number: 21-1103J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: San Diego Padres road gray jersey of "Mr. Padre", Tony Gwynn, #19. Russell, size 50 full-weight knit six-button jersey. The jersey is the proper size that Gwynn wore at this point in his career. SAN DIEGO arched wordmark on front in Midnight Blue outlined with white and an orange drop shadow; Padres 1969-1999 anniversary team patch on the left sleeve. The player number "19" is sewn on the back in Navy outlined with white and orange, and Gwynn's name is arched above it in Midnight Blue, direct sewn twill. All fonts and styles are correct for team issue. It is autographed boldly "Tony Gwynn" in silver Sharpie on the back number "1". There is no authentication provided for the autograph; I have no professional opinion on the signature.

On the center of the back is 4 lines of 5/8" tall machine-embroidery in navy Blue; "#2973 5-16-99 vs. CIN". During 1999 Gwynn had his numbered-hit game jerseys embroidered in this way, and we have many matching exemplars in our database. These jerseys were also generally accompanied by a letter or authentication signed by Gwynn's memorabilia marketing company. This jersey is presented without such a certificate. During 1998-1999, Gwynn was in hot pursuit of his 3000th hit. Period news articles referenced how he would be marking and saving items of his equipment referencing each hit in pursuit of the milestone. At this time, there was no MLB certification of game-used items, and Gwynn and his wife set up a business to catalog and sell them. He reportedly changed jerseys after each hit, tagging each with the hit number that was registered while wearing it. This one is inscribed in blue ballpoint pen on the front tail tag: "5/16/99 vs Cin #2973". The Padres played the the Reds on the road on that date, and Gwynn had one hit in that game. Gwynn got his 3000th hit on August 6, 1999. According to Wikipedia, "He reached 3,000 in 2,284 games, the third-fewest games among the 22 players to reach the mark behind Cobb (2,135) and Nap Lajoie (2,224). No player born after 1900 got there in fewer games or at-bats (8,874) than Gwynn.."

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The Russell "R" Logo is embroidered at the end of the right sleeve. A Russell "Diamond Collection" locker tag is sewn to the outer left tail showing that the jersey is a size 50. It lacks a neck size tag as would be found on retail jerseys. These two characteristics are key identifiers of Russell-team specification jerseys, compared to store-bought Authentics. The Padres did not team-tag jerseys in 1999. On the front tag is a handwriting in blue ballpoint pen "5/16/99 vs CIN #2973". This note on the front tag is much like those found on other authenticated Gywnn game-worn items.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all lettering appears original and untampered with. Appropriate if Gwynn was changing jerseys after every hit, the jersey shows a general lack of wash and wear; this jersey saw very limited use.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged and lettered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It exhibits appropriate wear, and appears to have no contrivances of any kind. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine and was issued to and worn by Tony Gwynn during the 1999 season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

David Wells 2004 San Diego Padres Road Game Jersey

Examination Date: April 25, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0425J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: San Diego Padres six button road tan jersey, David Wells #33. Size 56 with two inches extra length. Jersey actually measures as a size 60 around the chest, with 38" length that is at least two inches longer than observed on a standard size 56. SAN DIEGO across both panels of the front in Navy Blue outlined with white. On back, the player's number 33 in the same colors and in the Padres team font. Player name WELLS is arched above, again in the team's font, on a double-needle serged edge plate matching the jersey fabric. Navy/white/Navy trim rings the neck and the sleeve ends. The MLB Silhouetted Batter logo in Navy/white/tan is sewn to the center of the back of the neck. The Padres team patch is stitched to the left sleeve. The left back number "3" is autographed in white or silver marker, I have no professional opinion on the autograph.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Majestic logo in navy is direct-embroidered at the end of the left sleeve. The Majestic locker tag in the proper style for 2004 is stitched to the outside lower left tail. Pinch-sewn beneath the tag at the center is the small white size tab, "56". To its right are a set of layered white tags, the first says 2004, the second says +2" Body. Inside the side seam is the Majestic style tag, displaying the jersey as model number 0062, which designates a jersey made to team on-field specifications vs. one made for retail sale. The fact that this jersey is a non-standard size and exhibits special tailoring is further evidence that that it is not a retail issue.

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that all lettering and stitching are original and without contrivance. The jersey is clean and crisp, and does not show signs of use or washing; all of the tagging is crisp and unwrinkled.

Conclusion: This jersey is in excellent team-prepared condition made to the specifications of pitcher David Wells. It is properly lettered, and has no alterations of any kind. It has the correct team tagging It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications for David Wells of the 2004 San Diego Padres.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Chapter 28

Philadelphia Phillies

Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys

1970-2025, Tenth Edition

William F. Henderson

Phillies Uniform History Notes

- The Phillies' 1970 flannel uniforms were identical to uniforms worn since the 1950 season: The crimson Phillies script in a friendly, casual, straight line, with tiny stars dotting the "i"s.
- 1969 had been intended as the final year for the old suits, but the complete change-over to the new-design 1970 uniforms was delayed because the team's new stadium was not ready to open for the 1970 season as had been planned. The team had intended to do it all together—new stadium, new uniforms.
- The changeover was unintentionally gradual with the new uniforms being used part-time in 1970. The full switch over to the new style came for 1971.
- The Phillies make extensive use of chainstitch embroidery on their uniform tops pre-1970, and from 1970 to 1974. Chainstitching returns for 1992 and carries through to 2023. More details on this are found in the pages ahead.
- In 1973, the Phillies become one of a small handful of teams to have full zipper fronts replace buttoned jerseys, adopted for 1973 on the road and 1976 for the home. But the team by far remains the longest holdover, sticking with this style through 1986 (both the Astros and White Sox ditched them by 1976).
- Chainstitching is also used for player numbers through 1974. The Phillies are the only MLB team to have used this detail.
- The bold "P" on the left chest stays the team's primary identity through the end of the 1991 season. There are small changes along the way. The center of the "P" features a wavy line that is supposed to resemble the seam on a baseball. The line disappears from the uniforms for the 1975 season. I have heard the tale that it was altered because of MLB's enforcement of the rule that no player uniform can include an image of a baseball on it. I have no proof at all that this is why the change was made, and I suspect it was simply a design detail that was neglected and "lost" as all 1975 uniforms abandoned the chainstitched "P" and changed to a simpler, two-layer tackle twill one. The wavy line returned for 1987.
- The team experienced its greatest on-field success in the "new look" uniforms, but was again ready for a change after the 1991 season, the 22nd year of the design's use.
- The new design released for 1992 was based on the 1950–1970 style, with minor modifications. The stars that dot the two "i"s in Phillies were made blue. Chainstitching of the team wordmark resumed in 1992.
- Phillies jerseys are year tagged only through the 1992 season. From 1993–2007 there is no team tagging that designates the uniform as team issued. Year tagging only resumes in 2008.
- The Phillies had used a color they called scarlet red for their lettering and trim since 1950. This same red was carried over to the new uniform design in 1970, but the new sleeve-top and side trim was maroon. The red lettering changed to maroon by 1975 and the pinstripes changed from red to maroon in 1988. Matching the shades of twill, knit trim, red shoes, laces, stirrups, jackets and wool caps proved to be a constant challenge for the team, as they would often come from the various manufacturers mismatched. The equipment manager was probably very happy to see the team switch universally back to crimson red for the 1992 season.
- 2008 brings the team's first alternate since the ill-fated, one-game "Saturday Night Special" maroon debacle in 1979, a cream jersey typically worn for Sunday home games.
- The team adds a red alternate jersey in 2016, and tweaks the script slightly on all jerseys in that year as well.
- A retro/nostalgia power blue alternate is added in 2019, based on the popular 1972–1988 road design, but now intented to be worn only at home. The 2019 season also brings more updates to the "Phillies" wordmark style and sewing pattern, as well as a narrower sleeve trim for the road jerseys that is "sewn on" the sleeve vs. "sewn in."
- The distinctive sleeve numbers worn on the team's home pinstripe and road gray jerseys since 1992, are eliminated after the 2022 season in preparation for ad sleeve patches, allowed by MLB beginning in 2023.
- Sadly, 2023 becomes the final season for chain stitching of the team wordmark after a 32-year run, a victim of the new Nike VPE template designed to make uniforms more breathable and lightweight.
- The alternate red jersey, worn only on the road 2021–2023 (after only being worn in Spring Training 2018–2020) is dropped after 2023.
- The City Connect uniform debuts in 2024, showcasing a dramatic departure from tradition with a bright blue-to-dark navy gradient jersey with yellow trim (city flag colors), custom "PHILLY" wordmark mimicking text font from Revolutionary War historical literature and "City of Brotherly LOVE" sleeve patch. The bright blue reflects Philadelphia's blue collar roots. The jersey is paired with dark navy pants and a Liberty Bell cap.

I am always looking for new information and better photographs. If you can share new information, or offer corrections to this material, please send a note to me, at gameworngeuides@gmail.com . Please tell me which page you are referencing. All contributors will be recognized by name in a future edition.

© GameWornGuides.com

Year by Year Summary

1970

1970-1971

1972-1974

1972

1979

1975-1986

1973-1986

Phillies Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1970	Home “Old” Flannel	No	10” Old Style Phillies	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Home “New” Flannel	2 color Phillies font	10” 2 color Phillies*	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road “Old” Flannel	No	10” Old Style Phillies	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road “New”Flannel	2 color Phillies font	10” 2 color Phillies*	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1971	Home “New” Flannel	2 color Phillies font	10” 2 color Phillies*	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road “New”Flannel	2 color Phillies font	10” 2 color Phillies*	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1972	Home	2 color Phillies font*	10” 2 color Phillies*	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font*	10” 2 color Phillies*	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1973	Home	2 color Phillies font*	10” 2 color Phillies*	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font*	7” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1974	Home	2 color Phillies font*	10” 2 color Phillies*	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font*	7” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1975	Home	1 color Phillies font	7” 1 color Phillies	1 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font	7” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1976	Home	1 color Phillies font	7” 1 color Phillies	1 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	Philadelphia 76	NL Centennial	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font	7” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	Philadelphia 76	NL Centennial	Wilson
1977	Home	1 color Phillies font	8” 1 color Phillies	1 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1978	Home	1 color Phillies font	8” 1 color Phillies	1 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1979	Home	1 color Phillies font	8” 1 color Phillies	1 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Alt Red	1 color Phillies font	8” 1 Color Phillies	1 color 4” Block	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
1980	Home	1 color Phillies font	8” 1 color Phillies	1 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1981	Home	1 color Phillies font	8” 1 color Phillies	1 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1982	Home	1 color Phillies font	8” 1 color Phillies	1 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1983	Home	1 color Phillies font	8” 1 color Phillies	1 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	100 Years	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	100 Years	-	Wilson
1984	Home	1 color Phillies font	8” 1 color Phillies	1 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	Team Disc	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	Team Disc	-	Wilson
1985	Home	1 color Phillies font	8” 1 color Phillies	1 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	Team Disc	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	Team Disc	-	Wilson
1986	Home	1 color Phillies font	8” 1 color Phillies	1 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	Team Disc	-	Wilson
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” Vertical Arch	Yes	Team Disc	-	Wilson

* Numbers and logos on these jerseys are maroon chain stitched on a white twill backing. The edge of the backing shows as a white outline.

 This jersey was worn only once and was retired forever.
 These patches were not worn in the postseason.

© GameWornGuides.com

Phillies Game Jerseys

1987-1989

1987-1988

1990-1991

1989-1991

1992-2015

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1987	Home	1 color Phillies bold font	8” 1 color Phillies Bold	1 color 3.5” block	Yes	Team Disc	-	Rawlings
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” block	Yes	Team Disc	-	Rawlings
1988	Home	1 color Phillies bold font	8” 1 color Phillies Bold	1 color 3.5” block	Yes	Team Disc	-	Rawlings
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” block	Yes	Team Disc	-	Rawlings
1989	Home	1 color Phillies bold font	8” 1 color Phillies Bold	1 color 3.5” block	Yes	Team Disc	-	Rawlings
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” block	Yes	Team Disc	-	Rawlings
1990	Home	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” block	Yes	Team Disc	-	Rawlings
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” block	Yes	Team Disc	-	Rawlings
1991	Home	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” block	Yes	Team Disc	-	Rawlings
	Road	2 color Phillies font	8” 2 color Phillies	2 color 3.5” block	Yes	Team Disc	-	Rawlings
1992	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Russell
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Russell
1993	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Russell
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Russell
1994	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Russell
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Russell
1995	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	Vet Stadium Silver Season	Russell
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	Vet Stadium Silver Season	Russell
1996	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	All Star Game	Russell
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	All Star Game	Russell
1997	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player #/Ashburn Band	Jackie Robinson	Russell
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player #/Ashburn Band	Jackie Robinson	Russell
1998	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Russell
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	Yes	Player Number	-	Russell
1999	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Russell
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	Yes	Player Number	-	Russell
2000	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	Yes	Player Number	-	Majestic
2001	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	Yes	Player Number	-	Majestic
2002	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	Yes	Player Number	-	Majestic
2003	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	Vet Stadium Final Year	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	Yes	Player Number	-	Majestic
2004	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	Inaugural, Tug/Pope Mem	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	Yes	Player Number	Tug/Pope Memorial Only	Majestic
2005	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	Yes	Player Number	-	Majestic
2006	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
2007	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	VUK Patch	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	VUK Patch	Majestic

© GameWornGuides.com

Phillies Game Jerseys

1992-2015

2008-2015

Change to Flex Base

2016-2018

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2008	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Home Alt	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	-	Majestic
2009	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	World Series Champs; HK mem left chest	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	HK mem left chest	Majestic
	Home Alt	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	World Series Champs; HK mem left chest	Majestic
2010	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	"36" memorial, Robin Roberts	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	"36" memorial, Robin Roberts	Majestic
	Home Alt	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	"36" memorial, Robin Roberts	Majestic
2011	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	"B" Memorial left chest	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	"B" Memorial left chest	Majestic
	Home Alt	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	"B" Memorial left chest	Majestic
2012	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Home Alt	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	-	Majestic
2013	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Home Alt	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	-	Majestic
2014	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	"CB" Memorial left chest	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	"CB" Memorial left chest	Majestic
	Home Alt	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	"CB" Memorial left chest	Majestic
2015	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	"SLB" Memorial left chest	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	"SLB" Memorial left chest	Majestic
	Home Alt	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	"SLB" Memorial left chest	Majestic
2016	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Home Alt (Cream)	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	-	Majestic
	Home Alt (Red)	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	-	Majestic
2017	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	Dallas Green Memorial*	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	Dallas Green Memorial*	Majestic
	Home Alt (Cream)	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	Dallas Green Memorial*	Majestic
	Home Alt (Red)	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	Dallas Green Memorial*	Majestic
2018	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Majestic
	Home Alt (Cream)	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	-	Majestic
	Home Alt (Red)	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	-	Majestic
2019	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	MLB 150th/DPM Memorial	Majestic
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	MLB 150th/DPM Memorial	Majestic
	Home Alt (Cream)	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	MLB 150th/DPM Memorial	Majestic
	Home Nostalgia Powder Blue	2 color special font	2 color special font	2 color block	No	Phillies nostalgia disk	MLB 150th/DPM Memorial	Majestic
2020	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Nike
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Nike
	Home Alt (Cream)	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	-	Nike
	Home Nostalgia Powder Blue	2 color special font	2 color special font	2 color block	No	Phillies nostalgia disk	-	Nike

* Starting April 7

 Starting May 13

2019-2025

© GameWornGuides.com

These four styles continue from previous years

Switch to Vapor Premiere Elite

Phillies Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2021	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	Dick Allen memorial	Nike
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	Dick Allen memorial	Nike
	Home Alt (Cream)	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	Dick Allen memorial	Nike
	Home Nostalgia Powder Blue	2 color special font	2 color special font	2 color block	No	Phillies nostalgia disk	Dick Allen memorial	Nike
2022	Home	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Nike
	Road	2-color special font (sleeve)	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	Player Number	-	Nike
	Home Alt (Cream)	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	-	Nike
	Home Nostalgia Powder Blue	2 color special font	2 color special font	2 color block	No	Phillies nostalgia disk	-	Nike
2023	Home	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	-	Nike
	Road	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	-	Nike
	Home Alt (Cream)	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	-	Nike
	Home Nostalgia Powder Blue	2 color special font	2 color special font	2 color block	No	-	-	Nike
2024	Home	-	2 color special font	2” 2 color special font	No	-	IBX Ad patch‡*	Nike
	Road	-	2 color special font	2” 2 color special font	No	-	IBX Ad patch‡*	Nike
	Home Alt (Cream)	-	2 color special font	2” 2 color special font	No	-	IBX Ad patch‡*	Nike
	Home Nostalgia Powder Blue	2 color special font	2 color special font	Nike Block 2 color	No	-	IBX Ad patch‡*	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 1 color perf	Nike Block 1 color	No	Love disc‡	IBX Ad patch‡*	Nike
2025	Home	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	IBX Ad patch‡	Nike
	Road	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	IBX Ad patch‡	Nike
	Home Alt (Cream)	-	2 color special font	2 color special font	No	-	IBX Ad patch‡	Nike
	Home Nostalgia Powder Blue	2 color special font	2 color special font	2 color block	No	-	IBX Ad patch‡	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 1 color perf	Nike Block 1 color	No	Love disc‡	IBX Ad patch‡	Nike

‡ patch sleeve varies based on handedness of player

* Starting July 31

© GameWornGuides.com

Phillies Chain Stitching

Chain stitching is an old type of embroidery that as of 2024 is used only by the Phillies and Cardinals on their team uniform fronts. It is a looped embroidery stitch, made by special machines. This is a more expensive way of creating lettering than the common way of using tackle twill. The result looks very luxurious and rich, almost carpet like, with depth and layers of color.

The Phillies had used chain stitching to create their team lettering and player numbers since 1950. The photos shown here are of authentic Phillies jerseys. They used the technique into the double knit era, on home jerseys up through 1974. Road jerseys switched to twill lettering in 1973.

When the Phillies added player names to home jerseys in 1975, they stopped using chain stitching and switched to standard-variety tackle twill to sew their lettering, numbers, and names.

Chain stitching returned on game worn uniforms for 1992, this time used on the front team lettering script only. Player names and numbers are tackle twill.

The Phillies always chain stitch onto a white fabric backing and then sew the patch onto the jersey. They do not embroider directly to the jersey fabric.

Top center: Close-up of original and well-preserved numeral from a game worn 1971 Phillies jersey. Mitchell & Ness does a wonderful job reproducing this craft on some of their old time jerseys. Bottom: Close-up of 2004 Phillies front jersey logo chain stitching. Notice the extra flap-hidden "L" that is on every button-front game jersey prior to 2016, when that practice ends.

© GameWornGuides.com

Home, Road and Alternate Jerseys

1970 Spring Training “Holdover” Home

Construction delays caused the opening of the new multi-purpose stadium to be delayed; first projected to be mid-season 1970, and then ultimately to the start of the 1971 season. The old-style uniforms made their final appearance in spring training 1970, stripped of their 1969 sleeve patches, and the team opened the 1970 season at Connie Mack wearing their new-look uniforms detailed on the pages that follow.

Pictured on this page is the “classic” look that the 1970 Phillies had worn without significant change since 1950. Red pinstriped cream fabric at home, plain gray on the road. The design was once well loved in Philadelphia because the first year the team switched to this style in 1950, the team won the National League pennant for the first time since 1915.

Years thereafter spent in the National League cellar had changed this uniform’s image to represent a tradition of losing by its 20th season of use in 1969. The Phillies were building a new ballpark, Veterans Stadium, to match the fabulous modern stadiums that had been erected in Atlanta, St. Louis, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, and it was set to open for the 1970 season. The team had a new stadium and a new look all ready to go for the new decade in 1970.

© GameWornGuides.com

1970 Spring Training “Holdover” Road

There are no year-tagged 1970 jerseys in this style; all the spring training issues were recycled from prior years’ used stock. The Phillies’ old pre-1970 look remains an understated work of art: chain stitched scarlet thread was used to embroider the front team script onto a cream-colored white felt patch, where red stars dotted both “I”s. The very same embroidery was used to make the extra-large, nearly 10-inch tall special font player numbers on back. Both script and numbers were woven with the swirling texture of a carpet onto cream felt that was then sewn to the jerseys. While the Cardinals and the Astros both used chain stitching to create their front logos, only the Phillies extended the use to the back numbers as well.

© GameWornGuides.com

1970-1971 Home

The Phillies were all set to launch a new image: new team look, new stadium, new optimism. Had the new stadium been ready as planned for the start of the 1970 season, these new suits were ready to go. But with the stadium opening delayed until 1971, the team went ahead and wore their new suits at the old stadium anyway. Made of a flannel blend exclusively by Wilson, they were woven with a crimson chalk pinstripe with a seven-button front. Bold and modern (Arial font) numbers adorned the back and right chest, chain stitched embroidered in crimson thread onto white felt backing, and then zig-zag stitched in place around the edges. The embroidered left chest "P" had the facsimile of a baseball's stitching in the open center of the letter. 1" darker maroon trim was sewn on the sides and sleeve tops.

(Continued next page)

Having a "P" on the left chest is not new for the Phillies, though few would remember the prior time it was done. Various versions of this style were used by the team from 1900 through 1942.

The new-design Phillies jersey was very well received by fans. A detail carried over from the past old-style Phillies script uniforms of the 1960s, fancy chain stitching is still used by the team to embroider all the crimson red logos and player numbers sewn on the uniforms. Side and sleeve trim is now maroon as well. Below: 1900, 1914, 1922, 1923, 1925 and 1941.

Men on the move in Phillies' starting outfield for season opener against Chicago Cubs Tuesday at Connie Mack Stadium are (left to right) Tony Taylor, lf; Larry Hisle, cf, and John Briggs, rf.

© GameWornGuides.com

1970-1971 Home, continued

More examples of the breed. These seven-button chalk pinstripe jerseys are very hard to find; they were sent to the minors and used to excess. The chain stitched numbers and team crest are easily damaged and very difficult to replace.

Hand chain-stitching used to create both the numbers and the team crest is a lost skill today; besides the fact that the antique machines that were built to do this work have disappeared from our modern world.

The example at top was a pre-production sample, and is in unused condition. The one below was issued to "The Bull", Greg Luzinski for the 1971 season where he was a September rookie call-up and played at first base in 28 games.

© GameWornGuides.com

1970-1971 Road

1970

1970

The road uniforms for the new set were just like the home ones, except for the color of the fabric. The cloth chosen for the new set was a blue-gray flannel. The buttons were dark bluish-gray.

The player numbers on both home and away uniforms deserve special note. Breaking tradition, they are a special display font, and not the typical boxy Block or Varsity that are used by almost all other teams. The Phils follow the lead of the Expos, who for 1969 introduced their own smooth and modern team-specific number font.

The numbers (and the front “P” logo) are rendered in elegant chain stitching, embroidered in a thick, deep swirling pattern with plenty of texture. Up close, they are beautiful to behold. All embroidery is done onto white felt, which then is sewn to the jersey.

Finally, the back numbers are rather large compared to other teams, almost 10” tall. No player names are used on either home or road uniforms.

Wilson is the sole supplier of the Phillies 1970–1971 new look uniforms. Team-set information is embroidered in the front shirt tail, player names are embroidered onto a uniform-color piece of fabric and sewn into the back of the neck.

1970

1970

© GameWornGuides.com

1972-1974 Home

Bill Henderson Collection

For 1972 the Phillies joined most of the teams in MLB and switched their uniforms from flannel to new double knits. The man-made fabric promised to be easier to clean for and look crisper, more colorful and brighter on the color televisions that were now common in more homes.

Having just revised their look two years prior, the Phillies simply took the “new look” and applied it to the knit uniforms. Bright crimson red pinstripes were of an engineered design, woven into the fabric with a slightly zig-zag appearance if you looked very closely. The lettering was chain stitched in crimson embroidery thread as before onto off-white fabric patches then sewn to the jersey, and the side and sleeve top trim was a third shade of red— a deep maroon. This mix of red tones proved to be a problem for the team’s outfitters, as it was difficult to match, and over time the maroon trim tended to fade in the sun. Accessories like stirrups, shoes, caps and batting helmets never seemed to match each other during this period.

Phillies home jerseys remained the same 1972–1974. No names on back were used. The front “P” logo was an elegantly embroidered work of art with a flourish resembling the stitching of a baseball running through the opening in the letter’s center. Side and sleeve top trim was applied as “sewn-on”, just as its had been with the 1970–1971 flannels. Seven buttons were used as front closures.

Wilson was the team’s sole supplier, and the Wilson manufacturer’s tag with its integral size data was sewn to the outer left front tail. Team tagging noting the year and set was chain stitched onto a strip of jersey-color fabric and then zig-zagged below.

(Continued next page)

© GameWornGuides.com

1972-1974 Home, continued

1973

The player's name was hand chain stitched onto another rectangle of jersey fabric and stitched into the back of the neck. Double knit Wilson jerseys were always lined inside the placket with linen or satin for player comfort, and the player name tagging was stitched in place before the placket was sewn closed meaning its perimeter stitching was invisible from the outside back of the jersey.

Just as they had been on the 1970–1971 flannels, the player numbers were chain stitched to match the team crest. This work was done by hand by a skilled stitcher, and was time consuming for sure. Front numbers were sewn on the right side, their bottoms aligned with the bottom of the team crest on the other side of the chest. Back numbers were unusually large, as had long been the Phillies tradition. There were no names used on back.

1973

© GameWornGuides.com

1972 Road

The 1972 Phillies road jersey was the same design as the home version except was now rendered in bright Columbia Blue double knit fabric, perfect for color television. Also with a seven-button closure and large, chain stitched numbers, and team crest, it had side and sleeve-top trim bordered on both sides of the center maroon stripe by white. No player names were used in 1972.

The 1972 Phillies knit road jersey is an uncommon find in the collectors world. It was a single-year design and after their MLB service was through, the 1972 jerseys (both home and road) were dispatched to the minor leagues (Reading PA, as I recall) to be used by the Double A farm team.

Above: Photo of Oscar Gamble above shows the typical color mismatch between player lettering, side stripes and cap.

© GameWornGuides.com

1973-1975 Road

1974

Walter Schultz Collection

1974

There were several changes made to the team's road jerseys in 1973. First, a front zipper replaced the button closure. Not a "new" idea; zippers had been used by several teams in the 1950s and 1960s including the Indians, White Sox and the Cubs, but not by the Phillies. The use of a hidden zipper made the front of the jersey lie flat and look sleek and smooth. Next, player names were added to the back. The team used a tall and narrow vertical arched name font, each name hand-drawn and cut by an artist at the Wilson factory. Especially noticeable with longer names, the letters are taller at the ends and shorter in the middle. The Phillies did an admirable job having these custom nameplates ready for players called up from the minors mid-season, or for players acquired in trades. I must assume that these were ordered in as much in advance as possible from Wilson and then the nameplates were locally stitched on spare jerseys kept in the clubhouse. Finally, shades of things to come, the lettering changed from the artistic chain stitch embroidery to common two-layered tackle twill. The team "P" crest was simplified to eliminate the ersatz-baseball stitching design element on the inside opening of the P, and the logo now had an open inside with white fabric showing through.

(Continued next page)

© GameWornGuides.com

1973-1975 Road, continued

1974

Front numbers remained the same style as before, but were also changed to twill. And the back numbers went from being uncommonly large to now being smaller than typical. The new smaller numbers were not simply the old ones "shrunk down", they are proportioned differently, shorter yet wider.

And finally, the color of the red twill lettering was somewhere in between the crimson of the old chain stitched lettering and the maroon of the side stripes. The color of red used on the lettering 1973–1975 matches the current fabric color called "49ers Red" in my restoration swatch kit. After 1975 it changes to a darker red called "Cardinal". As with other Phillies jerseys of the period, surviving examples almost all have their names on back and/or numbers restored after hard service in the minor leagues.

These photos illustrate the change in the size of the back numbers; 1975 at left, 1976 at right

© GameWornGuides.com

1973-1975 Road, continued

More examples of 1973–1975 road jerseys, some showing the fading and extreme wear they were subjected to in the minor leagues. All have replacement nameplates. Top Left: I restored the #31 Linzy at left after minor league use/abuse; Bottom Left: the Hutton nameplate is also surely a replacement. Bottom Right: #4 Coach Ray Rippelmeyer example below probably has all new lettering on it. I recall seeing a dozen or more of these vintage jerseys at a Philadelphia area dealer in the mid-80s, piled on a table, stripped and awaiting attention.

© GameWornGuides.com

1975 Home

Left: outfielder Jay Johnstone in 1975, note the use of a nameplate and the small back numbers used in 1975 only.

Below: Dick Allen's #15 jersey shows how closely the player numbers on back were spaced on many of these jerseys, surely at the whim of the stitcher and not because of a team template.

Far left: the black marker writing in the McGraw collar gives a clue to its post-MLB life.

Above: Catcher Bob Boone's 1975 home jersey, existing as most of these do in the hobby: with its original nameplate removed and separated from it. This one wears a "Set 3" tag and has a nonstandard patch on its sleeve. Right: Tag is from Tony Taylor's #12 jersey of 1975.

Wilson continues as the sole provider of Phillies uniforms. Starting in 1975 home jerseys follow the path taken by road jerseys two years prior: all lettering changes to one-color dark red tackle twill, and vertical arched names on white nameplates are added. While several teams have used white nameplates on pinstriped jerseys. The look is not universally loved, but nameplates make it easier for the team to prepare jerseys for use, and to strip them for re-use by in future years when they are reissued or sent to the minors.

The "P" on front loses its curly-center design element, and newly simplified to one color, the pinstripes of the jersey now show through its open center since it is no longer stitched on a white backing. For 1975 only the home jersey gets the same small back numbers as used on road jerseys but in one color; there are no white outlines. The color is "49ers Red", not the later Cardinal-maroon.

Finding an undisturbed 1975 Phillies jersey with its original player nameplate on back seems to be impossible, as these jerseys were stripped at season end and sent to the minor leagues where they were used without name on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

1976-1986 Home

1976

Howard Wolf Collection

Both of these jerseys are likely all original, seemingly spared being stripped and recycled to the minors. Note the very tight spacing of the numbers in 1976 that was very likely simply the decision of the stitcher.

Home jerseys stay essentially the same for 11 straight seasons. They are identical to the 1975 design except full zippers replace button fronts (as had been done with the road jerseys in 1973) and the back numbers grow an inch or so to about 7 ½ inches. Vertical arch nameplates are used on back. Team tagging stays on the outside front left tail, and player names are still embroidered hidden inside the collar. An unintended artifact of the number font growing larger, somehow the back number "5" pattern is clumsily redrawn making it less than perfect with odd curves; yet this detail is left unaddressed on all team jerseys through 1991. Such was the quaint nature of the 1970s and 1980s, before the age of computer graphics.

In 1976 only, two sleeve patches are worn: the National League centennial patch worn by all NL teams is added to the right sleeve, and the Philadelphia Bicentennial logo patch is added to the left sleeve.

(Continued next page)

1976

1977

© GameWornGuides.com

1976-1986 Home, continued

1981

1983

1981

Notice that the Sandberg example (and the Mike Maddux example on the next page) mid-season player call-ups, have a different player's name in the collar because the jerseys were hastily reissued in the clubhouse, the players' spring training nameplates sewed on for fast re-issue (click on the link to the Sandberg LOA for much more detail). The 1981 example top left is properly without a sleeve patch.

1983

In 1983 the team commemorates its 100th anniversary with a special patch worn on the left sleeve. Also in 1983, Lettering changes to a darker shade of red, "Cardinal Red" on the color chart, a shade that better matches the maroon trim on the jersey. Most surviving examples were sent to the minor leagues, so many in the hobby today have replacement nameplates.

In 1984, a circular team secondary logo patch is added to the left sleeve, featuring the full-word Phillies wordmark, the city name and a cartoon of Independence Hall imposed over a stitched baseball. The use of this patch continues through 1991.

© GameWornGuides.com

1976-1986 Home, continued

1985

1984

1984

1986

These examples have the disk patch used 1984 and after. Note the use of the new style Wilson "Prestige Teams" locker tag that began in 1986.

© GameWornGuides.com

1976-1986 Road

Barry Halper Collection

Everything shared on the prior pages about the 1976–1986 home uniforms is also true of the 1976–1986 Columbia Blue road jerseys, so we will avoid repetition. The numbers grow larger, just as on the home jerseys and all lettering is two color, names on nameplates. Most surviving examples were sent to the minor leagues, so many in the hobby today have replacement nameplates. Notice the shape of the back's "5" that somehow had its pattern become quirky and distorted starting in 1976, and quaintly stayed that way through the end of this style's run.

© GameWornGuides.com

1976-1986 Road, continued

1981

1983

1984

Lettering is lighter red 1976–1982, changes to darker maroon shade for 1983–1986. However, after viewing many examples of original jerseys, I suspect Wilson was inconsistent in which color of dark red they used.

1983 jersey gets the 100th anniversary patch on its left sleeve, new team disk patch is on the left sleeve 1984–1986. Wilson tagging style changes for the 1986 season.

© GameWornGuides.com

1979 Alternate Home “Saturday Night Special”

New Saturday-only duds are no flashier than Schmidt or Rose.

In 1979 the Phillies introduced an all-maroon home “Saturday Night” alternate uniform. Public reaction was swift and negative, and it was only worn once, Saturday, May 19, 1979, then retired forever.

I recall that the originals were auctioned off at that winter’s Phillies fund raising carnival. As far as I know, these were never offered for retail sale. Finding a real one is a rarity.

These jerseys are made by Rawlings. One color (white) name and number: Name on back is a very tall block white on a name-plate, it is not vertically arched like other 1979 Phillies jerseys are. The team wore replicas of these in a Turn Back the Clock game in 2019.

© GameWornGuides.com

1979 Alternate Home "Saturday Night Special", continued

Gettysburg Times - May 25, 1979 Browse this newspaper » Browse a

Phils Scrap New Uniforms

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies' new all-burgundy uniforms, intended for regular Saturday showings, are out because "they just didn't match up to our expectations," said team spokesman Larry Shenk Thursday.

Last Saturday, when the new gear was worn for the first and only time, Shenk said the uniforms would be worn every Saturday "until they lose two in a row."

The Phillies lost to the Montreal Expos Saturday and Sunday night, but Shenk said that didn't really cause the team to scrap the uniforms.

He said the uniforms did not fit well and created a color problem for photographers.

Funny thing... May 19, 1979 was coincidentally "Camera Night" at The Vet, where fans were invited on the field before the game to take photos of their favorite players. So quite a few fan photos of these one-and-done uniforms have surfaced over the years! Thanks to sharing on Internet forums, I share some of these here.

1987-1989 Home

1988

1987

Bill Henderson Collection

Note that for these three years numbers are bolder—they are now the same dimensions as the second (outline) color in the road two-color lettering. The pinstripes change from crimson red to maroon in 1988.The “P” logo now has a closed loop inside as it was on home jerseys 1970–1974.

Switch to button-front jerseys, manufactured by Rawlings.“Phillies” sleeve logo patch continues Numbers are one-color, names are one-color and are no longer vertical arch – switch to Block Standard, or Block. Bottom center: Condensed Block for extra long names (bottom center). Names sewn to a plain white nameplate.

1987

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid-1988: Change from Maroon to Red Pinstripes

Matching the maroons on Phillies uniforms was always a difficult task for suppliers. Finally, the Phillies changed from red pinstripes to maroon pinstripes in the late 1980s. But when? You'd expect it started with a new season, but I've always wondered...

It looks like the change actually happened mid season! Over the years I have come across some 1988-tagged jerseys with red pinstripes (as used 1987 and prior) and some with maroon pinstripes, but I've never held both in my hands at the same time...until now. Here are the two 1988 variants laid perfectly side by side, both made by Rawlings. I am sure the team wore both kinds on the field at the same time, and I wonder if anybody noticed then. By 1989 (and later) it seems all jerseys were made with maroon pinstripes.

© GameWornGuides.com

Phillies Jerseys Demoted to the Minor Leagues

Phillies MLB jerseys were a bonus for the team's minor league affiliates; the home and road jerseys both were of the same design and the road jerseys did not have a city name on them that would have to be removed for minor league use. Throughout the 1970s and 1980s, the team had between five and seven farm clubs each year, with usually all but one or at most two named "Phillies". All of these cities provided happy homes for tired MLB uniforms. The abuse was legendary. At top left, the stitching had been bleached totally white and the nameplate was replaced with one that said "Phillies". I restored Kent Tekulve's late 80s home jersey, it was missing its nameplate. Interestingly, Bob Dernier's mid-80s road jersey (above) had THREE stacked plates on back when I got it—a plain blue plate covered two other varieties. I restored it to original, above right. Hard to find used team pants are used to make replacement nameplates. The pants used for the plates must have similar wear and fading characteristics to the shirt fabric to be a good match. The rote practice of sending MLB jerseys to the minors for a second life did not stop until the early 2000s.

© GameWornGuides.com

1987-1988 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

Steve Kraljic Collection

Identify by the closed loop inside the front "P" logo. Numbers are custom Phillies type style used from 1970 through 1991. Button-front design. Rawlings is the official team supplier during this period

Identical to earlier road lettering, except name type style is Block and no longer vertical arch. Nameplates used. Team sleeve patch used both years. These are incredibly thick, heavy well-made jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

1990-1991 Home

Bill Henderson Collection

1990

Button front. Identify by the closed loop in "P" logo on the front – but notice that the "P" logo is again outlined by white (as it was in 1972–1974). Name and numbers are also two-color—maroon on white. Pinstripes are maroon, as is trim. Numbers are "un-bolded" as they were prior to 1987. Front numbers spaced slightly wider than before. Numbers are custom Phillies type style used from 1970 through 1991. Names on a plain white plate on home jersey, names are block light condensed.

1991

Mike Branham Collection

Detail shows hard to see 2-layer lettering, maroon outlined with white on the back numbers and nameplate of this 1990 home jersey

© GameWornGuides.com

1989-1991 Road

Identical to 1987–1988 jersey in every way, except uniform fabric color changes to gray. Button front, name on a plate, two-color Block Condensed name and Phillies numbers, maroon/white, trim is maroon/white.

Numbers are custom Phillies type style used 1970–1991. Everything else is the same as 1987–1988 road style it replaces.

© GameWornGuides.com

1972-1981 Phillies Team Tagging

From 1972 through 1986 the Phillies sewed a tag with year, size and set numbers on the outside of the front shirt tail beneath the Wilson manufacturer's tag, and also embroidered the player name in cursive script on a tag sewn on the inside of the back collar.

© GameWornGuides.com

1982-1986 Phillies Team Tagging

In 1986 Rawlings became the contracted official supplier of game jerseys to MLB, and most teams switched to Rawlings uniforms, and now have the tiny Rawlings script embroidered on the end of the right sleeve. The Phillies and a few other teams stayed with their long time supplier Wilson instead, and the style of Wilson tag sewn in the tail changes for 1986. it now proclaims, “Tailored Exclusively for Prestige Teams” , implying “they had a choice, but they stayed with us”

© GameWornGuides.com

1987-1992 Phillies Team Tagging

The Phillies switch to Rawlings for 1987. All tagging moves inside the back of the collar 1987–1991. In 1992 Russell jersey tag is on front outside of tail, and player names are not embroidered inside the jersey any longer. After 1992 Phillies team tagging ceases for a number of years..

© GameWornGuides.com

1992-2015 Home

1992

Kruk's All-Star Game used jersey with that patch on the sleeve.

The new-for- 992 jersey is an updated version of the uniforms used from 1950–1969, except now with blue stars over the two letters "i" replacing the red ones used in the past. Pinstripes are bright red. Phillies script is chain stitch embroidered onto a fabric backing, then the entire patch is sewn onto the jersey.

1994

1997 (armband post-8/1)

Name and numbers are a different and new-for-1992 custom Phillies-only font, and are always two-color–bright-red outlined with white. On home jersey, names are always sewn on without a nameplate. 8" numbers on the back, 3-1/2" numbers on the left sleeve.

Russell is manufacturer 1992–1999, Majestic starts as contracted maker in 2000.

Year tags used on this style only in 1992, no team tagging at all after that until 2008 when they year tagging returns as tiny two-digit squares sewn beneath the last button hole. This style enjoys a long unchanged run, about the only thing that differentiates one year from another is the presence of year-specific commemorative patches, some of which are shown here.

© GameWornGuides.com

1992-2015 Home, continued

Majestic takes over as official on-field provider starting in 2000. MLB logo sewn to the back of the neck starting in 2000. Cool Base tech fabric jerseys appear in 2006 for some players, all home jerseys are Cool Base starting 2007. Majestic logo embroidered on the left sleeve end. Year-tagging resumes in 2008, inside button flap.

2001 (post-9/11)

2003

2004

2008

Bill Henderson Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1992-2015 Road

1992

1993

Road jersey is a gray version of the white pinstriped home, with chain-stitched front wordmark and sleeve numbers but with the addition of stretchy sewn-in knit white/red/white knit sleeve end trim. Russell is the maker 1992–1999 and year tagging is used in 1992 only, resumes in 2008. Nameplates used 1998–2005, not in other years.

1997

1999

© GameWornGuides.com

1992-2015 Road, continued

2000

2005

Majestic is the maker starting 2000, their logo appears in the left sleeve. Cool Base road jerseys appears for 2008 and are the only option for players thereafter.

2008

2009

2012

© GameWornGuides.com

2008-2015 Alternate Home

2009

The Phillies begin year-tagging team jerseys again in 2008, sewing a tiny square with a two-digit year on the inside of the placket below the last buttonhole.

Above: The Phils home alternate is modeled after the 1948 home uniform. Here is Robin Roberts in his rookie year of 1948. Notice the depth of the embroidery of the team script, and also how it is clearly coming detached from the jersey on the left side. 1948 jerseys did not have blue stars like the 2008 version does; they were red.

This is the Phillies first use of an alternate uniform (excluding the one game attempt in 1979). It is designed to resemble closely their 1948 home uniform, but uses current stylized name and number fonts. It is a cream colored, off-white fabric. Incidentally, it closely resembles the Turn Back the Clock uniform worn for one game in 1992. Front wordmark is chain stitched. This uniform is designated for use only during day games played at home. All jerseys of this style are Cool Base, no regular fabric versions are issued. The special Phillies font is used for player names and numbers, just like the team's other jerseys, however here it is red outlined with blue. Numbers are on the back only, no sleeve numbers are used as are on home and road jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016: Flex Base Jersey Construction and Branding; Phillies Minor Script Change

Read the full story on MLB's adoption of Flex Base jerseys for 2016 in Chapter 2.

OLD and NEW, side by side

Without any announcement, the Phillies tweaked their uniform script for 2016. Still chain-stitched on a white backing that is sewn to the shirt, the script is now fatter and shorter (top to bottom), the blue stars are larger, and it matches more closely the script that has been on the team jackets for years, the sign on the scoreboard, and team BP jerseys since 2007.

Notable only to the truly obsessed, the hidden "third L" under the button flap that has been on Phillies game jerseys since 1992 has been eliminated as well (see small photo below).

In 2016, all teams adopt Majestic's new "Flex Base" on-field game jerseys, which are made of Cool Base fabric, but with several new elements designed to make them lighter and more breathable. The new jerseys have mesh side panels that run the length of the jersey, and one on the back tail called the "Air Belt." They also use "Kiss Cut" layering for front decorations , names, and numbers, which Majestic says is 10-20% lighter than traditional layered twill. Finally, the MLB logo on the back neck is now a rubberized patch, called CFX by Majestic, and the heat-pressed tag on the front tail differs from Cool Base jerseys from prior years.

The mysterious hidden "Third L" found only on authentic team jerseys since the 1950s, is suddenly gone for 2016. At far left, the Phillies print logo was the model for the 2016 jersey script in an attempt to standardize the team branding across print and fabrics. It was ultimately not well received and lasted only three seasons.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2018 Home

The 2016 update consists of the change to the front lettering and the switch to Majestic's Flex Base template, both noted above. Otherwise, aside from the interruption of pinstripes caused by the Flex Base side panels, to the casual observer anyway (which is no one among us here...), these seem mostly the same as before.

Below: This 2016 jersey is from Jackie Robinson Day.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2018 Road

The changes to the road jersey are even less obvious to those not as interested in the minutia of baseball jerseys than they are on the home. This is mostly because the new Flex Base mesh panels blend much better into the gray jersey that lacks pinstripes. Otherwise, the updates in front lettering and jersey template are the same as noted in a previous page.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2018 Alternate Home Cream

As noted a few pages prior, the team changes the front wordmark for 2016, and updates to the Majestic Flex Base template along with all other teams for that season. Otherwise, this jersey carries on as before.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2018* Alternate Home Red

2016

The Phillies introduce a red alternate jersey for the first time since the 1979 "Saturday Night Special" jerseys that were worn only once. This version, not to be worn with matching pants, features a three-color, chain stitched wordmark on front with white/blue names and numbers on back in the Phillies' special font. No numbers of sleeves. A thin white/blue braid encircles both sleeve ends. This jersey also provides the basis for the team's 2016-2023 Spring Training jersey. It does not appear to have been worn in the 2018 regular season, and it is removed from the team's roster of jerseys in the MLB Style Guide after 2018.

2017

Although listed as a jersey option for 2018 in the MLB Style Guide, it was not worn during the season.

2017

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Refresh

For the 2019 season, the Phillies performed some minor freshening and tuning of their traditional jersey design. Besides eliminating the seldom-used red alternate jersey from the team set (though it still appeared in Spring Training, and occasionally in the regular season), the following changes were made:

The wordmark is again revised to make the lettering less "fat." Its last revision in 2016 tried to match the print version of the logo but ended up making it look cartoonish and bloated on the jerseys. The 2019 revision reduces the weight of the red script slightly, taking it somewhere in-between the 2016 version and the 1992 original.

The wordmark is stitched on a patch that is sewn to the jersey, and while still using an embroidery meant to evoke classic chain stitching, the new weave is more rigid and mechanical and has less depth in its appearance. The wordmark patch is now unique for each of the colors of the jerseys it is used on, adding an additional narrow jersey-fabric-colored outline on the gray, cream, and red Spring Training versions. The white outline around the "Phillies" wordmark and the player numbers on the back are now 1/8" instead of the earlier, more traditional ¼"

The blue stars that dot the "i's" are smaller and darker blue.

The sleeve end trim on road jerseys is now a narrower knit braid sewn on top of the sleeve end, no longer a sewn-in knit cuff as had been used since the style was adopted in 1992.

For 2019, the back numbers' outlines are changed to 1/8", half the width of what they had been for many years prior.

On the gray jersey above, besides the new, sewn-on narrower sleeve end trim, notice the narrow gray outline on the front wordmark patch. Note the matching red outline on the Spring Training jersey above, and the difference in the lettering embroidery texture.

Credit: Sports Illustrated

Courtesy: Sportslogos.net

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Refresh, continued

Close up of the difference in wordmark embroidery, pre- and post-2019; back number outlining modification on home, road and cream alternate.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Alternate Home Powder Blue

With a handful of teams bringing powder blue back at the end of the 2010s, and the Phillies "throwing back" to in often in the past, it was a natural fit for the Phils to recall their 1984-1986 road jerseys (based on the presence of the sleeve patch and design of the open "P" on front) as a full-time alternate starting in 2019. One notable change over this style when worn in 2018 for "Throwback Thursdays", the 2019 alternate is a full weight knit jersey and is not made of Cool Base fabric. These are Intended to be worn at home, while the fondly remembered originals of 1972-1988 were worn exclusively on the road. These beauties by Majestic come complete with matching blue pants. Like the originals, they feature a maroon/white "P" logo with an open center, white/maroon/white sleeve and side "racing stripe" trim, which represents the mid-80s set better than recent throwbacks, though there's still a little too much white. Maroon/white front and back numbers in the Phillies custom font (which look slightly smaller than the originals), and maroon/white names on back applied to plates. The original NOBs were a tall, vertical arch style, but are represented here in standard block. Another difference since their original appearance is the lack of a zipper-front, as this set has a standard button-front, likely for safety and player comfort. Aside from the team disc patch on the left sleeve, the 2019 version also has the league-wide MLB150 patch, and the team's "DPM" memorial for former minority owner David Montgomery, on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019-2023 Home

2021

2022

Just a few short years after the front wordmark is changed for 2016, it is updated again for 2019. As noted on the page about the 2019 refresh, aside from the front wordmark, the outline around the back numbers is reduced in size. Player number on sleeve discontinued after 2022 in anticipation of future ad patch.

Majestic makes these in 2019, Nike takes over 2020-2023. Note the change in style code from PPH1 for Majestic to PP1H for Nike.

2019

2022

© GameWornGuides.com

2019-2023 Road

Notice the special tailoring on these two jerseys. The one above is 3" longer than usual; the one below has flat tails. The bottom alteration is noted in readable form on the tagging, the way it would have been done in the 1970s-2000s. It is likely simply part of the computer record for the player and is replicated each time when jerseys are made for him.

Gray jersey body continues the use of the Majestic Flex-Base template for 2019, with the team wordmark changes shown a few pages prior. Also changed are the width of the number outlines on both the jersey back and sleeve. Lettering is now kiss-cut lightweight style. Sleeve end trim is now narrower and sewn on top of the sleeve ends instead of as a wide stretchy cuff sewn into the sleeve end. Above: Old (left) compared to new (right) shown above. Player number on sleeve discontinued after 2022 in anticipation of future ad patch.

Nike takes over in 2022 and the jersey is identical except for the change in logos. Majestic makes these in 2019, Nike takes over from 2020-2023.Note the change in style code from PPR2 for Majestic to PP2R for Nike.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019-2023 Alternate Home Cream

2019

The front logo change is the main modification to this jersey style for 2019. Lettering is now “kiss cut” lightweight style and the back number outline is half as bold as in prior years.

Majestic branding gives way to Nike for 2020-2023.Note the change in style code from PPA3 for Majestic to PP3A for Nike.

2021

2022

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Alternate Road

Majestic's code for this style was PPAS. Nike's is PP3S.

Game photos above from September 2023.

The red jersey is an oddball of sorts --- it is not listed in the official MLB Style Guide as a regular season alternate jersey for the Phillies, it is only shown as their spring training jersey. 2019 versions were made with the spring training patch on the sleeve, and a search through photo archives of regular season games, I cannot find any photos of it used during the regular season. A set was made for 2020, but was used in Spring Training action only, not in the regular season. However, it was dusted off and worn somewhat frequently during the 2021 through 2023 seasons, but only on the road. It is discontinued after the 2023 season so the team can conform to Nike's 4+1 rule (4 regular and 1 City Connect).

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Alternate Home Powder Blue

The Nike version of this alternate jersey changes to tech-fabric construction from the full-weight knit from 2019. Keeping with the old-school look, these jerseys have separate sewn-on nameplates for player names, the only jerseys in MLB to retain this feature. The lettering is also layer cut as was used by all teams prior to 2016: the red layer is sewn on top of the white for all elements (current style kiss-cut lightweight twill lettering would have the white outlines sewn on top of the red). The disc patch on the left sleeve is removed for the 2023 season, in anticipation of a future advertising patch. Majestic's style code for this jersey was PLT2. Nike's is PPM9.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Nike “Vapor Premiere Elite” Jersey Template

Nike Flex Base 2020-2023

Nike Vapor Premier Elite 2024

Following league-wide sweeping changes to MLB jerseys with all teams switching from Nike’s 2020-2023 continuation of the Majestic Flex Base jersey shell to its new Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) template, the jerseys of the 2024 season become an anomaly - a “one and done” season of changes that brought intense scrutiny from players and fans alike. Based on the negative feedback, especially from MLB players, Nike rolled back some but not all of the 2024 changes in time for the 2025 season.

The full rundown of the changes is outlined earlier in “The Basics” chapter, but generally speaking, 2024’s crop of jerseys had changed from earlier versions in several key ways.

- VPE home jerseys are off-white, or light cream color. The earlier Flex Base white jerseys are a bright, purer white. Grays are standardized.
- The front placket is narrower on VPE, which often causes team wordmark lettering that crosses the placket to break differently.
- Neck and sleeve trim elements (when used) are no longer sewn on top of the jersey material, but are now “sewn-in” to the jersey at the seams. Placket trim adornment remains the same, though the trim is now spaced closer together with the narrowing in placket size.
- For improved visibility, the MLB logo on the back of the jersey is moved several inches lower onto the back, down from the collar placket area where it had been since 2000.
- VPE loses the integrated mesh side and back tail panels that had been part of the Flex Base jersey template.
- Player names on VPE are much smaller, and for many teams are done in a standardized block font, all using a much steeper, nearly semi-circular arch.
- For teams with front numbers, the new 2024 font is simply always a reduced size of the back numbers. This was not the way it had been in the past for most teams, with front numbers being a font variant (smaller but usually wider and bolder) than the back font.
- Team logo sleeve patches, and in some cases sponsor sleeve patches change from traditional raised embroidery to flat printed plastic or to sublimated cloth/twill
- All lettering is done using a new more lightweight (thinner) kind of matte-finished twill (commonly called “Nike Twill”). Most, but not all jerseys incorporate barely visible micro-perforation on the numbers, front and back.
- Universally, nameplates are no longer used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Home

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Phillies now-classic home jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, but the "Phillies" lettering splits across the placket in about the same place as before. However, the front lettering is, unfortunately, no longer chain-stitched to twill and sewn on, it is now flatter, standard embroidery instead. The team's ad patch is added on July 31. The team does not use perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Road

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Phillies longstanding road jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, but the "Phillies" lettering splits across the placket in about the same place as before. However, the front lettering is, unfortunately, no longer chain-stitched to twill and sewn on, it is now flatter, standard embroidery instead. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the ends of the sleeves instead of on to them. The team's ad patch is added on July 31.It is unclear if the team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024, more research required.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Home Cream

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Phillies cream-colored home alternate jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, but the "Phillies" lettering splits across the placket in about the same place as before. However, the front lettering is, unfortunately, no longer chain-stitched to twill and sewn on, it is now flatter, standard embroidery instead. Neck and sleeve-end trim are now sewn in to the jersey instead of on to it. The team's ad patch is added on July 31. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Home Powder Blue

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Phillies popular, nostalgia-inspired powder blue alternate jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. Nameplates are no longer used. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024, and they are now kiss-cut for the first time. As noted elsewhere in the chapter, it was worn with the team's Independence Hall patch, which was removed before the 2023 season, for one game on July 11. The patch was adhesive, and fell off of some players' sleeves. The team's ad patch is added on July 31.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024-2025 City Connect

Bill Henderson Collection

The Phillies debut their City Connect in 2024, and it stands out as completely unlike anything they've every worn on-field. Taking its cues from the team's host city, this entry is packed with symbolic detail, described below in these excerpts from MLB's press release.

- Blue and yellow are based on our city's flag, unchanged since its inception.
- The skyline of Philadelphia is proudly depicted on the inside of the jersey's collar. Most notably, however, is the bright blue shade of the collar to represent what Philadelphia is at its core: a blue-collar big city with a small-town feel.
- The lettering is reminiscent of text found on important historical documents in the city and features a subtle pattern inspired by the crack of the Liberty Bell.
- The sleeve patch features "City of Brotherly Love" with the Liberty Bell within the word "Love", a nod to both a symbol and word that is strongly held at the heart of Philly. On the interior, an etching pattern references the illustration style featured in literature common around the time of the revolution. Baseball laces woven into this detail are intended to represent how deeply the Phillies are stitched into Philly's DNA.

The pattern from the front letters also carries over to the back player numbers, which are perforated. Built on the Nike VPE template, this jersey's sleeve trim is sewn into the sleeves, though it lacks the neck trim typical of VPE, perhaps from the challenge of matching the gradient pattern. The team's ad patch, Independence Blue Cross, is added on July 31, 2024. Carryover City Connect jerseys are not updated in 2025, despite the updates to the team's other jerseys for the 2025 season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Home

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Road

The 2025 season brings many changes to road gray jerseys across MLB. The 2024 VPE gray jerseys suffered from significant sweat-staining issues during games, so 2025 gray jerseys revert back to the same base fabric used for Flex Base, but applied to the VPE template (no mesh side panels or “Air Belt” back panel). Other pre-2024 elements return, including neck and sleeve trim being sewn on to jerseys again rather than sewn in. Back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. VPE’s placket remains narrow, so the “Phillies” script breaks in the same place as in 2024. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Home Cream

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Home Powder Blue

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. However, the nameplates that were used prior to 2024 on these, do not return. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. This jersey style still uses layer cut- where the red layer is sewn on top of the white layer to create the outline, different from the kiss cut method used nearly universally in MLB now.

© GameWornGuides.com

Batting Practice and Spring Training Jerseys

1978 to Mid-1986 Batting Practice

Randy Miller photo

The Phillies used batting practice jerseys starting in 1978. Note the "open loop" in the "P" (some Phillies players wore this jersey instead of their game jerseys in the All-Star Game in Seattle in 1979). The front lettering script did not match the team standard logo design that appeared on printed material (see inset below). While attractive, it is proportioned differently with a hand--drawn look about it. I doubt such a deviation from the official design would be allowed to slip through today.

Wilson and Majestic are the manufacturers. Fabric is not mesh -- it is a lightweight solid double knit weave.

These jerseys seem to be tailored consistently shorter than normal, regardless of the maker. These shirt tails could have used an inch or two of length. Names on back are always used, in vertical arch, sewn to the jersey with no nameplate. Numbers are Varsity style on the BP jersey, and are found on the back and on the left sleeve.

Randy Miller photo

Walter Schultz Collection

The script on the early batting practice jersey differs from the artist's version of the official Phillies wordmark

© GameWornGuides.com

1986 Alternate Batting Practice

These short waisted pullovers were offered to the team by Rawlings for the 1986 season. The manufacturer is Rawlings. A V-neck, It lacks the zip-neck seen on Majestic Gamewarmers (as this style was called by Majestic) common with other teams We can date it from 1986 as this was the only year that Gary Redus was on the team.

The jersey is solid fabric with wide elastic striped bands around the arms and waist. Notice the inconsistent type style used for the numbers on the back compared to the numbers on the sleeves. This short-and-tight style of warm-up jersey was used in MLB for only a brief time by most teams.

Phillies collector Howard Wolf informs us that the entire unused team-lettered set of these jerseys were auctioned off by the Phillies at their very first ALS auction. When sold off they were new and never worn. It is doubtful that they were made for the auction, more likely the team decided not to use them. Perhaps the tight looking sleeve end elastic was as uncomfortable to wear as it appears to me?

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid-1986-Early 1987 Batting Practice

Late 1986 or early 1987: uses 1986 style script

Randy Miller photo

Made by Rawlings of solid (non-mesh) fabric, knit four-striped sewn in sleeve trim. The use of the early, non-team standard front wordmark continues.

Mismatching styles of numbers are used on the back and on the sleeve. Varsity is used on the sleeves, but the back numbers are akin to the font used on the uniforms of the same-year Cincinnati Reds. Notice the diagonal stroke on the number "2".

Names on back always used, on nameplates and are standard block type style, not vertical arch.

Jerseys made in 1986 have no Rawlings sleeve logo, ones made for the 1987 season have the Rawlings logo embroidered on the right sleeve above the knit trim.

1987 with Rawlings sleeve script

© GameWornGuides.com

1987 Batting Practice

The jersey body itself is identical to the one shown on the prior page, but sometime after the start of the 1987 season, the set design was changed to incorporate the standard Phillies front wordmark logo instead of the earlier non-standard one. The fonts are changed to Varsity Bold in a consistent style on the sleeves and back, player names are sometimes bolder. Names observed both direct sewn and with nameplates.

The Rawlings sleeve logo is always used on this style. One oddity is that the Phillies lettering on front is apparently spaced by hand by the stitcher, as sometimes significant variances in letter spacing exist between jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

1988-1991 Batting Practice

Randy Miller photo

V-neck jersey changes to mesh fabric for 1988, sleeve stripes simplified to two instead of the earlier four. Mesh construction, red/maroon knit sleeve end trim. As before, the front wordmarks are oddly inconsistently hand-spaced on these leading to differences in appearance from one another

Inconsistent style Varsity numbers on back and on sleeves, note the different style “2’s” on the examples at left. names are on nameplates and these are often removed and missing.

Top, center: Nameplates on this style are often missing. As this style was used for four years, these jerseys were reissued and recycled through Spring Training

© GameWornGuides.com

1988-1991 Batting Practice, continued

Heritage and Scott Auctions

Above: Note the red Rawlings tail tag in the style introduced in 1991 style on the example.

Randy Miller photo

Randy Miller photo

Steve Kraljic Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1992-2002 Batting Practice

1992

Steve Kraljic Collection

2000

Player names on back appear by 1998.

Team issued versions have chain stitched wordmark. Retail versions often have layered twill.

Above: Only 1992 jerseys were year tagged. Right: Dale Murphy wearing a Russell jersey in 1992. Far right: The Phillies wore these in a regular season game, July 9, 1992.

Red mesh jersey that matches the team's 1992 uniform redesign.

1992 regular season issues have numbers in one-color bold white, 1992 BP jerseys (only) are year tagged by the team.

Most jerseys (1992-1997) exist with no names on back, Around 1998 names are added, single-color white, but matching the bolder dimensions of the outline color of the home lettering as it appears on the game jerseys. When used, names are sometimes sewn to a nameplate. Numbers on the back only.

© GameWornGuides.com

Early 1990s Alternate Zip-Neck Batting Practice

This zip-neck jersey was referred to in the Majestic catalog as "The Gamewarmer," and it appears it was offered to every team as an alternate batting practice jersey. The Phillies script on the front is layered twill instead of chain stitching. Some teams used them, some even preferred them to the normal BP jersey. Several pages earlier, we showed the 1986 version of this jersey, and we know that the Phillies did not use those. This one may well be from 1992, the first year of this new uniform style. I have never come across one lettered for team use, or any photos of players wearing them. Some teams passed them out to players who wanted them, but did not customize them with player names or numbers. I suspect the Phillies were in this group. Regardless, they were certainly not popular.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003-2006 Home Batting Practice

- For the first time in their history, the Phillies adopt different home and road batting practice jerseys. Home version is red, road is blue.
- Store bought versions have the Phillies lettering in layered tackle twill.
- Team used jerseys have the lettering in chain stitching (shown here), which looks much nicer.
- Bold numbers and names used; regular uniform's outline dimensioned layer is used, names sewn to a plate
- The Comfort-weave fabric used to make these jerseys is highly susceptible to pulls and, especially on red jerseys, fading from exposure to the sun.

Below right: All Authentic, on-field button-front Phillies BP jerseys from 1992-2015 have an extra "L" as a part of the logo. This can not be seen when the jersey is buttoned. Replica-style jerseys usually do not have this feature. Store-bought pre-2007 replica jerseys, even those labeled "Authentic Collection" often do not have chain stitched team scripts, substituting multilayer twill instead.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003-2006 Road Batting Practice

Road version of the 2003-2006 Batting Practice Jersey is blue. Store bought versions have the Phillies lettering in layered tackle twill. Team used jerseys have the lettering in chain stitching (right)

Bold numbers and names used (regular uniform's outline dimensioned layer is used). Names sewn to a plate. The Comfort-weave fabric used to make these jerseys is Majestic's first attempt at a moisture wicking fabric and is highly susceptible to pulls and fading. It does not take much use to make these jerseys look really ratty.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2010 Home Batting Practice

2007 with "VUK" memorial patch.

Bill Henderson Collection

When the league switches to one-button, pullover Cool Base batting practice jerseys for 2007, the Phillies stay with home and road versions. All graphics, front and back, are heat applied.

Home red jersey has blue side panels.

The red jersey fabric faded badly in 2007-2008, mostly as a result of exposure to the sun. For 2009 Majestic worked on the fabric to make it more resistant to fading.

Team wordmark is fatter and squatter than game jersey version, like the one used on team jackets.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2010 Road Batting Practice

The Phillies carry two styles of batting practice jerseys into the 2007 all-MLB revamp of warmup jerseys. The blue jersey features a full-length red side insert panel.

All lettering is changed to heat pressed appliqués, not tackle twill numbers and names with lettering with chain stitched Phillies script lettering as they had been in the past. Team wordmark is fatter and squatter than game jersey version, like the one used on team jackets.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2013 Batting Practice

Kurt Wadsworth Collection

The 2011 all-MLB redesign of BP jerseys changed them from pullovers back to button front. Side panel trim is blue, and the road blue BP jersey was eliminated by the Phillies` for 2011. Back player lettering returns to all sewn, front wordmark is layered twill and not chain stitched.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2015 Batting Practice

Majestic and MLB redesign all teams' batting practice jerseys for 2014, though the Phillies' changes are very minor, almost unnoticeable to anyone who does not have an eagle eye. Blue side panels are slightly shorter, now stopping before the bottom hem of the garment. Red/blue/red knit trim is sewn at the collar and sleeve ends. Front lettering is an applique, back player name and numbers are white twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Spring Training

Read the full story on MLB's new for 2016 Spring Training Jerseys in Chapter 8.

Bill Henderson Collection

For the first time in 2016, MLB introduces a Spring Training-specific jersey intended to be worn for workouts and games in the pre-season. The jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features a special printed twill, decorated with "2016" and Spring Training symbols, as the main twill layer for every team. The Phillies use their regular season red alternate as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill/ blue. The jersey also features a rubberized, CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Inter-state highway sign, reading "2016" and "FL" repre-senting where the Phillies spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Spring Training Jersey

Spring Training-only jerseys return for all teams in 2017 with some minor design modifications. Just as in 2016, the jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features special printed twill, this year decorated with “2017” and Spring Training symbols. However, all teams now use the same twill, in single-color white with gray printing, replacing the many team-specific combinations from the year before.

The Phillies again use their regular season new red alternate as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill. The jersey features a recolored version of the rubberized CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading “2017” and “FL” representing where the Phillies spend Spring Training.

Not unusual to see high-number, non-roster invitees in spring training without player NOB.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2019 Batting Practice Jersey

With many players opting for lightweight cage jackets, which are devoid of player identification, instead of traditional BP jerseys with player names and numbers, Majestic introduces a replacement product that may be an attempt to gain acceptance by the pros on field while being more attractive to fans at retail. New for 2017, official team batting practice jerseys are replaced with what Majestic calls a 3/4 Sleeve BP Trainer. The new hybrid is cut in a pullover jacket silhouette, including a short zipper at the neck, but made of Cool Base jersey material. The underarm and back panels are of Cool Base mesh, like the sides and tail of Flex Base jerseys. Team logos and other lettering is in what Majestic calls “lightweight twill” (as described in Chapter 8). The Majestic logo is applied to the middle of the left sleeve, and a new, heat-pressed Cool Base tag adorns the left front tail. The Phillies jersey is red with red back with blue underarm gussets. The “P” from their cap logo appears on the front left chest in white. The back of the jersey is blank. Player number in white in special Phillies font on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Spring Training

The 2018 Spring Training jerseys continue the general design of the previous year, again featuring all player name and number lettering using each team's regular fonts in one layer of twill printed with special Spring Training and 2018-year-specific patterns. The Phillies use their regular-season new red alternate as their base. The name and back numbers are sewn on in white patterned twill. A new CFX patch, shaped like home plate, is stitched to the right sleeve, featuring "2018" and "FL" representing their Spring Training home.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Spring Training

The 2019 Spring Training jersey evolves to yet another iteration of the theme of the last three years. This time, jersey backs abandon the single-color printed twill treatment of the past and return to regular season multi-layered team-color twill like 2016, yet without 2016's printed patterns. The team tweaks its script wordmark again for 2019 making the lettering less bold than it had been 2016-2018, but more bold than it had been 2015 and prior. Back numbers now have a very narrow 1/8" outline.

The Phillies use their discontinued regular-season red alternate as the base for this design, now carrying a new CFX patch on the right sleeve, featuring "2019" and "FLA," referencing their Spring Training home. The name and back numbers are white/blue lightweight twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Spring Training

Spring Training's jerseys are simplified for 2020, league-wide. For the first time since 2016, Spring Training jerseys eliminate the special sleeve patch indicating the year and location of a team's Spring Training home, and now the lettering is the same non-patterned, multi-layered twill as the teams wear in the regular season, making many teams' spring jerseys identical to their regular-season alternates. For 2020, the Phillies use their seldom-worn and previously discontinued regular-season red alternate, with white/blue name and back numbers.

Though officially discontinued as an alternate, this style returns to the field during the 2021 through 2023 seasons, being worn in regular season games multiple times by the team. It was not listed in the team's style guide as an official option, however.

© GameWornGuides.com

Special Events Jerseys

1986 St. Patrick's Day

Following the lead of the Cincinnati Reds who started this as a joke in 1978, the Phillies create a 1986 St. Pat's jersey in home white with green pinstripes. These follow all the lettering style "rules" of the normal jerseys. Vertical arch names on a plate. Uniforms were all auctioned off, including pants, hats, and stirrups at the 1986 Phillies ALS Charity Auction.

In 1977, Tug McGraw dyed his socks and jersey green and wore those on March 17 with the Phils, though the umpire wouldn't allow him to pitch until he had changed. In this sense, McGraw gets credit for ushering in the Phils' St. Pat's day consciousness. Mitchell & Ness "invented" the Phillies wearing St. Pat's in 1981 so they could market #45 McGraw and #14 Rose jerseys, which they could not do with the 1986 St. Pats jerseys, the first year the Phils wore one, when neither of these players were on the team. The Phils website copied the M&N story and posts it as historic fact. We have not seen any evidence anywhere ever that the Phils wore green unis prior to 1986. You read it here.

© GameWornGuides.com

1988 St Patrick's Day

Nick DiSalvo Photo

The 1988 version of the St. Pat's jersey was a solid green. Sleeves had white and green knit trim at the ends. There are no player names on back, nor are there player names sewn in the collars. "SET 1 1988" tags are used.

Numbers are Phillies Bold variety used on home jerseys of 1987-1989 vintage only. These uniforms were auctioned off, including pants, hats, and stirrups at the 1988 Phillies ALS Charity Auction.

© GameWornGuides.com

1989 St. Patrick's Day

The 1989 version of the St. Pat's jersey was nearly identical to the prior year's version: solid green, Sleeves had white and green knit trim at the ends.

New for 1989 are player names on the back and player names sewn in the collars. No year or set tags are used.

© GameWornGuides.com

1991 Turn Back the Clock to 1957

Mike Branham Collection

Throwback games were a brand new idea back in 1991, These uniforms were tagged "1991 Nostalgia Game Special." The game was played on June 16, 1991 against the Cincinnati Reds who wore 1957 gray vests. Copies of the Phillies home uniforms, circa 1950-1970, are made of polyester double knit, not the old-style wool. The lettering and numbers on back were all old-fashioned chain stitched like the originals are. They look very much like the retro uniform redesign that the Phillies adopted the very next year in 1992.

(Right): Name in neck misspelled!

© GameWornGuides.com

1992 Turn Back the Clock to 1942

1942

May 3, 1992 the Phillies played on the road in San Francisco as the 1942 Phillies, wearing the wartime “HEALTH” Patch on their sleeves. These uniforms were made by Russell in double knit.

Compared to original 1942 Phillies’ jerseys, the PHILS on the front is a bit too bold, and should have an arch instead of being ruler-straight across.

© GameWornGuides.com

1992 Turn Back the Clock to 1948

On June 21, 1992 the Phils played at home against the Cubs wearing 1948-replica red, white, and blue uniforms, recreated by Russell in bright white double knit, with felt lettering. The Cubs wore road replicas of their 1948 uniforms, also made by Russell. Front wordmark is very accurate, back numbers are close to originals (original 1949 jersey shown at bottom right for comparison, inset).

In 2008, 16 years later and the 60th anniversary of 1948, the Phillies unveiled an alternate home jersey that was meant to look very much like this one, which was only worn for two years when it was new, 1948-1949.

© GameWornGuides.com

1993 Turn Back the Clock to 1933

Mike Santangelo Collection

Imaged by Heritage Auctions, HA.com

Imaged by Heritage Auctions, HA.com

1925

August 1, 1993, the Phillies dressed in Mitchell & Ness poly knit replicas of the team's jersey style worn at home from 1925 through 1933. These cream-colored jerseys had red felt lettering. The game was set to commemorate the 1933 Phillies from exactly 60 years prior.

Photo: Philadelphia Daily News

© GameWornGuides.com

1997 Negro Leagues Tribute (1938 Philadelphia Stars)

June 28, 1997: The Phils played in Atlanta as the 1938 Negro League Philadelphia Stars. The photo is Scott Rolen warming up (bottom right).

Knit replicas of the Philadelphia Stars uniforms were made by Mitchell & Ness with an assist from Ebbets Field Flannels. Back numbers are in Block with Serifs, two-color red/navy. Wordmark and numbers are felt. Note the use of 1997 Jackie Robinson patch on left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

1999 Turn Ahead the Clock

Bill Henderson Collection

These ersatz-futuristic jerseys were worn only once, against the Diamondbacks in Arizona on September 11, 1999. Many teams were reluctant participants in this promotion, which encouraged them to imagine how the team would look 25 years in the future, in the 21st century. The Phillies' entry wasn't terribly imaginative, envisioning the current team logo in italics and flying through space with vapor trails behind.

Note the American flag on the sleeve of the blue undershirt, with the futuristic imaginary 60-star blue field, while the official MLB artwork depicts a flag with 77 stars. Only a small number of these were made for sale to the public, to the very, very few people who were interested. They are very rare today and when they are offered for sale always bring crazy prices. Game worn examples had the white Russell R embroidered on the sleeve end; retail versions usually lacked this detail. Highly sought after today, when new these could not be given away.

Flag seen on one replica jersey's undershirt has 60 stars, original art from the TATC concept packet by MLB has 77 stars.

© GameWornGuides.com

2002 Turn Back the Clock to the 1970s (Home)

A 2002 Turn Back the Clock three-game series was played at home, again against the Braves, July 19, 20, 21.

The series was billed as a turn back the clock to the 1970s and the Braves wore 1974-1975 style road uniforms. But the Phils recreations were closer to their 1990-1991 home uniforms, nicely done by Majestic with the 1990 white outlined version of the front "P" white-outlined numbers and the post-1983 left sleeve patch. This is a full-weight, polyester uniform, not Cool Base.

"0062" inside seam tag indicates a garment made to team specs. If this had been made specifically for retail sale it would have had a 6200 code.

© GameWornGuides.com

2002 Turn Back the Clock to the 1970s (Road)

Steve Kraljic Collection

There certainly was a lot of nostalgia in Philadelphia in 2002. The Phillies played a three-game series in Atlanta where they were supposed to be reprising the 1970s against the Braves, July 26, 27, and 28. The Braves dressed in 1974-1975 style.

Majestic's copy of the road blue Phillies jersey was a better copy of the 1987-1988 road jersey, not the 1970s version. While the shade of blue is just right and the correct font is used for the numbers, unlike the 1970s version this jersey used buttons and not a zipper on front as was used in this era, had the circular team patch on the sleeve as was used 1984-1991 and player names on back were not vertical arched, as they would have been in the 1970s, but nameplates are properly used. The side and sleeve-top trim is incorrectly proportioned; the maroon should be wider and the white narrower.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003 Turn Back The Clock to 1971

April 4, 2003 was the final Opening Day at Philadelphia Veterans Stadium. The Phillies played the Pirates, and the Phils wore reasonable good facsimiles of their uniforms during the opening homestand (April 4-6) as they would have looked on the Vet's very first opening day in 1971. Notice the large, 9" back numbers with white outlines and no player names. Actual 1971 home jerseys were cream colored wool pinstripes and featured chain stitched crimson red front logo and both front and back numbers. The replicas here are double knit and use standard maroon tackle twill for both logos and numbers. Numbers are outlined with white, faithful to the 1971 style. However, in 1971 numbers were chain stitched onto white felt, these are two-color twill. The Pirates dressed in Turn Back the Clock yellow uniforms that they did not adopt until 1977, but nobody seemed to mind.

Inside seam tag bears code "0062"; full weight knit team issued.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003 Turn Back the Clock to 1983

Correct 1983-only 100th Anniversary patch is used on the left sleeve. The jersey color and the number font are perfect. Several other details are not correct for 1983.

Playing the Baltimore Orioles in an Interleague game, June 28 and 29, 2003, the teams dressed in 1983 style to recreate that year's World Series matchup. These correctly have the Phillies 1983 anniversary patch on the sleeve.

These are the same style jerseys as Majestic made for the Phillies the prior year, It is a good copy of the 1987-1988 road jersey, but not the 1983 version. The 1983 jersey used a zipper front, not buttons. The shoulder and side trim white stripes are too wide. Button front blue jerseys with "closed" Ps on the front were used in 1987-1988 only. Names should be on nameplates and they ought to be vertical arched, not block style.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005-2007 St. Patrick's Day

Bill Henderson Collection

Identical heavy green button-front mesh jerseys are used in these three years.

White twill lettering on back and chain stitched wordmark on front.

Player names are sewn on nameplates.

2005

© GameWornGuides.com

2008-2010 St. Patrick's Day

The 2008 St. Patrick's Day jersey is a new-style Cool Base model for the first time, pullover with two button neck; green fabric jersey with solid white side panels. The jerseys are identical 2008-2010.

Player name, numbering, and team wordmark are heat-applied decoration, as with the team's batting practice jerseys in 2008 and 2009, return to twill back lettering in 2010. No team year or set tagging is used.

David Maialetti / Staff Photographer

Ryan Howard, left, celebrates with Eric Bruntlett, center, and Raul Ibanez, right, after they all scored on a Matt Stairs double in the 2nd inning as Phillies play the Cincinnati Reds at Bright House Field in Clearwater, Florida on March 17, 2009.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Opening Night Special Gold Trimmed

Cool Base home jerseys with special metallic gold bordering all lettering and numbers, even around the 2008 WS Champions sleeve patch (it is actually an additional layer of gold twill behind the patch and standard lettering).

Worn for opening night game only, Sunday April 5, 2009.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Turn Back the Clock to 1965

Bill Henderson Collection

Shown here, correct Phillies-style numbers from 1965

Worn April 10, 2010 at Houston to recreate the opening of the Astrodome in 1965. The visiting Phillies wore Cool Base uniforms by Majestic that were made to resemble their 1965 road flannels.

A casual observer probably would have not noticed any difference between these suits and the Phillies current road uniforms. Looking closely, one would notice the lack of red/white sleeve end trim as found on the current uniforms. Also, the pants are devoid of side stripes. The team script is slightly different, to resemble the version used in 1965. Outlined in white, it is sewn tackle twill instead of the originals' elegant chain stitching.

The back numbers are not correct, They are simply a generic bold Varsity font, while the original numbers were a special 10" tall Phillies font.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Turn Back the Clock to 1972

The Milwaukee Brewers hosted a Turn Back the Clock to 1972 night game on May 14, 2010. The Brewers wore copies of their pull-over knits from 1972.

Majestic made a set of 1972 uniforms for the Phillies that had many incorrect details. Among them, the front “P” was too large and lacked its “squiggly”, or wavy line, in the center of the P. The side trim was much too wide, and the numbers were too skinny (they should have been bolder). 1972 road uniforms had no names on back, and these did

Of course, the fact that most players wore the reproductions in a non-period correct baggy style did not help. Maroon stirrups were supplied with the uniform set, but almost none of the players wore them (or wore them properly).

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Negro Leagues Tribute (1938 Philadelphia Stars)

The 2011 version lacks the front placket knit trim of the 1997 models, and adds a period after the abbreviated "Phila" that was not there in 1997. Also, rear numbers this time are an ornate old-timey font.

Visiting the Atlanta Braves on May 14, 2011, the Phillies again wear Negro League uniforms for a throwback contest. The Braves dressed as the Atlanta Black Crackers, the Phillies wore uniforms very similar to those they had worn in 1997 of the 1938 Philadelphia Stars. The jersey manufacturer is AIS.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Civil Rights Game (1974 Road)

Majestic provided 1974 road uniforms for the Phillies, and did a better job than they had a year prior. The “P” on the front was the correct size, and while the side and shoulder trim was still a bit too wide, the numbers front and back were the correct size and thickness. Original 1974 road jerseys had vertical ached player names on back, these names were not arched.

This regular season contest was played on May 15, 2011 vs. the Braves in Atlanta. Both teams turned the clock back to 1974, the year that Hank Aaron broke Babe Ruth’s career home run record. Jerseys were Cool Base, but lacked the underarm mesh panel that are found on present-year jerseys. A Civil Rights Game patch was sewn to the back of the collar.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Turn Back the Clock to 1984

This game was played in Philadelphia on July 22, 2011 vs. Padres. Both teams dressed in 1984 style uniforms.

These Majestic Cool Base replicas are inaccurate for 1984, featuring bold numbers that were not in use until 1987, and radially arched payer names instead of the proper vertical arch style. The “P” both on the jersey front and on the cap were too large compared to original. The proper sleeve patch for 1984 is used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2013 St. Patrick's Day

St. Patrick's day jerseys are the same for 2011, 2012 and 2013. Made like the new-for-2011 batting practice jerseys, these feature green Cool Base construction, button-front bodies with white panels on the shoulders and on both sides. Back names and numbers are in white twill. The Phillies are among the longest participants in this tradition, wearing green annually since 1986.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012-2013 Turn Back the Clock to 1991

These are as close as we have seen to replicas of the Phillies 1991 uniforms, correct to the last detail, including the correct-width maroon trim, the specific closed-loop style of the front logo, the size and style of the player numbers and the use of a nameplate and correct font for the name on back.

Steve Kraljic Collection

The same style jerseys were worn for two games in two years, and while they are different sets of uniforms, I do not know if either is team year-tagged to differentiate them, though game worn ones are MLB hologrammed and therefore registered in the MLB database. The games were held August 22, 2012, Cincinnati at Philadelphia (both teams 1991 throwbacks), and August 23, 2013 Arizona at Philadelphia (Arizona 1999 throwbacks, Philadelphia 1991).

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 Memorial Day

Read the full story on MLB's Memorial Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

Small year tag is sewn inside the buttonhole flap of the front shirt tail near the bottom.

May 27 Memorial Day Camouflage twill wordmark and player name and number lettering outlined with white is used on road jerseys in game at Boston. Action photos show how effective camouflage is in being impossible to see, and why it is a foolish choice for lettering on a gray jersey. Racks of steeply-discounted replicas were available seemingly everywhere in the Philadelphia area after the game, as they seemed to offer little appeal for fans.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2015 St. Patrick's Day

Jerseys worn in the 2015 game were the same as 2014's.

Rain forced several days' postponement of the Phillies usual St Patrick's game of 2014, and perhaps as a result there are few pictures to be found of the contest which is usually well-covered by the press. The Phillies new-for-2014 batting practice jerseys are converted to green Cool Base for the game, and feature white side panels and green and white knit neck trim and sleeve end trim. Player name and number lettering on the back is white twill, just like found on the team's regular red batting practice jerseys. The white panel over the shoulders and above the player name on back that had been there in the 2011-2013 model is now gone.

2015

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Memorial Day

May 26, 2014, the Phillies play host to the Colorado Rockies and both teams wear camouflage-lettered jerseys for the contest, as did all teams in MLB on that day.

The Phillies' red-pinstriped home jerseys received desert camo wordmark, with camouflage player names and back and left-sleeve numbers, outlined with white. As the game photos below show, the lettering was practically invisible. Far fewer of these showed up in local stores' discount bins following the season; I suspect fewer were made after the dismal sales of the 2013 model.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Turn Back the Clock to 1964

The Phillies wore these retro-1964 uniforms twice during a weekend series with the Cubs in 2014. Friday, June 13 was Retro-Night, and the Cubs also wore 1964 replica uniforms. Sunday, June 15, Father's Day, the Phillies again wore the retro uniforms, this time with the usual Father's Day Ribbon on the left chest, while the Cubs wore their regular alternate blues. The reason was to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Jim Bunning's perfect game on Father's Day in 1964. These were reasonably good copies of the Phillies front wordmark, though not chain stitched as the originals were, but were disappointingly inaccurate renditions of the back numbers as actually used in 1964.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Memorial Day

The Phillies are on the road for 2015 Memorial Day, May 25, and apply the desert-camo pattern to their road gray jerseys. The effect is decidedly more legible than the previous year's home version, but is still challenging to read on the gray jersey, even with the red outlines on all lettering. The smaller sleeve numbers and the thick-outlined front logo are very muddled. The MLB Silhouetted Batter patch on the back of the neck is also changed to dark green/khaki/white rather than its typical colors from 2014.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Turn Back the Clock to 1969

Bill Henderson collection

Worn for two games, June 19 and 21 (when the blue ribbons were added for Father's Day) these Majestic cream-colored pinstriped Cool Base jerseys were faithful copies of the Phillies 1969 home jersey. The red/white back numbers are an unfortunate generic substitute for the proper back numbers, a missive that really is a shame because your author recreated the proper number font for Majestic some years ago and it was never used. 1969 MLB 100th Anniversary patch is sewn to the left sleeve. Notice that the wordmark is direct chain stitched, a fantastic touch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Independence Day

Read the full story on MLB's Independence Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

Bill Henderson Collection

For Independence Day 2015, all 29 U.S.-based teams adopt patriotic "Stars and Stripes" uniforms for the first time. For this day, all uniforms are re-lettered in a combination of red, white, and blue, regardless of what the team's normal color palate might be. Jersey trim and patches remain the same as the team's regular jerseys. All teams sport a stars and stripes version of the MLB Silhouetted Batter logo on the back collar. The Phillies wear their road gray jerseys with the red-background version of the starred twill, which features large white stars; all lettering outlined in blue, including their front logo as well as sleeve and back numbers. Player names on back are in blue. An American flag patch is sewn on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2019 St. Patrick's Day

The Phillies go green for St. Patrick's Day in 2016-2019. This Flex Base jersey is in solid green, with front logo and back numbers in white/gray and player name in white, all in the Phillies' special font. The layer of gray is thin and light enough that it disappears from a distance. The right sleeve sports a white shamrock, a feature shared by many teams for the St. Patrick's Day promotion. White knit trim encircles both sleeves. A set was made by Nike in 2020, but was not worn with cancellation of games due to COVID-19.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2017 Mother's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Mother's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

All teams wear special pink-trimmed uniforms for Mother's Day, May 8, 2016 and May 13-14, 2017. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Mother's Days), while the Majestic sleeve logo is rendered in pink and the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark pink/light pink/white. The Phillies wear their road gray jerseys with the front logo lettering in pink with dark gray outlines. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while sleeve and back numbers are pink/dark gray. All jersey trim, normally white/red/white, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Memorial Day

The 2016 Memorial Day jerseys are constructed in the Flex Base style for the first time, and the ChromaFlex MLB logo at back neck becomes black and dark gold for all teams. The new, league-wide template, with higher-visibility woodland camo lettering and black outlines, makes this set more legible than in prior years. The Phillies apply the camouflage trimmings to their home alternate cream jerseys for the game on May 30. The front lettering and back numbers are rendered in woodland camo with a black outline, and player names appear in single-color black. As a result of these modifications, the front logo is rendered in twill, and displays none of the chain stitch embroidery of the team's typical uniforms.

The bold cursive of the "Phillies" front lettering is muddled by the camo/black treatment, especially with the wide outline around the lettering. Trim elements are simplified to single-color black.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Turn Back the Clock to 1976

Derek Damian collection

Worn for two games, June 3 and June 5, vs. the Brewers who also wore 1976 throwback uniforms. These likely use the same pattern as the 2011 TBTC to 1984 game uniforms. The jerseys are Cool Base but have the standard non-Cool Base Majestic jock tag sewn on. The the front “P” is slightly too large.

They are generally quite good, using the proper width and color trim and the correct player number font, although a hair too light in stroke. The sleeve patches are perfectly reproduced; a nice touch. Names on back are on nameplates as was done in 1976, but they are not vertical arch as they should be, which disappointed me. The Phillies also wore the 1976 pill-box-style Bicentennial caps for these games.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2017 Father's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Father's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

All teams wear special light blue-trimmed uniforms Father's Day, June 19, 2016 and June 17-18, 2017. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized front tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Father's Days), while the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark royal blue/light blue/white. The Phillies wear their alternate home jerseys (here in white rather than the usual cream) with the front logo lettering in light blue with dark gray outlines. The player names on back are sewn in single-color dark gray, while back numbers are light blue/dark gray. All jersey trim, normally blue/red/blue, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Independence Day

MLB creates yet another new Independence Day jersey template for the 2016 iteration, now built on Majestic's new Flex Base jersey construction. Each Independence Day jersey has a ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB appliqué sewn on the back of the neck. The Phillies are at home and wear their cream alternate jersey. All clubs have a choice of two styles of star-spangled lettering twill and the Phillies select the blue twill version with gray outlines for their front lettering and for their back numbers, with a gray player name on back, which is very hard to read against the cream color of the jersey. The two stars on the front of the jersey turn red rather than their normal blue. As a result of these modifications, the front logo is rendered in twill, and displays none of the chain stitch embroidery of the team's typical uniforms. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. All jersey trim, normally blue/red/blue, becomes single-color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Memorial Day (Home)

The next incarnation of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single-color black, while the back-of-collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Phillies apply this style to their alternate home jerseys as worn on May 27-28, 2017.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Memorial Day (Road)

Bill Henderson Collection

The 2017 and 2018 version of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single-color black, while the back-of-collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Phillies apply this style to their road gray jerseys as worn on May 29, 2017 and May 28, 2018.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Independence Day (Road)

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less-busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two color options for the new twill–appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 1-2, 2017, the Phillies wear their road gray jersey with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and back and sleeve numbers. Player names on back are in single-color blue. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. All jersey trim is single-color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Independence Day (Home)

Bill Henderson Collection

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less-busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two different color options for the new twill – appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 3-4, 2017, the Phillies wear their home white jersey with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and sleeve and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color blue. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Turn Back the Clock to 1983

The Phillies continue to throw back to the 1980s, this time, with their 1983 home entry for July 7 and 9, 2017. While the overall look is reminiscent of the 1983 set, lots of the finer details are lost. Majestic Cool Base jerseys are white with maroon pinstripes and a tackle twill “P” logo with an open center. The 1983 version originally closed with a zipper, which is replaced with buttons here. Sleeve and side trim is a wide band of maroon, while front and back numbers are maroon in the custom Phillies type style that looks shorter here than the originals. Names on back on white plates were originally tall vertical arch, but here are standard Block. The Phillies’ 100th season patch adorns the left sleeve as it did in 1983.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Turn Back the Clock to 1982

The Phillies like to relive their powder blue phase, and do so again July 14-16, 2017 against the 1982-clad Brewers. These Majestic throwback Cool Base knits feature a maroon/white “P” logo with an open center, maroon/white sleeve and side “racing stripe” trim (with a little more white than in 1982), maroon/white front and back numbers in the Phillies custom font, and maroon/white names on back applied to plates. The original NOBs were a tall, vertical arch style, but is represented here in standard Block. Another difference since their original appearance is the lack of a zipper-front, as this set has a standard button-front, likely for safety and player comfort. Credit to the home Brewers, who supplied the sets, for matching the proper color socks and helmets, completing the look.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Players Weekend

To highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans, MLB introduces the colorful Players Weekend promotion. In addition to relaxed regulations on team-standard color and design of cleats, bats, and other equipment, MLB encourages players to wear nicknames on the backs of a new set of very colorful jerseys. Meant to evoke the look of youth league designs, the two-toned Cool Base pullovers feature bright and contrasting body and sleeve colors, and include a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people in their lives with handwritten black marker messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature a variant of the MLB logo showing the growth of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat-pressed Majestic manufacturer and set tags are applied on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. All numbers on back are in single color Varsity, and the player names in 2 ¾" single color Block Condensed, regardless of the team's usual font. On August 25-27, 2017, the Phillies wear jerseys with white bodies and red sleeves with red nicknames and numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide red/white/red trim. The front features their "P" cap logo, here rendered in red/royal blue kiss-cut lightweight twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Turn Back the Clock to 1984-1986

Steve Kraljic Collection

After wearing their 1982 powder blue throwbacks on the road for three games the year prior, the Phillies bring a similar style back for a eight games at home in 2018: April 19 and 26, May 10, June 14 and 28, and August 1 and 16 (both ends of a day/night doubleheader). The presence of the team disc patch on the left sleeve places this style from 1984-1986, and like the previous year's throwbacks, and the official set of powder blues added to the rotation the following season, these are close but not quite. These Majestic jerseys are Cool Base material and feature a maroon/white "P" logo with an open center, maroon/white sleeve and side "racing stripe" trim with a little too much white compared to the originals. Maroon/white front and back numbers in the Phillies custom font (which look slightly smaller than the originals), and maroon/white names on back applied to plates. The original NOBs were a tall, vertical arch style, but is represented here in standard Block. Another difference since their original appearance is the lack of a zipper-front, as this set has a standard button-front, likely for safety and player comfort.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Independence Day

The 2018 Independence Day jerseys repeat the pattern of 2017 featuring printed twill with a pattern of stars and stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two color options for the lettering - red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging, and a ChromaFlex rubberized “stars and stripes” pattern MLB patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 2-4, 2018, the Phillies wear their alternate home jerseys with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color blue. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Players Weekend

Players Weekend returns for a second year; a promotion intended to highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans. Brightly-colored jerseys are worn on the field on August 24-26, 2018, and once again, the Cool Base pullover jerseys are based on youth league designs with a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people with handwritten messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature an adaptation of the MLB logo showing the evolution of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat pressed Majestic and set tags appear on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. The Phillies wear jerseys with red bodies and powder blue sleeves with white nicknames and powder blue numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide powder blue/white/powder blue trim. The front features their home jersey script, here rendered in red/white with powder blue stars.

This jersey was also worn on August 19, 2018 for the Little League Classic with this patch on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1979

Original 1979

Some uniforms are so good that they stand the test of time. And some are so bad, they're retired after one use. The latter is the case for the Phillies' famous "Saturday Night Special" uniforms. Originally worn on May 17, 1979 only, the all-maroon set was so maligned in both appearance and player fit they never saw the field again until reprised on July 27, 2019, to mark their 40th anniversary. Rendered by Majestic in Cool Base fabric, they are similar in spirit and close in execution. The jersey and twill colors are right, as are the wide "racing stripe" on sleeves and sides and the zipper fronts, as is the use of a nameplate. On the originals, the front "P" logo is more vertical, the front numbers are oddly higher, the NOBs are taller, bolder and much more arched. The 2019 version also has the team's "DPM" memorial patch on the right sleeve for former minority owner David Montgomery.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Players Weekend

The third incarnation of Players Weekend turns the colorful jersey concept on its ear, reducing all teams to monochromatic designs in either black or white, with all team sleeve patches and trim removed, leaving a clean but stark template. Gone are the contrasting sleeves and special patches with messages of inspiration. MLB says that this new approach is to emphasize the colorful, personalized cleats, bats, and other gear the players choose for the promotion, which spans August 23-25, 2019. Jerseys are now button-front Flex Base, with appropriate Majestic manufacturer and set tagging. Back-of-collar CFX MLB logo is now silver and black. All teams also wear a memorial patch for Angels pitcher Tyler Skaggs, a white “45” in a black circle, on the left sleeve. Most teams removed this patch before auctioning off the jerseys. The Phillies also wear the “DPM” memorial patch on the right sleeve for former minority owner David Montgomery on a black version of their alternate home jersey with the front lettering and back varsity numbers rendered in black/gray with gray nickname on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2021 St. Patrick's Day

Steve Kraljic Collection

In a rare occurrence, the style code for this jersey remains PPC9 for Nike as it was for Majestic. Nike usually changed these codes starting in 2020 when they took over from Majestic.

The Phillies go green for St. Patrick's Day in once again in 2021. The style of the jersey remains identical to their 2016-2019 version, but it is now made on the Nike Flex Base template rather than Majestic. Front logo and back numbers in white/gray and player name in white, all in the Phillies' special font. The layer of gray is thin and light enough that it disappears from a distance. The right sleeve sports a white shamrock, a feature shared by many teams for the St. Patrick's Day promotion. White knit trim encircles both sleeves. Both the Tigers and Phillies wore green jerseys and caps for March 17, 2021, which made the game a confusing sight. A set was made by Nike in 2020, but was not worn with cancellation of games due to COVID-19. It is included in the "Oddball" section for reference.

© GameWornGuides.com

Prototypes and Oddballs

1970 Prototype Road

THE NEW LOOK of the Phillies

In preparing for the new stadium, the Phillies have changed their image by coming up with a new logo and uniforms. Replacing the old cap with a baseball orbiting around it, the new symbol is a "P" that grows out of the red stitches of a baseball and swirls into the letter with the ball in the middle. The new logotype spells out "Phillies" in a unique lettering style and uses the "P" symbol as an initial letter.

PLAYER UNIFORMS

The player uniforms retain the traditional tailoring features and the familiar home red pinstrips that were introduced by the Phillies of 1950—the club that went on to win the National League pennant.

New to the uniform is a full-length bold red stripe, a 7/8-inch braid down each side of the blouse and trousers. The new "P" symbol, 6-1/2 inches tall, adorns the upper left side of the shirt.

Identifying numbers, 4 inches in height, have been added to the front of the shirt. The numbers on the back are 9-1/2 inches tall. A 2-inch white "P" emblem centers on the front of the red cap.

On the road uniforms of a new blue-gray fabric, the red emblems are embroidered on white.

Warm-up jackets are to be red with a white "P" emblem, 6 inches tall, on the upper left side.

IN-PARK PERSONNEL

Usherettes, to be called Fillies, will wear a white mini-skirt and orlon turtleneck pullover; ushers, white trousers and white orlon pullover; ticket takers, red blazers and white trousers and ground crew in white coveralls—all sporting the bold red stripe.

Infielder Don Money (left), models the new home uniforms to be worn by the "New Phillies" of 1970. Pitcher Billy Wilson is wearing the new blue-grey road uniform.

These new in-park personnel uniforms will be unveiled when the Phillies move into the new stadium. Left to right, the uniform for the usherettes who will be called Fillies, usher, ticket takers and ground crews.

1970 Phillies Yearbook

PLAYER UNIFORMS

The player uniforms retain the traditional tailoring features and the familiar home red pinstrips that were introduced by the Phillies of 1950—the club that went on to win the National League pennant.

New to the uniform is a full-length bold red stripe, a 7/8-inch braid down each side of the blouse and trousers. The new "P" symbol, 6-1/2 inches tall, adorns the upper left side of the shirt.

Identifying numbers, 4 inches in height, have been added to the front of the shirt. The numbers on the back are 9-1/2 inches tall. A 2-inch white "P"

Infielder Don Money (left), models the new home uniforms to be worn by the "New Phillies" of 1970. Pitcher Billy Wilson is wearing the new blue-grey road uniform.

In prior editions of this book, we have shared the snippet to the right, borrowed from the Phillies 1970 yearbook. That was the year the team was supposed to have switched over to this new style AND switched to its new stadium, but construction delays meant that the stadium wasn't ready until part-way into the next season.

We've commented that these prototype jerseys being modeled by players in the photo had the front numbers oddly placed compared to where we are used to seeing them. But until we came across this photo above at left, we had never seen a prototype jersey like this "in the cloth."

© GameWornGuides.com

1960s/1971-1972 Spring Training Jerseys?

Offered for sale at auction, the seller of this Wilson flannel jersey claims that it is a Spring Training issue from 1971-1972. It may have been minor league issue.

And at the lower left, a player wearing a similar uniform with the earlier Phillies “P”, wearing the even loftier number 151.

I don’t know if these are from Spring Training or not but the ones appearing as they do with thee three-digit numbers, the poor fellows who might have worn these uniforms probably didn’t stand much of a chance of making the team.

© GameWornGuides.com

1972 Prototype Road Grays

Over the years, we have come across a few Phillies mysterious knit gray road jerseys tagged for 1972. Collector and dealer Howard Wolf reports purchasing two of these recently, and we share some photos here.

Here's what we know: The Phils switched to knits for the 1972 regular season, and were also ready to start their first full season in the ultra modern Veterans Stadium. Everyone knows that the Phillies' road uniforms for 1972 were a surprising and non-traditional baby blue. But were they, at first? These uniforms are tagged as 1972, set #2 even, and are clearly pale gray. Local experts know that the Phils were a frugal team who wasted nothing. Is it possible that the team ordered two full sets of gray road uniforms, then actually changed their mind and switched to blue?

It appears that this is exactly what happened. The team had invested heavily in their new image and new stadium, and the belief is that the gray uniforms looked almost white on the suddenly widely popular color television, making the home team and the road team look too much the same.

In looking for proof of the guessed switchover, we found great difficulty. Color photos from the preseason in 1972 seem non-existent. In newspaper and yearbook black and white, it is impossible to tell the true color of the road uniforms in these pictures. We thought we had found some proof in the Topps 1972 photo of Mike Schmidt in the card below, wearing his first-appearance-in-the-bigs number 22. But we learned that these photos were retouched and re-colored, and in fact also found versions of this same photograph showing the uniform as blue.

Top right: one of the two jerseys discovered by Wolf, notice no player name in the collar and very little wear apparent. Back numbers are huge, close to 11 inches. Right: the team tagging from both discovered jerseys, top tag interestingly is made of the blue/gray flannel of the 1971 uniforms!

The letter of authenticity that accompanied one of these jerseys from seller/dealer Ed Dolan indicates that the gray jerseys were worn for the first half of the 1972 season. However, your author who grew up following the Phillies remembers this time, and does not recall any mid-season changes. We didn't own a color TV in 1972, but I clearly remember the discussion around the Phillies' surprising bright blue uniforms that season.

Were they left unused and disposed of? It hardly seams reasonable. The most logical guess would be that they were used by the Phillies' minor league teams. However, Howard reports having never seen any of these turn up with minor league usage. This isn't unprecedented. For example, note the ultra-rare 1972 Cleveland Indians uniforms which are almost never seen in the collectors' hobby today, presumably because they were used and re-used in the minor leagues until they were probably disposed of in the trash, thoroughly spent. Hopefully this publishing will bring more information forward on these mystery uniforms.

© GameWornGuides.com

1973 Oddball Road Button-Front

I acquired this jersey from another collector, its history suspect. Studying the details of team-issue jerseys for 1973, that year the players were issued zipper-front road jerseys with two-layer twill lettering, and with player names on back. This one is identical in every way to the one-year style 1972 jersey, yet with a Wilson factory 1973 tag on the tail. It has chain stitched elements, a button front and a tall number on back.

In 1973, #7 was coach Bobby Wine. I was able to ask him about this jersey, and he recalled that he had indeed been issued a jersey different from the others on the team. He recalled at the time he noticed that his jersey was without the new zipper front when everyone else had one with a zipper closure. He did not remember whether or not he wore it all season long.

I have been unable to find any period photos of Wine wearing this jersey, and I wonder if he was eventually issued a matching one. This jersey shows excessive wear, with major puckering of the fabric beneath the semi-detached numbers, and the linen placket lining is mostly gone.

© GameWornGuides.com

1970s Phillies “Hot Pants Patrol” Usherette Uniforms

The GAZETTE, Montreal, Fri., Apr. 2, 1971 19

City of Brotherly Love gets Hot Pants Patrol

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — It's not just the pitchers who will be throwing curves opening day. The Philadelphia Fillies will also be throwing a few curves at the fans.

The Fillies, the female ushers of the Phillies' baseball team, will unveil their elite corps, the Hot Pants Patrol, on opening day.

The National League team's female ushers this season will be frocked in micro skirts or hot pants — short shorts.

The girls are looking forward to it.

So are the fans. Especially the men.

into the new stadium, " we wanted something new, different," said Rosemary Sudders, 27, the chief Fillie, and the only one of the new Hot Pants Patrol who wears a white jacket.

There will be 145 usherettes, 36 of them in the maroon hot pants suits and calf-high white vinyl boots.

The others will wear the white micro skirts.

Either way it's fun.

. . . PLUS TIPS

Daring at the time, and probably highly politically incorrect today, the Phillies “Usherettes” were introduced as “The Hot Pants Patrol” at the opening of sparkling new Veterans Stadium in 1971. These actual examples were found offered at auction. For historians, the Hot Pants Patrol patrolled the Vet from 1971-1982.

© GameWornGuides.com

1970s/1980s Trainers' Dugout Shirts

These are not game worn jerseys in the true sense, but I thought you might like to see them.

These are the pullover shirts that the Phillies' team trainers, equipment manager and other club personnel wore in the dugout during games.

All three are made of knit jersey-weight fabric by Rawlings and have the standard 1972-1984 style Rawlings uniform tag in the collar. Only the blue one has a year flag tag (1976), but the white one next to it has identical trim and logo embroidery and is likely almost the same age.

The jersey shown at left has darker maroon trim and the open-centered P logo instead. It sports two custom pockets on the chest, one on either breast. I suspect but am not sure that this one is from the early 1980s.

© GameWornGuides.com

1976 Phillies 1876 Exhibition Game

As part of the year-long celebration of the nation's Bicentennial in 1976, The Phillies hosted an exhibition game at Veterans Stadium on August 8 wearing baseball uniforms as they would have looked in 1876. Many Philadelphia celebrities and sports stars participated, including former NBA star Tom Gola (whose uniform is pictured here) and Phillies popular broadcaster and former player Rich Ashburn.

Letter of Provenance

Tom Gola's August 8th, 1976 Old-Time Centennial Philadelphia Phillies Game-Used Uniform

Dear Valued Collector,

I, Caroline Gola, am the widow of former American basketball Hall of Famer Tom Gola. Gola played for La Salle High School and college, winning the 1954 NCAA Tournament, being voted the Most Outstanding Player, and won the UPI College Player of the Year. Gola played in the NBA with the Philadelphia/San Francisco Warriors and New York Knicks. Gola was part of the 1956 Philadelphia Warriors Championship winning team and was a five-time NBA All Star.

Tom wore this uniform during an Old-Time Centennial game at the Philadelphia Phillies. Since Tom's passing, this item has been in my possession.

Signatory Caroline Gola

CollectingInvestments.com

© GameWornGuides.com

1977-1981 Phillies “Frankenstein” Logos

Enough people have asked me about these that I am including a page on them.

In the computer-graphics world of the 2000s, 100% accuracy is only a mouse click away, but as we have discussed, it wasn’t always like that. While the Phillies “mod” logo, adopted in 1970 was a beautifully balanced piece of graphic art, it sometimes made an awkward transition onto player uniforms. Here are a few examples of what have become known as “Frankenstein” logos and scripts, all charmingly unique, and a quaint reminder of the way things used to be in baseball.

The “original”- beautiful and balanced.

The rest...not so much.

Top center: the wordmark the way it was designed. Notice how compact it is, with the curves of the letter serifs all blending together to fit like a precision puzzle. Immediately below and on the card, sewn with far too much spacing between the letters (that’s “kerning” for you typesetting nerds). Bottom row: three Frankenstein wordmarks and logos from BP jerseys of the late 1970s up through 1981.

© GameWornGuides.com

1977 Sample Lightweight Mesh Full Uniforms

Photos: Hunt Auctions

Seen at auction these full uniforms lettered for catcher Bob Boone and tagged for 1977. Both shirt and pants sets are made of nylon mesh. The placket of the jersey is lined inside with linen and the collar tag is in the same Wilson-factory style as game jerseys of the time. The vertical arched name is on a mesh nameplate. On the road blue model, the only difference I note between this and actual game jersey lettering is that the front 8 does not have the proper outline cutouts. The white uniform lacks the red pinstripes that had been part of every Phillies home uniform since 1949.

These were probably samples offered for team consideration. They predated Cool-Base jerseys by almost thirty years. Notably, Japanese League teams have used mesh uniforms like this for many years, and the Pirates used mesh black jerseys in 1977 made by Descente, a Japanese outfitter.

© GameWornGuides.com

1979 All-Star Game–Phillies' Use of Two Different Jerseys in One Game

Batting practice jerseys were a relatively new thing in 1979. The Phillies were among the early adopters in 1978. Pete Rose was a big fan of them and wore his during the 1979 All-Star Game in Seattle, apparently without protest from the league. Notice in this game action photo Larry Bowa is wearing his usual road uniform, while Rose is wearing his BP top.

© GameWornGuides.com

1984 Tagged Jerseys Used in 1983?

It was once not terribly uncommon for teams to recycle jerseys into the next year. In the cost-conscious days of the 1980s, when teams had not discovered the collect-ability of their game worn jerseys, it frequently happened. But before this, I had never seen a jersey recycled into the prior year… Al least two examples of jerseys bearing 1983-only sleeve patches have appeared at auction in past years, accompanied by a story that the Phillies has issued a new set of jerseys to players for the 1983 postseason. Then because these jerseys were still very new, they were used again in 1984 (photo at left shows Pete Rose wearing his 1983 jersey with patch in the 1983 World Series). The auction listings suggest that these jerseys must have been pulled from the team's inventory prior to the start of the 1984 season, since they retain the 1983-only sleeve patches.

This is all entirely possible, and I wonder if the jerseys were given 1984 year tags when they were made in anticipation that they would be issued again. It seems unlikely that there had been a 1983 year tag that was then replaced with a 1984 year tag…while the tailor left the 1983-only patch in place.

The fact that we have found more than one such jersey offered for sale means that it was likely not a one-off thing. So until we gain some further proof, we'll let the story stand.

© GameWornGuides.com

Pre-1987 Prototype Road Pinstripe

It is common for the uniform makers to offer teams suggestions on uniform designs. This is very likely one such example, and by all indications it dates from 1987. That was the first year of Rawlings script on the sleeve ends, the use of this bold font on the team's home jerseys, the final year of the use of the red collar tag in this style, and the style of player name tagging inside the collar matches. The team switched to button front jerseys for the 1987 season replacing the zippers used since 1972. This proposed seven-button design replicated the team's home pinstripe uniforms in gray, using the same newly one-color bold numbers as used on the 1987 home set. Instead, the team opted to stay with the powder blues for the next two years, keeping the less bold two-color numbers but changing to a button front design like this example.

© GameWornGuides.com

1988 Gray Jerseys Used in Fitting Room

Presented for your inspection… I now have seen three of these and I suspect that they were used in the clubhouse to fit players with new uniforms

At first glance (or even second or third) these simply appear to be unlettered Phillies gray road jerseys from the 1989-1991 seasons. But there is something different about them.

This style of Phillies gray jersey was used only in 1989-1991, and they had button fronts. These two have zipper fronts.

They also have odd markings on them – small square size tags sewn to the front outsides of the left sleeves.

I received a note from another collector who excitedly told me he found this size 42 jersey (bottom) in a Pennsylvania thrift shop and paid $10 for it. He pointed out the zipper front and asked if I had ever seen one like it.

I noticed the odd size tag on the sleeve and suddenly realized that it was the sister to the jersey lying forgotten in my closet

I had found the size 38 T one locally here in Philadelphia many years ago and bought it for under $15 and never even noticed its zip-front oddity.

Very likely these were used specifically for the purpose of fitting players, their sizes displayed on a sleeve tag and zippers for easier on-and-off, then they were discarded when their usefulness had ended.

© GameWornGuides.com

1992 Prototype Road

Bill Henderson Collection

In 1991, the Phillies were contemplating their first uniform make-over in over twenty years. Russell was to be their new manufacturer, and as always, various designs were considered before the final uniforms were chosen.

This design made it to the prototype stage. Instead of the common “Phillies” script on the front, it has the city name on front, sewn in chain stitching, with the trademark blue stars dotting the two “i’s” in Philadelphia.

Note the red on royal blue number treatment on the sleeve, another consideration that did not make the cut, but that was used on the alternate jersey starting in 2008.

As with many prototypes, this one is adorned with the #5 and the name “PLAYER.” It has a cut collar tag, denoting that it was intended as a sample for discard. This one showed up on eBay, listed under the obscure heading “Philadelphia Jersey.”

© GameWornGuides.com

1992 Prototype Road

Below, the road jersey sleeve trim, "as used" by the Phillies

Though I don't know for sure, I suspect this might have been a prototype design for the new for 1992 Phillies road jerseys. The front jock tag is the previous-version Russell pro tag that predated the Diamond Collection one that appeared for the 1992 season. The double white stripes on the knit sleeve ends were not adopted, though Phillies minor league clubs sometimes had gray jerseys with different on no sleeve-end trim. Terry Mulholland was a popular Phillies pitcher at the height of his career in 1991.

© GameWornGuides.com

Late 1990s Prototype Home Vest with Blue Undershirt

This submission from Russell got as far as the prototype stage, rendered in cloth for evaluation. Starting in the mid-90s the Phillies continually tried to work more blue into the team uniform color palate. This submission was a solid white jersey with red headspoon placket trim. I would assume it would have been paired with similar white pants. The Royal Blue undershirt featured a player number in red outlined with white on the left sleeve. The Russell logo is affixed to the center of the back of the neck. The front team crest is identical to the one used on team jerseys of the late 1990s, as is the Russell locker tag on the tail.

© GameWornGuides.com

2000-2012 Fitting Room “Sizers”

Earlier in this chapter, we showed some 1988 Phillies road jerseys with curious tagging that were meant for players to try on for jersey fittings. Here, we have three more such examples from about two decades later. Based on tagging, these jerseys range from about 2000-2012. Each is a pinstriped, full-knit home jersey, but rather than the usual decoration, these have the team’s “P” logo screened on the left chest with the jersey’s size sewn on in black twill below. Clearly, the twill numbers are much easier to read than the small size tag sewn in under Majestic’s jock tag, so clubhouse staff would be able to manage fittings quickly. It is certain that the team was provided a full set of these in all sizes, possibly ranging from sizes 40 to 56 (all in even-numbered sizes). Once a player found the size he liked, he could then relay any customizations for tapering, sleeve and body length and the like, which would be noted for the team’s next uniform order.

Though much less visually appealing than a game used jersey, one may argue that over the years perhaps hundreds or maybe thousands of players used these jerseys behind-the-scenes, which makes them a fun footnote, and a view into what goes into outfitting a Major League Baseball team.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005 Prototype Home Cool Base

Prior to Cool Base jerseys being used on the field for the first time in the 2006 season, sample jerseys were made for evaluation of the fabric. Here is the Majestic prototype for the Phillies 2006 home Cool Base jersey, prepare the prior year for review, hence the “05” as the number.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020 Unworn St. Patrick's Day

The Phillies made up a set of 2020 St. Patrick's Day green jerseys that were never worn because of the COVID shutdown. Made by Nike, they were identical in style to the 2019 Majestic versions that came before. Even though the jerseys were not used on the field, they were sold by the team online with MLB authentications noting that they were team issued.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Independence Hall Patch - One Day Return

The Phillies introduced their Independence Hall sleeve patch in 1984. Aside from a few occasions when it was replaced with anniversary patches, it remained on at least one of their jerseys through 1991. It made occasional cameos on special throwback jerseys over the years as well. But it returned in force when the team adopted a full-time powder blue throwback alternate in 2019. However, the Independence Hall patch was unceremoniously dropped from the alternate at the end of the 2022 season, likely in preparation for an ad patch. But, for one, brief, shining moment, it made a (mostly) triumphant return. On July 11, 2024, the Phillies wore their now-familiar powder blues for a home game against the Dodgers, and the patch returned to each player's left sleeve. Unfortunately, it appears to have been an adhesive version, as it peeled away from a couple of jersey's sleeves. As far as our research has turned up, the team made no public mention why the patch returned. But about three weeks later, the Phillies announced their first ad patch sponsor, and the next time they wore the blue jerseys, Independence Hall was gone once again, and at least as of this writing, it was gone for good. Maybe the final appearance was intended as a fitting farewell for a familiar friend of more than 40 years.

Above: The patch appeared to be adhesive, and had trouble staying stuck on to players' sleeves.

© GameWornGuides.com

Special Tailoring

2009

2010

Special player uniform tailoring is not uncommon, and in this guide I generally do not even call attention to it. But the special tailoring requested by Jayson Werth bears special mention. I don't think players have worn sleeves this long since the early 1930s. That's got to be six inches of extra sleeve length added, wouldn't you say?

And speaking of special accommodations, pitcher Jim Kern played in only eight games for the 1994 Phillies. I appreciate the irony that the spacing of the letters on his jersey are totally inconsistent… we'll let Google explain the joke.

kern[1]
/kərn/

PRINTING

verb

1. adjust the spacing between (letters or characters) in a piece of text to be printed.
2. design (metal type) with a projecting part beyond the body or shank.

Pitcher Larry Christenson's extra-long name required a hand-drawn font for his vertically arched name on back (late 70s)

© GameWornGuides.com

Sign of the Times

Jarring to see Dick Allen smoking cigarettes while in uniform. It was a different time, I suppose.

Not jersey related, but nevertheless a question people ask me frequently. Yes, the Phillies official socks have Liberty Bells on them. Few players wear them, or at least few wear their pants so they can be seen. Jamie Moyer was a player who showed off the Liberty Bells.

© GameWornGuides.com

Commemorative Patches

Phillies Patches

- 1976 Philadelphia Bicentennial Patch, but not worn in postseason
- 1983 100th Anniversary Patch
- 1995 Veterans Stadium 25 Years
- 1996 All Star Game

- 1997 “1” Rich Ashburn Armband, September 10 until the end of the season.
- 2003 Veterans Stadium Final Year

- 2004 New Stadium Inaugural Year, on home jersey only
- 2004 Dual memorial for former GM Paul Owens & pitcher Tug McGraw on both home and road jerseys. The shamrock was for McGraw who was especially proud of his Irish heritage. Pope was Paul Owens’ nickname.

2004: Home jersey gets both patches, road jersey gets memorial patch only.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid-July 1976

Always an enigma in Philadelphia, Dick Allen had been traded by the Phillies after the 1969 season, then returned in 1975 at the tail end of his career.

(Left) 1976 Dick Allen began wearing a black armband in mid-August, reason unknown. Multiple readers have sent me this picture and asked me "why?" An obsessive newspaper search produced the following from the Lebanon (PA) Daily News of 8/11/76: "..the Phillies publicity office stated that Allen would not give them any reason for the armband. He said it was for personal reasons."

Allen had a tumultuous 1976 season, and it seemed to get especially bad mid-season when he went AWOL, which seems to be around the time the armband appeared. More info on that here (http://sabr.org/research/dick-allen-ssecond-act). It is possible the two are related.

There were theories that Allen wore this to honor Bob Moose, who died at 29 on October 9, 1976. Both men were from Pennsylvania. This does not pan out, as Allen wore it much earlier than Moose's death (our research shows he had been wearing it as of July 25, his last game appearance that season until September 4, due to a prolonged DL stint and a feud with the team. He did, however, wear the armband into the postseason. This may have been a home-uniform thing only, as the bottom left photo on this page shows Allen in Los Angeles, on what is likely to have been the July 19 game, about a week before his DL stint began, and there is no armband in sight there

The photos at right show the armband later in the season, and then in the NLCS in September, on a different jersey – or at least a jersey without the Philadelphia 1976 patch.

September 15

July 19, 1976

Update: When we asked him on Twitter in 2019, Allen responded immediately. Mystery solved!

Dick Allen @DickAllen_15 · 3d

Replying to @sabr @MLBDreamShop and 9 others

I wore that black arm-band to honor my dear friend & business partner Clem Capozzoli. He passed away in 1976. One of the best men to ever walk the face of this earth.

4 5 67

NLCS-October 10

© GameWornGuides.com

2007

2010

2009

2009

2009

- 2007: VUK patch worn on the right sleeve of all jerseys including BP jerseys, commemorating the death of Phillies player and coach John Vukovich
- 2009: The Phillies opened the season wearing the World Series Champions patch on the right sleeve of their home and home alternate uniforms only. The patch was worn only through the end of July, 2009.

- 2009: HK patch after April 16 memorializing the early-season death of longtime Phillies announcer Harry Kalas
- 2010: “36” Patch on right sleeve for Hall of Fame pitcher Robin Roberts, after May 6, 2010 • 2011: The Phillies honored the Buck Brothers, Alexander and John, partnership owners, who both died in the winter, by wearing a black patch with a white Phillies script "B" on their left chest.

2011

© GameWornGuides.com

2014: Jim Fregosi #11 patch, worn only August 12 at game in Los Angeles against the Angels. Fregosi had a history with both teams, and that single night both the Phillies and the Angels wore this patch.

2015 Spring Training

Left, Phillies and Rays wore this Clearwater Centennial patch in Spring Training. The spring's opening game was played in regular home jerseys and this patch was present on those jerseys as well.

Philadelphia Inquirer

2014 All season- "CB" patch on left chest for Claire Betz, part owner of the team. Allow me to quote from Wikipedia:

> Claire Smith Betz (January 11, 1921–February 6, 2014) was a part-owner of the Philadelphia Phillies baseball team. She inherited her part-ownership from her husband, John Betz - who bought his share of the team in 1981 - when he died in 1990…According to (sources), she had a 33% stake in the team in 2007, making her the largest stakeholder of the ownership group. She was part of the cabal of Phillies owners known as the "Phantom Five", so-called because of their reclusiveness and lack of involvement in Phillies affairs."

2015 All season: Announced on opening day, team will wear a "SLB" patch over their heart for wife of investor Sally Buck who died August 2014. While I am sure Claire Betz and Sally Buck were lovely people, some have found it odd that the Phillies have been wearing these memorial patches over their hearts for people fans have never heard of, and likely with whom players had no interaction. The "patch over the heart" idea was something that started (very appropriately) with the 2009 patch for Harry Kalas, the team's beloved broadcast voice. But some fans have questioned the all-season over-the-heart memorials to team investors in 2011, 14 and 15.

2017: All season: Maroon trimmed "D" patch with Phillies' 1980-style "P" for Dallas Green, former Phillies pitcher and manager who had just passed before the start of the season. Right sleeve of all jerseys. Beginning April 7, 2017

© GameWornGuides.com

June 3, 2018

- 2018, June 3: Red AIDS ribbon for "Until There's a Cure" Day in San Francisco.
- 2019, starting May 13: DPM memorial patch for team president and minority owner David Montgomery. Former Phillies player Cole Hamels also wore the patch on his Cubs uniform against the Phillies in Philadelphia on August 14.
- 2021: Dick Allen memorial patch, all season
- 2021, August 8: Roy Halladay Number Retirement patch

May 4, 2019

In 2019, the Phillies held "Retirement Ceremonies" to honor three fan favorites, Jimmy Rollins, Chase Utley, and Ryan Howard. The Phillies only retire jersey numbers when a player is enshrined in the Baseball Hall of Fame, so these ceremonies honored each player's Phillies career rather than retiring their numbers. Patches player-worn these dates:

- 2019, May 4: Jimmy Rollins
- 2019, June 21: Chase Utley
- 2019, July 14: Ryan Howard

June 21, 2019

2019, Starting May 13

Cubs' Cole Hamels August 14, 2019

July 14, 2019

2021

August 8, 2021

- 2024, June 8-9: MLB World Tour London Series patch and Build Submarines sponsor patch for two games against the Mets in London. These patches replace the team disc and normal sponsor patches. Worn on road jersey June 8 and home jersey June 9. Patches appear on opposite sleeves, sleeves vary based on player handedness.
- 2024, June 21: Cole Hamels retirement ceremony patch
- 2024, July 11: Philadelphia Independence Hall patch. This patch was removed from the alternate blue jerseys at the end of the 2022 season. It made one final appearance for this game in July, though the patch was adhesive and peeled off from a few players' sleeves.

June 8-9, 2024

June 21, 2024

July 11, 2024

© GameWornGuides.com

2023-2025 Phillies Advertising Patches

Home, Road, Cream Alternate

Retro Alternate

City Connect

With the start of the 2023 season, teams were permitted to sell an advertising patch, up to four inches square, to appear on one of their jersey sleeves. The sleeve on which the patch appeared could change from player to player, and each team that sold a patch handled the placement differently.

The Phillies struck a patch deal with Independence Blue Cross (IBX), a health insurance company. The patches first appeared on July 31, 2024. The patch is a rectangle that includes two of the company's logos, the word "Independence" with a Blue Cross logo above a larder text reading "IBX." Both logos are in blue on a white background. The patch for the home pinstripe, road gray, and cream home alternate jerseys have a red border. The patch for the powder blue alternate has a maroon border, while the patch for the team's City Connect jerseys has a dark blue border. The patch varies sleeves based on player handedness.

Starting in 2023, the team removed its long-standing sleeve numbers, while the retro powder blue jerseys lost their sleeve patch for the 2024 season, both likely in preparation for a sponsor patch that did not materialize until halfway through 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

Phillies Postseason Patches

1993 World Series (right sleeve)

2022 World Series (right sleeve)

2008 World Series (right sleeve)

2009 World Series (right slee

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Frank Linzy 1974 Philadelphia Phillies Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: October 13, 2022 Certification Number: 22-1013J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Columbia blue zipper front size 44 Wilson-made Phillies road jersey of pitcher Frank Linzy, #31. Maroon and white striped knit trim on the tops of both sleeves at the shoulders and up the side seams. Placket is lined with light blue satin typical of Wilson-made Phillies jerseys of the time. At 6' 1" and 190 lbs, the jersey is sized appropriately for the player.

Frank Linzy enjoyed an 11-year MLB career, pitching for four teams; Giants, Cardinals, Brewers and Phillies. He finished his career in 1974 playing a single season with the Phillies, in which he appeared in 22 games, all as a reliever, finishing with a 3-2 record and a 3.28 ERA. For his career he appeared in 516 games compiling a .516 winning percentage and a respectable 2.85 career ERA.

Restoration Performed: As received, the jersey wore #44 and was missing its nameplate. Notably, #44 in 1975 was (similarly sized) pitcher Wayne Simpson, 6' 3" 220 lbs. Simpson was a September acquisition for the Phillies in 1975 who appeared in only seven games and it is very likely that he was reissued Linzy's 1974 jersey from the trainer's bin in clubhouse. This jersey had experienced very heavy use, probably being used again after 1974 in Spring training or perhaps later sent to the minor leagues. It exhibits a high degree of fading from wash as well as characteristic sun-fading to the tops of the shoulders. Player numbers and the team crest on the left chest were in poor condition, bleached and puckered from over-use. Very likely they were "take off" numbers: ones that had been scavenged from another used jersey and kept handy for just such a need. The numbers were removed to reveal the clear ghosts of the original #31 below, notably brighter from being covered during a season of use. Oddly, the original maroon trim which usually fades markedly remains bright on this example.

The numbers and team crest were recreated from team patterns and suitably aged to harmonize them with the rest of the well-worn garment. All take-off lettering remains with the completed jersey to document its history. A new LINZY nameplate was created using the team's tall, narrow, vertical-arch NOB font of 1974, using a pair of similar aged Phillies game pants. The lettering is the correct size for 1974; notably in 1973-1976 the Phillies used noticeably smaller 7" back numbers than in later years on their road jerseys.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Matching exemplars, the 1974-appropriate Wilson tag is sewn onto the outer left tail. Below it, chain-stitched in the familiar handwriting of the Wilson factory stitcher is a rectangular piece of jersey fabric with the inscription 74 Set 2 44, indicating the year, set and size. "Linzy" is correctly hand chain stitched onto a similar rectangle of fabric and sewn into the back of the neck, stitching invisible from the outside back of the jersey indication that it was sewn in place before the jersey was finally-assembled at the factory.

As received- the jersey wore 1970s period-replacement numbers and was very dirty from storage. It was missing its nameplate. All twill elements were shrunken and distorted from hot water washing. Look at the front team crest, and the back-side of the fabric that shows the uneven shrinkage that had occurred through too-many hot water washings. The front "P" no longer matched the team template, it was nearly 3/8" shorter than exemplars. Glue marks showed the outlines of the old, original numbers.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good restored condition: the zipper and trim are original, and the sewn lettering (crest, numbers, plater nameplate) are properly restored with lettering near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher Frank Linzy of the 1974 Philadelphia Phillies during his final MLB season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Ryne Sandberg 1981 Philadelphia Phillies Home/First MLB Jersey

Examination Date: May 27, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0527J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: This is Hall of Fame player Ryne Sandberg's first game-worn major league jersey, worn during his initial September call-up with the Philadelphia Phillies in September-October,1981. White with red pinstripes Wilson size 42, Phillies "P" and player number 37 on the front, Player number and Sandberg nameplate on back. The jersey has its original working Talon brass zipper. A white linen lining is affixed to the inside of the placket and around the back of the collar for player comfort. Tail tagging 81-1. Sandberg's pro tenure with the Phillies was brief; a mere 13 games with just six at bats in September-October of 1981. In the 1981-82 off-season Sandberg and shortstop Larry Bowa were traded to the Chicago Cubs in an event that is today universally called the "worst trade ever" by the Phillies.

Restoration Performed: As received, this jersey had a nameplate on back of "Rasmussen". Jim Rasmussen was a perennial Phillies pitching prospect 1979-1982 and was a regular spring training invitee. Unfortunately, he never made the pro club, and spent his entire baseball career in the minor leagues. His name is hand-chain stitched on a strip tag sewn into the collar of the jersey, in the unmistakable "handwriting" of the Wilson factory stitcher.

As received, this jersey bore a rather crudely rendered "Rasmussen" nameplate on back. Phillies vertical arch nameplates were all drawn and cut by hand in those days before computer graphics, and every one is unique, with different size and shape letters. This one is especially inexact, with several letters in different sizes and stroke widths from the others. The Phillies used nameplates rather than direct-sewing names for a single reason: thrift. When players were cut or traded, their nameplates were unceremoniously stripped off and the jerseys were remanded to the clubhouse to be reissued to the next player they might fit. The nameplates were all saved too, in case a player was called up during the season, and a jersey needed to be hurriedly prepared for him. Lead-times to get new uniforms from Wilson were long, and we have many examples of Phillies jerseys from the 1970s and 1980s bearing collar strip tags of players who attended spring training but who never made the club. Team jerseys were ordered before spring training, and if there was a chance that a prospect might make the squad, two sets of home and two sets of road uniforms were ordered for him, properly sized and in some cases specially tailored, with player name inside the collar, player numbers affixed and name on back on a nameplate. Properly, the inside-collar tag was stitched in place before the placket was stitched closed, meaning that the stitching that secured it to the jersey was invisible from the outside after the jersey was completed.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Sandberg was also a Spring Training 1981 attendee, where he was assigned #24. A hot prospect for the team, multiple photos of him exist from Spring Training wearing number 24. Today at least one each of his spring training jerseys, home and road, have surfaced in the hobby, both bearing his name embroidered in the back of the collar, and both have been auctioned including credible letters of authentication. So, when Sandberg was called up to the pro club at the start of September, it would have been simple and logical for him to have been re-issued his #24 spring training uniforms . Except there was one problem… the Phillies had recently signed infielder Len Matuszek, a player nearly identically sized to Sandberg, and issued him Sandberg's #24 Spring Training uniforms. We have multiple photos of Matuszek in September 1981 wearing a jersey that can be conclusively photo-matched to one Sandberg wore in his spring training photos, and are shown here.

Sandberg was issued #24 in 1981 Spring Training. The alignment of the pinstripes and the many points of intersection allow me to conclude that the jersey shown in the publicity photo at top, the authenticated (and restored) jersey sold at auction at the left and the jersey worn by Len Matuszek in September 1981 are all the same shirt. Because Matuszek was wearing Sandberg's spring training uniforms, when Sandberg was called up he was hastily reissued the #37 uniform(s) that had been issued to Jim Rasmussen in 1981 Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

For clubhouse expediency, Sandberg was simply and quickly reissued the sets of uniforms worn by Rasmussen in 1981 spring training, also size 42. Few photos exist of Sandberg as a September 1981 call-up, but he was the only Phillies player to have worn #37 in 1981. Removing the crude Rasmussen nameplate, there is clear stitching outline evidence that three nameplates had been sewn there over time. Logically, these were Rasmussen's original one from spring training 1981, Sandberg's nameplate from September 1981, and then the return of a Rasmussen nameplate possibly for Spring Training 1982 when the jersey might have been used yet again by the prospect. The two player names are nearly identical in length, reaching from shoulder to shoulder and onto the edge of the sleeves. Crude removal (likely with a razor blade) has left holes and scars at the ends of the former locations of two of these plates. (See photos)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The jersey has the Wilson manufacturer's tag showing the size as 42, and in the correct style for 1981, stitched to the outside of the left front tail. Below that tag is a white square of knit fabric with the numbers "81 1" properly hand chain stitched on it, then tightly zig zag stitched to the tail. These tags are original and unaltered. As noted before "Rasmussen" is hand embroidered on a strip tag sewn into the back of the neck. These characteristics match other teams issued and game worn jerseys for the 1981 Phillies from our archives.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows a great deal of use, indicating that it was worn in multiple seasons and was perhaps even used in the minor leagues, where it would have been most likely used without name on back. A light table evaluation shows that the player numbers

Here is the jersey as I received it for authentication and restoration. The Rasmussen nameplate letters are crudely arched and created with letters of inconsistent size and stroke. It may be an original nameplate re-used, or was created in an earlier attempt at restoration to have a name on back to match the player name stitched in the collar.

Before removing the nameplate, we can see evidence of the scars left from earlier nameplate removal(s). At the bottom, with the nameplate removed and the jersey placed on the light table, clear evidence of two earlier nameplates are clearly visible, marked here with red, blue and green lines. It was not at all uncommon for the Phillies to re-use jerseys multiple times, and in fact this was the reason for using nameplates. It is far easier to remove and replace a single nameplate than to cut and sew, or to remove the many individual letters in a player's name, especially when using the custom vertical arched style employed by the Phillies, which means each letter of the name had to be hand drawn and cut.

During this period, the Phillies used nameplates cut from solid white polyester fabric, without any backing applied as a stiffener, and without a finished, serged edge/ The raw edges of the plate were zig-zag stitched to the jersey, causing characteristic puckering around the perimeter.

The artwork for the player name on back was recreated using period photos of Sandberg and my original templates of the Phillies 1970s alphabet. Characteristically The letters at the far ends of the name are significant taller than the ones in the middle. The letters were placed using a template for precision. The nameplate fabric was cut exactly to size to match what I determined was the location of the original plate, and made from a well-used pair of MLB pants that most closely matched the jersey's fabric color in terms of wear and color. I media-blasted the cut letters to age them and to remove the shine from the fabric so as to make them match the numbers on back more harmoniously. Finally, I zig-zag stitched the plate in place just as had been done originally, restoring it to its original location from some forty years prior.

and front team logo are original. There are no repairs, but crude removal of multiple nameplates is evidenced by a series of perforation holes around the outer edges at the ends of the plates. The jersey fabric is no longer with white; it has been weathered and washed so that it is off white now. Multiple small pulls are visible in the fabric from use, minor fraying of the team lettering are apparent, and the linen placket lining is stained and puckered, though intact.

Restoration performed: The Rasmussen nameplate was carefully removed and the jersey placed on the light table. Visible evidence of at least two other nameplates were noted and are highlighted on the attached photos. The shape of what was most likely the original Sandberg nameplate was recorded. The jersey was washed, and fabric from a pair of used MLB pants that most closely matched the shade of white that the jersey had become were chosen to remake the nameplate. The new nameplate lettering was re-drawn using multiple examples of Sandberg's other Phillies jerseys for reference. The lettering was cut and media blasted to remove the fabric sheen to help it better resemble the age and wear of the original numbers to which it would be adjacent. Replicating the original style of construction, the nameplate was left unbacked and the edge was not serged, but instead was zig zagged along its raw edge to the jersey. Placement was made as close as possible to the shadow of the original nameplate.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good and heavily used condition: the front and back numbers are original, and the player nameplate on back is properly restored with lettering near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Ryne Sandberg of the 1981 Philadelphia Phillies in his first Major League season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Dale Murphy Philadelphia Phillies 1991 Home Game Worn Jersey/Pants

Examination Date: November 15, 2022 Certification Number:22-1115JP01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1991 Philadelphia Phillies Rawlings size 48 with 2 inches extra length home jersey of outfielder Dale Murphy. Rawlings six-button-front full weight warp-knit white w/maroon pinstripe jersey in the specific style that the Phillies wore 1989-1991. The jersey is autographed on the left chest above the team crest. (I have no professional opinion on the autograph.) All lettering is two-layer, Cardinal Red twill outlined in white. The player name "MURPHY" is radially arched and sewn on a serged edge knit nameplate. Player numbers "3" on front right and on back in the correct font and size for the 1991 Phillies. Phillies team disk patch is sewn to the left sleeve. Sewn-in maroon knit trim on the shoulder tops and down the sides. Murphy wore both size 46 and 48 jerseys late in his career, and the size and tailoring are reasonable for his use. Rawlings team and player tagged 5-belt tunnel, zipper and snap front pants are size 37; same maroon pinstripes and with maroon side trim sewn in.

Dale Murphy enjoyed an 18 year career and was one of the biggest stars of the game and a fan favorite, especially during his 15 years with the Atlanta Braves, 1976-1990. He earned consecutive NL MVP honors in 1982-1983, was a 7-time All Star , and won 5 Gold Gloves and 4 Silver Slugger awards. He was traded to the Phillies late in the 1990 season, and played his last full-season of games in 1991, appearing in 153 contests (544 at bats, .252 average, 18 HR). While he played the next season in 1992, he was limited to only 18 games due to injury, and was then traded to the expansion Colorado Rockies for the 1993 season where he retired early in the season.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Jersey is properly team-tagged matching exemplars for the 1991 Phillies, Rawlings white tag inside the front left tail with the size of the jersey embroidered integral to it, flag tab to the left noting "Set 1 1991", tailoring tag pinch-sewn below noting 2 inch extra length. There is no player (name/number) specific tagging on the jersey. The pants are also flag tagged as SET 1 1991, and include a strip tag machine embroidered with "MURPHY 37/38 27 91" noting the waist size, inseam measurement and the 2 digit year. Rawlings script is embroidered onto the right sleeve end and the Rawlings circled "R" logo is embroidered just above the left back pocket.

Continued, next page

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that all sewn elements of the jersey are original and untampered with. Jersey shows wear consistent with a full season of use (players were typically issued two sets of jerseys in each style) with some puckering of the tagging and sleeve patch, mild burnishing of the twill elements and some bleaching of the maroon thread that holds the sewn lettering elements in place. The pants show similar wash wear but with more bleaching, evident in the pinker shade of the rear-pocket embroidered Rawlings logo. The jersey is free of damage; the pants have a 1.5" square team repair to front of the right knee and shows some ground in dirt on the seat especially the left side.

Conclusion: This jersey and pants are, in my opinion original and unaltered game worn team by Dale Murphy of the Philadelphia Phillies from the 1991 season. This is a beautiful original example of a professional MLB home uniform in a desirable style from a memorable star player of his era.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Phillies 1992 Mitch Williams Game Worn Nostalgia Game Jersey/Pants/Stirrups

Examination Date: November 4. 2020 Certification Number: 20-1104JP22

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: White double-knit six-button size 48 Russell button front jersey accompanied by size 34 pants and a pair of red/white/blue stirrup socks. This is from the June 21, 1992 Nostalgia Game played between the Phillies and the Chicago Cubs. Williams did not appear in that game. All lettering is two-layer, straight stitched felt in red over Royal Blue, meant to resemble the Phillies 1948 uniforms. "Phillies" across both front panels with stars over the I's. Very tall 9 1/2" back number 28, correct for Williams. Royal/red/Royal knit trim braid is stitched around the neck opening and 1/2" from the end of each sleeve. Front of jerseys is autographed by the player in black Sharpie. (I have no opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.)

The white pants have a zipper and snap closure, and have the same trim as the jersey running down each side. The bottom of each leg encloses elastic bands. There are two pockets on the seat with closure buttons intact. There are a few dirt stains on the pants.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Russell locker tag on the front, left outside tail in the proper style identifiable to 1992. Small 100% Nylon tag pinched under the bottom of it, typical of team issue. Russell R logo is direct embroidered in red at the end of the right sleeve. While the jerseys in this set are not team player-tagged, the pants are. Inside the waistband is a Russell 1992-style tag with 100% Nylon flag tag, and a rectangular knit tag with blue Plastisol ink printing that reads "WILLIAMS 34-34-92 Nostalgia Game" (34' waist and length, 1992)

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows signs of minor wash/wear, as would be appropriate for a special event jersey worn only once. A light table evaluation of the garment shows that the lettering is all original and without alterations.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in excellent used condition, is properly lettered, and numbered, and appears to have no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and game worn by Mitch Williams of the 1992 Philadelphia Phillies.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Philadelphia Phillies Home Game Model Jersey, #1, Prototype, Vintage 1970

Examination Date: July 14, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0714J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Wilson seven-button cream colored with chalk-red pinstripes, flannel Phillies home jersey, size 38, in the style introduced by the team to the public and worn part-time during the 1970 season. Maroon 3/4" trip on the shoulder tops and down each side. Four-hole gusseted vent panels under each arm. Beautifully hand-chain stitched embroidered team logo P on the left chest, and the numeral "1" on both the right chest and the center of the back. The swirly embroidery is done on cream colored linen backing which serves as a white outline for each patch element, stitching done in a shiny Cardinal-red embroidery thread, then each element is tightly zig-zag stitched to the jersey fabric. The inside of the placket is lined with linen for player comfort. All is accurate compared to exemplars.

Taking into account the information below in the sections on tagging and wear, this is most likely a sample jersey, made by Wilson for the team's consideration, prior to the start of the 1970 season. The team was anxious to have new uniforms to be ready for the opening of then ultra-modern Veterans Stadium, scheduled for the start of the 1970s season. But construction delays kept the team at old Connie Mack stadium until the next year.

From The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys by William F. Henderson, "...Had the new stadium been ready as planned for the start of the 1970 season, these new suits were ready to go. The Phillies were all set to launch a new image: new team look, new stadium, new optimism. But with the stadium opening delayed until 1971, The team started the year wearing the old-style uniforms at home, but wore their new ones on the road. At some point in the season, that decision was reversed, and the team switched to their new uniforms at home part time, and went back to the old style on the road. Photos from 1970 show the team wearing both old and new styles at Connie Mack Stadium during 1970. They wore the new uniform in the midseason All-Star Game. Full switchover to the new uniforms was complete for 1971."

The jersey is autographed in black Sharpie on lower front left by Frank Lucchesi who was the team's manager 1970-1972, and who also wore #1. I have no professional opinion on the authenticity of the autograph. Listed at 5' 8" and 180 lbs as a coach, in photos. clearly he was a larger man who would have been too big to fit into this size 38 jersey. An authenticated Luchessi jersey recorded in our exemplar library which sold at auction was a size 42 which is a more reasonable size for the man. The number 1 on front is stitched very close to the placket and not centered on the right chest as might be expected, but photos of the 1970 Phillies show this unusual number placement on early uniforms with single digits, so it is correct. It was common practice for manufacturers to make sample jerseys for team consideration using the number of the current manager, and this one fits that model.

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Larry Christenson 1974 Philadelphia Phillies Road Game Used Jersey

Examination Date: August 18, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0818J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Wilson Columbia Blue, zipper-front size 46 (marked and measured) Phillies road jersey of pitcher Larry Christenson. Phillies "P" and player number 38 on the front, player number and vertical-arched font nameplate on back. All lettering sewn in Cardinal Red outlined with white tackle twill. The jersey has its original working Talon brass zipper. Typical of Wilson Phillies road game-issues, a blue satin linen lining is affixed to the inside of the placket and around the back of the collar for player comfort. Sewn-on maroon bordered with white 1 3/8" trim on top of the shoulder and down the sides. All the lettering is clearly hand cut as is typical of Phillies jerseys of this vintage. The back numbers are the smaller 6 1/2" tall style used on road jerseys by the Phils only in 1973-1976. Moderate fading evident throughout, especially on the tops of the shoulders.

Larry Christenson played his entire 11-year MLB career with the Phillies. He was the 3rd overall draft pick in 1972, and made his Major League debut as a 19-year-old, pitching a complete game victory against the eventual pennant-winning Mets. At the time, he was the youngest player in MLB. Both his first MiLB and MLB hits were home runs and he is tied with Rick Wise for most home runs (11) by a pitcher in Phillies history. In 1974, he was a late-season call-up from the minors and went 1-1 in the 10 games in which he appeared, posting an ERA of 4.3.

Restoration Performed: The Phillies sent their jerseys to the minor leagues for a second-life after their MLB service was complete. Likely in 1975, this jersey was sent to nearby Reading (PA) Double A, or one of the other three Phillies minor league affiliates that had the same name as the parent club. When demoted, typically the jerseys' player nameplates were first stripped. When I received it, this jersey was without a nameplate, but here was clear evidence of the placement of the original nameplate visible. In 1974, only the second year in the team's history that player names were used on jerseys, team nameplates were single-layer jersey warp-knit fabric left unbacked, closely trimmed to the

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Top: As received, the jersey without nameplate. Below left, my reproduction graphic art to create the vertical arched nameplate, circumscribed by the plate shape as was visible on the jersey when placed on the light table. Bottom right, the player in a later year showing his nameplate. The Phillies were a frugal organization that sometimes recycled expensive items like player nameplates into the next season, especially if the player was a midseason call-up who saw limited action.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good condition: it is all original, save for my recreation of the nameplate to replace the one removed by the club. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Larry Christenson of the 1974 Philadelphia Phillies.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Mike Schmidt 1974 Philadelphia Phillies Road Game Used Jersey

Examination Date: May 8, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0508J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Wilson Columbia Blue, zipper-front size 42 (marked and measured) Phillies road jersey of hall of fame third baseman Mike Schmidt. Other examples show that Schmidt wore size 42 at this point in his career. Phillies "P" and player number 20 on the front, player number and vertical-arched font Schmidt nameplate on back. All lettering sewn in Cardinal Red outlined with white tackle twill. The jersey has its original working Talon brass zipper. Typical of Wilson Phillies road game-issues, a blue satin linen lining is affixed to the inside of the placket and around the back of the collar for player comfort. Sewn-on maroon bordered with white 1 3/8" trim on top of the shoulder and down the sides. All the lettering is clearly hand cut as is typical of Phillies jerseys of this vintage. The back numbers are the smaller 6 1/2" tall style used on road jerseys by the Phils only in 1973-1976. The jersey is autographed on the front under the team crest "Mike Schmidt HOF 95". I have no professional opinion on the autograph.

Mike Schmidt enjoyed an 18 year Hall of Fame career, played entirely with the Philadelphia Phillies. In 1976 he appeared in 160 games, batting .262 with a league-leading 36 home runs. He was selected to the 1974 All Star team (first appearance), and in his career was a twelve-time All-Star. (Baseball Almanac) Schmidt was a 12-time All-Star and a three-time winner of the National League (NL) Most Valuable Player award (MVP), and he was known for his combination of power hitting and strong defense. As a hitter, he compiled 548 home runs and 1,595 runs batted in (RBIs), and led the NL in home runs eight times and in RBIs four times. As a fielder, Schmidt won the National League Gold Glove Award for third basemen ten times. Schmidt was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1995 and is widely considered to be the greatest third baseman in baseball history. (Wikipedia)

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDreamShop

Restoration Performed: The Phillies sent their jerseys to the minor leagues for a second-life after their MLB service was complete. Likely in 1975, this jersey was sent to nearby Reading (PA) Double A, or one of the other three Phillies minor league affiliates that had the same name as the parent club. When demoted, typically the jerseys' player nameplates were stripped first. When I received it, this jersey was without a nameplate, but here was clear evidence of the placement of the original nameplate visible. In 1974, only the second year in the team's history that player names were used on jerseys, team nameplates were single-layer jersey warp-knit fabric left unbacked, closely trimmed to the name lettering, and the edges were left unfinished, without serging. The plates were then zig-zag stitched directly to the jersey, causing some characteristic puckering around their edges. Using period photos, reliably authenticated original examples and my own historic font collection, I recreated the SCHMIDT nameplate as closely as possible to original. The lettering was media-blasted and dyed to age it for a better match to the other, original adornment on the jersey. I used a pair of well worn Phillies pants from the period to make the nameplate, which I matched as close as I could to the jersey fabric with its years of fading from the sun and detergents.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson manufacturer's tag in the correct style for 1974 noting the size as 42 is stitched properly to the outside of the left front tail. The tag shows significant puckering and abrasion from use, though it remains securely attached with what appears to be its original stitching. Directly beneath it is a 3 1/4" long strip tag made of blue jersey fabric warp-knit, with "74 Set 2 42" hand-embroidered on it, indicating the year, set and size. In the same hand-chain stitched style is a 3" long warp-knit name tag, "Schmidt " sewn inside the collar. The tag was sewn there before the jersey was stitched closed at the factory, making the stitching holding the tag in place invisible from the outside of the jersey. The hand-chain stitched embroidery on both tags matches the handwriting of the Wilson factory stitcher and the tagging matches others in our exemplar library.

Tagging from jersey in review at top, compared to reliable exemplars from 1974, all shown below.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination reveals that the player numbers and the front team crest are original. The satin lining inside the back of the neck shows wear and puckering but is intact and in very good condition. The maroon trim shows some sun-fading as is typical of these jerseys. The jersey body is evenly faded from the sun and detergents, the letting is significantly puckered as is the fabric beneath it, and the stitching is coming loose; especially on back. At the request of the owner, I restitched some of the missing areas on the sewn lettering as they were detached in many spots and falling off.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good condition: it is all original, save for my recreation of the nameplate to replace the one removed by the club. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Mike Schmidt of the 1974 Philadelphia Phillies.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Frank Linzy 1974 Philadelphia Phillies Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: October 13, 2022 Certification Number: 22-1013J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Columbia blue zipper front size 44 Wilson-made Phillies road jersey of pitcher Frank Linzy, #31. Maroon and white striped knit trim on the tops of both sleeves at the shoulders and up the side seams. Placket is lined with light blue satin typical of Wilson-made Phillies jerseys of the time. At 6' 1" and 190 lbs, the jersey is sized appropriately for the player.

Frank Linzy enjoyed an 11-year MLB career, pitching for four teams; Giants, Cardinals, Brewers and Phillies. He finished his career in 1974 playing a single season with the Phillies, in which he appeared in 22 games, all as a reliever, finishing with a 3-2 record and a 3.28 ERA. For his career he appeared in 516 games compiling a .516 winning percentage and a respectable 2.85 career ERA.

Restoration Performed: As received, the jersey wore #44 and was missing its nameplate. Notably, #44 in 1975 was (similarly sized) pitcher Wayne Simpson, 6' 3" 220 lbs. Simpson was a September acquisition for the Phillies in 1975 who appeared in only seven games and it is very likely that he was reissued Linzy's 1974 jersey from the trainer's bin in clubhouse. This jersey had experienced very heavy use, probably being used again after 1974 in Spring training or perhaps later sent to the minor leagues. It exhibits a high degree of fading from wash as well as characteristic sun-fading to the tops of the shoulders. Player numbers and the team crest on the left chest were in poor condition, bleached and puckered from over-use. Very likely they were "take off" numbers: ones that had been scavenged from another used jersey and kept handy for just such a need. The numbers were removed to reveal the clear ghosts of the original #31 below, notably brighter from being covered during a season of use. Oddly, the original maroon trim which usually fades markedly remains bright on this example.

The numbers and team crest were recreated from team patterns and suitably aged to harmonize them with the rest of the well-worn garment. All take-off lettering remains with the completed jersey to document its history. A new LINZY nameplate was created using the team's tall, narrow, vertical-arch NOB font of 1974, using a pair of similar aged Phillies game pants. The lettering is the correct size for 1974; notably in 1973-1976 the Phillies used noticeably smaller 7" back numbers than in later years on their road jerseys.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Matching exemplars, the 1974-appropriate Wilson tag is sewn onto the outer left tail. Below it, chain-stitched in the familiar handwriting of the Wilson factory stitcher is a rectangular piece of jersey fabric with the inscription 74 Set 2 44, indicating the year, set and size. "Linzy" is correctly hand chain stitched onto a similar rectangle of fabric and sewn into the back of the neck, stitching invisible from the outside back of the jersey indication that it was sewn in place before the jersey was finally-assembled at the factory.

As received- the jersey wore 1970s period-replacement numbers and was very dirty from storage. It was missing its nameplate. All twill elements were shrunken and distorted from hot water washing. Look at the front team crest, and the back-side of the fabric that shows the uneven shrinkage that had occurred through too-many hot water washings. The front "P" no longer matched the team template, it was nearly 3/8" shorter than exemplars. Glue marks showed the outlines of the old, original numbers.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good restored condition: the zipper and trim are original, and the sewn lettering (crest, numbers, plater nameplate) are properly restored with lettering near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher Frank Linzy of the 1974 Philadelphia Phillies during his final MLB season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Steve Carlton 1976 Philadelphia Phillies Home Game Used Jersey

Examination Date: May 8, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0508J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Wilson white with red pinstripes, zipper-front size 46 (measured as a 44, reasonable shrinkage) Phillies home jersey of hall of fame pitcher Steve Carlton. Other examples show that Carlton wore size 46 at this point in his career. Phillies "P" and player number 32 on the front, Player number and Carlton nameplate on back. All lettering sewn in Cardinal Red twill. The jersey has its original working brass zipper, missing its pull tab. Typical of Wilson game-issues, a white linen lining is affixed to the inside of the placket and around the back of the collar for player comfort. Sewn-on maroon 1 1/4" trim on top of the shoulder and down the sides. All the lettering is clearly hand cut as is typical of Phillies jerseys of this vintage. The jersey is autographed on the front under the team crest "Steve Carlton HOF 94". I have no professional opinion on the autograph.

In 1976, Carlton went 20-7 for the Phillies compiling a 3.13 ERA. He won the Cy Young Award four times in his career, a record achievement up until that time. (Baseball Almanac) A ten-time All-Star, Carlton led the league in many pitching categories. He struck out 4,136 batters in his career, setting a record for a left-handed pitcher (since surpassed by Randy Johnson), and holds many other records for both left-handed and Phillies pitchers. His 329 career wins are the eleventh most in baseball history, behind Greg Maddux, Roger Clemens, and Warren Spahn among pitchers of the live-ball era (post–1920). He is also second (behind Bob Gibson) in major league history for the most consecutive starts with at least six innings pitched (69), which was snapped in April 1982. (Wikipedia). He was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1994.

Restoration Performed: The Phillies sent their jerseys to the minor leagues for a second-life after their MLB service was complete. Likely in 1977, this jersey was sent to nearby Reading (PA) Double A, or one of the other three Phillies minor league affiliates that had the same name as the parent club. When demoted, typically the jerseys' sleeve patches and the player nameplates were stripped first. When I received it, this jersey was wearing a well-crafted replacement nameplate. However, Its owner had since secured a vintage CARLTON nameplate, showing the vertical arch font style worn by the club (and Carlton) 1975-1986. After removing the replacement nameplate, there was no clear evidence of the placement of the original nameplate visible. My evaluation is that the replacement nameplate, albeit slightly smaller than the reproduced one it replaced, is indeed a vintage original. In 1976, Phillies nameplates were single-layer white warp-knit fabric and unbacked, closely trimmed to the name lettering, and the edges were left unfinished, without serging. The plates were then zig-zag stitched directly to the jersey, causing some characteristic puckering around their edges.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson manufacturer's tag in the correct style for 1976 noting the size as 46 is stitched properly to the outside of the left front tail. The tag shows significant abrasion from use, erasing some of the red embroidery stitching, though it remains securely attached with what appears to be its original stitching. Directly beneath it is a 2 3/4" long strip tag made of white warp-knit, with "46 76 Set 1" hand-embroidered on it, indicating the size and the year. In the same hand-chain stitched style is a 2 1/2" long warp-knit name tag, "Carlton". The tag was sewn into the collar before the jersey was sewn closed at the factory, making the stitching holding the collar name tag in place invisible from the outside of the jersey. The hand-chain stitched embroidery on both tags matches the handwriting of the Wilson factory stitcher and the tagging matches others in our exemplar library.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination reveals that the player numbers and the front team crest are original. The linen lining inside the back of the neck shows significant wear and has has a couple of holes and has begun to become separated from the shirt, Below and to the right of the CARLTON neck tag are faded and sloppily written black marker inscriptions, now intelligible, that likely were the name(s) of the minor league player(s) to whom this jersey was reissued. No repair was attempted to these areas. The 1976 NL 100th sleeve patch appears original, but

Above, jersey as received with a nameplate on it from a prior restoration. At left, top— the tags from the jersey in our review; below are reliable exemplars from our library of other 1976 Phillies jerseys.

I suspect it to be a vintage replacement sewn exactly on the original spot. No other stitch marks for this patch are visible on the sleeve, These sleeve patches were typically removed at the end of the season as the uniforms were sent to the minor leagues as this one clearly was. The Philadelphia 1976 patch on the left sleeve is clearly a more recent (but accurate) reproduction. The maroon trim shows some sun-fading as is typical of these jerseys. There is some staining on the back of the jersey, some brownish ones at the top left near the point where the sleeve attaches to the jersey body, and three marks that look like black marker lower of the back, same side.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good condition: it is all original, save for the reproduction Philadelphia 1976 sleeve patch and the reintroduction of a vintage nameplate to replace the one removed by the club. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Steve Carlton of the 1976 Philadelphia Phillies.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Pete Rose Philadelphia Phillies Game Worn 1979 "Saturday Night Special" Jersey

Examination Date: January 28, 2025 Certification Number: 25-0128J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Dark red zipper-front Rawlings jersey with zipper front, sewn-in 1 ½" white trim stripe up each side and on the tops of the sleeves. Phillies "P" crest on the left chest with the player number 14 on the right chest, and center one on the back. Player name ROSE arched above on a matching serged edge nameplate. The fonts are correct for this style jersey, including the placement of the front numbers aligned with the middle of the "P" on the tear chest instead of being aligned with the bottom as was traditional with the team's regular Wilson game jerseys. The player name on back is a bold 3 ⅞" tall font, steeply arched matching exemplars and period photos. Notably, while the lettering is the same general font as the Wilson jerseys that the team wore every day, the size and shape of the numbers is not perfectly identical to the Wilson patterns.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The red "The Mark of a Pro" Rawlings tag is sewn on the outside bottom of the right tail showing the size as 42. A flag tab is stitched under the bottom right edge of the Rawlings tag, and reads SET 1 1979. Sewn to the right of these tags is a Cardinal Red rectangle, 1" x 1.5" of tackle twill (the same color as would be used to make the lettering for normal Phillies home/road jerseys) on which is hand chain stitched 42 79 1 (size 42 1979 set 1) in the familiar hand of the Rawlings factory stitcher. This tagging matches the other exemplars of this set that we have been able to examine over the years. While the jersey is tagged as a size 42, Rose typically wore a size 44, and this measures closer to a size 48. I can attest that these jerseys were oddly tailored, I recall the comments about the players complaining about how they fit from back when these were worn, and photos of Rose wearing this jersey for the single game they were used, it looked baggy on him.

Wear & Repairs: These jerseys were worn only once, on Saturday night May 19, 1979 in a game against the Montreal Expos. They were supposed to be worn at every Saturday home game after that, but the players were so unhappy about how the uniforms looked and fit that after this game they were abandoned and then sold to benefit the Phillies charities. This jersey appears that it was worn and washed, characteristic of others of these that I have seen over the years, the thread holding on the lettering is stained with the reddish infield dirt. On this jersey, the front lettering is stained and scuffed, quite possibly due to Rose's aggressive style of play. In that game he went 3-5 with one RBI and a stolen base. A light table evaluation shows that the lettering is all original without contrivance.

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Now Saturday-only duds are no flashier than Schmidt or Rose.

Provenance: This jersey was accompanied by a non-notarized statement from original owner, Thomas J. Whiman, who is not the same person presenting it for authentication now. It says: "I originally worked as an extra for the Philadelphia Phillies as a helper when I was in 7th grade. I met Jack Donnelly, who was there for 40 plus years as the Left Field ball guy who would have a catch with the Phillies left fielder, Greg Luzinski when I was there! I cut his lawn and he asked me if I would be interested in helping out? It was an awesome experience for a 14 year old boy. They would bring us in on Promotional Days. When the Phillies wore the Burgundy Uniforms for weekend games they turned out to be not so popular with fans, so the team decided to sell them for $200 each and give the money to charity. I put in $200, my life savings at the time, and requested Greg Luzinski's uniform. When the box came in the mail from the Phillies organization, I was at first disappointed, when I opened it up and it was Pete Rose's! I was a big fan of the 'Bull.' Then everyone told me I was the luckiest guy around to get Pete's uniform!! Mr. Donnelly was nice enough to take the uniform to Pete Rose and have him sign it for me. I was really fortunate! I had the uniform framed and it hung in my home or business wherever I lived or worked for the past 42 plus years. It has been an honor to own such a great piece of history."* (*Authenticator's notes: Whiman originally received the jersey, pants and cap. The pants were the item signed. The pants were not presented to me for authentication)

Top left: Exemplars from our library showing two other jerseys from this set. News photos of Rose taken at the only game where these uniforms were worn. Below and left: the excerpted page from my book, "The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys" shows the entry describing these uniforms.

Gettysburg Times - May 25, 1979 Browse this newspaper » Browse all n

Phils Scrap New Uniforms

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies' new all-burgundy uniforms, intended for regular Saturday showings, are out because "they just didn't match up to our expectations," said team spokesman Larry Shenk Thursday.

Last Saturday, when the new gear was worn for the first and only time, Shenk said the uniforms would be worn every Saturday "until they lose two in a row."

The Phillies lost to the Montreal Expos Saturday and Sunday night, but Shenk said that didn't really cause the team to scrap the uniforms.

He said the uniforms did not fit well and created a color problem for photographers.

Conclusion: I have had the opportunity to examine several of the jerseys of this unique set over the years, and comparing this specimen to exemplars and to game photos I am confident that this is the jersey worn by Pete Rose of the Philadelphia Phillies in that single occasion, the game on May 19, 1979.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Mike Schmidt Philadelphia Phillies 1988 Home Game Jersey

Examination Date: March 21, 2021 Certification Number: 20-1104J21R

This letter will serve as the opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1988 tagged Philadelphia Phillies size 46 home jersey of third baseman Mike Schmidt. Rawlings six-button-front full weight warp-knit white w/maroon pinstripe jersey in the specific style that the Phillies wore 1987-1988. All lettering is one-color Cardinal Red twill. The Phillies crest on the left chest is Cardinal Red over white with no outline. The player name "SCHMIDT" is radially arched and sewn on a single-needle serged edge knit nameplate. Player numbers "20" on front right and on back in the correct bold font and size for the 1988 Phillies. Phillies team disk patch is sewn to the left sleeve. Sewn-in maroon knit trim on the shoulder tops and down the sides. 1988 was Schmidt's next-to-last season in his first-ballot Hall of Fame career; he retired from baseball shortly after the start of the 1989 season.

Team and Manufacturer Tagging: Rawlings manufacturer tagging in correct team issue 1988-style with the five-line wash instructions, sewn on the inside of the back of the neck. SET 1 1988 flag tag pinched underneath and to its right. Directly above and sewn on all four sides is a rectangle of satin fabric that says "T" in maroon embroidery, indicating that the jersey has been pro-tapered by Rawlings. Notably, these neck tags have properly been sewn in place before the placket was stitched closed at the factory, as there is no visible stitching on the outside of the back of the neck that would appear there had it been sewn after the jersey was completed. The Rawlings script logo is embroidered on the end of the right sleeve in maroon thread. This sizing is correct for use by Schmidt at this late stage of his career. While this jersey is absent the machine white fabric embroidered strip tag that would say "SCHMIDT " in maroon capital letters that is present on nearly all beginning of the season team-issued/ game worn jerseys in our exemplar library, its absence is not entirely unique. It is possible that this is a mid-season jersey ordered with special tailoring at Schmidt's request. Set tagging on Phillies jerseys is rather random, mid season issues typically get "Set 1" tags in my experience.

Wear and Repairs: Jersey body, stitching and tags show signs of light use and wash wear, evidenced by some characteristic puckering of the Rawlings tag. A light table evaluation shows that all stitching is original and unaltered.

Conclusion: In my opinion is an original and unaltered team-specification 1988 jersey of Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies, displaying light use. This is a beautiful original example of a professional MLB home jersey in a desirable style from a star player.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion and Document of Restoration

Kent Tekulve 1988 Philadelphia Phillies Game Worn Home jersey

Examination Date: December 13. 2020 Certification Number: 20-1213J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Rawlings Size 44 white with maroon pinstripes six-button Philadelphia Phillies home jersey of pitcher Kent Tekulve. Sewn on maroon trim down each side seam and on top of the shoulders. Phillies disk patch stitched to the left sleeve. Player #27 on front left and on back in the proper bold Phillies font used in 1988. Tekulve stitched to a white nameplate in the proper font and size, radially arched above. Size 44 is a reasonable one for Tekulve to have worn in 1988.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings tag properly sewn inside the back of the neck noting the size as 44. TEKULVE machine embroidered onto a rectangular strip of knit fabric and stitched to its left. White flag tab pinched below says SET 1 1988. All these details as explained match exemplars in our collection and photo library.

Wear & Repairs/Restoration Performed: As received, the jersey was missing its nameplate. It showed evidence of moderately heavy wear, with ground in reddish dirt throughout, as it likely had been passed to the minor leagues and used there for at least a season or two. All stitched elements (player numbers and "P" crest on front) had come loose, and had been restitched on the edge with a very wide and incorrect thick dark red embroidery stitch. I was asked to restore the nameplate and evaluate and repair the letter stitching. Upon removing the embroidery stitch, the edges of the lettering were so badly perforated and frayed that we elected to replace them with lettering made again from the original patterns and fabric, then stitched it on properly. The jersey was thoroughly cleaned, and the replacement nameplate was made from a color-matching pair of well-worn MLB pants; the edges of the plate surged in the same style as Phillies game jerseys of the period.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good used condition, is properly lettered, and numbered, and has been properly restored. It has a team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Kent Tekulve of the 1988 Philadelphia Phillies.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Dale Murphy Philadelphia Phillies 1991 Home Game Worn Jersey/Pants

Examination Date: November 15, 2022 Certification Number:22-1115JP01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1991 Philadelphia Phillies Rawlings size 48 with 2 inches extra length home jersey of outfielder Dale Murphy. Rawlings six-button-front full weight warp-knit white w/maroon pinstripe jersey in the specific style that the Phillies wore 1989-1991. The jersey is autographed on the left chest above the team crest. (I have no professional opinion on the autograph.) All lettering is two-layer, Cardinal Red twill outlined in white. The player name "MURPHY" is radially arched and sewn on a serged edge knit nameplate. Player numbers "3" on front right and on back in the correct font and size for the 1991 Phillies. Phillies team disk patch is sewn to the left sleeve. Sewn-in maroon knit trim on the shoulder tops and down the sides. Murphy wore both size 46 and 48 jerseys late in his career, and the size and tailoring are reasonable for his use. Rawlings team and player tagged 5-belt tunnel, zipper and snap front pants are size 37; same maroon pinstripes and with maroon side trim sewn in.

Dale Murphy enjoyed an 18 year career and was one of the biggest stars of the game and a fan favorite, especially during his 15 years with the Atlanta Braves, 1976-1990. He earned consecutive NL MVP honors in 1982-1983, was a 7-time All Star , and won 5 Gold Gloves and 4 Silver Slugger awards. He was traded to the Phillies late in the 1990 season, and played his last full-season of games in 1991, appearing in 153 contests (544 at bats, .252 average, 18 HR). While he played the next season in 1992, he was limited to only 18 games due to injury, and was then traded to the expansion Colorado Rockies for the 1993 season where he retired early in the season.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Jersey is properly team-tagged matching exemplars for the 1991 Phillies, Rawlings white tag inside the front left tail with the size of the jersey embroidered integral to it, flag tab to the left noting "Set 1 1991", tailoring tag pinch-sewn below noting 2 inch extra length. There is no player (name/number) specific tagging on the jersey. The pants are also flag tagged as SET 1 1991, and include a strip tag machine embroidered with "MURPHY 37/38 27 91" noting the waist size, inseam measurement and the 2 digit year. Rawlings script is embroidered onto the right sleeve end and the Rawlings circled "R" logo is embroidered just above the left back pocket.

Continued, next page

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that all sewn elements of the jersey are original and untampered with. Jersey shows wear consistent with a full season of use (players were typically issued two sets of jerseys in each style) with some puckering of the tagging and sleeve patch, mild burnishing of the twill elements and some bleaching of the maroon thread that holds the sewn lettering elements in place. The pants show similar wash wear but with more bleaching, evident in the pinker shade of the rear-pocket embroidered Rawlings logo. The jersey is free of damage, the pants have a 1.5" square team repair to front of the right knee and shows some ground in dirt on the seat especially the left side.

Conclusion: This jersey and pants are, in my opinion original and unaltered game worn team by Dale Murphy of the Philadelphia Phillies from the 1991 season. This is a beautiful original example of a professional MLB home uniform in a desirable style from a memorable star player of his era.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Pete Rose 1979-1983 Batting Practice Jersey + Pete Rose Jr. Batboy BP Jersey

Examination Date: November 4. 2020 Certification Number: 20-1104J23

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: There are two jerseys included by this letter of opinion, Nearly identical except for the size. Pete Rose #14 Phillies maroon pullover V-Neck Wilson batting practice jersey in the style worn by the team during Rose's tenure with the team, 1979-1983. These jerseys featured an almost cartoonish facsimile of the Phillies wordmark in sewn white tackle twill on the chest, strangely distorted when compared to the print version team logo, but endearing in a late 1970s pre-computer graphics way. White #14 on back and on the left sleeve in the correct Wilson varsity versions. While the Phillies had their own signature player-number font, they elected not to use it on warmups until 1992. The Pete Rose is a size 44 and has "ROSE" vertical arched in white on the back in the Phillies game-jersey style. Pete Rose Jr. who served as a batboy for parts of several seasons (and later had a brief MLB career) has a size 38 jersey with name on back of "Rose Jr". This style of jersey as made by Wilson was notably short-waisted, and both of these examples share that characteristic. Pete Rose had a strong preference for this style jersey, wearing it on-field right up to game time, and even to the extent that he insisted on wearing his during the 1979 All Star Game in Seattle instead of his Phillies road uniform, as the other Phillies on the squad wore.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: On Rose's jersey, the standard Wilson rectangular tag is stitched in the collar noting the size as 44. On Rose Jr's there is a smaller Wilson maker's flag tab in the back the neck noting the size as 38. These jerseys were not tagged in any other way by the team.

Wear & Repairs: The Rose jersey shows signs of moderate wash/wear, with some reddish ground in dirt stains on the lettering front and back, and loose threads especially on the front logo. A light table evaluation of the garment shows that the lettering is all original and without alterations. The Rose Jr. jersey shows lighter wear with less dirt stains and brighter white lettering.

Conclusion: While these are offered without provenance, they are presented as a compelling matched set. This style of jersey was the very first Authentic to be offered for sale to the public, by Philadelphia's Sixsmith's Sporting Goods in the late 1970s. While they were sold with player numbers sewn on (your choice from four players' numbers, #14 included), they were not then offered to the public with player names on them. In contrast, the lettering sewn on these is fully team spec, and the reddish infield dirt that stains the Pete Rose jersey's numbers and front wordmark is familiar to collectors of game-worn Phillies jerseys. They display accuracy and wear that leads me to conclude that they are authentic team issue/game worn.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Roy Halladay 2011-2013 Philadelphia Phillies Game Worn BP/Spring Training Jersey

Examination Date: July 17, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0717J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Philadelphia Phillies size 50 (marked and measured) six-button Majestic red and blue BP/spring training jersey, lettered for #34, Pitcher Roy Halliday. The size is consistent with exemplars and reasonable for the player. Red Cool Base style jersey body with bright blue vented side panels and 1/8" blue trim banding the sleeve ends. Layered tackle twill red Phillies script sewn on a white twill patch covers both chest panels, the I's are dotted with blue stars. Stitched white twill is used for the player's name and number on back, and is in the team's distinctive special bold fonts. The MLB Silhouetted Batter logo in red white and blue is stitched to the outside center of the back of the neck, all matching team specification. This style jersey was worn during spring training as a regular game jersey 2011-2013, and also during the regular season for pregame activities and batting practice. The jersey is autographed on the back left side: "Hector, All the best on a long and healthy career! (signed) Roy Halladay". I have no professional opinion on the autograph. Notably, young pitcher Hector Neris who played for the Phillies MLB club starting in 2014 was signed by the Phillies in 2010 and spent the 2010—2013 seasons pitching in the Phillies minor league system. Doubtlessly he was a spring training invitee at the MLB level in many or most of these years.

Halladay pitched for the Phillies 2010-2013. In 2010, he pitched both the 20th perfect game and the second postseason no-hitter in major league history, led the majors in shutouts for the second consecutive year, and won the National League (NL) Cy Young Award. In 2011, Halladay had another dominant season, leading the NL in complete games, but he was plagued by injuries the next two years. After the 2013 season, he announced his retirement as the active major league leader in complete games, with 67. He died is an airplane accident in 2017. Halladay was announced posthumously as an inductee to the National Baseball Hall of Fame on January 22, 2019. (Wikipedia)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Majestic's Authentic Collection locker tag is stitched onto the outside lower left tail. It has a tiny generic Majestic hologram disk affixed, which is simply to show that the garment is authentically made by Majestic. Stitched into the side seam immediately adjoining is the rectangular cool base brand tag and a small tab designating the size as 50. The Majestic twin peaks logo is heat pressed onto the end of the left sleeve in white. The inside seam tag designates this as a jersey style 0780, which is cataloged as team-issued specification, Cool Base fabric. Phillies batting practice jerseys from this period of time are not player or team tagged in any other way. Notably, this jersey is not hologrammed, and my suspicion is given its inscription, the player likely simply removed it from his back and gifted it to the young pitcher, bypassing the clubhouse authentication process.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination reveals that the lettering on the jersey is original and unchanged without contrivance. The jersey displays signs of use, with minor pulls in the fabric, scuffs and small stains. All stitching is tight. The inner seam tag is curled indicating the jersey was washed multiple times. The perimeter of this jersey, especially the top yoke, is scattered with very tiny holes indicating that this jersey was mounted with pins or staples into a frame at some point. They are visible only under very close inspection. The jersey is in very good original condition.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly sized, tagged, and lettered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It exhibits use, and appears to have no alterations of any kind. It is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine and was worn by Roy Halladay of the Philadelphia Phillies during (any of) the 2011-2013 seasons.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Dale Murphy 1991 Philadelphia Phillies Nostalgia Game Home Uniform

Examination Date: December 13, 2023 Certification Number: 23-1213J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Turn Back the Clock games are commonplace today, but in 1991 games where players wear throwback uniforms were a new idea. The first such game in MLB was in 1990, by the Chicago White Sox. In 1991, a handful of teams had a "Nostalgia Game" of their own. The Phillies hosted the Cincinnati Reds in this contest on June 16, 1991. In re-creation, this is the style of jersey the Phillies wore 1950-1970; for the game the Reds wore 1957 style road uniforms. While this uniform is made from modern full-weight double knit, its design was painstakingly executed by Rawlings. The Phillies jersey is white double knit with bright red pinstripes. The team script is beautifully chain stitched with dark crimson thread onto a white twill backing that is then zig-zag stitched to the front of the jersey. It is relatively faithful to the original art; though originals had the chain stitching applied to a white felt backing. The numbers on back, while not precisely identical to the 1960s font, capture the spirit. They are also chain stitched in crimson embroidery thread onto a twill backing and are a very large 10" tall and sewn 6" from the collar, similar to the historic originals. The jersey is autographed below the tail tagging in blue Sharpie, a PSA/DNA sticker is affixed to the locker tag. I have no professional opinion on the autograph. It is worth noting that the very next year, in the 1992 season the Phillies revised their team uniform to one that closely resembles the throwback they wore on this day, a classic look they have stayed with for 31 years at this writing.

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

The jersey is accompanied by a pair of pinstriped game pants, waist size 36 and with the same strip tagging in the waistband that includes the player's name. While not marked, the pants have a 26" inseam. The pants show no evidence of hard use (sliding, etc). Murphy did not start this game, but pinch hit late in the game contributing a single. (Baseball Almanac)

During an 18-year career in Major League Baseball (MLB) from 1976 to 1993, Dale Murphy played as an outfielder, catcher, and first baseman for the Atlanta Braves, Philadelphia Phillies, and Colorado Rockies; Murphy is best noted for his many years with the Braves. His entire MLB career was spent in the National League (NL), during which time he won consecutive Most Valuable Player (MVP) awards (1982–1983), the Silver Slugger Award for four straight years (1982–1985), and the Gold Glove Award for five straight years (1982–1986). (Wikipedia)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings was the official uniform provider to the Phillies in 1991, and therefore was offered the first right of refusal to create these nostalgia uniforms. The Rawlings script logo is embroidered onto a tiny appliqué patch and is glued tightly to the left sleeve end; it is not direct embroidered the way it was on regular season jerseys. A Rawlings size tab is sewn into the back of the neck, it shows the size as 48. The large red rectangular Rawlings "Mark of a Pro" locker tag correct for 1991 showing the size as 48 (both marked and measured) is sewn to the outside left tail. Directly beneath the locker tag is a 6 1/2" strip of white twill with the maroon machine- embroidered inscription: "1991 NOSTALGIA GAME SPECIAL". A similar but shorter white twill tag is sewn into the back of the neck with "MURPHY" embroidered on it in maroon in the same machine-font. The tag is correctly sewn in place without its edge-stitching being visible from the back of the collar, meaning it was sewn in place before the jersey was completed at the factory. The size 48 jersey (correct for Murphy at this point in his career) is a long 34" from the back of the neck to the end of the tail, and while there is no designation that denotes this special tailoring, Murphy normally received extra length jerseys and so this one was clearly made to his Rawlings' on-file specification.

Wear & Repairs: Jersey: A light table examination shows that all tagging, lettering, and stitching on the jersey is unaltered. As would be expected of a uniform that was worn for a single game, it shows very light wash wear, There are no signs of any repairs.

Conclusion: The uniform in review is properly tagged, lettered, and numbered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It exhibits light use and wash wear, and appears to have no alterations of any kind. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine team issue and was game-worn by Dale Murphy of the Philadelphia Phillies on June 16, 1991.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Curt Schilling Philadelphia Phillies 1997 Negro Leagues Game Jersey

Examination Date: November 4. 2020 Certification Number: 20-1104J14

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Gray double-knit Mitchell & Ness six-button size XXL five- button front jersey This is from the June 28, 1997 Nostalgia Game played between the Phillies and the Atlanta Braves in Atlanta. Schilling was the starting and losing pitcher in that game, pitching 5 2/3 innings. All lettering is two-layer, straight stitched felt in red over Navy Blue, in a design meant to replicate the jerseys of the 1938 Negro League Philadelphia Stars. 7 1/2" back number 38, correct for Schilling. Red knit trim braid is stitched completely around the placket at the end of each sleeve. Front of jerseys is autographed by the player in black Sharpie. (I have no opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.) The 1997 Jackie Robinson "Breaking Barriers" patch is correctly stitched to the end of the left sleeve.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Mitchell & Ness Cooperstown Collection tagging correct for 1997 is stitched to the outside front left tail. Beneath it is a felt rectangular tag on which is embroidered T.B.C. 6-28-97 (Turn Back the Clock). The company's rectangular label is stitched inside the back of the neck, with an XXL flag tag pinched under the right edge.

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation of the garment shows that the lettering is all original and without alterations. All elements including the felt lettering are still crisp as would be expected with a one-game used jersey. Schilling both pitched and batted in the game.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in my opinion game issued and reasonably shows one-game wear. It is properly lettered, and numbered, and appears to have no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made for and worn by Curt Schilling of the 1997 Philadelphia Phillies.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Jim Thome 2005 Phillies St. Patrick's Day Green Jersey

Examination Date: November 4. 2020 Certification Number: 20-1104J24

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Green heavyweight mesh six-button-front Majestic pullover size 52 Phillies jersey, #25 Jim Thome. The Phillies wore this style St. Pat's jersey in Spring Training in 2005-2007; Thome was on the team only in 2005. "Thome" name on back in white in the proper Phillies font and stitched on a mesh nameplate, Centered on back is his number, 25. The size of the jersey matches others worn by Thome in our exemplar library. The MLB Silhouetted Batter logo patch in red, white and blue is stitched on the back center of the neck. The Phillies team wordmark is properly chain-stitch-embroidered in crimson and blue on a white twill patch that is sewn to both panels of the jersey front. It has the pro-model "three Ls" that allow one of the Ls in Phillies to be hidden beneath the button flap. Retail versions of this jersey have a layered sewn twill wordmark.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: This jersey has several characteristics that make it identifiable as team issue. The Majestic sleeve-end logo is embroidered and not a decal. The inside side seam tag is coded "0006" which is the designation given to team-spec jerseys. Majestic Authentic Collection locker tag is stitched on the bottom outside left tail, the small size flag tag is pointed under the bottom center.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows signs of minor wash/wear, as would be appropriate for a special event jersey worn only once. A light table evaluation of the garment shows that the lettering is all original and without alterations.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in excellent used condition, is properly lettered, and numbered, and appears to have no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue style tagging, and appropriate wear. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications for Jim Thome of the 2005 Philadelphia Phillies.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Chapter 29

Pittsburgh Pirates

Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys

1970-2025, Tenth Edition

William F. Henderson

Pirates Uniform History Notes

- The Pittsburgh city municipal flag is black and gold. Fans might notice that all of the city's professional sports teams—Steelers, Penguins, and Pirates—all use black and gold as their team colors, with the Penguins the last to join the fray in a January 1980 mid-season change.
- Pirate uniform design has remained remarkably consistent over the years, and though it has been freshened from time to time, they have stayed with basically the same colors and look for many decades.
- Details change over the years mostly involving tweaking of the lettering script and trying different Pirates sleeve patch designs.
- For 1970, their final wool flannels were identical vests with "PIRATES" arched across the front, white for home and gray for the road, and had been used since 1957.
- The Pirates are the first team in Major League Baseball to wear double knit uniforms. Concurrent with their move to brand new, then-ultra-modern Three Rivers Stadium in 1970, the Pirates began wearing these pullover style uniforms mid-season, alternating their use with their old flannel vest style uniforms.
- While they keep the lettering the same with the switch to double knits, the Pirates adapt the first no-button pullover in the majors; a sleeved crew-neck jersey with bold knit sleeve-end and neck trim. The yellow on the new jerseys is more mustard/gold-colored compared to the flannels' brighter yellow.
- Jersey numbers are always the same color scheme as the "Pirates" or "Pittsburgh" lettering on the front.
- Although not the inventors of the "Mix-and-Match" uniform concept of the double knit era (A's, Indians), the Pirates certainly take it to another level with their 1977 rollout of three bold, bright uniforms that allow interchange of three jerseys, three pants, and two caps, creating nine possible uniform combinations (12 if including caps, which were never matched to same-color solid jerseys).
- To add further flair, in 1977 the team changes their subdued mustard color to bright gold, and adopts full-time the pillbox cap style that was used by some NL teams occasionally during 1976 to celebrate the National League's 100th anniversary.
- From 1977–1979, the team liberally mixes and matches both at home and on the road, creating some dizzying, eye-catching combinations, especially when pairing solid tops or bottoms with wide pinstriped ones (from their so-nicknamed "Bumblebee" set). This fondly remembered, fun period culminates in a 1979 World Series title, the team's most recent.
- Names are added to team jerseys for the first time in 1979 and have continued to this day, minus the 1995 home jersey (which removes the player name as a humble response to the 1994 players' strike-canceled season).
- 1980 brings a more traditional white home uniform replacing the "Bumblebee" set, becoming the primary home uniform set through 1990. Given the short, three-year run for the Bumblebee jersey and its affiliation with the popular 1979 team, it is rare and remains highly sought after by collectors today.
- The conservative trend continues in 1985, as the colorful solid black and gold tops are replaced by a gray pullover jersey, which except for a wordmark change at the end of the run, lasts through 1990.
- Button-front jerseys return in 1991 for the first time in 21 years and look similar to the prior V-necks, just without collar trim, and 1997 adds pinstripes to the road gray and also introduces the first black alternate since 1984.
- Somewhat late to a trend that started in the early 1990s, vests become the team's primary home and road outfits 2001–2008, including a bold alternate red vest that is not popular and only lasts two years
- For 2013, a regular Sunday home alternate uniform fashioned after the nostalgic and groundbreaking 1970 knit uniform is added, and from 2016–2019 they replace it with a replica of the 1977–1984 gold one.
- In 2015, an alternate camouflage jerseys is added, retired after 2017 and replaced in 2018 by a version of their home jersey with olive green lettering.
- The 2020 season brings two new jerseys that offer a nod to the past, including changing the road gray jersey's front wordmark to a script "Pittsburgh" last seen in 2000, and a black alternate with the same script is also introduced.
- In 2022, the Pirates unveil their City Connect uniform: a bright yellow-gold jersey with large black "PGH" lettering in a bridge-like font, with matching black player names and numbers in a similarly stylized typeface. Hidden within the shoulder fabric is a patterned grid containing symbols of the city's identity—the 'Steelmark' astroid diamond, an inverted "Y" for the river confluence, and a check square symbolizing community. The printed twill pattern on the lettering references the city's bridges, while the sleeve carries a black disc patch with a stylized "P." It is paired with black or white pants.
- The Pirates' 1970–2025 uniform evolution reflects a balance of deep-rooted tradition and periodic experimentation, but always anchored in their iconic black and gold color scheme.

I am always looking for new information and better photographs. If you can share new information, or offer corrections to this material, please send a note to me, at gameworn guides@gmail.com . Please tell me which page you are referencing. All contributors will be recognized by name in a future edition.

© GameWornGuides.com

Year by Year Summary

1970 Transition Year

1970-1976

1977-1979

1977-1984

1980-1990

1977-1984

1985-1989

1990

Pirates Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1970	Home Flannel	Front Block 2 color	Block w Serifs 2 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Flannel	Front Block 2 color	Block w Serifs 2 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings/Spalding
	Home White *	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray *	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
1971	Home White	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
1972	Home White	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
1973	Home White	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	21 Clemente Memorial	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	21 Clemente Memorial	-	Rawlings
1974	Home White	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
1975	Home White	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	Varsity 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1976	Home White	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	NL Centennial	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block 2 color	Varsity 2 color	No	-	NL Centennial	-	Wilson
1977	Home Pinstripe	Descente Varsity 2 clr	Descente Varsity 2 clr	No	-	-	-	Descente
	Gold Alt	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
	Black Alt	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente Varsity 1 clr	No	-	-	-	Descente
1978	Home Pinstripe	Descente Varsity 2 clr	Block Variant 2 color	No	-	-	-	Descente
	Gold Alt	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Black Alt	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Block Variant 1 color	No	-	-	-	Descente
1979	Home Pinstripe	Descente Varsity 2 clr	Descente Varsity 2 clr	Descente var. 2 clr	No	-	-	Descente
	Gold Alt	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	1 clor Block Vert Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Black Alt	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente var. 1 clr	Yes	-	-	Descente
1980	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Gold Alt	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	1 clor Block Vert Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Black Alt	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente var. 1 clr	Yes	-	-	Descente
1981	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Gold Alt	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	1 clor Block Vert Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Black Alt	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente var. 1 clr	Yes	-	-	Descente
1982	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Gold Alt	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	1 clor Block Vert Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Black Alt	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente var. 1 clr	Yes	-	-	Descente
1983	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Gold Alt	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	1 clor Block Vert Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Black Alt	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente var. 1 clr	Yes	-	-	Descente
1984	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Gold Alt	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	1 clor Block Vert Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
	Black Alt	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente Varsity 1 clr	Descente var. 1 clr	Yes	-	-	Descente
1985	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block/ and Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1986	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block/ and Vertical Arch	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1987	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Pirates 100 Years	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Pirates 100 Years	-	Rawlings
1988	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	RSC Memorial	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	RSC Memorial	Rawlings
1989	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	-	Rawlings
1990	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	-	Rawlings

* Pirates started wearing the new-style double knit uniforms FIRST in the Major Leagues, midway through the 1970 season

© GameWornGuides.com

Pirates Game Jerseys

1991-1996

1991-1996

1997-2000

1997-2000

1997-2005

2001-2008

2001-2008

2005-2010

2007-2008

Style Continues Onward

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1991	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	"H" Memorial ^	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	"H" Memorial ^	Rawlings
1992	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	-	Russell/Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	-	Russell/Rawlings
1993	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	-	Russell/Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	-	Russell
1994	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	All Star Game	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	All Star Game	Rawlings
1995	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	9 1/2" Block 2 color	No	-	Pirates FANS		Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Pirates FANS		Rawlings
1996	Home White	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Front Block Var#2, 2 clr	Block 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirates Diamond	-	Rawlings
1997	Home White	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	Clemente 25th Anniv	Russell/Rawlings
	Road Gray PS	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	Jackie Robinson	Russell/Rawlings
	Black Alt	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Russell
1998	Home White	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Russell/Rawlings
	Road Gray PS	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Russell/Rawlings
	Black Alt	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Russell
1999	Home White	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray PS	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Russell/Rawlings
	Black Alt	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Russell
2000	Home White	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	Three Rivers Patch	Rawlings
	Road Gray PS	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head		Rawlings
	Black Alt	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	Three Rivers Patch	Rawlings
2001	Home White Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	Stargell Mem "Star"	Rawlings
	Road Gray Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	Stargell Mem "Star"	Rawlings
	Black Alt	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	Stargell Mem "Star"	Rawlings
2002	Home White Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Rawlings
	Alt Black	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Rawlings
2003	Home White Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Road Gray Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
2004	Home White Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Road Gray Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
2005	Home White Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Road Gray Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Home Alt PS Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Block Frnt Var #2, 2 color	Pirates Block Var. 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
2006	Home White Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	All Star Patch *	Majestic
	Road Gray vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	All Star Patch *	Majestic
	Home Alt PS Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	All Star Patch *	Majestic
2007	Home White vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Road Gray Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Home Alt PS vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Alt Red Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
2008	Home White Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	Pittsburgh 250	Majestic
	Road Gray Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head		Majestic
	Home Alt PS vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	Pittsburgh 250	Majestic
	Alt Red Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic

 Pirates wore the All-Star Game patch in 1994 instead of the MLB 125th Anniversary patch, as worn by all the other teams that year
 Willie Stargell died on opening day of the 2001 season. The Pirates wore a gold star patch on the left chest during the 2001 season +Note: Where I show two manufacturers in a given year for a single style, I have seen year tagged jerseys by each manufacturer. It is possible some may be salesman's samples, or jerseys from prior years reused.
* Pirates wore "BOB" patch on left chest final three weeks of the season in tribute to the city's deceased mayor. See patches page.
^ "H" Memorial worn after 9/14/91

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2025

2009-2019

2009-2025

2005-2010

2013-2015*

2015-2017

Pirates Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2009	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Home Alt PS Vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
2010	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	JLB Disc (from Sept 3 on)	Majestic
	Road Gray	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Home Alt PS vest	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
2011	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	Star/7 Memorial, Tanner	Majestic
	Road Gray	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	Star/7 Memorial, Tanner	Majestic
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	Star/7 Memorial, Tanner	Majestic
2012	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	Yes	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
2013	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Home Alt 1970 Retro*	Front Block 2 color	Special Tall Block 2 color	2 color Block	No	-	-	Majestic
2014	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	#4 Ralph Kiner patch	Majestic
	Road Gray	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	#4 Ralph Kiner patch	Majestic
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	#4 Ralph Kiner patch	Majestic
	Home Alt 1970 Retro*	Front Block 2 color	Special Tall Block 2 color	2 color Block	No	-	-	Majestic
2015	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Home Alt 1970 Retro	Front Block 2 color	Special Tall Block 2 color	2 color Block	No	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	USA Flag	Majestic
2016	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Home Alt 1979 Yellow	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	1 color Block	No	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	USA Flag	Majestic
2017	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Home Alt 1979 Yellow	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	1 color Block	No	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Camouflage	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	USA Flag	Majestic
2018	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Majestic
	Home Alt 1979 Yellow	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	1 color Block	No	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Memorial Day Style	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	Olive bar with stars	Majestic
2019	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	MLB 150th	Majestic
	Road Gray	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	MLB 150th	Majestic
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	MLB 150th	Majestic
	Home Alt 1979 Yellow	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 color	1 color Block	No	-	MLB 150th	Majestic
	Alt Memorial Day Style	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	MLB 150th/Olive bar with stars	Majestic
2020	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	Road Gray/Pittsburgh Script	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	Alt Road Black/Pittsburgh Script	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head (yellow bandanna)	-	Nike
	Alt Memorial Day Style	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	Olive bar with stars	Nike

Change to Flex Base

2016-2019

2018-2022

2020-2025

2020-2025

*As an aside, the Pirates 2013-2015 home alternate 1970s Retro jersey is depicted incorrectly in the official MLB Style Guide for all three of its years. There it is shown as a button front with Pirates-font numbers, like the regular home jersey. It is actually a pullover with slightly modified Block numbers.

© GameWornGuides.com

Pirates Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2021	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	Road Gray/Pittsburgh Script	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	Alt Road Black/Pittsburgh Script	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head (yellow bandanna)	-	Nike
	Alt Memorial Day Style	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	Olive bar with stars	Nike
2022	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	Road Gray/Pittsburgh Script	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	Alt Road Black/Pittsburgh Script	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head (yellow bandanna)	-	Nike
	Alt Memorial Day Style	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	Olive bar with stars	Nike
2023	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	Road Gray/Pittsburgh Script	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	Alt Road Black/Pittsburgh Script	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head	-	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 2 color	Custom 1 color	No	P disc	-	Nike
2024	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color (perf)	Pirates Font 2 color (perf)	Nike Block 2 color	No	Team Pirate Head‡	Sheetz Ad patch‡*	Nike
	Road Gray/Pittsburgh Script	Pirates Font 2 color (perf)	Pirates Font 2 color (perf)	Nike Block 2 color	No	Team Pirate Head‡	Sheetz Ad patch‡*	Nike
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color (perf)	Pirates Font 3 color (perf)	Nike Block 1 color	No	Team Pirate Head‡	Sheetz Ad patch‡*	Nike
	Alt Road Black/Pittsburgh Script	Pirates Font 3 color (perf)	Pirates Font 3 color (perf)	Nike Block 1 color	No	Team Pirate Head‡	Sheetz Ad patch‡*	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 2 color (perf)	2" Custom 1 color	No	P disc‡	Sheetz Ad patch‡*	Nike
2025	Home White	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head‡	Sheetz Ad patch‡	Nike
	Road Gray/Pittsburgh Script	Pirates Font 2 color	Pirates Font 2 color	2 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head‡	Sheetz Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Black	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head‡	Sheetz Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Road Black/Pittsburgh Script	Pirates Font 3 color	Pirates Font 3 color	1 color Block	No	Team Pirate Head‡	Sheetz Ad patch‡	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 2 color (perf)	2" Custom 1 color	No	P disc‡	Sheetz Ad patch‡	Nike

‡ patch sleeve varies based on handedness of player

* Starting June 21

© GameWornGuides.com

Home, Road and Alternate Jerseys

1970-Mid 1970 Home

The Pirates wore their flannel vests for the start of the 1970 season. They switched over to their radical new knit uniforms with pullover jerseys on the opening day of the new Three Rivers Stadium on July 16, 1970. Classic style that had been in use virtually unchanged since 1957. No player NOB, numbers in Block with Serifs style. Most surviving examples have been restored and re-numbered. The old flannels were used to the point of exhaustion in the minor leagues after their big league service had ended.

© GameWornGuides.com

1970-Mid 1970 Road

The Pirates wore their gray flannel road vests for the start of the 1970 season. The old flannels were replaced by new knit uniforms with pullover jerseys sometime in the middle of the 1970 season, probably soon after the home knits were introduced in mid-July. Classic style that had been in use unchanged since 1957. No player NOB, numbers in Block with Serifs style.

Most surviving examples have been restored and renumbered, even re-lettered. The majority of these that I have evaluated have been renumbered for minor league use. 1970 year-tagged sets made by both Rawlings and Spalding .

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid 1970-1976 Home

1971

1970-1971 Pirate knits used this old-style Rawlings tag, usually seen on flannel jerseys.

1976

1974

Bill Henderson Collection

The team used identically lettered home and road jerseys during this period, differentiated only by the color of the jersey fabric.

Pirates spelled out on front in black outlined with gold.

The Pirates are the first team to wear double knit jerseys, July 21, 1970. Identify these jerseys by the black/white/dark gold sleeve end trim and black/gold neck trim. Mustard colored yellow, crew neck, and slightly smaller lettering on the team wordmark distinguish this era's jerseys from the very similar jerseys of the late 1980s.

No names on the back. Block numbers are two-color, black and gold, and numbers are extra tall, 9 to 9 ½.".

1975

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid 1970-1976 Road

Rawlings 1970-1974

The road jersey is lettered identically to the home. The only difference is the color of the crew-neck jersey body. The gray jerseys are a very pale gray, washing and years of use causes most of them to be almost indistinguishable from the white ones, today. No names on back. Back numbers are a tall 9". Rawlings uses their "house font", athletic block on these. Stripes on the sleeves are black-white-gold. Flat tails are common, 1970–1973; rounded ones, 1974.

1970–1971

Gary Tkac collection

1970

1973

1973 jerseys have a small round 21 patch on the left sleeve to honor Roberto Clemente who died in December 1972. This is the first time in MLB a player is memorialized in any way other than a black armband.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid 1970-1976 Road, continued: Wilson 1975-1976

1975

Gary Tkac collection

1976

Wilson was awarded the contract to provide the Pirates with their road uniforms 1975-1976. A sign of the times, Wilson simply used their "house font", Varsity with its signature serifs on many of the digits, replacing Rawlings' Block font. While these received excessive use in the minor leagues after their MLB service was through, the black twill on many is notably faded, which is odd and suggests a substandard fabric may have been used, as tackle twill rarely fades like this.

1975

Above: This 1975 jersey is so well-worn that even the numbers are bleached out.

1976

© GameWornGuides.com

1977-1984 Mix & Match

Regarding 1977 Pirates use of Descente uniforms, in a September 15, 2010 interview with Paul Lukas of Uni Watch, pitcher Jerry Reuss recalled:

"…But there's some background here that nobody ever knew but that I remember. One thing I remember is that when we got the uniforms, they were Japanese-made, and a union that made uniforms sent a telegram to Willie Stargell asking him to encourage the players not to wear these, because they weren't made in America. But Willie said, "Look, I'm a baseball player. I'm not a union representative. So let's go play." So that was that."

In 1977, the Pirates dropped their conservative whites and grays, and came out with three colors of jerseys and pants. They mixed them up for many different combinations. They also chose Japanese sportswear maker Descente to make their black and "bumblebee-striped" uniforms.

The National League mandated player names on the back of all road uniforms in 1979. Since the Pirates wore all three of their different jerseys on the road, they put names on the back of them all.

For 1980, an all-white jersey and pants replaced the bumblebee-striped ones. We have searched photo archives and cannot be certain, but the white jersey and pants seem to be used exclusively together, and going forward, only the gold and black pants and shirts were mixed, creating only five possible mix-and-match combinations,1980–1984.

The Tuscaloosa News - Mar 16, 1977

Fashion imports, baseball style

The Pittsburgh Pirates baseball club will be wearing new uniforms this season. The Pirates have purchased three sets, two made in Japan, a first in baseball. Al Oliver (C) models the uniform made in the United States, while Bob Robertson (L) and Duffy Dyer wear the Japanese made uniforms. (AP wirephoto)

Right-Source: Baseball Hall of Fame's "Dressed to the Nines" website. Here, in 1977, six of the possible nine combinations are shown… all nine are shown on the next page.

1980

© GameWornGuides.com

1977-1984 Mix & Match, continued

There are nine possible 1977–1979 "mix & match" combinations, and all of them are shown here. In actual use, gold and black combinations seem most common; all black or any mixing involving pinstripes is less common. Also, same-color caps and jerseys are almost never paired together. Look here for much more obsessive details. Right: an unusual spring training-only 1985 "mix & match" example!

© GameWornGuides.com

1977 Pittsburgh Press's Look at the Pirates' New Uniforms

An interesting introduction of the Pirates new manager, and a look at their new non-traditional uniforms from the month that they debuted.

Reprinted from the Pittsburgh Press*, April 3, 1977*

A New-Fashioned Team

By Bob Smizik

Press Photos By Edwin Morgan

The baserunning skills of speedsters like outfielder Omar Moreno are crucial to the go-go philosophy of new Pirate manager Chuck Tanner.

The '77 Pirates Will Look And Play The Tanner Way

Hitters have always been a big part of the Pirate picture, and few have been as effective as Al Oliver.

© GameWornGuides.com

The team's new look is symbolized in three sets of uniforms. Tanner, left, wears last year' model, while the new ones are shown on Bob Robertson, Oliver and Duffy Dyer. Dis parities in players' numbers shown here are because permanent uniform assignments aren' made in spring training

Relief pitcher Rich Gossage is one of the players Tanner traded for in the off season, and should be a frequent occupant of the mound at Three Rivers Stadium.

IT IS A decidedly different baseball team that will be playing at Three Rivers Stadium this summer. Uniforms will be different, the players will be different, the manager will be different and so will the philosophy of the team.

The uniforms are a complete turnaround from the Pirates' traditional white. They have three new uniforms — trousers and shirts of which are interchangeable — giving the team nine different outfits.

New players are mainly pitchers, with relievers Grant Jackson, Rich Gossage and Terry Forster the most notable additions.

The Pirates also apparently filled the third-base gap left by the departure of Richie Hebner, when they pulled off an 11th-hour trade with the Oakland A's. Sent to Oakland were pitchers Dave Giusti, George "Doc" Medich, Rick Langford and Doug Bair; first baseman Mitchell Page; and outfielder Tony Armas. Acquired were Phil Garner, an All-Star second baseman who will convert to third; utility infielder Tommy Helms and pitcher Chris Batton.

Continued On Next Page

A New-Fashioned Team

Continued

Those additions reflect the manager. And the manager reflects the new philosophy. The manager is Charles William Tanner Jr., and he's so happy to be back in Western Pennsylvania, he has a hard time expressing it. That's strange. There are few subjects on which Chuck Tanner doesn't have a couple of thousand words.

Born in New Castle 47 years ago, Tanner brings an entire new philosophy to the Pirates. The Pirates used to sit back and wait for things to happen. This year they'll be going out and making things happen. Or at least trying to.

Tanner stresses running on every team he manages and the Pirates will be no different. But he stresses the running for more than the sake of running.

"I want the opposition to have in its mind what we might be doing," said Tanner. "I want that second baseman and the shortstop thinking about a guy on first trying to steal. I want that pitcher thinking about it. Maybe we can change a breaking ball pitcher into a fast ball pitcher. If that catcher thinks our runner might be going, he's not going to want to call for the curve. He's going to want that ball to get there a little sooner so he'll have a better chance."

The Pirates played Cincinnati on two consecutive days early in spring training. Tanner had the Pirates doing all kinds of things on the bases.

Tanner explained: "I did some things in the two days that we played them that I might never do against them during the regular season. But I want them thinking about it. I want them wondering, 'what's that guy going to do next.' "

Chuck Tanner has learned to live by his baseball wits. He never had that much talent as a player. Signed by the Milwaukee Braves right out of New Castle's Shenango High in 1946, Tanner began a journey through the minor leagues that didn't end until 1955. And it ended with a big noise.

On the opening day of the 1955 season, Tanner made his big league debut as a pinch hitter for Warren Spahn. Gerry Staley was on the mound for Cincinnati, and Tanner didn't waste any time. He homered on the first pitch.

"When I got back to the bench," said Tanner, "they told me it wasn't going to be that easy."

And it wasn't. His major league career was not a memorable one and by 1963, after establishing himself as a capable but hardly an outstanding player, Chuck Tanner was a manager.

The path out of the minors was no easier as a manager than as a player. He stopped off at Quad Cities, El Paso (twice), Seattle and Hawaii before getting the managerial job with the Chicago White Sox in 1971. The White Sox had won 56 games the previous year. Under Tanner they won 79 and finished third. The next season they won 87 and contended for the Western Division title before finishing second.

That's as close as Tanner came with the White Sox in six years. He finished second again with the Oakland A's last year.

And now he's back home. "It's always something you dream about," he said, "but you never expect it to happen."

Well, it has happened. Tanner's waited a long time for it. Maybe Pittsburgh will find it was worth the wait.•

Shortstop Frank Taveras executes a bunt in a practice game. Catcher Richard Baker is behind the plate.

Second baseman Rennie Stennett forces a runner and pivots to complete a double play. The '77 Pirates' philosophy stresses speed and defense.

"The uniforms are a complete turnaround from the Pirates' traditional white. They have three new uniforms – trousers and shirts of which are interchangeable – giving the team nine different outfits."

© GameWornGuides.com

1977-1979 “Bumblebee” Pinstripe

Bill Henderson Collection

Japanese manufacturer Descente made these jerseys and lettered them too. The names are in an odd, semi-block, semi-rounded font I have never seen elsewhere. The number type style looks like a narrow and bold variant of Varsity. They are Descente’s own lettering patterns.

Unique Descente font used for short names

Wild looking even in their day, and often referred to as the “Bumblebee" uniform. Certainly nontraditional and polarizing, and probably the reason for their relatively short life of three years. Numbers are two-color, black/yellow. Names appear in 1979, and are two-color like the numbers; these have smaller numbers placed lower than those from 1977–1978 without names. Surviving 1979 jerseys have mostly been stripped of their player names presumably for use in the minors. We have never found one with an original NOB. Due to their short run and association with the popular “We Are Family” World Series team, these jerseys are highly sought after by collectors.

© GameWornGuides.com

1977-1979 Black/1980-1984 Alternate Road Black (Mesh)

1980

1978

Japan's Descente made these jerseys, and lettered them too. The names are in an odd, semi-block, semi-rounded font. The number type style looks like a slightly narrow and bold variant of Varsity. These are both Descente's own lettering patterns. Most of the black jerseys are rendered in mesh, not solid fabric, to make them cooler to wear. Numbers are one color, yellow. No NOB 1977-1978. Names first appear in 1979. Names are one-color yellow only, on nameplates.

1982

(Right) Note huge, wide custom font for short 4-letter name

1981

1984

Bill Henderson Collection

1984

© GameWornGuides.com

More Pirates Name on Back Examples - Descente of Japan

It is not uncommon for teams to have two name on back fonts; a standard one and a condensed version for long names. But the Japanese take it a step further with four documented font widths, shown here as recreated by me from game jerseys and used by us in restorations.

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ.
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ.
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ.
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ.

© GameWornGuides.com

1977-1979 Black/1980-1984 Alternate Road Black (Knit)

1978

Kevin Korenski Collection

Chuck Tanner in Sport Magazine Oct. 1977

We have found multiple examples of solid-fabric black jersey in the 1977–1984 style. While black mesh was the standard in those years, these examples all appear to be original. The names and numbers are correct in the odd Descente-only type style and some show minor signs of a number change, though very little overall wear.

The photo above/right shows manager Chuck Tanner wearing a solid-fabric black Descente jersey in 1977. We have also found the #3 1981 jersey of Phil Garner on an auction site, and recently were alerted to a solid black knit Willie Stargell game worn jersey offered by another major auction house.

#10 Richie Hebner played for the Pirates 1968–1976, before the black jerseys were used, and then rejoined them in 1982 and 1983 at the tail end the mix-and-match era.

I asked pitcher Jerry Reuss, who played for the Pirates during this time, if he remembers being given a choice of either a mesh or solid fabric black jersey to wear, and he said that he was not asked, and simply wore what he was issued. My conclusion is, It appears that at least some of the black jerseys made in 1977–1984 randomly used solid, non-mesh fabric.

After being used frequently at home (and on the road) 1977–1979 as part of the “mix & match “ rotation, the black jersey became almost exclusively a road alternate in 1980, worn at home for only four games, all in September, and used only on the road 1981–1984.

1983

#10 jersey photos Courtesy Frank Fleizach

© GameWornGuides.com

1977-1979 Gold/1980-1984 Alternate Road Gold

1977

Kevin Korenski collection

1977

Guy Hankel collection

1978

Gold jerseys made in 1977 by Rawlings, 1978–1984 by Wilson. Note the application of the standard-style Block numbers, different from the pinstripe and black jerseys. It was apparently not important to the team to have a standard number or name font on all its many uniforms! Two-color numbers– black/white. Practically all of these jerseys are recycled to the minors and used heavily without nameplates and often changed numbers. Finding one with an original numbers and nameplate is very rare. After being used frequently at home (and on the road) 1977–1979 as part of the “mix & match “ rotation, the gold jersey became almost exclusively a road alternate in 1980, worn at home for only four games, all in September, and used only on the road 1981–1984.

© GameWornGuides.com

1977-1979 Gold/1980-1984 Alternate Road Gold, continued

1982

Gary Tkac Collection

1982

Gary Tkac Collection

1980

Gary Tkac Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1980-1990 Home

1981

Pullover white jersey replaces the "Bumblebee" striped jersey in 1980 and becomes the standard home jersey. In 1980 it is used as the home jersey for all but eight games near the end of the season, then exclusively worn as the home jersey 1981–1990.

These uniforms were shown no mercy, reused again and again in the minors. Nearly all surviving examples are heavily worn. Look at the ground-in dirt on the #14 example at right compare where the lower part of the shirt which was tucked in and stayed more nearly the original white. Two-color black/yellow Block numbers. Names on back are on a nameplate, though original nameplates are usually long gone, stripped off surviving examples before they were sent to the minor leagues. Team Pirate Head diamond-shaped patch added to left sleeve starting 1988.

Top right: Note the use of Extra Condensed name on back font for the long name.
Below: Extra Condendensed font is also used for "Parker" below, suggesting that the font style used was up to the whim of the stitcher.

© GameWornGuides.com

1980-1990 Home, continued

Bill Henderson Collection

Left sleeve patch 1987

Left sleeve patch 1988–1990

Even the sewn-on year and set tagging on this jersey is almost washed out from heavy use.

Extra condensed font used for longer names

© GameWornGuides.com

1985-1986 Road

1985

1985 officially marks the end of “Mix & Match” as the Pirates return to traditional road grays to accompany their home whites. Wilson is contracted to make the road grays, and while they use the same block numbers as the home Rawlings jerseys, Wilson interjects its own style by using their own vertical arched player names on nameplates to the backs. Examining period game photos, it appears that some 1985 news photos dated 1985 and 1986 seem to show both styles of NOB being worn, but news photo dating is often unreliable. It is just a guess, but perhaps Set 1 was vertical arched, and Set 2 was not? Because most surviving examples today are without nameplates or have had their plates restored. I do not have enough data points to be sure.

1986

© GameWornGuides.com

1987-1989 Road

Most of these jerseys were well used in the minors before being retired, however the “Fisher” mint condition example still sports its original player nameplate (sewn slightly off-center as well) and seems to have been spared minor league use.

© GameWornGuides.com

1990 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

For 1990, the Pirates changed their road jersey to a gray pullover with Pittsburgh written in black/yellow script across the front. This is the first time the city name is used on a Pirates jersey since back in 1953. Note that there is no dot over the “i” in Pittsburgh.

This pullover is a hard-to-find, one-year style. Note the wide, 3” sleeve end trim (compared to later years) and the Rawlings script embroidered into the trim. Tagging is sewn inside the front tail. Numbers and names stay the same as always. All block, two-color black/yellow, with names on nameplates.

© GameWornGuides.com

1991-1996 Home

1994

1995

1996

1995

Now a button front with black/yellow/black knit sleeve trim that is narrower than previous years. Pirate head diamond-shaped patch on left sleeve. Names on back continue except for 1995. All lettering is two-color black/yellow. Names go on nameplates.

1995: Names on back omitted for one year only, and numbers are made marginally larger. Pirate head patch on sleeve is replaced with "FANS" patch for this year only.

The 1995 "FANS" sleeve patch and the removal of player names was the Pirates' humble response to fans' anger over the disastrous 1994 players' strike that wiped out the end of the 1994 season and canceled the World Series for the first time in 90 years.

© GameWornGuides.com

1991-1996 Road

1991–1996 change to button front, solid gray fabric black/yellow/black knit sleeve trim. Notice that sleeve trim is narrower than 1990. Manufacturer logo is embroidered on the gray shirt above the sleeve trim. Pittsburgh scripted across front. Numbers on front and back – front numbers are Block font and almost 5" tall. Names on back use nameplates.

Team patch of Pirate in a gold diamond on left sleeve all years except 1995. 1995 has "FANS" patch instead.

© GameWornGuides.com

1997-2000 Home

Above: Here are two 1999 jerseys , showing that both Russell and Rawlings made sets for the team. Contractually, 1997-1999 only Russell could display their maker-logo on the sleeve, Rawlings sleeves were blank. However, in 2000 contracts changed; Rawlings became the only supplier, and they were allowed to display their sleeve logo that year.

In 1997, while the rest of baseball wore the Jackie Robinson Breaking Barriers patch, the Pirates only wore the Robinson patch on their road jerseys. On their home 1997 jerseys, they elected to wear a Roberto Clemente patch commemorating the 25th anniversary of the fallen player's untimely passing.

New bridged-arch style for Pirates wordmark (a nod to the city's nickname of "City of Bridges"). Note that the bottom is arched, but top of the lettering is flat.

Two sets of jerseys; On Rawlings-made, set/year team tagging is on the inside of the front tail; on Russell jerseys there is no team tagging.

Block names on nameplates, Pirates Block numbers, all two-color black/yellow. The Pirates use a slightly narrower version of the font used by other teams.

New cartoonish Pirate with crossed bats behind him is the new sleeve patch. White background used for home jerseys

© GameWornGuides.com

1997-2000 Road

Stephen Kraljic collection

Gray body with black pinstripes, button-front, Pittsburgh script in black over gold. Names go on nameplates, and are also two-color black/yellow. New cartoonish Pirate with crossed bats behind him is the left-sleeve patch. Gray background patch used for road jerseys. Both Russell and Rawlings make sets of jerseys 1997–1999. Note manufacturer tagging on Rawlings jerseys: sewn inside the jersey, no Russell team tagging is used. 1997–1999, only Russell could display their maker-logo on the sleeve, Rawlings sleeves were blank. However, in 2000 contracts changed; Rawlings became the only supplier, and they were allowed to display their sleeve logo that year. Notice that the pinstripes are not visible from the backside of the fabric.

© GameWornGuides.com

1997-2005 Alternate Black

2001

2000

1997

This jersey was introduced with the 1997 generation of Pirates jerseys, but it stayed in the uniform lineup even when the team style changed again in 2001. Worn at home and on the road.

Even after the rest of the team's jerseys are lettered with the new Pirates font starting in 2001, the black jersey still gets the older block lettering for numbers. Numbers and name two-color, yellow/red Cartoon pirate with crossed bats behind him is the sleeve patch. White background patch used for alternate jerseys.

1998

2000

© GameWornGuides.com

2001-2008 Home Vest

2002

2006

2001

2001

White vest with names and numbers black/yellow, with a custom Pirates-only number font. Names are Block style and on nameplates.

Near left: The round patch with the star on the front of the jersey is a 2001-only memorial for Willie Stargell, who died on Opening Day.

Cartoon Pirate remains on the left sleeve, now sewn to the undershirt for vests. Home jerseys use black undershirt, white background Pirate patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2001-2008 Road Vest

- Gray vest with names and numbers black/yellow, with Pirates-only number style. Names are Block style.
- Nameplates used
- Cartoon pirate remains on the left sleeve, now sewn to the undershirt for vests. Road jerseys use black undershirt, gray background Pirate patch

© GameWornGuides.com

2005-2010 Alternate Home Pinstripe Vest

- The Pirates add an alternate pinstriped vest uniform in 2005. Lettering is identical to home and road jerseys. Pirate patch is sewn to left undershirt sleeve.
- No nameplates are used.
- 2005–2010 made as a regular-knit fabric jersey, no Cool Base version of this style is worn by the team.
- The pinstriped vest was worn for Sunday home games.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2008 Alternate Home Red Vest

2007

- The Pirates introduce an alternate red vest for the 2007 season, intended to be worn only on Fridays at home. While red has been an accent color on Pirates jerseys and caps as far back as 1997, it has never taken center stage like this before.
- Like the team's other jerseys, numbers are used front and back, and player names are sewn on back. All team lettering; names and numbers are rendered in black outlined in yellow.
- Unveiled in February 2007, fan reaction was swift and severe. Few liked the garish uniform design, detractors saying it simply did not belong as a part of the Pirates' traditional image.
- The style lasts only two seasons and is retired after 2008.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2023 Home

The Pirates' uniform lineup is revamped again for 2009, but the changes to the home uniform are subtle. Home vest grows sleeves, and the pirate head patch previously sewn on the vest's undershirt sleeve returns to the left jersey sleeve.

Everything else remains the same as the prior year's vest: player names in two-color Block are sewn on nameplates, two-color numbers are in the Pirates unique font and are sewn on both back and left chest.

Nameplates used 2009–2012, direct-sewn names 2013–2023. Majestic makes this style from 2009–2019, Nike takes over in 2020.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2019 Road

2011

2013

New sleeved gray road jersey replaces the prior year's road vest, and the changes are simple. The pirate head patch previously sewn on the vest's undershirt sleeve returns to the left jersey sleeve.

Player names in two-color, two-color numbers are in the Pirates unique font and are sewn on both back and left chest.

Nameplates used 2009–2012, direct-sewn names 2013–2019. Majestic makes this style for its entire run.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2019 Alternate Black/2020-2023 Home Alternate Black

New-for-2009 black alternate jersey features three-color lettering in gold/black/white for numbers and large P on front. Thin double-stripe yellow knit trim on sleeve ends and on collar edge.

The jersey is worn liberally both at home and on the road 2009–2019, before being relegated to home alternate status only in 2020 with the introduction of a new black "Pittsburgh" script road alternate.

Names are one-color, gold. Nameplates used 2009–2012, direct-sewn names in 2013–2023. Note the very low placement of front numbers. White-bordered pirate head patch continues from prior years, sewn on left sleeve. These are only offered in Cool Base and Flex Base, never as knits.

Majestic makes these from 2009–2019, Nike takes over in 2020

© GameWornGuides.com

2013-2015 Alternate Home 1970s Retro

After using a visually identical jersey for a 1971 Turn Back the Clock game in 2011, the Pirates add this style for use as an alternate on home on Sundays, 2013–2015. The crew neck style is the one first worn in July 1970 and worn during the Pirates 1971 World Series run. Similar in many ways to the team's usual home jersey, it is different in that it is a pullover design, has wider sleeve stripes and uses mustard yellow ("Old Gold") throughout instead of the brighter gold used on the team's standard uniforms. Player names on back are used (not found on the original 1970s versions), two-color front numbers on the left side, and two-color back numbers that are a recreation of the font used by the Pirates in the early 1970s: a slightly taller and thinner variant of the Block font than used by most other teams. Fabric is Cool Base.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015-2017 Alternate Home Camouflage

2015 Cool Base

The Pirates announced an alternate USMC digital camouflage jersey for the 2015 season, planned to be worn for Thursday home games. These are different than the Memorial Day jersey the Pirates wore on Memorial Day 2012 and 2013, which used a different, non-digital camouflage pattern. USA flag is sewn to the right sleeve, Pirate head logo on the left.

The jersey converts to Flex Base for 2016, and it gains a solid tan tail and tan vented side inserts differentiating it from the one-year Cool Base 2015 version.

2016 Flex Base

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2019 Alternate Home 1979 Retro

In 2016, the Pirates replace one throwback with another, taking their white 1970–1976 throwback out of official rotation as an alternate, where it had been since 2013, and substituting a yellow throwback in its place. Based on their 1979–1984 gold jersey, the front wordmark on this version is smaller than the white throwback it replaces, with front and back numbers in black/white Block and a black Block name on back. A rare Flex Base pullover, this alternate is paired with black pants and a pillbox cap, making it a fairly faithful reproduction of the original, except for the names on back, which were then vertically arched on a nameplate. Here, they are radially arched and directly sewn on. These uniforms were exclusively worn for Sunday home games.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016: Flex Base Jersey Construction and Branding

In 2016, all teams adopt Majestic's new "Flex Base" on-field game jerseys, which are made of Cool Base fabric, but with several new elements designed to make them lighter and more breathable. The new jerseys have mesh side panels that run the length of the jersey, and one on the back tail called the "Air Belt." They also use "Kiss Cut" layering for front decorations, names, and numbers, which Majestic says is 10-20% lighter than traditional layered twill. Finally, the MLB logo on the back neck is now a rubberized patch, called CFX by Majestic, and the heat-pressed tag on the front tail differs from Cool Base jerseys of prior years.

Read the full story on MLB's adoption of Flex Base jerseys for 2016 in Chapter 2.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018-2022 Alternate Home Military Appreciation

After wearing camo jerseys to honor the military from 2015–2017, the Pirates retire that jersey in favor of adopting the league-wide Memorial Day style at home in 2018. This Majestic Flex Base jersey swaps out the usual black/yellow elements of the home jersey with olive green/black, except for the name on back, which is now solid black. The yellow/black/yellow sleeve and neck trim is reduced to black, while the left-sleeve pirate patch is rendered in black and green. The green bar patch with five stars, representing the five branches of the armed services, appears on the right sleeve. It is distinguishable from the Pirates' identical 2017–2018 home Memorial Day jersey only by the code on the interior tagging. The Memorial Day white jersey is coded with "PTUX" while the Military jersey has "PT8M." Majestic makes these from 2018–2019, Nike takes over in 2020 and changes the style code to "PT3M." The jersey is discontinued after the 2022 season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Road

The Pirates make changes to two of their jerseys in 2020, rather than taking on a full redesign. Their road gray jersey, which has been unchanged since 2008, gets a minor modification that has a major impact, with the front team lettering reverting back to script, as it had appeared from 1990–2000. Otherwise, all of the details on this Nike version of the Majestic Flex Base jersey remain the same, including yellow/black/yellow braid on sleeve ends and neck opening, and all lettering in black/yellow. The pirate head patch, with the red bandanna, still appears on the left sleeve. Of note, the script lettering does differ in one way from the old version – where the previous lettering split between the "s" and "b," this one breaks in the middle of the "s," a choice that might balance the logo more evenly on the shirt, but one that creates an unusual look when the placket comes open as seen to the right. There's still no dot over the "i" here either, which seems like a nod to tradition that could have been addressed.

Above: Splitting the "S" across the placket makes for an awkward look when it opens.

Right: A 1996 Pirates road jersey, a source for the 2020 refresh.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Alternate Road

The Pirates have had a black jersey for many years, long before it was trendy to do so, but 2020 marks the first appearance of script on this second black alternate the team now carries. Matching the wordmark on the new road jersey, “Pittsburgh” script now appears on front in black/yellow (with the same break across the “s”), while front and back numbers in the Pirates’ font are yellow/black/yellow, and the name on back is simply yellow. The team’s pirate head logo patch appears on the left sleeve, but this time, with a new, yellow bandanna instead of red. (He last wore a yellow bandanna in 1999 on the front of the Pirates jersey worn as part of the infamous Turn Ahead the Clock promotion.) For the 2023 season, the Pirate replaces his yellow bandanna with red again, falling in line with his brethren on the other jerseys. The look is completed with yellow/black/yellow braid on the sleeve ends and neck opening of Nike’s version of Majestic’s Flex Base jersey. As for what’s not completed, there’s still no dotted “i” in “Pittsburgh.”

2020-2022

2023

2023

© GameWornGuides.com

2023 City Connect

Pittsburgh is the only city in the United States where all of the pro teams share the came colors. So, when it came time for the Pirates to join the City Connect program, there was only one color scheme to use - black and gold. From afar, the yellow jerseys and black pants bring the "We are Family" 1970s Pirates powerhouse clubs to mind, but like a lot of other City Connect uniforms, there are many hidden details that tell a different story, even if they aren't particularly visible on-field. For one, the shoulder areas of the jersey contain a pattern with several distinctive shapes. According to the team, "The astroid, or the diamond shape inside of the squares, references the famous 'Steelmark' logo, the same icon that the Pittsburgh Steelers sampled and made their own. The check, which is the square icon that houses the astroid, plays off Pittsburgh's city seal and is meant to evoke the idea of community. The inverted "Y" represents the convergence of the Allegheny, Monongahela and Ohio Rivers." The front of the jersey is emblazoned with large "PGH" lettering in black, shaped appropriately like a bridge, with back player names and numbers in a similar font, all printed with a pattern that the team says "can be located on the sides of the Three Sisters Bridges—the spans over the Allegheny named for Roberto Clemente, Andy Warhol and Rachel Carson that connect downtown to the North Shore and PNC Park." All lettering is printed twill/black, though the outline can't be seen from a distance. Rounding out the jersey, the motto "We bleed black and gold" is heat pressed above the jock tag, while a comparatively simple disc patch with the Pirates' "P" logo adorns the sleeve.

Above left, the front lettering on the jersey with a pattern shown in detail above right. Below left, the "astroid, check, and Y" pattern of the jersey shoulders. Below right, the jock tag motto. Most of these embellishments are invisible from the stands and on TV.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Nike “Vapor Premiere Elite” Jersey Template

Nike Flex Base 2020-2023

Nike Vapor Premier Elite 2024

Following league-wide sweeping changes to MLB jerseys with all teams switching from Nike’s 2020-2023 continuation of the Majestic Flex Base jersey shell to its new Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) template, the jerseys of the 2024 season become an anomaly - a “one and done” season of changes that brought intense scrutiny from players and fans alike. Based on the negative feedback, especially from MLB players, Nike rolled back some but not all of the 2024 changes in time for the 2025 season.

The full rundown of the changes is outlined earlier in “The Basics” chapter, but generally speaking, 2024’s crop of jerseys had changed from earlier versions in several key ways.

- VPE home jerseys are off-white, or light cream color. The earlier Flex Base white jerseys are a bright, purer white. Grays are standardized.
- The front placket is narrower on VPE, which often causes team wordmark lettering that crosses the placket to break differently.
- Neck and sleeve trim elements (when used) are no longer sewn on top of the jersey material, but are now “sewn-in” to the jersey at the seams. Placket trim adornment remains the same, though the trim is now spaced closer together with the narrowing in placket size.
- For improved visibility, the MLB logo on the back of the jersey is moved several inches lower onto the back, down from the collar placket area where it had been since 2000.
- VPE loses the integrated mesh side and back tail panels that had been part of the Flex Base jersey template.
- Player names on VPE are much smaller, and for many teams are done in a standardized block font, all using a much steeper, nearly semi-circular arch.
- For teams with front numbers, the new 2024 font is simply always a reduced size of the back numbers. This was not the way it had been in the past for most teams, with front numbers being a font variant (smaller but usually wider and bolder) than the back font.
- Team logo sleeve patches, and in some cases sponsor sleeve patches change from traditional raised embroidery to flat printed plastic or to sublimated cloth/twill
- All lettering is done using a new more lightweight (thinner) kind of matte-finished twill (commonly called “Nike Twill”). Most, but not all jerseys incorporate barely visible micro-perforation on the numbers, front and back.
- Universally, nameplates are no longer used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Home

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Pirates classic home jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the "A" in "PIRATES" now splits across the placket. Neck and sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears slightly wider than before. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Road

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Pirates road jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the "S" in "Pittsburgh" now splits in a different place. Still no sign of a dot on the "i" though. Neck and sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears slightly wider than before. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate “P”

The switch to Nike’s Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Pirates longstanding home alternate jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. Neck and sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears slightly wider than before. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. As far as we can tell, this jersey was worn only once in 2024, for a home game against the Red Sox on April 21. As such, it never appeared with the ad patch applied, which was introduced in June. The road alternate was worn for every other instance of the team wearing black that season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate “Pittsburgh”

The switch to Nike’s Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Pirates road alternate jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the “S” in “Pittsburgh” now splits in a different place. Still no sign of a dot on the “i” though. Neck and sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears slightly wider than before. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. After being worn only on the road 2020-2023, this style jersey is worn both at home and on the road in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024-2025 City Connect

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Pirates' City Connect jersey that was introduced just one season prior. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket, but the front lettering still splits the "G" in roughly the same place. The neck and sleeve-end trim is sewn in to the sleeves rather than on to them, which is wider than before. The Pirates use perforated numbers on this jersey. The 2023 version had a black printed twill layer with a black border, almost impossible to see, on all lettering. The "PGH" lettering remains that way, but on the perforated back numbers, the pattern is gone and the black border remains. Starting June 21, an ad patch occupies the sleeve opposite the team disc. The specific sleeves for the patches vary based on the handedness of each player. Carryover City Connect jerseys are not updated in 2025, despite the updates to their other jerseys for the 2025 season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Home

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. The jersey has the new-for-2025 white Nike jock tag, which is used on a handful of jerseys around the league.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Road

The 2025 season brings many changes to road gray jerseys across MLB. The 2024 VPE gray jerseys suffered from significant sweat-staining issues during games, so 2025 gray jerseys revert back to the same base fabric used for Flex Base, but applied to the VPE template (no mesh side panels or “Air Belt” back panel). Other pre-2024 elements return, including neck and sleeve trim being sewn on to jerseys again rather than sewn in. Back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. VPE’s placket remains narrow, so the “Pittsburgh” script breaks in the same place as in 2024. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate “P”

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams’ non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. As of press time, the Pirates had not worn this style in the 2025 regular season, although it was worn frequently in 2025 Spring Training. Given that it was worn only once in the 2024 regular season, it is possible the team is phasing it out in favor of the “Pittsburgh” script black alternate. Nevertheless, it is still an official alternate in the MLB Style Guide for the 2025 season, so we catalog it here. Note that all game photos on this page are from Spring Training 2025.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate “Pittsburgh”

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams’ non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

Pirates Team Tagging

Top left: This old-style Rawlings tag is used by that company up until about 1971, and therefore is most always associated with flannel jerseys. However, since the Pirates are the first team to try double knits, this style tag is seen on jerseys used in 1970–1971, and since the Pirates regularly reused equipment from year to year, this particular tag comes from a jersey claimed to be last worn in 1973.

1977–1979 bumblebee-striped jerseys are made by Descente and most are tagged as below. We have seen a few with the flag tag style shown at left.

Above: 1971–1976 jerseys are made by Rawlings and Wilson, each manufacturer has its own tagging style.

Early mix-and-match white jerseys are made by Rawlings and are tagged like this either inside or outside the right front shirt tail

1977 yellow jerseys are made by Rawlings and tagged inside the bottom center of the front tail. In all other years, the yellow jerseys are made by Wilson and the tag is sewn on the outside of the front left tail.

1977–1984 black jerseys are made by Descente. The Japanese maker affixed its distinctive machine-embroidered tags to the outside front shirt tail.

© GameWornGuides.com

Pirates on-field jerseys were made by Rawlings in most years 1985–1999, though Russell made a few, and Wilson creating a set of road gray jerseys for 1985–1986. The team had multiple sets of jerseys each year for each style, and often the different sets were each made by different manufacturers. Manufacturer tagging styles were unique.

© GameWornGuides.com

2000–2002 the team went back to Rawlings to supply all its jerseys, then switched completely to Majestic for 2003–2019, before the whole league switched to Nike in 2020.

© GameWornGuides.com

Batting Practice and Spring Training Jerseys

Early 1980s Gold Batting Practice Zip-Neck

Bill Henderson Collection

This bright yellow pullover warm-up with elastic sleeves and waist and short zipper in the neck is likely the first batting practice style worn by the Pirates. I would date these from around 1982–1985. These are made by Roman Sport, a company that made similar jerseys for the Padres (and others).

Pirate head embroidered on a yellow backing, then sewn to the jersey front.

One-color black twill numbers and names.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid 1980s-Early 1990s Black Batting Practice Zip-Neck

Both Sand Knit and Roman Sport made these pullover, zip-neck warm-up jerseys with the "handsome pirate" logo on the left chest.

Top Left: The Sand-Knit manufacturer's tagging in the neck identifies it from the 1985–1986 period, though Milt May #14 was only on the 1983–1984 roster. Perhaps this was made for his use in the 1985 season; he retired just before that season began.

Bottom Left: Roman Sport of California made similar style batting practice jerseys for several teams during the mid-1980s, including the Pirates' yellow BP jersey shown on the prior page.

Bottom Right: Majestic tagging on this model suggests 1986–1992. This team issued jersey has no number on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid-Late 1980s Black Batting Practice

1986

Stephen Kraljic collection

The Pirates wore these BP jerseys with the "Handsome Pirate" on the left chest during the mid to late 1980s. Jerseys are pullover mesh shirts with thin double yellow lines in the trim of the collar and sleeves, like the Majestic example and on the baseball cards shown here. Note the use of bold yellow twill number in a two different variants of Varsity. Consistency, especially on pregame gear, was not so important in the 1980s. Pirate head is an embroidered patch sewn to the jersey front.

© GameWornGuides.com

1985-1996 Black Batting Practice

1994

1994

- Fully arched yellow PIRATES wordmark text on front.
- Pirates Diamond team patch used on left sleeve. On Majestic version, yellow tackle twill Majestic Varsity numbers on back. On Russell and Rawlings versions, standard Varsity font is used. No player names used.
- The Pirates wore commemorative patches on their batting practice jerseys. The 1994 model above sports an MLB 125th anniversary patch.
- There was likely some overlap of use with the black batting practice jersey on the prior page.

1986

© GameWornGuides.com

Late 1980s-Early 1990s Alternate Batting Practice Zip-Neck

Majestic supplied these zip-neck, short-waisted solid (non-mesh) batting practice jerseys to teams that wanted them. They were also marketed in a very limited way to fans. Called "The Gamewarmer," the jerseys were sometimes mesh and other times made of sheer, solid fabric, and featured striped neck and sleeve end trim, a sewn twill wordmark on front, and the opportunity for teams to sew player names and numbers on back. The Pirate-head diamond shaped patch is stitched to the right sleeve.

This jersey is autographed and dated "1988" by infielder Orestes Destrade.

© GameWornGuides.com

1990 Mesh Batting Practice

Gray Mesh pullover with black and yellow V-neck and sleeve end trim, "Pirates" arched on front like the team's home jersey. Note the use of two different fonts on these two examples, both purported to be team issued.

Whenever I can, I avoid using examples of star player jerseys (like Bonds #24, at left) in this book unless I have myself authenticated them, because of the large number of fakes in the hobby. This style is difficult to locate for photos, so I offer these examples for your consideration. I have determined the one at left is not game worn, and the back numbers may be inauthentic.

Below, white mesh version of the same jersey with similar Rawlings tail tagging (tag sewn on all four sides as typical with team issue) We have no photos of this in team-use., but given how few pre-game photos are available from this period it is possible this was also used.

© GameWornGuides.com

1991-1996 Road Batting Practice

Gray mesh fabric with Pittsburgh script on the front.

Numbers only on the back, two-color Block style, black/yellow. Very uncommon, these are the only examples I have come across.

© GameWornGuides.com

1997-2000 Batting Practice

Above: 1999 game worn example uses a name on back. Likely, names on back were used on regular season jerseys, while no-name jerseys originated in Spring Training.

- Pirates arched across the front with flat top, pullover design with two-button neck, black mesh fabric.
- Majestic Varsity one-color yellow numbers on the back; player names used sometimes, on nameplate
- Cartoon pirate head patch sewn to the left sleeve

© GameWornGuides.com

2001-2002 Batting Practice

Black, durable heavy mesh fabric, pullover with two-button neck. Pirates head logo with crossed bats on left front chest.

Names and numbers on the back, one-color, yellow. Numbers are Majestic Varsity.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003-2006 Batting Practice

Softer non-mesh black fabric, first generation tech fabric with yellow sleeve inserts. Two-button neck.

One-color block name, Varsity numbers, all yellow, on back. Extra condensed font used for longer names. Nameplates are used.

This fabric is very susceptible to pulls and runs. Team-used ones also often exhibit moderate fading. This first generation fabric was not very durable.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2010 Batting Practice

Along with the rest of Major League Baseball, the Pirates adopted new batting practice jerseys in 2007.

Jerseys are constructed of a very lightweight polyester fabric and have a one-button neck design New side panels are two-color: yellow and red.

Front logo is same as 2006's design, back lettering is one-color (yellow), numbers are in special Pirates font for the first time, the same as used on game uniforms.

All lettering and front design are heat-transferred appliqués, no longer embroidered patches or tackle twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2013 Batting Practice

The 2011–2013 Pirates batting practice jersey is a button-front design that has returned to yellow for the first time since the mid 1980s. The “P” on the chest is similar to the one from the current black alternate jersey.

Back name and Pirate-font numbers in black. White-background Pirates patch on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2016 Batting Practice

After three seasons in yellow warm-ups, the Pirates changed back to black Cool Base for 2014. Front wordmark and back numbers are a subtle black outlined with yellow. Player names are yellow block. All adornment is tackle twill. The front tag is a tall rectangle featuring the Pirates “P."
The Majestic sleeve logo is updated for 2014 as well.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's new for 2016 Spring Training Jerseys in Chapter 8.

2016 Spring Training

For the first time in 2016, MLB introduces a Spring Training-specific jersey intended to be worn for workouts and games in the pre-season. The jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features a special printed twill, decorated with "2016" and Spring Training symbols, as the main twill layer for every team.

The Pirates use their regular season black alternate as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The back numbers are yellow patterned twill/black/white. The name on back is yellow pattered twill. Front numbers are the standard yellow/black/white. The jersey also features a rubberized, CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading "2016" and "FL" representing where the Pirates spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Spring Training

Spring Training-only jerseys return for all teams in 2017 with some minor design modifications. Just as in 2016, the jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features special printed twill, this year decorated with “2017” and Spring Training symbols. However, all teams now use the same twill, in single-color white with gray printing, replacing the many team-specific combinations from the year before.

The Pirates again use their regular season black alternate as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill. Front numbers are the standard yellow/black/white, as is used in the regular season. The jersey features a recolored version of the rubberized CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading “2017” and “FL” representing where the Pirates spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2019 Batting Practice

With many players opting for lightweight cage jackets, which are devoid of player identification, instead of traditional BP jerseys with player names and numbers, Majestic introduces a replacement product that may be an attempt to gain acceptance by the pros on field while being more attractive to fans at retail. New for 2017, official team batting practice jerseys are replaced with what Majestic calls a 3/4 Sleeve BP Trainer. The new hybrid is cut in a pullover jacket silhouette, including a short zipper at the neck, but made of Cool Base jersey material. The underarm and back panels are of Cool Base mesh, like the sides and tail of Flex Base jerseys. Team logos and other lettering is in what Majestic calls “lightweight twill” (as described in Chapter 8). The Majestic logo is applied to the middle of the left sleeve, and a new, heat-pressed Cool Base tag adorns the left front tail. The Pirates jersey is black with yellow back and underarm. The "P" from their cap logo appears on the front left chest in black/yellow. The back of the jersey is blank. Player number in black/yellow in special Pirates font on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Spring Training

The 2018 Spring Training jerseys continue the general design of the previous year, again featuring all player name and number lettering using each team's regular fonts in only one layer of twill printed with special Spring Training and 2018-year-specific patterns. The Pirates use their regular-season black alternate as their base. The name and back numbers are sewn on in white patterned twill. Front numbers are the standard yellow/black/white, as is used in the regular season. A new CFX patch, shaped like home plate, is stitched to the right sleeve, featuring "2018" and "FL" representing their Spring Training home.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Spring Training

The 2019 Spring Training jersey template evolves to create yet another iteration of the theme of the last three years. This time, jersey backs abandon the single-color printed twill treatment of the past and return to regular season multi-layered team-color twill like 2016, yet without 2016's printed patterns. The Pirates use their regular-season black alternate as the base for this design, carrying a new CFX patch on the right sleeve, featuring "2019" and "FLA," referencing their Spring Training home. Front and back numbers are yellow/black/white, and the name on back is yellow.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Spring Training

Spring Training's jerseys are simplified for 2020, league-wide. For the first time since 2016, Spring Training jerseys eliminate the special sleeve patch indicating the year and location of a team's Spring Training home, and the lettering is the same non-patterned, multi-layered twill as the teams wear in the regular season, making many teams' spring jerseys identical to their regular season alternates. For 2020, the Pirates use their regular season home black alternate with the P on front left chest, with yellow/black/white back and front numbers. The name on back is yellow.

© GameWornGuides.com

Special Events Jerseys

1992 Turn Back the Clock to 1939

Original 1939

Left: Original Pirates 1939 uniform confirms that the front lettering of the TBTC copy is pretty accurate.

TBTC uniform from one of the first TBTC games in on May 31, 1992, duplicating the 1939 Pirates' uniform in double knit by Rawlings. All lettering is two color layered felt. The Pirates played the "1939" Giants that day.

© GameWornGuides.com

1993 Turn Back the Clock to 1925

July 11, 1993: The Pirates appeared as the 1925 Pirates, wearing Mitchell & Ness cream-colored poly-knit uniforms, vs. the Reds in Pittsburgh

The Pirates did not wear numbers in 1925. These throwbacks use Cubs-style numbers.

© GameWornGuides.com

1993 Turn Back the Clock to 1933

Stephen Kraljic collection

August 1, 1993: Mitchell & Ness recreated the uniforms of the 1933 Pirates for a Turn Back the Clock game. Game is played against the 1933-attired Phillies in Philadelphia.

The uniform is gray double knit and the lettering and numbers are felt. Red Sox/McAuliffe-style numbers are used on back only, and are what the Pirates actually wore in 1933.

Below: Note gusseted underarm vents, as were used on wool jerseys of the era. We have never seen this detail added to a knit reproduction as seen on this one.

© GameWornGuides.com

1997 Negro Leagues Tribute (Homestead Grays)

—AP Photo

Pittsburgh's Mark Smith is congratulated by teammate Dale Sveum after Smith hit a home run in the 10th inning.

July 4, 1997: the Pirates played the Cardinals in St. Louis in a Negro Leagues tribute game. The Pirates wore the road uniforms of the Homestead Grays, the Cardinals wore the home uniforms of the St. Louis Stars

The Rawlings jerseys made for the Pirates had a front wordmark that is much smaller than the Grays' original one. But especially noticeable is the modern inclusion of player names on back (which both teams used). This game is the only example that I can recall in the dozens of Negro Leagues games played where player NOBs are used on a throwback jersey.

The image at far right is of Josh Gibson, the Grays' biggest star.

© GameWornGuides.com

1999 Turn Back the Clock to 1979

Stephen Kraljic collection

Bill Henderson Collection

Original jersey for comparison

May 29, 1999: For the 20th anniversary of the 1979 World Series victory, "mix-and-match" era, gold jerseys are worn, this time with black pants. These knit uniforms are made by Mitchell & Ness. The visiting Astros wore their regular road uniforms.

Fairly accurate in execution. A little too baggy, sleeve end trim a tiny bit too wide, numbers on front a little bit too bold, and NOB not in vertical arch.

© GameWornGuides.com

1999 Turn Ahead the Clock

The pirate head on the jersey front is sublimated directly into the fabric. It has no texture at all.

The Pirates wore these twice: July 27 vs. the NY Mets in New York and August 20 against the Diamondbacks at home. Notice the interesting vertical layout of the back numbers. Back lettering is yellow twill outlined with black. Very few of these were ever made for retail sale; they are as rare as the proverbial “hen’s teeth.”

© GameWornGuides.com

2000 Negro Leagues Tribute (1945 Homestead Grays)

June 10, 2000: The Pirates visited Kansas City and participated in their Salute to the Negro Leagues. Our reference material says that this game pitted the home 1945 Kansas City Monarchs against the road 1945 Homestead Grays.

The uniforms of the Pirates are more 1935 than 1945. These are made by AIS, who made the uniforms for the home Royals, and as you can see on pages that follow, AIS made this style for the Pirates time and again for both home and road contests.

Photo below shows how the 1945 Grays actually appeared.

Negro Leagues Baseball Museum

© GameWornGuides.com

2000 Turn Back the Clock to 1960

Left: Bill Mazeroski's actual 1960 Pirates uniform.

Below: Mitchell & Ness 1960-model Pirates jersey from their catalog, but not game worn from this contest.

The Pirates take on the Padres for a Turn Back the Clock contest played July 29, 2000. Uniforms were sourced by the Pirates for both teams from Mitchell & Ness. The Pirates wore 1960 throwbacks, while the visiting Padres got tan-colored 1969 road uniforms. At right, the recap from the next day's San Diego Union-Tribune.

…(The Pirates) won the battle of the turn-back-the-clock uniforms. While the Padres wore their baggy 1969 grocery-sack brown outfits, the Pirates looked trim in the black and white, sleeveless attire worn by the 1960 World Series champions.

"Those guys had to wear UPS uniforms, and it carried over into the game," cracked Pirates star Brian Giles, who drilled two doubles and three singles.

The uniforms were as thick as burlap. Just the trick in muggy Pittsburgh.

© GameWornGuides.com

2001 Negro Leagues Tribute (Homestead Grays)

The Pirates played as the Homestead Grays of the Negro Leagues on July 14, 2001 vs. the visiting Kansas City Royals. Notice White Sox “Leisure Suit” number font used here, which my historian tells me is quite likely correct and what the Grays wore then. Whatever the case, it matches the front lettering nicely.

© GameWornGuides.com

2002 Negro Leagues Tribute (1935 Pittsburgh Crawfords)

- On June 29, 2002, the Pirates appeared in Detroit for the Tigers' annual Negro Leagues salute day, and dressed in gray as the 1935 Pittsburgh Crawfords, while the Tigers wore the uniforms of the 1930 Detroit Stars.
- These uniforms were made for the Pirates by AIS. Red twill graphics on front and Block Bold numbers are used on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003 Turn Back the Clock to 1979-1984

The Pirates wore their all-gold mix-and-match set on four occasions 2003: on April 4, 5, 6, 2003 for the final home opener at Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium (the Phillies wore Turn Back the Clock uniforms from 1971 in those games, representing the Vet's first year). The Pirates wore them a final time on July 9 at home against the visiting Brewers.

Majestic did a passable job of matching the 1979–1984 originals, though the names on back should have been vertical arched and they were not.

I will note the players in 1979 would never have worn their uniforms this baggy– though surely Majestic had no say in this matter!

In a non-uniform-related comment about the July 9 game, it will be best remembered for "Sausagegate" when Pirates player Randall Simon decided it might be funny to trip one of the racing sausages during the seventh-inning stretch. His antics netted him a $432 dis-orderly conduct fine and some unwanted publicity. Your author ashamedly admits to finding this all very funny, but then he enjoys the Three Stooges, too.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003 Turn Back the Clock to 1903 World Series

In an interleague game June 5, 2003, with the help of AIS, the Pirates and the Red Sox recreated the match-up of the first World Series in 1903, where Pittsburgh and Boston originally faced off.

I wonder how players felt playing in these long sleeved double knit suits? I am tempted to ask if it is any better or worse than playing with uniforms three sizes too big, as many do in the current era anyway.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Turn Back the Clock to 1969

Playing the Expos in Puerto Rico on July 9, 2004 (despite what it says on the tag!), the Pirates dressed in these replica 1969 vest uniforms rendered in double knit by Mitchell & Ness. The Expos wore 1971 style knits.

This style is nearly identical to the Pirates' then-current road uniforms, except that those say Pittsburgh on front. I wonder how many people even noticed that these were supposed to be old-time uniforms on that day?

Original 1969 flannel

Original 1966 flannel

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Turn Back the Clock to 1979 (Gold)

July 23 and 25, 2004 brings another revival of “mix-and-match” TBTC day, this time at home against the Reds attired in 1979-style duds.

These yellow jerseys are made by Majestic, and are worn on this occasion with black knit pants. Note tag hidden inside the front tail.

Identical to the Majestic jerseys worn in 2003, and the same comments apply regarding their accuracy.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Turn Back the Clock to 1979 (Pinstripe)

Original 1979 jersey

July 24, 2004: The Pirates wore Majestic replicas of their wild 1979 “We Are Family” Disco-Era Bumblebee striped uniforms, which are part of the “mix-and-match” uniform set used 1977–1984. They played the 1979-attired Cincinnati Reds. The Bumblebee stripes are too narrow and too close together, and the black in the stripes is not prominent enough. The sleeve trim is wrong and the front lettering is too small and proportioned wrong. No attempt was made to duplicate the funky 1970s Descente numbers, either.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005 Negro Leagues Tribute (1930s Pittsburgh Crawfords)

July 9, 2005 the Pirates donned the uniforms of the Pittsburgh Crawfords of the 1930s. Their opponents were the New York Mets, who dressed as the 1945 New York Cubans.

Uniforms are made in knit by AIS.

Right: Josh Gibson of the Crawfords in 1932.

© GameWornGuides.com

2006 Negro Leagues Tribute (1935 Homestead Grays, Road)

Visiting Cleveland on May 20, 2006, the Pirates appeared again as their frequent Turn Back the Clock alter egos, the 1935 Homestead Grays. The Indians wore the home uniforms of the 1946 Cleveland Buckeyes.

Most likely these uniforms are made by AIS, as the lettering on front is bolder than those made for the team by Ebbets Field Flannels two years later in 2008, and they look very similar to the ones made by AIS worn in Kansas City in 2000.

© GameWornGuides.com

2006 Negro Leagues Tribute (1935 Homestead Grays, Home)

- On August 12, 2006 the Pirates hosted the visiting St. Louis Cardinals in a Negro Leagues tribute game. The Pirates dressed as the 1935 Homestead Grays, the Cardinals as the 1928 St. Louis Stars.
- The action photo at top left is from the 2006 game, but the photo of the #39 jersey at right is a 2009 game used model. Based on the frequency that this style is made by AIS for the Pirates, there are likely no differences.

Though NOT from the 2006 contest, the 2009 jersey above is likely identical to the jerseys used in this contest.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Negro Leagues Tribute (Homestead Grays)

- The Bucs dressed as the Negro Leagues' Homestead Grays in a road game on May 3, 2008 vs. the Washington Nationals.
- The Nationals also dressed for this game as the Grays, wearing a white home uniform with red/navy lettering. The Grays split their home games between Washington and Pittsburgh back in the day.
- Number font is an uncatalogued (here) old-time cross between Varsity and Block. It may be the original and authentic style; it is not a contemporary font.
- Uniforms are made of knit by Ebbets Field Flannels.

The Pirates have played as the Homestead Grays several times in recent years, wearing similar but not identical uniforms to these. Notice that these uniforms are made by Ebbets Field Flannels, and the others have all been by AIS. Why would they not just stick with the vendor they are used to? The answer is that for almost all Turn Back the Clock games, the uniforms for the visitors are ordered and bought by the home team staging the game. And almost always, as these were, the uniforms are auctioned after the game by the home team as a fundraiser.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Negro Leagues Tribute (1930s Pittsburgh Crawfords)

- The Pirates again dressed like the 1930s Pittsburgh Crawfords of the Negro Leagues, June 28, 2008, at home vs. The Tampa Bay Rays.
- AIS again made the uniforms, doubtlessly using the same patterns they used in 2005.
- Numbers on back are a Varsity variant.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Negro Leagues Tribute (1938 Pittsburgh Crawfords)

July 5, 2008, Pirates visiting the Brewers. The uniforms appear identical to those road uniforms made by AIS and worn in 2002. Home versions of this same uniform were worn in 2005 and just a week prior in Tampa Bay.

Gray knit with red pinstripes and thick red sewn on knit trim on the placket and around the early-style stand-up sun collar. All sewn-on red twill lettering. Numbers on back are in a bold variant of Block, no player names used.

The Brewers wore the 1923 home uniforms of the Milwaukee Bears.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Turn Back the Clock to 1909

Stephen Kraljic collection

On June 14, 2009 in Pittsburgh, the Pirates played the Tigers in a rematch of the 1909 World Series between the two teams, and also celebrated the 100th anniversary of the opening of the Pirates' former Forbes Field ballpark.

The stark white Pirates uniforms looked like they were missing something… like perhaps a team name on the front! Knit copies of original flannel uniforms feature ¾ length sleeves and large floppy collars. Only uniform adornment is interlocking "PBC" on sleeve, surely stands for "Pittsburg Baseball Club." Numbers on back are a modern touch not found on 1909 originals, for certain.

The game featured an old-time environment: video scoreboards were turned off and the score was kept by hand; there was no music on the loudspeakers, and mascots (Jolly Roger and the Pirate Parrot) were banished from the park for the day.

Honus Wagner in 1909

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Negro Leagues Tribute (1935 Homestead Grays)

The Pirates wore the same Homestead Grays uniforms made by AIS as they had in contests of 2000 and 2006. Games were held on two consecutive nights, June 26th and 27 th against the Kansas City Royals who dressed as the Kansas City Monarchs.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Turn Back the Clock to 1979 (Gold)

- The Pirates dressed in 1979 gold jerseys and black pants for this Turn Back the Clock contest against the 1979-attired Cincinnati Reds on August 21, 2009 at home.
- These jerseys are probably nearly identical to the ones Majestic made for the club in both 2003 and 2004, though we note that the jock tag in those two years as sewn inside the front tail, not on the outside like these are.
- Same comments about originality as before: fairly accurate, but number fonts are not the exact ones, NOB should be vertical arched and on nameplates. And the players in 1979 would never have worn their uniforms this baggy.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Turn Back the Clock to 1979 (Pinstripe)

For a second night in a row, the Pirates and the Cincinnati Reds recreated their 1979 National League Championship Series uniforms on August 22 as part of the Buccos' 30th anniversary celebration of their last World Series championship. While it is nice to see this wild style from the 70s for an evening, the pattern and width of the stripes is wrong. In the photo at left, notice how the original has nine stripes behind the wordmark. The replica has 14 stripes.

The loose and baggy way these uniforms were worn bear absolutely no resemblance to the players of 30 years ago.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Negro Leagues Tribute (1931 Pittsburgh Crawfords)

June 12, 2010: The Pirates again appeared as a favorite for Turn Back the Clock contests, the 1931 Pittsburgh Crawfords, this time at Detroit.

These uniforms are identical to those made by AIS and worn by the Pirates on several of their past Turn Back the Clock dates.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Turn Back the Clock to 1979

Turn Back the Clock game played on June 26, 2010 in Oakland. The Pirates wore their all-black uniforms from their 1979 championship year. The Athletics wore all-gold uniforms from 1974.

When I saw this game's highlights on TV– I had to smile. These Pirates uniforms are as close to perfect as is possible, because these use the correct Descente name and number fonts. Very good quality, accurate reproductions.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Hispanic Heritage

The Pirates were the guests in Milwaukee on July 10 for Hispanic Heritage night. The Brewers wore their "C*erveceros*" uniforms, and the Pirates played along by wearing jerseys with the word "Piratas" on it. I give extra credit for this effort, as I have to admit annoyance at those teams sewing a stupid "Los" in front of their wordmark in an effort to become Hispanic for the day. "Los Rangers" and "Los Mets"… really.

I went looking for photo evidence of this game and was surprisingly unable to find any! Perhaps the change to the Pirates jerseys was so subtle no one had noticed it or bothered to photograph it. But at right, you see two photos, where did they come from?

Funny that these photos of Ronny Cedeno were taken when the Pirates played the Marlins almost three months later, at the very end of the season. Cedeno was the only player on the field wearing the "Piratas" jersey. Somehow it had been given to him to wear, and nobody noticed until after the game was in progress. This was the only time during the road trip that he wore this jersey, so he must have had another one along on the trip. I love that kind of stuff.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Turn Back the Clock to the 1970s

On August 12, 2010, the Pirates and Padres treated us to the memory of how baseball looked in the late 1970s…sort of.. by both wearing their Turn Back the Clock uniforms from that era. While the Padres dressed in their brown tops with the yellow sleeves, the Bucs wore the Bumblebee-striped tops and black pants.

The Majestic jerseys the Pirates wore was a full-weight knit, not Cool Base. Majestic has made these for the Pirates before, and while the intent is there, they are simply not correct. Since clearly Majestic must have had this cloth custom-made for the Pirates (this isn't a pattern that is at the fabric store on a roll) I just wonder why they don't do it accurately. We have covered this before: see my write-ups on the similar 2004 and 2009 Turn Back the Clock uniforms. These feature an inaccurate number font and size on both front and back, and wrong name font too. This, sadly after they GOT IT RIGHT for the first time just six weeks prior in Oakland.

Interesting that these uniforms would have been ordered by the Pirates for their home game, while the more accurate ones at Oakland were (most likely) ordered for them by the A's.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Negro Leagues Tribute (1935 Pittsburgh Crawfords)

The Mets and Pirates honored the Negro Leagues by wearing the uniforms of the 1944 New York Cubans and the 1935 Pittsburgh Crawfords.

The game took place in Pittsburgh on August 21, and was shortened by rain.

AIS Manufacturer's tag is sewn inside back shirt tail on the 2010 version. It had been on the outer front shirt tail in all prior years.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Turn Back the Clock to 1971

- Celebrating the 40th anniversary of the 1971 World Series, the Orioles and the Pirates played in Turn Back the Clock uniforms on June 21, 2011 in Pittsburgh.
- 1971 featured the first double knit World Series, especially unusual because most teams would not adopt knits until 1972. But both the NL Champs and the AL Champion Orioles had been early adopters and had begun wearing knits in 1970 and 1971, respectively.
- The Majestic replicas are extremely faithful reproductions of the originals from 40 years prior, including the extra-large back numbers.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Negro Leagues Tribute (1935 Homestead Grays)

- On July 23, 2011, the Cardinals visited the Pirates for another Turn Back the Clock contest between the 1935 Homestead Grays and the 1931 St. Louis Stars.
- The Pirates' Grays uniforms were sewn by AIS, and were probably identical to the home Grays uniforms made by that company for 2000, 2006 and 2009.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 German Heritage

The Brewers have celebrated the Milwaukee region's German heritage before, but never have had a visitor join in the fun. The Pirates, following their "Piratas" Hispanic Heritage day appearance as visitors in Milwaukee in 2010 followed up with an 2011 encore as the German "Piraten" on Sunday, August 14, 2011. Impressive.

Aside from the fabric color and one-letter change in the front wordmark, these uniforms are identical to the Pirates usual road Cool Base uniforms.

We were watching, but Ronny Cedeno did not wear his German uniform shirt in any other cities in 2011.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Memorial Day/Armed Services Day

Billed as the Pirates' Memorial Day "Salute to the Troops," they wear camouflage Cool Base jerseys with black and yellow twill lettering on May 26 and 27. Cartoon Pirate patch in white border on the left sleeve, American Flag patch on the right sleeve.

MLB must have liked the idea, because all teams wore camo-themed uniforms for Memorial Day in both 2013 and 2014.

This same jersey style was worn on May 17 and 18, 2013 for Armed Services Day in Pittsburgh. Though they are a different set of actual jerseys worn a year later, the pattern appears to be identical to the ones worn for 2012 Memorial Day.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Negro Leagues Tribute (1935 Pittsburgh Crawfords)

On May 19, 2012 the Pirates visited Detroit and participated in the Tigers' annual Negro League tribute game. Gray pinstripe knit uniforms of the Pittsburgh Crawfords were ordered from AIS by the Tigers for the visiting Bucs, and the style of the uniform is unique to any the Pirates had worn in the past.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Negro Leagues Tribute (Homestead Grays)

The Pirates have maintained a tradition of having a home Negro Leagues Tribute day each year, and June 9, 2012 they dressed as the Grays in home uniforms made by AIS, likely using the same patterns as those made by AIS and worn by the Pirates in 2000, 2006, 2009 and 2011.

Though they have worn these exact uniforms before, in home contest on at least five other occasions, and also made by AIS, I am showing them again here because this particular set seems to have the manufacturer tagging on the inside back tail rather than on the outside front left shirt tail.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 Memorial Day

Read the full story on MLB's Memorial Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

Recall that on Memorial Day 2012 the Pirates wore jerseys made of camouflage fabric. On May 27, Memorial Day 2013, the Pirates joined all the other teams in a MLB-sponsored event by wearing uniforms with camouflage-styled lettering. All black in the uniform lettering, both wordmark and player number/NOB was replaced by desert camo twill.

The gray uniforms with camouflage twill outlined in yellow and made for practically invisible lettering for the Pirates, the worst of perhaps any team in baseball for this league-wide promotion, and a clear reminder of why camouflage is worn by servicemen: so they cannot be easily seen. Really.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 Negro Leagues Tribute (Homestead Grays)

The uniforms for the June 1, 2013 Negro League contest were made by AIS and visually identical to those worn at home in 2000, 2006, 2009, 2011 and 2012. The AIS tagging returns to the outside left front shirttail compared to those worn in the 2012 contest, where examples we have see have the tagging on the inside.

Player customization is limited to the number on back, in a special and ornate font, one-color navy blue twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Memorial Day/Military Appreciation Day

The Pirates wore these same uniforms twice in 2014: first on May 26 on the road in New York for Memorial Day, and then two weeks later at home in Pittsburgh for Military Appreciation Day on June 10. The choice of the black alternate uniform allowed the Pirates to wear the same uniform to be worn both at home and on the road. And there would be little argument that the camouflage twill is far easier to see and read on a background of black vs. other options.

All yellow twill on both front wordmark and player name and number lettering is changed to desert-camo twill. The effect is subtle, and charitably might even be called “hardly noticeable.”

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Turn Back the Clock to 1953

The Pirates were the guests on June 22, 2014 at Wrigley Field in Chicago as part of the Cubs' yearlong celebration of the 100th anniversary of Wrigley Field. On this day, both teams reprised uniforms of 1953. The Pirates uniforms were reproduced in gray knit by Majestic, and feature the word "Pittsburgh" in a grand arch across the front. Back player numbers are the only adornment, and they are rendered in a tall variant of block.

An actual 1953 jersey is pictured here for comparison. The front wordmark is excellent in its faithfulness to the original. The back numbers used on the reproduction are a different font that the original, which uses a custom form of Varsity vs. the stretched Block font used on the replica, likely the same font used on the back of the Pirates' white 1970s retro uniforms.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Negro Leagues Tribute (Pittsburgh Crawfords)

As they had in 2005, 2008 and 2010, the Pirates dressed as the Pittsburgh Crawfords in uniforms made of knit fabric by AIS. The uniforms for all these dates are identical-appearing. The only player adornments are the red numbers on back, sewn in Block Bold. Their opponent for this June 28 game were the New York Mets.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Memorial Day

Repeating the look worn on Military Appreciation Day and Memorial Day 2014, the Pirates use their black alternate jersey for Memorial Day, May 25, 2015. Once again, the top layer of all player names, numbers, and the team wordmark is desert camouflage, while the rest of the jersey remains the same as usual. There is a slight change here, in that the NOB is outlined in white, a detail that was not part of the 2014 version. In 2015, the MLB Silhouetted Batter neck tag is changed to dark green/khaki/white rather than its typical colors from 2014.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Independence Day

Read the full story on MLB's Independence Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

For Independence Day 2015, all 29 U.S.-based teams adopt patriotic "Stars and Stripes" uniforms for the first time. For this day, all uniforms are re-lettered in a combination of red, white, and blue, regardless of what the team's normal color palate might be. Jersey trim and patches remain the same as the team's regular jerseys, which causes a clash with the Pirates' black and yellow pre-existing trim. All teams sport a stars and stripes version of the MLB Silhouetted Batter logo on the back collar. The Pirates wear their home white jerseys with the red-background version of the starred twill, which features large white stars; all lettering outlined in blue, including their front logo as well as front and back numbers. Player names on back are in blue. An American flag patch is sewn on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Negro Leagues Tribute (1935 Pittsburgh Crawfords)

Stephen Kraljic collection

The Pirates once again pay tribute to the Negro League Pittsburgh Crawfords, this time in a road matchup against the Brewers, who wear the uniforms of the Negro League Milwaukee Bears.

This is the second time the Pirates have worn this style of Crawfords road jersey, circa 1935, the first being 2012 at Kansas City. The gray Majestic pinstriped knit jerseys sport simple block lettering in red on front and red block numbers on back, sans names. Double strands of red braid circle the sleeve ends and neck/placket.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 St. Patrick's Day

Stephen Kraljic collection

The Pirates go green for St. Patrick's Day 2016 in a Spring Training game held March 17. Based on their black alternate jersey, this Flex Base model is in solid green, with front logo and front and back numbers in white/gray Pirates font and player name in white Block. The layer of gray is thin and light enough that it disappears from a distance. The Pirates' left sleeve patch is reduced to shades of gray and white, while the right sleeve sports a white shamrock, a feature shared by many teams for the 2016 St. Patrick's Day promotion. White knit trim encircles both sleeves.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2017 Mother's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Mother's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

All teams wear special pink-trimmed uniforms Mother's Day, May 8, 2016 and May 13–14, 2017. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Mother's Days), while the Majestic sleeve logo is rendered in pink and the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark pink/light pink/white. The Pirates wear their road gray jerseys with the front logo lettering in pink with dark gray outlines. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while front and back numbers are pink/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of pink, gray, and white. All jersey trim, normally gold/black/gold, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Memorial Day

The 2016 Memorial Day jerseys are constructed in the Flex Base style for the first time, and the ChromaFlex MLB logo at back neck becomes black and dark gold for all teams. The new, league-wide template, with higher-visibility woodland camo lettering and black outlines, makes this set more legible than in prior years. The Pirates apply the camouflage trimmings to their road gray jerseys for the game on May 30. The front lettering and front and back numbers are rendered in woodland camo with a black outline, and player names appear in single-color black. Like other teams, their sleeve patches are reduced to shades of green, gray, and black, and trim elements are also simplified to single-color black from gold/black/gold.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Father's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Father's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

For the first time in 2016, all teams wear special light blue-trimmed uniforms Father's Day, Sunday, June 19. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized front tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Father's Days), while the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark royal blue/light blue/white. The Pirates wear their road gray jerseys with the front logo lettering in light blue with dark gray outlines. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while front and back numbers are light blue/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of light blue, gray, and white. All jersey trim, normally gold/black/gold, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Independence Day

MLB creates yet another new Independence Day jersey template for the 2016 iteration, now built on Majestic's new Flex Base jersey construction. Each Independence Day jersey has a ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB appliqué sewn on the back of the neck. The Pirates are on the road and wear their road jersey. All clubs have a choice of two styles of star-spangled lettering twill and the Pirates select the blue twill version with red outlines for their front lettering and for their front and back numbers, with a red player name on back. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. New for 2016, team sleeve patches are now embroidered in red, white, and blue, replacing team colors, and all jersey trim, normally gold/black/gold, becomes single-color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Turn Back the Clock to the 1990s

The Pirates throwback to the 1990s on July 30 against the Brewers, who are attired in their 1994–1996 home uniforms. Made by Majestic, the gray pinstriped knit jerseys are good recreations of the 1997–2000 road jerseys, with black/yellow lettering throughout and the names on back properly on nameplates. However, these use a standard version of the Block font for front and back numbers where the originals used a Pirates-specific version that was slightly narrower than most other teams.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Turn Back the Clock to 1971

Less than a year after decommissioning their white, early 1970s throwback as an alternate, the Pirates bring it back for Turn Back the Clock nights on September 3 and 7. This version is a Cool Base pullover despite bearing traditional knit-jersey tagging on front. Just like the discontinued alternate, it has two-color player names on back, two-color front numbers on the left side, and two-color back numbers that are a recreation of the font used by the Pirates in the early 1970s: a slightly taller and thinner variant of the Block font than used by most other teams. Though the 1971 jerseys also featured the same rounded, crew neck as this jersey, the originals did not have names on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2017 Negro Leagues Tributes (Homestead Grays)

Derek Damian Collection

On September 9, 2016 and June 16, 2017, the Pirates take the field honoring the Negro League's Homestead Grays for the eighth and ninth time in this particular home uniform. The 2016 version was the first one made by Majestic, with the majority of previous incarnations, including the most recent in 2012, made by AIS. Like its predecessors, player customization is limited to the number on back, in a special and ornate font, one-color navy blue twill. Majestic's front lettering appears smaller than the style used by AIS, but the Majestic sleeve and neck trim are the same size, whereas sleeve trim on recent AIS jerseys was wider than the neck trim.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Memorial Day

The next incarnation of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single-color black, while the back-of-collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Pirates apply this style to their home white jerseys as worn on May 27–29, 2017 and May 26–28, 2018. It is distinguishable from the Pirates' identical home Military Appreciation jersey only by the code on the interior tagging. The Memorial Day white jersey is coded with "PTUX" while the Military jersey has "PT8M."

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Father's Day

Light blue-trimmed Father's Day jerseys return on June 17–18, 2017. Once again, the Flex Base jerseys have the usual front left tail Majestic tagging and set tagging at the inside bottom of the placket. Returning as well is the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon glued on left chest, the light blue Majestic embroidered sleeve logo, and the dark royal blue/light blue/white back collar ChromaFlex MLB Silhouetted Batter patch. The Pirates wear home white with the front logo lettering in light blue/dark gray. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while front and back numbers are light blue/dark gray. All jersey trim, normally gold/black/gold, becomes dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of light blue, gray, and white.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Independence Day (Home)

The 2017 template for MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less-busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two different color options for the new twill – appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 1–2, 2017, the Pirates wear their home white jersey with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and front and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color blue. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue. All jersey trim is single-color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Independence Day (Road)

Because teams wore these Memorial Day jerseys for the entire weekend, some teams like the Pirates required both home and road versions because of their schedule. Like the home version of these jerseys, the 2017 road version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less-busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two different color options for the new twill – appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 3–4, 2017 and July 2–4, 2018, the Pirates wear their road gray jersey with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and front and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color blue. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue. All jersey trim is single-color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Players Weekend

To highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans, MLB introduces the colorful Players Weekend promotion. In addition to relaxed regulations on team-standard color and design of cleats, bats, and other equipment, MLB encourages players to wear nicknames on the backs of a new set of very colorful jerseys. Meant to evoke the look of youth league designs, the two-toned Cool Base pullovers feature bright and contrasting body and sleeve colors, and include a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people in their lives with handwritten black marker messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature a variant of the MLB logo showing the growth of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat-pressed Majestic manufacturer and set tags are applied on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. All numbers on back are in single color Varsity, and the player names in 2 ¾" single color Block Condensed, regardless of the team's usual font. On August 25–27, 2017, the Pirates wear jerseys with black bodies and yellow sleeves with white nicknames and yellow numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide yellow/white/yellow trim. The front features a straight-across version of their normally arched home lettering, here rendered in yellow/white kiss-cut lightweight twill.

This jersey was also worn on August 20, 2017 for the Little League Classic with this patch on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Negro Leagues Tribute (Pittsburgh Crawfords)

For the fifth time, on July 13, 2018, the Pirates dress in this version of the Negro League's Pittsburgh Crawfords uniforms, but for the first time, reproduced in full knit by Majestic after AIS produced previous versions. Though the overall look is very similar with a cream jersey base, many of the small details differ for 2018. The double sleeve knit trim and neck/placket knit trim are much thinner on this version, the script wordmark is less angled than before, and McAuliffe-style numbers on back replace what had been Block Bold. For the first time for this style, a maker's mark appears on the left sleeve under the "C" logo, which did not appear on the AIS sets, as they do not have a contract to place their logo on the on-field uniforms.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Players Weekend

Players Weekend returns for a second year; a promotion intended to highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans. Brightly-colored jerseys are worn on the field on August 24–26, 2018, and once again, the Cool Base pullover jerseys are based on youth league designs with a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people with handwritten messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature an adaptation of the MLB logo showing the evolution of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood.

Heat-pressed Majestic and team set tags appear on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. The Pirates wear jerseys with gray bodies and yellow sleeves with white nicknames and yellow numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide yellow/white/yellow trim. The front features a straight-across version of their normally arched home lettering, here rendered in yellow/white kiss-cut twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Negro Leagues Tribute (1938 Pittsburgh Crawfords)

Stephen Kraljic collection

The Pirates frequently honor the Crawfords, a Negro League team that called Pittsburgh home throughout the 1930s. In 2019, they participate in two separate Negro League tribute games against the Brewers with these jerseys, on June 1 in Pittsburgh and June 7 in Milwaukee. These Majestic Cool Base throwbacks are roughly based on the Crawfords' 1938 uniforms, with black/red/black braid around the neck and placket, as well as just above both sleeve ends, and black Block numbers on back. The front logo is the real standout on this set, featuring "Pittsburgh" in black script, underscored with a broad gray/black swash with "CRAWFORDS" in black sans-serif font embroidered on. The full effect is quite striking, especially with the red caps worn on defense.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1979

Forty years after their "We are Family" 1979 World Series victory, the Pirates throw back to the all-black version of the nine variations of their mix-and-match 1977–1984 sets on July 20. Like the 2010 throwbacks to this set, also made by Majestic, these full knit pullover V-necks are excellent reproductions, down to the Descente-styled name and number fonts. The look is a little less historical, though certainly more festive, with the inclusion of the 1979 World Series Celebration patch on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Little League Classic

The Little League Classic, an MLB game played in Williamsport, PA, home of the Little League World Series, was a major element of the Players Weekend promotion when it started in 2017. The game served as a preview, of sorts, of the colorful, Little League-inspired uniforms worn for the Major League promotion a week later. Then, August 18, 2019 brought a stark monochromatization (yes, I said it…) of the Players Weekend look, so to stick to its roots, the Little League Classic had to change….to stripes. Wide chest stripes with team nickname inside, that is. On August 18, the Pirates sport these white Majestic Cool Base pullovers for the Classic, with black/white "THE BURGH" emblazoned on front, centered in the two-tone yellow horizontal chest stripe. A yellow V-neck and sleeves complete the look, while back numbers appear in black/yellow in the Pirates usual font, and black player nicknames (a holdover from Players Weekend) surmount the back numbers. Also returning from previous Players Weekend games is the right-sleeve CFX patch, featuring an adaptation of the MLB logo showing the evolution of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood, with a space for the player to personalize with names of people instrumental in his life. A CFX Little League Classic logo patch appears on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Players Weekend

The third incarnation of Players Weekend turns the colorful jersey concept on its ear, reducing all teams to monochromatic designs in either black or white, with all team sleeve patches and trim removed, leaving a clean but stark template. Gone are the contrasting sleeves and special patches with messages of inspiration. MLB says that this new approach is to emphasize the colorful, personalized cleats, bats, and other gear the players choose for the promotion, which spans August 23–25, 2019. Jerseys are now button-front Flex Base, with appropriate Majestic manufacturer and set tagging. Back-of-collar CFX MLB logo is now silver and black. All teams also wear a memorial patch for Angels pitcher Tyler Skaggs, a white “45” in a black circle, on the left sleeve, though several Pirates players wore it on their left chest instead, and a few did not have it at all. Most teams removed this patch before auctioning off the jerseys. The Pirates wear a black version of their home jersey with the front lettering and back varsity numbers rendered in black/gray with gray nickname on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Roberto Clemente Tributes

September 9, 2020, September 15, 2021, 2022, and 2023: MLB declares its first official Roberto Clemente Day in 2020, and solidifies September 15 as its annual date in 2021. Whereas other teams have the option of wearing Clemente patches and/or having certain players wear "21" for the game, the Pirates have all their players wear the number of their legendary player from the start. In 2020, 2021,and 2023, they apply the number to their home whites. The team wears their black road alternates against the Mets in 2022, who return the favor by all wearing 21 as well.

Left: Note the label added to the tagging of this example so the clubhouse staff would know which locker to place this jersey in, because everyone was wearing 21.

© GameWornGuides.com

2021, 2023 Negro Leagues Tributes (Homestead Grays)

On August 27, 2021 and August 15, 2023 (game two of a doubleheader), the Pirates take the field honoring the Negro League's Homestead Grays for the 10th and 11th times in this particular home uniform. This version, in Cool Base fabric, was made by Nike, with previous incarnations made by Majestic and AIS. Like its predecessors, player customization is limited to the number on back, in a special and ornate font, one-color navy blue twill. Given that the Nike jerseys are manufactured in the former Majestic factory (that Nike bought out) these are essentially identical to the 2016 and 2017 versions of this jersey, save for the deletion of the Majestic logo on the sleeve and the addition of the Nike logo on the front, right chest.

© GameWornGuides.com

2022 Negro Leagues Tribute (Pittsburgh Crawfords)

For the sixth time, on September 9, 2022, the Pirates dress in this version of the Negro League Pittsburgh Crawfords uniforms, for the first time, reproduced by Nike after Majestic and AIS produced previous versions. Given that the Nike jerseys are manufactured in the former Majestic factory (that Nike bought out) these are essentially identical to the 2018 version of this jersey, save for the deletion of the Majestic logo on the sleeve and the addition of the Nike logo on the front, right chest.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Roberto Clemente Tribute

On September 15, 2024, Roberto Clemente Day throughout MLB, the Pirates honor their team legend by all wearing his number 21. This practice is not new, but with the switch to Nike Vapor Premier Elite that year, the jerseys are. The jersey itself if the team's standard home jersey, so all of the VPE updates apply, but the new, smaller back numbers look even smaller with no player name above. Front and back numbers are perforated on this jersey. The team's ad patch occupies the sleeve opposite the Pirate head patch. The specific sleeves for the patches vary based on the handedness of each player.

The Pirates don't usually wear the league-wide "21" patch on Clemente Day, as their jerseys already feature his number. But Pirates pitcher David Bednar was honored pregame as the team's Roberto Clemente Award nominee for his track record of community service, so he wore the award nominee version of the patch for the day.

© GameWornGuides.com

Prototypes and Oddballs

1970 Prototypes?

- Even among die-hard collectors, probably only one in 100 would spot the oddity with this jersey. Can you see it?
- The difference is the sleeve stripes. They are sewn on with the colors in the opposite order from what the Pirates wore on the field. Game worn Pirates jerseys have the stripes in black-white-gold, not the other way around.
- First, yes, it is a 1970–1971 period jersey, and is not a reproduction. The old-style Rawlings tag sewn in the shirt tail identifies it as pre-1972.
- I have seen this particular jersey bought and sold three times in two years on eBay… advertised as "Game Worn Al Oliver Pirates Jersey."
- Since our last edition, reader and collector Tony Cocchi has provided this photo (top right) which he suggests may have been part of a promotional shoot by Rawlings, taken of Roberto Clemente in Puerto Rico in the winter of 1970. Tony claims that he has seen one other such jersey with the sleeve stripes in reverse order.
- Since we have multiple images of this jersey configuration, I am concluding it is likely an earlier design, and that the stripes were switched before team release. Having the gold stripe nearest the end makes it stand out against a black undershirt. Note that the Baltimore Orioles also switched the order of their sleeve stripes in this same way between the 1971 postseason and the 1972 regular season (examples shown in the Orioles chapter).

As actually used, sleeve stripes on Al Oliver's baseball card, backwards stripes on sample jerseys above!

© GameWornGuides.com

1977 Prototype Black

Zoom in on the photo and you can read after his autograph: "7 for 7 9/16/75." On September 16, 1975, Rennie Stennett became the second player in Major League history to get 7 hits in a 9-inning game, going 7-for-7. Since this feat is his major claim to fame, he might add that notation on many of the autographs he signs, like Bobby Thomson adding "10/3/51" after his signature for the "Shot Heard 'Round the World" – and not the date he actually signed the autograph.

This particular jersey is made by Wilson, while all the other black jerseys are made by Descente. The name on back is two-color, vertical arch. No nameplate. The numbers on front and back are two-color block, yellow/white.

It is likely that this jersey is a prototype; a salesman's sample for the 1977 season. The team had probably asked different manufacturers to submit designs for the upcoming 1977 "mix-and-match" uniform redesign. While Wilson was selected to make the yellow jerseys in 1977, they were not awarded the black ones.

It is sort of a shame. These solid fabric jerseys with the two-color vertically arched lettering are nicer looking (to me) than the black Descente ones that were used by the team.

© GameWornGuides.com

1977 Prototype Black Mesh?

We don't know very much about this jersey at all, but will make some educated guesses. While we have no record of Goodman making jerseys for the Pirates, it does appear that the team was soliciting suggestions for its planned uniform modifications for the 1977 season. While the team eventually selected Japanese maker Descente to make its black game jerseys, note that they were concerned about how hot it would be for players to wear black jerseys and had suggested to makers that they wanted mesh jerseys. It is possible that this may be a Goodman submission.
It features the new-for-1977 taller wordmark, yet has the very wide knit sleeve trim in fashion at that time as well as using bright yellow instead of the 1976-and-prior mustard yellow.

Yet, this is just one possible explanation. It could have been made by Goodman for a local softball team in California and was never submitted to the Pirates at all. This is part of the fun of dealing with undocumented relics of 40 years ago.

© GameWornGuides.com

1970s Rescued Nameplates

A noted dealer had offered a large number of Pirates' team-removed nameplates for sale during 2012, and they appear periodically for sale in the years that followed. The Bucs regularly recycled uniforms into the minor leagues, so nameplates were stripped before the jerseys were shipped off to be reused.

I am showing these here to illustrate the variety of type fonts the team used in the 1970s. The pinstripe and black uniforms were made and lettered by Descente of Japan, white and yellow uniforms by Wilson. The Wilson yellow jerseys used vertical arch, the others did not.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mystery Auction Jersey

The auction listing for this jersey claims that it was acquired from the collection of Pirates Pitcher Jim Rooker. The white crew neck pullover with mustard/black knit trim is odd in a number of ways: It is styled and trimmed like Pirates jerseys made only through 1976, but carries a version of the Pirates front wordmark that was not used until 1980. The Wilson neck tag dates it as being from between 1976–1985. Rooker played for the Pirates 1973–1980. Wilson did not make Pirates home jerseys until 1980 and later, though they made the road grays from 1975 through past the end of Rooker's career in 1985.

But things don't add up… the Pirates stopped using both this color scheme and crew neck jerseys after 1976, yet the Wilson tagging was not used AFTER 1976, and the tall-style wordmark did not come into use until after 1976 as well. And if you look really closely, the wordmark is not exactly like any of the others used by Wilson on its own team-made jerseys, Descente, Russell or Rawlings (Rawlings is the closest - not used by the team until 1980, though!)

My best guess is that this is a prototype made by Wilson when the team was changing up all its uniform designs before the 1977 season. Or, it is a phantom, made by someone at home.

Bottom left: A Rawlings 1971 jersey with the usual style of wordmark seen on this style. Above: The Rawlings script used starting 1980 on home jerseys, and later adopted by Russell. It is not exactly like the Wilson jerseys. Note the shape of the top of the "T" for example. Right): The version of the Pirates script used by Wilson on its 1977–1984 yellow jerseys is still another variant of the wordmark!

© GameWornGuides.com

Various Prototypes at Auction

Long after the auction closed, we came across a 2009 listing from Leland's that included what it reported to be various Pirates prototypes and salesman's samples. The listing description read as follows: "Includes early Roberto Clemente sample, Rawlings size 42 label on the tail. Rawlings size 42 for #12 with 1986 year tag, and three different styles made by Descente with either #25 and #85. Total of five jerseys and five pair of pants."

The photo included here was the only one with the listing, and we can't see all of any of the jerseys, and no backs are visible, but we'll do our best to describe these items. Numbers have been added for reference and were not part of the listing.

1. Descente never made a gray jersey for the Pirates, but the listing notes that this is made by the company. It matches closely to the team's post-Descente 1985-1989 road jersey, for which Wilson was the on-field manufacturer. We can't see the front number, but the listing indicates that some of these were numbered with "85" - and if this is one, it is very possible this was a sample for the team's switch to this style.

2. On close inspection, this appears to be a mesh version of jersey #1. This one does appear to have "85" on front, so it was likely another Descente-made sample for the team's 1985 switch to this style. It may have been intended to be a BP jersey (the team did have a similar BP, made by Rawlings, in 1990), or it could have been a game jersey with a mesh body, which Descente had made in the past for the Pirates black jerseys.

3. The listing states that this one is an "early Roberto Clemente sample, Rawlings size 42 label on the tail." It is hard to know for sure without seeing the tag, but this may have been a sample for the team's initial foray into knits for 1970 - note the rounded crew neck used on the team's jerseys from 1970-1976, also made by Rawlings. The center placement of the front number is unusual, and was not adopted by the team. It is reminiscent of the Cubs' one-year-only road jerseys from 1972, but those were made by Wilson.

4. The listing suggests that this v-neck, pinstriped pullover was made by Descente. We can't see any tagging to be sure, but the number font used for the front "25" does not match those used by Descente for the Pirates from 1977-1984. It is possible this was another prototype for the 1985 uniform refresh, one that was cut for both style and manufacturer. The "25" is curious - José DeLeón wore the number for the team into 1986. Bobby Bonilla took it over that year. A long shot, 1985 was the 25th anniversary of the Pirates 1960 World Series championship, so that could be the reason, but it seems a stretch.

5. The listing says that this is a Rawlings jersey in size 42 with a 1986 year tag - the most helpful info it has provided yet! Perhaps the team was considering a switch to button-fronts as early as 1986, after changing to new pullovers in 1985? Button-front Rawlings road jerseys would eventually appear in 1991, but with the "Pittsburgh" script and no stripes. By the time the stripes arrived on the road jerseys in 1997, the script was still there, but Rawlings had given way to Russell as manufacturer.

If any collectors out there bought this lot and would be willing to share more info and better photos, please be in touch!

© GameWornGuides.com

1997 Prototype Road

Paul Lukas' Uni Watch blog posted these photos by Wayne A. Jones (@waj97 on Twitter) of an odd-ball Pirates road jersey he saw at a Pittsburgh-area Goodwill shop around 2015. Based on the tagging and design, it looks to be a prototype sample for the Pirates' 1997 uniform changes. Ultimately, the Pirates went for a pinstriped jersey with "Pittsburgh" script instead, but this design would have meshed well with the home jerseys from that generation, also shown here for comparison.

Of note, the unusual sleeve patch that features the team's cap logo "P" wrapped by a scroll featuring "Pittsburgh Pirates" text. It is a dead ringer for an alternate logo for the 1994 All-Star Game, held in Pittsburgh. The logo slick from the 1994 Style Guide is shown here as well. The back number is sewn odd-ly high, leaving scant room for a player name. Though undocumented, since 1979, the National League has asked that all teams wear a name on back of their road jerseys.

The 1994 MLB All-Star Game alternate logo (far left) is the likely inspiration for the sleeve patch (near left) on this 1997 prototype.

*The 1997 home jersey (near right) showing similar letter-ing to the prototype and the design ultimately chosen for the 1997 road jerseys (far right).

© GameWornGuides.com

2000-2001 Prototype Road

The Pirates were set to change things up again for the 2001 season, and Rawlings had been able to keep some of the Pirates business for the whole decade of the 1990s, preventing the Bucs from switching to Russell, the league's preferred provider. But starting again in 2000, Russell's exclusivity in displaying their brand logo on MLB jersey sleeves had ended, and if Rawlings could win the team's business, the right to display their sleeve logo came with it.

This is probably a prototype design exercise for a 2001 road jersey by Rawlings. It has the 2000 and later Silhouetted Batter patch on the back of the neck and 2000-2002 front tail tagging.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005 Prototype Alternate Gold

Zack Tanner Collection

In 2005, the Pirates introduced a vest version of their home jersey with pinstripes added. It was something of an amalgam of their flannel era vests and their experimentation with stripes from their late-1970s home and late-1990s road jerseys. As such, it was fairly restrained. Just two years later, they added a red vest out of nowhere.

In the middle of those polar opposite changes was this gold alternate jersey, which the team previewed for possible use in 2005. Shared by its owner with Uni-Watch via Twitter, this jersey has the sample-standard “PLAYER” and “5” on back..Sample strip tagging inside the placket also confirms its status as a prototype. The tag reads “PIR05-GoldJers-1,” for Pirates 2005 gold jersey (version) 1, giving us all the info we need to know.

The jersey’s gold base is devoid of all trim. All lettering, front and back, is black/white, while the team’s Pirate head patch is on the left sleeve. Player numbers are in the custom font introduced in 2001, and layer name is on a nameplate like the team’s other jerseys of the time.

This design was likely evaluated side-by-side with the striped vest that the team did introduce in 2005. It may have been considered too loud or garish for the time (funny, considering the team’s sartorial history), or since the team’s home and road jerseys were already vests, the striped vest may have fit with the set better.

© GameWornGuides.com

More Oddballs

Right: This jersey is a home vest style never actually used by the team. Notice the flat topped lettering used from 1997-2000. However, they are official Rawlings Authentic Collection tagged jerseys.

My opinion is that they were made in anticipation of the return to vest jerseys by the Pirates for the 2001 season, and might have been a design that had been approved for use by the team since retail sale copies were made. It is quite likely that this style was actually used by a Pirates' minor league affiliate on the field. Reader input welcome.

Right: This baseball card indicates that the unused MLB style above may have found a home in the Pirates' minor league system.

Left: Extra Advertising? This jersey has the Rawlings logo mistakenly embroidered on both sleeves.

Right: This Rawlings vest is a "Frankenstein" jersey that might have been a prototype, or just a mistake. The purple and teal tagging on the back collar identifies that it started life destined to become a 2001-2002 Arizona Diamondbacks road jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

...Yet More Oddballs

4/22/77 – We believe the only time that the "Mix and Match" Pirates wore pinstripes on the road

Top right: only example we have ever seen of a Majestic zip-neck "Gamewarmer" from the early 1990s. This one still wears its retail tagging. We don't believe that the team wore these, even though they were offered them as an official option by the manufacturer.

Left: These retail model Authentic 1990 jerseys oddly have a dotted "i" in Pittsburgh. We've looked but have never seen game worn ones one with a dotted i, or even one sewn with a space large enough to fit one.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Oopsies

Left: When relief pitcher Ryan Reid took the mound during an early season road game in Atlanta in 2012, his teammates noticed that his uniform was lacking any front numbers. They remedied the oversight with masking tape when he returned to the dugout.

Above: That number 2 on Brock Holt's shirt… it's on the wrong side of the jersey… but they knew that, right? The Pirates response in social media was:

September 3 2012

Pittsburgh Pirates@Pirates

In regards to Brock Holt's jersey today, it was a mistake made by a human being and will be corrected.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2015 Unworn St. Patrick's Day?

Despite the creation of this retail St. Patrick's Day jersey, it appears the Pirates never wore this style on the field. The jersey dates from 2014-2015, however, the Pirates' 2014 St. Pat's contest against the Yankees was rained out. On that day, they were to wear green caps, but they took BP in their standard black BP jerseys, so it is possible these were intended for that canceled game. In 2015, the Bucs again wore green caps for March 17, but wore their black BP jerseys for the game. Still, the sight of green, white, black, and yellow together leaves no reason for Irish eyes to be smiling. Perhaps it is for the best that they never saw the field.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Sample Alternate Home 1979 Retros

In 2016, the Pirates brought gold back in a big way, adopting a version of their 1979 gold pullover as an alternate, one that they kept in their rotation through 2019. Though they had made gold samples before (see earlier in this section) they were not adopted for use on-field. These samples show two different versions of a similar concept that was made official.

Both jerseys are typical in their tell-tale sample attributes, both are size 46, have “PLAYER” and “16” for name and number (where “16” means “2016”) and have heat-pressed sample tagging. Overall, both are similarly styled, with minor adjustments between the two.

The top jersey is a Flex Base pullover with black/white/black neck trim and black/white/gold sewn-in sleeve-end trim. Its sample tag reads “PIR-AJ-RETRO-D1-2-2016” for Pirates Alternate Jersey retro design 1, version 2, 2016.”

Photos: Gary Taylor

Photos: Gary Taylor

The bottom jersey is almost identical, except it is a Flex Base button-front with wide black/white/gold sewn-in sleeve trim. The sample tag reads “PIT-AJ-RET-D2-1-2016” for Pirates Alternate Jersey retro design 2, version 1, 2016. It also has a very early, pre-production version of the Flex Base tag with “Made in the USA” on it, which was not on the tag ultimately used. It suggests it was made before the jersey on top, though the design 1 designation on the top may refute that.

It is very hard to see on the jerseys, but both have the new-for-2016 Majestic mountain logo on the left sleeves, but it lacks the “Majestic” text below the logo that was used starting in 2016.Ultimately, the team chose the top version as the one they used starting for the 2016 season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2023 Pirate Patch Goes Missing

On the final game of the 2023 season (October 1), most of the Pirates took to the field without their pirate patches on their sleeves. Game photos and video show that the vast majority of players had blank-sleeved home jerseys for the day, though some coaches, bat boys, and even an occasional player (Miguel Andujar) had jerseys complete with the expected patch. That final homestand ended in "Fan Appreciation Weekend" at PNC Park, and Sunday's game included a "Shirt of Their Backs" promotion where "select winners [were] awarded jerseys off the players backs." It appears that the team may have made up a special set of jerseys for the promo, and intentionally (or neglectfully) left off the patch. So, there is at least one set of Pirates home jerseys out there without the patch that is authentic and game worn. As of press time, none of them have surfaced in the hobby to know if there are other special markings to indicate these were part of the fan promotion, and it is unclear if they were authenticated by MLB after the game. More info about this anomaly is welcome!

PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA - OCTOBER 1: Joshua Palacios (R) #54 of the Pittsburgh Pirates signs an autograph for a fan during a post-game fan appreciation event following the Pirates 3-0 win over the Miami Marlins at PNC Park on October 1, 2023 in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. (Photo by Justin Berl/Getty Images)

© GameWornGuides.com

2024: A Sleeve-Sick Pirate (Patch) Tale

Left: Notice the visible outline of the Pirate patch on the left sleeve of this jersey, shown below in greater detail.

Right: It is hard to see, but catcher Jason Delay has similar residue under the ad patch on his right sleeve. Meanwhile, left-handed pitcher Aroldis Chapman has the pirate patch on his right sleeve where the ad should be in this photo.

Below: Chapman with the Pirate patch on the wrong side on this road alternate jersey as well. Yet, several of his other jerseys had it on the correct sleeve.

Prior to the 2023 season, MLB teams were permitted to start selling ad space on their jerseys sleeves. Most teams decided that they could get more value from the deals if they were able to pitch a greater number of impressions to potential sponsors by putting the ad patch on the sleeve that got the most TV air time, which meant that the location of the patch would depend on if the player was left or right handed. As a result, if a team had an existing sleeve patch it planned to keep, starting in 2023, most teams preemptively applied the patch to the less-visible sleeve, keeping the prominent sleeve open in anticipation, leading to inconsistencies that were forgiven in pursuit of ad money. The Pirates, however, stuck to their guns and kept their Pirate head patch on its traditional left-sleeve home. With no ad deal for the team in 2023, that's where he stayed. With no ad deal to start 2024, he remained there. And when an ad deal was announced in mid-June, all hell broke loose for poor Mr. Pirate.

From June 21 through the end of the 2024 season, the Pirates seemed to embark on a quest to move the Pirate patch from the left sleeve to the right for most of their right-handed hitters and left-handed pitchers. Navigating this uncharted course entailed fighting a powerful undercurrent, leaving some evidence of the Pirate head's opposite-sleeve banishment it its wake. Many teams would probably just purchase new jerseys for these players and call it a day. But with all of the issues getting jerseys from Nike and Fanatics in 2024, the Pirates may have been left with no other choice. In fairness, the most visible evidence of the moved patches is on a few the team's road gray jerseys, so this may have been the only set to get the switch. As we are able to see more 2024 Pirates jerseys with the ad patch on the left sleeve in person, we may be able to make a better determination of exactly what happened and to how many jerseys.

Even more strange, Oneil Cruz' road jersey was completely devoid of the Pirate patch before (above left) and after (above right) the ad patch was introduced.

© GameWornGuides.com

Commemorative Patches

Pirates Patches

1973 Spring Training: When I began researching memorial patches for this book many years ago, I noticed photos of Pirates players wearing what looked like a floppy ribbon pinned to their sleeves in some photos from early 1973. It turned out these were from Spring Training 1973, and they were temporary memorial patches for Roberto Clemente who had tragically died over the winter.

For the 1973 regular season, the black-bordered “21” disk was the first time in Major league baseball that a memorial player number disk is worn in MLB.

Photo courtesy of Jerry Reuss

Above right: Collector Jonathan Longar shares his original Pirates 1973 Spring Training-used jersey with the memorial ribbon still attached.

1973, Regular season: the “21” in a disk memorializing Roberto Clemente is a first in Major League Baseball.

© GameWornGuides.com

1987

1988

July 21-24, 1989

Regarding the Hall of Fame patch shown in the photo below, Jim Gates, Librarian at the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown writes: "I passed this along to one of our curators who has been working the history of patches in Major League baseball and he reports that this particular item was created for the 50th HOF Anniversary. It was made available to Major League teams, but as far as we can tell, only the Pittsburgh Pirates actually wore them on their uniforms.

Why, we only have a guess at this time, but in 1989 Bill Guilfoile was our director of public relations and he came to Cooperstown from the Pirates organization. We surmise that he had sufficiently good relations with the team to convince them to wear the patch. We have no proof of this, but it seems to make sense."

1991, after September 14

1994

- 1987: Pirates 100th Anniversary patch is very understated and almost unnoticed, because in 1988 it remained as the team's regular sleeve patch, except minus the dates on either side of the pirate's head.
- 1988: RSC Memorial for Pittsburgh Mayor Richard S. Caliguiri who died in office in 1988. These letters are the heat-pressed type, not sewn on.
- 1989, July 21-24: The Pirates wear a Baseball Hall of Fame 50th Anniversary patch to commemorate the Hall's milestone, coinciding with Hall of Fame Induction Weekend. See comment from Hall of Fame librarian, Jim Gates, above.
- 1991, after September 14: "H" Memorial for equipment manager John "Hully" Hallahan.
- 1994: All Star Game, following which the players went on strike and the season was canceled.

© GameWornGuides.com

1995

1997

2000

Willie Stargell used to award teammates yellow stars to wear on their hats after they had done something extraordinary…

2001

...when he died, the team honored him by wearing stars on their uniform chests all year long

2006

- 1995: Pirate Fans Patch worn instead of the regular team left-sleeve patch as an olive branch offered to angry fans after the 1994-95 baseball players' strike.
- 1997: Home-jersey-only Clemente 25th Anniversary patch (Pirates wore the 1997 Jackie Robinson Patch on their road jerseys only, no special patch on the black alternate).
- 2000: Three Rivers Stadium "Three Golden Decades"
- 2001: Willie Stargell memorial star
- 2006: All-Star Game – worn on all uniforms all year long
- 2006, starting September 11: Following the untimely death of Pittsburgh Mayor Robert O'Connor, the Pirates wore black and yellow
- BOB patches on the left chest of both home and road jerseys for the final three weeks of the season. This is the second time the Pirates have worn a memorial commemorating the death of a sitting Pittsburgh mayor. The other was in 1988.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Spring Training only

2008 Regular Season

- 2008, Spring Training: Bradenton Florida 40 Years,
- 2008: Pittsburgh 250 patch worn on right chest of white vest and pinstripe vest uniforms only.
- 2010, starting September 3: The Pittsburgh Pirates honored former general manager Joe L. Brown following his death, with his initials in yellow on a black circle worn on the right sleeve.
- 2011: Chuck Tanner memorial “7” in a “Stargell Star” on the right sleeve
- 2014: #4 in a gold-trimmed black disk, a memorial for former star and Hall of Famer Ralph Kiner, worn on right sleeve of home, road, and black alternate.

2010 –September 3 to end of Season only

2011

2014

© GameWornGuides.com

- 2016, June 14: An actual ribbon (not a patch), safety-pinned to the road jersey for the victims of the Orlando nightclub shooting massacre.
- 2016, July 9: Pittsburgh Bicentennial patch
- 2019, April 20: Patch in honor of Pittsburgh first responders following the Tree of Life Synagogue shooting
- 2021, July 17: 50th anniversary of 1971 World Series champs
- 2023, May 2-4: Green Mental Health Awareness Month ribbon for games against the Rays, who wore this same ribbon for all of May 2022 and May 2-7, 2023 in recognition of Mental Health Awareness Month, following the suicide of Rays bullpen catcher Jean Ramirez.
- 2025, starting July 25: COBRA memorial patch for Dave Parker

April 20, 2019

July 17, 2021

© GameWornGuides.com

2024-2025 Pirates Advertising Patches

Note this jersey did not appear with the ad patch in 2024. This photo is from Spring Training 2025.

Home

Road,Alternate Home,Alternate Road, and City Connect

With the start of the 2023 season, teams were permitted to sell an advertising patch, up to four inches square, to appear on one of their jersey sleeves. The sleeve on which the patch appeared could change from player to player, and each team that sold a patch handled the placement differently.

The Pirates struck a sponsor patch deal with Sheetz, a convenience store chain. The patches first appeared on June 21, 2024. The patch is a representation of the company logo, a red, flat-ended oblong shape with the company name inside in white. The version used on the home jersey has a red border, the version for all other jerseys has a white border.

The placement of the patch varies depending on the handedness of each player. The team's normal logo patches remain on each jersey, on the opposite sleeve from the ad patch.

Unlike many clubs, the Pirates did not place their team sleeve patch on different sleeves depending on a player's handedness in 2023 prior to reaching an ad deal. That year, the Pirate head patch was on the left sleeve for all players. In early 2024, the Pirate patch remained on the left sleeve until the ad patch was introduced, after which it varied based on player handedness.

© GameWornGuides.com

Pirates Postseason Patches

2013 NL Wild Card
2013 NL Division Series
(right sleeve)

2014 NL Wild Card
(right sleeve above “4” patch)

2015 NL Wild Card
(right sleeve)

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Dave Cash 1970-1971 Pittsburgh Pirates Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: July 15, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0715J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: As received, Rawlings-made gray pullover jersey size 40 (marked and measured), first year double-knit style tailored with flat tails and side vents. The fabric used for this jersey is the early style polyester that has the softer and different colored texture on the inside surface, not generally seen after 1971. 1" Dark gold/black crew-neck knit trim, wide 3" black/white/dark gold sleeve end knit trim. "PIRATES" arched on front in the team's signature style, as received the number 37 on front and back all in black over dark gold. A light table evaluation shows that the second digit and the number has been replaced, the original second digit clearly having been a number zero. The leading "3" on both front and back is original. Pirates did not use player names on back in these years.

Rookie infielder Dave Cash appeared in 64 games with the Pirates in 1970 wearing both number 10 and number 30. In 1971 he played the full season wearing number 30. No other player wore number 30 in either of those two seasons. Cash wore size 40 jerseys during most of his career.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Red "Action Tailored" Rawlings tag sewn into the inside bottom front left tail, next to it the old-style flannel jersey style wash tag. Both of these tags are relics of the very end of the flannel era, and were also used on the very first Rawlings knits in 1970-1971. Both the Pirates and the Cardinals experimented then converted to Rawlings double knit jerseys starting in 1970. These Rawlings tags were not used after 1971. There is no further team or player tagging on this jersey. The stitching around the tags appears tight, so it is not likely that a year tag fell off, but it is of course possible. In my experience the early 1970 and 1971 knit jerseys were not consistently tagged with year/set designations.

Wear & Repairs: Overall this jersey is in surprisingly good condition, much better than most Pirates jerseys of this vintage that I have examined or restored. All of the lettering is still stitched tightly and is not unduly faded. The knit trim on the sleeve end and collar is not excessively worn or faded and just shows a few splatter stains of dirt on the white parts. Pirates jerseys typically were used so severely as to make surviving examples display poorly: this one is a near-gem. As was the practice in major-league baseball at the time, jerseys were regularly re-numbered for other players once their initial use was complete. The light table clearly shows that this jersey started as number 30.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Restoration Performed: Removing the replacement sevens from the back and the front, which showed inconsistent wear with the other lettering and were also slightly larger revealed the ghost of the original zeros that were underneath. Using my original Pirates patterns from 1970–1971 and then tuning the size of the replacement numbers to the ghosts, I cut new numbers from matching fabric then media blasted them aggressively and dyed them to try to make them approximate the use and wear of the well-worn originals.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good condition: the numbers have been restored to the original "30" by replacing only the second digit on each. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Dave Cash of the 1970-1971 Pittsburgh Pirates.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

Here, as received, renumbered by the team for use after its first life in MLB was through. Outlines of original "0" on both front and back were clearly visible

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Ed Ott 1975 Pittsburgh Pirates Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: July 15, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0715J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: As received, Wilson-made gray pullover double-knit jersey size 42 (marked and measured). 1" Dark gold/black crew-neck knit trim, wide 3" black/white/dark gold sleeve end knit trim. "PIRATES" arched on front in the team's signature style, as received the number 52 on front and back all in black over dark gold. A light table evaluation shows that the first digit of the numbers on back and front had been replaced with 5s. The "2" on both front and back is original. Pirates did not use player names on back in these years. Besides showing different wear characteristics, the non-original numbers "5" also were slightly larger than the 2's next to them. The fabric of the 5 on back had failed badly; torn and separated with supplemental stitching added to hold it on.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson manufacturer tag correct for use in 1975 is stitched onto the outer left tail at the bottom, and shows the size as 42. Stitched directly above it is a 3 inch strip of gray jersey fabric with the numbers 32 42 75 hand chain stitched onto it in the familiar handwriting of the Wilson factory stitcher (player 32, size 42, 1975). Tagging matches exemplars for 1975 Pirates road jerseys. Catcher Ed Ott (5' 10", 198 lbs) was the only player issued number 32 in 1975. Several exemplar jerseys in our photo library attributed to the player are also listed as size 42.

Wear & Repairs: Overall this jersey is in fair or slightly better condition, typical of Pirates jerseys of this vintage that I have examined or restored. While the front wordmark is still tightly stitched, the fabric is notably faded., The black is more a charcoal gray. The numbers on back show great wear and are very loosely attached with most of the thread having failed. The knit trim on the sleeve end and collar is not excessively worn or faded and is in generally good condition. Pirates jerseys typically were used so severely as to make surviving examples display poorly: this one is average compared to others I have seen of this vintage. As was the practice in major-league baseball at the time, jerseys were regularly re-numbered for other players once their initial use was complete. The light table clearly shows that this jersey started as number 32. Ground in dirt is notable on the sides under the sleeves.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Restoration Performed: Removing the replacement fives from the back and the front, which showed inconsistent wear with the other lettering and were also slightly revealed the ghost of the original threes that were underneath. Using my original pirates patterns from 1970 1971 and then tuning the size of the replacement numbers to the ghosts, I cut new numbers from matching fabric then aggressively media blasted them and dyed them to try to make them approximate the use and wear of the well-worn originals. I also re-stitched the perimeter of the back number two as it was practically falling off the jersey. I've also tightened up the stitching on the front Wilson tag as it had failed on two of the four sides and was partially detached. I did not remove the original stitching which remained on the shirt.

Here, as received, renumbered by the team for use after its first life in MLB was through. Outlines of original "3" on both front and back were clearly visible. Notice above how the replacement five on both front and back are larger than the two next to them.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in fair to good condition: the numbers have been restored to the original "32" by replacing only the first digit on each. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by catcher Ed Ott of the 1975 Pittsburgh Pirates.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Don Robinson Rookie 1978 "Bumblebee Striped" Game Worn Home Jersey

Examination Date: May 16, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0516J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: White with bold black/gold/black pinstripes, pullover size 46 Descente-made Pittsburgh Pirates home jersey, #43. 2 1/4" wide black/gold/black sewn in sleeve end knit trim. 1" wide similarly colored V-Neck trim. "Pirates" arched across the front in black over gold. Player number #43 on left front and on the back, no name on back. The jersey is tagged 1977 in the tail. 1977's #43 was pitching coach Don Sherry, and this jersey as surely issued to him. But it was reissued for use the next year, and can be conclusively photo-matched to use by Don Robinson in his rookie year of 1978. (Sherry switched to #51 for 1978).

In 1978, as a 21-year-old rookie, Robinson was 14–6 with a 3.47 ERA. His won-loss percentage was second to NL Cy Young Award winner Gaylord Perry. Robinson was named The Sporting News NL Rookie Pitcher of the Year and was third in overall NL Rookie of the Year. Robinson was regarded as one of the best-hitting pitchers during his time, winning three Silver Slugger Awards in 1982, 1989, and 1990. (Wikipedia)

The Pirates introduced a bold set of "mix and match" uniform tops and pants in 1977. Solid black, solid gold and bumblebee striped, the elements were meant to be swapped around allowing 9 different uniform combinations. The team took some heat for buying two of their three flashy colored uniform sets from Japanese maker Descente, and yet the bumblebee uniforms became synonymous with the 1979 World Champion "We Are Family" Pirates. This uniform style was retired after 1979, and though everyone remembers them well, they were used for only three seasons.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The jersey is properly tagged matching exemplars on the outside left front tail. There are two manufacturer tags side by side, one is a wash instructions tag. Pinch-sewn under the right side of the tag set is a small flag tab that reads "SET II 1977". Centered below is a 7/8" x 1 3/4" rectangle of white knit fabric, with the code 43 46 77 machine-embroidery onto it in a style matching exemplars (Player #43, size 46, 1977). This embroidery thread was once black but has been characteristically bleached to a pinkish-brown.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that all elements of this jersey are original and unaltered. It is in very good overall condition. It is a common characteristic of these Descente jerseys to experience premature thread failure on the player number lettering from repeated wash and wear, and for the gold number-outline fabric to lose some of its color, as well as the gold in the knit sleeve end and collar trim. These jerseys are not lettered with the tough tackle twill fabric that Wilson and Rawlings jerseys used, instead they have lettering cut from a non-twill, polyester double knit material similar in appearance to what we commonly call Dodger Twill. In wash use, fading and number detachment was common. This jersey experienced two years of use— 1977 by coach Sherry, and by pitcher Robinson in 1978. The wear characteristics clearly show a jersey that was washed a lot of times but was spared the abrasive daily-on field game-wear that would be expected from the same two-year use of a jersey by a position player.

Photo matching: While, based on the alignment of the pinstripes with the team crest and front numbers, this jersey appears to be the same one Robinson is wearing on his low-resolution profile photo the SABR (Society for American Baseball Research) site, a 100% conclusive match is gained from a watermarked high resolution image from the Topps baseball card files. All lettering matches this photo, and there is a conclusive match of the sewn alignment of pinstripes where the sleeves join the jersey body.

Restoration Performed: For the purposes of preservation, I have professionally touched up and renewed the yellow stitching holding the player numbers in place has been touched up, only in the spots it was missing. No existing and tight stitching was disturbed in this effort.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good to very good condition, with minor repairs made to the lettering stitching that had come completely loose in some spots. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Don Robinson of the 1978 Pittsburgh Pirates, and earlier by pitching coach Larry Sherry of the 1977 Pirates.

Above left: The cropped, high-resolution proof of Robinson in Spring training 1978 wearing this jersey, center, the jersey under evaluation for direct comparison of match. Note the tagging at the waist, pulling out of his pants. At right, Robinson pitching in 1978 wearing the same jersey based on stripe/sleeve.lettering alignment. Bottom right, Robinson's 1978 Topps baseball card.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Bill Robinson 1979 Pittsburgh Pirates "Bumblebee" Game Worn Jersey, World Series Champs Year

Examination Date: June 7, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0607J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: White with bold black/gold/black pinstripes, pullover size 44 (though it now measures closer to a size 40 due to characteristic wash shrinkage) Descente-made Pittsburgh Pirates home jersey. 2 1/4" wide black/gold/black sewn in sleeve end knit trim. 1" wide similarly colored V-Neck trim. "Pirates" arched across the front in black over gold. Player number #28 on left front and on the back. The bottom hem of the jersey tail is simply double needle serged, rather than hemmed with a cap stitch as is typical of the construction of period competitive Wilson and Rawlings knit jerseys. The jersey is tagged 1979 in the tail. Outfielder Bill Robinson wore #28 for the Pirates in 1979, and this jersey is tagged the correct size for him and all characteristics mentioned here match exemplars. In 1979 Robinson hit .264 in 148 games played for the Pirates, with 24 home runs.

The Pirates had introduced a bold set of "mix and match" uniform tops and pants in 1977. Solid black, solid gold and bumblebee striped, the elements were meant to be swapped around allowing nine different uniform combinations. The team took some heat for buying two of their three flashy colored uniform sets from Japanese maker Descente, and yet the bumblebee uniforms became synonymous with the 1979 World Champion "We Are Family" Pirates. Player names were added on back in 1979. This uniform style was retired after 1979, and though everyone remembers them well, they were used for only three seasons.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The jersey is properly tagged matching exemplars on the outside left front tail. The satin printed Descente manufacturer tag is present, faded and very puckered underneath from washing, To its right would normally be a wash instruction tag, it has been clipped off so only the top of it still remains, a common occurrence with these jerseys. Centered below is a 7/8" x 31 3/4" rectangle of white knit fabric, with the code 28 44 79 machine-embroidery onto it in black in a style matching exemplars (Player #28, size 44, 1979). The thread on these is often bleached but this one is still dark black.

Wear & Repairs/Restoration Performed: A light table evaluation shows that the name "B. Robinson" was removed from the back; its outlines and glue remnants remain behind. (Pitcher Don Robinson was also on the 1979 team, thus the addition of the first initial.) Overlaying the Descente player name font in its extra-condensed variant shows that it matches the ghosts exactly. All

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Document of Restoration

Pittsburgh Pirates #2 1980 Black Alternate Jersey

Examination Date: September 10, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0910J01

This is not an opinion of authentication; it is simply a documentation of a restoration performed.

Year tagged 1980 Pittsburgh Pirates black alternate jersey in size 38, tagged as set 2. The bottom of the tails has been roughly trimmed off and as received, the numbers and nameplate had been removed. Descente (Japan) manufacturer and team tagging is correct for team issue. Ghost of former nameplate(s) visible, ghosts of former numbers 6, 26 and 50/56 are visible.

Bernie Carbo wore #2 very briefly in 1980 with the Pirates, he was a late season acquisition, appeared in 6 games and retired at the end of the season. The size is reasonable to other jerseys he wore in his career. Pitcher Jim Bibby wore #26 in 1980-81, at 6' 5" and 235 he would not have worn this size. No roster player was issued #50 or 56 in 1980-81.

Restored using team patterns to match, covering the ghosts of the old numbers, and nameplate was a reasonable size for Carbo's name. Photos below show the jersey as completed, and some of the ghosted images visible the light table.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Al Oliver 1977 Pittsburgh Pirates Autographed Gold Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: May 18, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0518J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Gold body Rawlings pullover jersey, size 42 (tagged and measured). The jersey appears tailored to be tapered at the waist, although the tailoring is not tagged. Black/white/gold wide 2 1/4" stretchy sleeve end trim, 1" black/white/black V-neck trim. PIRATES arched on the front in the Rawlings variant of the Pirates wordmark, number 16 below on the left chest. #16 on back in the correct Pirates variant of the athletic block font, 8 1/2" tall. All lettering is layered twill black over white. Al Oliver's autograph is in bold black marker below the front number, though I have no professional opinion on its authenticity. Al Oliver wore size 42 jerseys through most of his career. There is no player name on back, 1977 was the final year that Pirates jerseys were without player names on back.

The Pirates introduced a bold set of "mix and match" uniform tops and pants in 1977. Solid black, solid gold and bumblebee striped, the elements were meant to be swapped around allowing 9 different uniform combinations. The gold jerseys were made exclusively by Rawlings.

Oliver was a MLB outfielder and first baseman from 1968 through 1985, most notably as a member of the Pittsburgh Pirates teams that won five National League Eastern Division titles in six years between 1970 and 1975 and, won the World Series in 1971. A seven-time All-Star, Oliver was the 1982 National League batting champion and RBI champion as a member of the Montreal Expos. He was also a three-time Silver Slugger Award winner. He played in 154 games for the 1977 Pirates, batting .308 with 19 home runs. He batted .323 in 1976, and proceeded to reel off nine straight .300+ seasons. (Baseball Almanac, Wikipedia)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings size 42 manufacturer's red tag correct for 1977 is stitched inside the left front tail. A white flag tab is sewn under the right border, on which is printed SET 1 1977. Matches exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: This jersey displays honest game use, with some stains. One notably across the top of the left sleeve which appears to be pine tar, and in the spot where a shouldered bat would rest. The jersey color remains bright and unfaded, and the stitching is dense and tight, but the lettering shows softening from washing, and the jersey body fabric is slightly puckered beneath the twill lettering from hot water washing. The Pirates were a frugal team that wasted nothing, yet this jersey seems to have been spared MLB overuse or having been sent to the minor leagues for reissue.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good condition. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Al Oliver of the 1977 Pittsburgh Pirates.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Grant Jackson Pittsburgh Pirates 1978 Black Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: June 11, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0611J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Black-body Descente-made pullover jersey, size 44 (tagged and measured). This jersey is made of solid knit black fabric, not mesh. While the original specification for Pirates black jerseys 1977-1984 were to be made of a heavy mesh fabric, related to the concern that they would be hot to wear in the summer sun, I have encountered a few examples that are made of solid black fabric as this one is. Black/white/gold wide 2 1/4" stretchy sleeve end trim, 1" black/white/black V-neck trim. PIRATES wordmark arched on the front, number 23 below on the left chest and on back in the correct unique Descente-Pirates variant of the athletic block font, 8 1/4" tall. Correct for 1977-1978 the black jerseys were without player names on back: these were added in 1979. All lettering on this particular jersey is gold double knit fabric, it is not the usual tackle twill as seen on baseball jerseys (including other Pirates Descente black jerseys I have evaluated). The cut lettering edge is bound with a very tight zig zag stitch to prevent fraying. The bottom hem of the jersey is finished with a simple single-needle serged edge, it is not a rolled and hemmed cap-stitch hem as is typical of Wilson or Rawlings professional knit jerseys, and matches exemplars. Grant Jackson wore #23 for the 1978 season. At 6' 0" and 180 lbs, a size 44 jersey is reasonable for the player, and matches other jerseys of the player that I have authenticated. Like nearly all teams at that time, the Pirates recycled team uniforms to the minor leagues as soon as the their MLB service was through. However, this one does not show excessive use, it is entirely possible that it avoided a minor league tour of duty, post-MLB.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The jersey is properly tagged on the outside left front tail, matching exemplars There are two manufacturer tags side by side, The white Descente tag is on the left, the right one is a wash instructions tag. Centered below is a 7/8" x 1 3/4" rectangle of black knit fabric, with the code 23 44 78 machine-embroidery onto it in a style matching exemplars (Player #23, size 44, 1978). The Descente tags faded notably in heavy use, and these are relatively unfaded.

Wear & Repairs: This jersey displays use, but is in better condition that most Pirates jerseys from this time period that I have evaluated. It is free of damage, shrinkage or staining, the elastic trim is still stretchy and bright, the stitched edges of the lettering are not frayed, overall puckering is minimal, The tagging shows very little fading, puckering or wear, an indication that this jersey was probably not recycled to the minor leagues.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good condition with no contrivances of any kind. It has team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Grant Jackson of the 1978 Pittsburgh Pirates.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Grant Jackson Pittsburgh Pirates 1977 Gold Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: June 10, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0610J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Gold body Rawlings pullover jersey, size 44 (tagged and measured). Black/white/gold wide 2" stretchy sleeve end trim, 1" black/white/black V-neck trim. PIRATES arched on the front, number 35 below on the left chest and on back in the correct Pirates variant of the athletic block font, 8 1/4" tall. Correct for 1977-1978 the gold jerseys were without player names on back: these were added in 1979. All lettering is layered twill black over white. Grant Jackson wore #35 for a part of the 1977 season and #23 for the rest of the season. At 6' 0" and 180 lbs, a size 44 jersey is reasonable for the player, and matches other jerseys of the player that I have authenticated. Like nearly all teams at that time, the Pirates recycled team uniforms to the minor leagues as soon as the their MLB service was through. This one was certainly redeployed and used in the minors. Because 1977 season jerseys were used in 1978 spring training, and might have been used as backup jerseys in the 1978 season, there is a possibility that this jersey was reissued to catcher Manny Sanguillen who was issued #35 for 1978, but this is not at all certain. Notably, 1978 issued Pirates gold jerseys were issued by Wilson, not Rawlings.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings size 44 manufacturer's red tag correct for 1977 is stitched inside the front right tail. Pinch-sewn under it right edge is a white flag tab that says SET 1 1977. There is no other team tagging, as is correct for 1977 Pirates gold jerseys matching exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: This jersey displays heavy use with significant damage on the left side below the numbers at the waist level, that has been treated to a very sloppy team repair; it appears that several horizontal slash-cuts were made through the fabric, then they were repaired by backing them with matching gold fabric, then repeated overstitching with a sewing machine and bright gold thread. The light table shows that all stitched lettering elements are original and without contrivance. Based on its rough condition, this jersey most certainly as used for multiple seasons in the minors. Lettering is puckered, the jersey color is notably faded, especially above the waist, with multiple snags and pulls, and the lettering stitching remains dense but shows characteristic signs of failing on the vertical strokes of the back numbers. The knit trim at the neck and sleeve ends shows fading of the black areas There are stains on the body, especially around the slash-repairs on the side. The Pirates were a team that wasted nothing, and this jersey shows the extent of the team's frugality.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in fair condition. The jersey has ample team repairs but no contrivances of any kind. It has team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Grant Jackson of the 1977 Pittsburgh Pirates.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion/Restoration

Chuck Tanner 1982 Pittsburgh Pirates Gold Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: April 22, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0422J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Gold body Rawlings pullover jersey, size 44 (tagged and measured). Black/white/gold wide 2" stretchy sleeve end trim, 1" black/white/black V-neck trim. PIRATES arched on the front, number 7 below on the left chest and on back in the correct Pirates variant of the athletic block font, 8 7/8" tall. All lettering is layered twill black over white. Exemplars show Tanner wore size 44 jerseys through most of his managing career. TANNER stitched in Wilson's vertical arch font 1977 on a gold plate that matches the jersey. As received, the jersey was without a nameplate, and the very clear stitching outline of the original plate remained. Like nearly all teams at that time, the Pirates recycled team uniforms to the minor leagues as soon as the their MLB service was through, and at the end of the season nameplates were routinely stripped from all jerseys to allow re-use. During the 2000s, a large trove of original Pirates nameplates surfaced in the hobby, and this appears to be one of these. It is a gold warp-knit fabric Tanner nameplate without a serged edge, and it matched the shape of the stitching outline nearly exactly. Using the light table, I repositioned it exactly and stitched it to the jersey using a tight zig-zag stitch as was originally done. It may or may not have been this jersey's original plate, but if not, it is a near perfect match.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson size 44 manufacturer's tag correct for 1982 is stitched inside the back of the collar. A 1"x3" piece of gold jersey fabric is zig zag stitched to the lower outside left tail with "7 82 1" hand chain stitched in the familiar hand of the Wilson factory stitcher. It matches exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: This jersey displays honest use for a season's worth of use by the team manager (considering the Pirates had three different jersey top styles and then at least two sets of each); the light table shows that all stitched elements are original and without contrivance. Based on its excellent condition, it is conceivable that this jersey avoided a second life in the minor leagues.The jersey color remains bright and unfaded, and the stitching is dense and tight, but the lettering shows softening from washing, and the jersey body fabric is surprisingly unpuckered beneath the twill lettering from hot water washing. There are some light stains on the body and the sleeve end trim. The Pirates were a frugal team that wasted nothing, yet this jersey seems to have been spared overuse.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good to excellent condition. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by manager Chuck Tanner of the 1982 Pittsburgh Pirates.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion/Restoration

Nelson Norman 1982 Pittsburgh Pirates Gold Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: April 22, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0422J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Gold body Rawlings pullover jersey, size 40 (tagged and measured). Black/white/gold wide 2" stretchy sleeve end trim, 1" black/white/black V-neck trim. PIRATES arched on the front, number 25 below on the left chest and on back in the correct Pirates variant of the athletic block font, 9" tall. All lettering is layered twill black over white. While I can find no other examples of Nelson Norman game jerseys, At 6' 2" but only 160 lbs, a size 40 jersey would have been reasonable for a player so slim. NORMAN stitched in Wilson's a non-vertical arch font (not surprising for a September call- up, as all vertical are plates were done by Wilson at the factory. Those for call-ups were often done quickly and locally.) on a gold plate that matches the jersey. As received, the jersey was without a nameplate, and the very clear stitching outline of the original plate remained. Like nearly all teams at that time, the Pirates recycled team uniforms to the minor leagues as soon as the their MLB service was through, and at the end of the season nameplates were routinely stripped from all jerseys to allow re-use. During the 2000s, a large trove of original Pirates nameplates surfaced in the hobby, and this appears to be one of these. It is a gold warp-knit fabric NORMAN nameplate without a serged edge, and it matched the shape of the stitching outline nearly exactly. Using the light table, I repositioned it exactly and stitched it to the jersey using a tight zig-zag stitch as was originally done. Norman had a brief Pirates career, as he was a September call-up in 1982 who appeared in only three games. No other Pirate was issued #25 in 1982. Given that this was his only Pirates roster appearance, it is highly likely that this jersey has been reunited with its original nameplate.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson size 40 manufacturer's tag correct for 1982 is stitched inside the back of the collar. A 1"x3" piece of gold jersey fabric is zig zag stitched to the lower outside left tail with "25 82 1" hand chain stitched in the familiar hand of the Wilson factory stitcher. It matches exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: This jersey displays very light use (considering the Pirates had three different jersey top styles and the player was on the team for only about a month); the light table shows that all stitched elements are original and without contrivance. Based on its excellent condition, it is conceivable that this jersey avoided a second life in the minor leagues.The jersey color remains bright and unfaded, and the stitching is dense and tight, but the lettering shows barely any softening from washing, and the jersey body fabric is unpuckered beneath the twill lettering from hot water washing. There are some light stains on the body and the sleeve end trim. The Pirates were a frugal team that wasted nothing, yet this jersey seems to have been spared MLB overuse or having been sent to the minor leagues for reissue. This is the finest-condition example of a game worn Pirates gold jersey that I have evaluated, to date.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in excellent condition. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of any kind. It has team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by call-up infielder Nelson Norman of the 1982 Pittsburgh Pirates.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Document of Restoration

Pittsburgh Pirates 1980 Gold Jersey- Sanguillen

This is not a letter of authenticity. Its purpose is to document the history of an alteration of a jersey in our shop.

As Received: Pittsburgh Pirates Gold alternate jersey front tail team tagging "35 80". Player #35 on the 1980 roaster was catcher Manny Sanguillen. This jersey had received an earlier restoration of sorts, with all elements including replacement of the front wordmark, nameplate and numbers. The condition was poor, as the twill lettering was of low quality and was puckered and discolored. The nameplate on back was on a pale yellow cotton fabric that did not come close to matching the jersey.

Work Performed: I completely stripped the jersey of all sewn lettering, and pre-soaked and laundered it, brightening it considerably. Using my historic team templates for the jersey lettering, I tuned the outlines to match the ghosts on the jersey and recut all lettering. It is clear from the fading in the numbers area that this jersey had experienced a long period of use as #65 The sun fading on back indicated it was used for several years the sun with the #65 in place and likely with no name on back, probably in Spring Training or in the minors.

The jersey body itself has faded considerably, comparing the tops of the shoulders to the tail. The tail is several shades of gold darker than either the middle of the back and chest or the aggressively faded shoulders. Finding knit nameplate material to match the faded shoulder area proved extremely difficult; the closest match came from a faded pair of pants that were closer in shade to the jersey tail.

I recreated the player name on back in the proper vertical arch condensed style used by the Pirates in 1980 on nameplates, and surged the plate's edge. I aged the lettering slightly with media blasting to dull the surface shine.

William F. Henderson
Restoration Specialist and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications
Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
The Dream Shop: MLB Jersey Restorations
http://GameWornGuides.com http://TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Bill Madlock 1981 Pittsburgh Pirates Home Game Jersey, NL Batting Title Year

Examination Date: July 29, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0729J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: White pullover size 44 Pittsburgh Pirates home jersey of #5, Bill Madlock. Pirates wordmark arched on front with player number "5" below on the left side. On back, player name "MADLOCK" arched above the number 5. All lettering is black over light gold, two-layer tackle twill. The name on back is on a nameplate, as is correct. The correct Pirates fonts are used; while similar to other teams', the propositions of the numbers are unique to the Bucs. A light table examination shows that the lettering is original to this jersey and that there was not another name or number on it prior. The original nameplate remains, which is an oddity among Pirates jerseys of this vintage, nearly all of which were heavily recycled to spring training and the minor leagues. Sewn-in black/gold/black 3" wide knit sleeve end trim and 1" V-Neck trim.

In 1981 Madlock won the NL Batting title with an average of .341. In a 15-season career, Madlock, nicknamed "Mad Dog", compiled a .305 batting average with 2008 hits, 920 runs, 348 doubles, 163 home runs, 174 stolen bases, 605 bases on balls and 860 runs batted in (RBI). (Wikipedia) He earned four batting titles (including 1981), and is the only player to have earned multiple batting tittles with different teams. He was selected to the All Star squad three times.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The jersey is tagged inside the back of the neck with a Rawlings red tag appropriate for 1981 noting the size as 44. A now-blank white fabric tag is pinched under the right side of the Rawlings tag that may have indicated special tailoring, from appearances perhaps it indicated extra sleeve length. On the outside bottom of the right tail is a small square of knit fabric with the numbers "5-81" hand chain stitched on them in the familiar script of the Rawlings factory stitcher. The tagging matches exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows signs of a full season's use; some minor ground-in dirt and a few small stains, minor fabric pulls and loose threads, plus slight wrinkling of the twill lettering and curling of the tags show that it was worn and washed frequent times. It remains is in very good condition, with bright colors and relatively clean white fabric. It is very unusual to see a Pirates jersey from 1981 is such fine condition, as these were often so over-used as to sometimes make them indistinguishable as originally white or gray, the twill lettering faded to three shades and even the chain-stitched tagging worn out.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is an uncommonly excellent example of a game worn Pirates home jersey from a star player, in a year in which he won a National League batting title. It exhibits good use and is free from alteration or contrivances. It has the proper tagging.It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and game worn by Bill Madlock of the 1981 Pittsburgh Pirates.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Dave Parker 1980 Pittsburgh Pirates Home Game Jersey

Examination Date:April 1, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0401J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: White pullover size 46 (marked and measured) Pittsburgh Pirates home jersey of #39, Dave Parker. Sewn-in black/gold/black 3" wide knit sleeve end trim and 1" V-Neck trim. Pirates wordmark arched on front with player number "39" below on the left side. On back, player name "PARKER" on a nameplate as is correct, arched above the number 39. All lettering is black over light gold, two-layer tackle twill. The correct Pirates fonts are used; while similar to other teams', the proportions of the numbers are unique to the Bucs. A light table examination shows that the numbers original to this jersey but the nameplate has been replaced with a vintage item. Pirates jerseys of this vintage were heavily recycled to spring training and the minor leagues. Parker was wearing size 46 jerseys at this point in his career, surveying other examples attributed to him.

Dave Parker enjoyed a 19 year MLB career, spending 11 seasons as a Pirate. In 1977, he was National League batting champion, a feat he repeated in 1978 when he was named the National League MVP. In 1980, he played in 139 games hitting .295 with 19 home runs. (Wikipedia, Baseball Almanac)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The jersey is tagged inside the back of the neck with a Rawlings red tag appropriate for 1981 noting the size as 46. A small white fabric tab is pinched under the right side of the Rawlings tag on which is printed SET 1 1980. The stitching around this tag is loose from abrasion and use. On the outside bottom of the right tail is a small square of white twill fabric with the inscription "Ex 80" hand chain stitched in black embroidery thread. In this spot would normally have been a tag that had the player number and two-digit year (as in 39 80). This inscription would indicate that this jersey was provided to the team as an extra at the start of the season, not assigned at the Rawlings factory to any player. This is a common practice, so the the team can quickly provide a jersey when one is damaged, or create a jersey for a player who is called up or acquired in a trade. Tagging style and location matches exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows signs of a full season's use plus additional use in the minor leagues/spring training as typical for the 1980s Pirates. There is ground-in dirt and a few small stains, minor fabric pulls and loose threads, plus slight wrinkling of the twill lettering and curling of the tags show that it was worn and washed frequently. Very careful examination of the stitching shows that typical for jerseys that have been worn a lot the thread on the inside has worn out, especially on the vertical strokes of

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Johnny Ray 1987 Pittsburgh Pirates Home Game Jersey

Examination Date: May 27, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0527J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: White Rawlings pullover, size 42 (marked and measured) Pittsburgh Pirates home jersey of #3, second baseman Johnny Ray. The size is reasonable for the player. Sewn-in black/gold/black 3" wide knit sleeve end trim and 1" V-Neck trim. Gold Pirates team patch on the left sleeve. Pirates wordmark arched on front with player number "3" below on the left side. On back, player name "RAY" arched on a nameplate above the number 3, as is correct. All lettering is black over gold, two-layer tackle twill. The correct Pirates fonts are used; while similar to other teams', the taller and narrower proportions of the numbers are unique to the Bucs. A light table examination shows that the number lettering is original to this jersey and that there was not another number on it prior. The nameplate is a replacement, which is typical among Pirates jerseys of this vintage, nearly all of which were heavily recycled to spring training and the minor leagues. The light table reveals that the original nameplate was about the same length, but with sharply angled ends different from the replacement.

Johnny Ray had a 10-year career from 1981 to 1990. He played for the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National League and the California Angels of the American League. He also played two seasons for the Yakult Swallows in Japan in 1991 and 1992. (Wikipedia). Ray started the season for the Pirates in 1987, appearing in 123 games and hitting .273 with 5 home runs. He was traded to the Angels at the end of August, where he appeared in 29 games finishing the season providing a strong contribution, hitting .346 for the final month of 1987.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The Rawlings script logo is direct embroidered in white into the top black stripe on the right sleeve trim. 1987 was the first year that this occurred. The jersey is locker-tagged inside the front left tail with a Rawlings red tag appropriate for 1987 noting the size as 42. A white fabric flag tag is pinched under the right side of the Rawlings tag shows SET 1 1987. There are no team tags referencing the player's name or number. This tagging matches 1987 Pirates' exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows signs of at least a full season's use; some minor ground-in dirt and a few small stains, minor fabric pulls, a couple of tiny holes in the left sleeve, plus some wrinkling of the twill lettering and curling of the tags show that it was worn and washed frequently. This jersey likely spent some time in the minors, where it was used with the nameplate removed. The replacement nameplate is marginally whiter than the jersey, and with an un-serged edge, but it is sewn on the proper fabrics with the correct font. The original numbers front and back have been reinforced with a second corse of thread on all outlines, sewn through. Overall, the jersey remains is in good condition, with bright colors and relatively clean white fabric. It is unusual to see a Pirates jersey from the 1980s is good condition, as these were often over-used and in poor condition when finally retired.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is good example of a game worn Pirates home jersey. It exhibits use and has a replacement nameplate. It is free contrivances. It has the proper tagging.It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and game worn by Johnny Ray of the 1987 Pittsburgh Pirates.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Chapter 30

Texas Rangers

Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys 1970-2025 Tenth Edition

William F. Henderson

Rangers Uniform History Notes

- The Rangers were born for the 1972 season, when the long-suffering Washington Senators pulled up stakes and moved to Arlington, Texas.
- The team's first "branded look" had a decidedly modern 1970s feel to it, with a bold and bright team logo and uniform wordmark. It had two unique features. One was the small star inside a circle at the base of the "R," either signifying the Lone Star State, or looking like a little Ranger badge. The second was the prominently larger "R" and "S," the first and last letters of the team name, that also happened to be the initials of Robert Short, the team's new owner.
- Close inspection however showed that those first Rangers uniforms were actually 1971 Washington Senators uniforms that had been meticulously stripped of their lettering and turned into Rangers uniforms by a tailor's hand! It is hard to imagine the amount of work this was to do, and shows how thrifty the team was in those years.
- The 1972 Senators/Rangers Spring Training flannel uniforms featured a straight-across (no curve) wordmark and no trim.
- For the start of the 1972 season, the team took the field with new double knits. The Rangers wordmark took on a gentle curve, and red/white/blue knit trim was added to the jersey sleeve ends and to the neck opening. Player names on the back used a very wide Block-style font, and perhaps unsurprisingly, the player number font pattern was the same Block variation as had been used by the Senators for most of the 1960s.
- The Rangers have made many year-to-year changes since they first took the field in 1972. During the 1970s and through 1985, there are several one-year-only jersey styles and many, many trim and detail changes.
- During the 1970s, the Rangers' quality control is among the shoddiest in MLB. Uniforms are continually recycled from year to year, back numbers are mismatched, names on back are removed and re-sewn so many times that some gamers look like a patchwork quilt of repaired holes. Quality and consistency improve greatly starting in the early 1980s.
- Game worn Rangers' jerseys of the 1970s usually have seen much wear, being used and reused before they entered the hobby.
- In 1983, the first alternate is unveiled, a royal blue jersey. In 1984 it is joined by a red alternate. Both are discontinued after 1985.
- From 1986–1993, the Rangers settled into a period of uniform consistency, wearing only home whites and road grays. The clean "Rangers" script on home whites earned the nickname "Texas Dodgers" due to its visual similarity to L.A.'s iconic uniforms
- In 1994, red became the primary team color, and the uniform set began evolving rapidly once again. A blue alternate returned in 2000, and by 2006–2008, the Rangers had five active jersey options, including home and road vests.
- Around 1996, the Rangers entered into a relationship with The MeiGray Group, marketing the team's game worn uniforms on an exclusive basis. However, not every game worn jersey has a MeiGray tag sewn in. This relationship seems to have run through about 2002.
- 2002 and later team-tagged jerseys are incredibly common in the hobby, and their availability makes it is clear the team markets them more aggressively to collectors and fans. When one considers all the jersey options plus Spring Training, Turn Back the Clock, and special events, the total of team issued and game worn Rangers jerseys marketed each year probably numbers in the high hundreds!
- Both home and road vests are retired after the 2008 season.
- The 2009 redesign switches all uniforms to Cool Base, and (oddly) the very same "TEXAS" wordmark is sewn on the front of all four team jerseys, as the team name is no longer on the uniforms. The player name and number font is a fussy four-color, including a drop shadow. A red alternate is introduced, worn on select home dates.
- 2013 brings simplification to the 2009 redesign on all jerseys, eliminating drop shadows and 3D beveling, rearranging outline layer colors for better visibility.
- The 2020 season sees several updates to the lineup. The home white jersey now features a script "Rangers"—the first time the team name has been seen on a game jersey since 2000. The same script adorns a new powder blue uniform set worn for Sunday home games. The blue alternate is relegated to road use only
- The home red alternate is retired after the 2022 season.
- In 2023, the Rangers add a City Connect uniform featuring custom fonts and iconography, like the Panther/Eagle badge. These cream colored jerseys are worn with dark (midnight blue) pants, an unusual combination.
- Across the decades, the Rangers have cycled between script and block lettering, multiple trim styles, vest and pullover designs, and fluctuating uses of red and blue—often leaving fans unsure of whether Texas is a red team with blue accents or a blue team with red.

I am always looking for new information and better photographs. If you can share new information, or offer corrections to this material, please send a note to me, at gamewornguides@gmail.com. Please tell me which page you are referencing. All contributors will be recognized by name in a future edition.

© GameWornGuides.com

Year by Year Summary

Rangers Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1972	Home	No	2 color 7” Block variant	1 color Block Wide*	No	-	-	Wilson
	Road	No	2 color 7” Block Variant	1 color Block Wide*	No	-	-	Wilson
1973	Home	No	2 color 7” Block variant	1 color Block Wide*	No	-	-	Wilson
	Road	No	2 color 7” Block Variant	1 color Block Wide*	No	-	-	Wilson
1974	Home	No	2 color 7” Block variant	1 color Block Wide*	No	-	-	Wilson
	Road	No	2 color 7” Block Variant	1 color Block Wide*	No	-	-	Wilson
1975	Home	No	2 color 7” Block variant	2 color Varsity variant	No	-	-	Wilson
	Road	No	3 color 7” Block	1 color Block	No	-	-	Rawlings
1976	Home	No	2 color 7” Block variant	2 color Varsity variant	No	Texas 1976	-	Wilson
	Road	No	3 color 7” Block	1 color Block	No	Texas 1976	-	Goodman
1977	Home	No	2 color 7” Block variant	2 color Varsity variant	No	Black Armband/4	Team Shield	Wilson
	Road	No	3 color 7” Block	1 color Block	No	Black Armband/4	Team Shield	Rawlings
1978	Home	No	2 color 7” Block variant	2 color Varsity variant	No	Team Shield	-	Wilson
	Road	No	3 color 7” Block	1 color Block	No	-	Team Shield	Rawlings
1979	Home	No	2 color 7” Block variant	2 color Varsity Variant	No	Team Shield	-	Wilson
	Road	No	3 color 7” Block	1 color Block	No		Team Shield	Rawlings
1980	Home	No	2 color 7” Block	No	-	Team Shield	-	Wilson
	Road	No	3 color 7” Block	No	-	-	Team Shield	Rawlings
1981	Home	No	2 color 7” Block	2 color Block Cond & Block XCond	Yes	-	Round TR Disc	Rawlings
	Road	No	3 color 7” Block	1 color Block	No	Round TR Disc	-	Wilson
1982	Home	No	2 color 7” Block	2 color Block Cond & Block XCond	Yes	-	Round TR Disc	Rawlings
	Road	No	3 color 7” Block	1 color Block	No	-	Round TR Disc	Wilson

1972-1982 General Notes: Surviving Rangers jerseys of this timeframe have inconsistent team name/number lettering, with 1972-74 jerseys being the most erratic examples. Part of the reason may be that these jerseys were recycled by the team many times and by the time they made it to the hobby, surviving examples show a mixture of Major League, Minor League, and restored names and numbers on them. Home and road jerseys during this period appear to have been lettered at different establishments.

•In 1972-1974, the number font on both home and road jerseys is a custom cross between Block and Varsity, same as used by the 1960s-71 Senators. It is essentially Block with square number insides (2,3,6,8,9,0). Numbers are often different sizes from each other, a usual sign of re-numbering. During these years, names on back are very inconsistent. I have filled in the table using my best estimates of original lettering colors and styles. It does not appear to have been a priority for the Rangers to have names on back in a consistent style during this period. Comparing jerseys of the same year to one another shows different spacing between letters, different degree of curve across the back (even straight across is seen), and different widths of lettering used indiscriminately between garments.

•Between 1975-1979, there is a clear difference between the lettering on the teams' home Rawlings' jersey and the road Wilson jerseys, almost certainly indicating these were sewn by different shops. The home jersey only uses a Varsity variant alphabet in two-color for the player names. It is close, but not exactly like the version used by the 1992-2004 Expos; the Rangers version being slightly lighter in stroke than the Expos'. Home numbers continue in the 1972-74 style, a cross between Block and Varsity. During this period, the road jerseys get a much more consistent (year to year, and garment to garment) player name font, which is close to Block standard, and also get very nicely sewn three-color Block standard numbers on the back. I would have to say the road jerseys of this five-year period were much more consistent and nicely done.

•1980-1982 sees a standardization, at least, between the numbers used on the home and road jerseys, as all are now Block Standard from a common pattern. Names on back though are hard to categorize. Home jerseys have names in two-color (red/blue) sometimes in Block Condensed, but often in Block Extra Condensed, even for player names that are not that long. Road jerseys seem to simply use one-color Block names. They may exist, but I have never yet come across a road jersey with condensed or extra condensed font for names.

© GameWornGuides.com

Rangers Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1983	Home	No	2 color 7” Block	1 color Block	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	No	2 color 7” Block	1 color Block	Yes	-	-	Wilson
1984	Home	2 color 4 7/8” Block Var #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color 3 1/2” Block	No	Team Texas Patch	-	Rawlings
	Blue Alt	2 color 4 7/8” Block Var #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color 3 1/2” Block	Yes	Team Texas Patch	-	Wilson
	Red Alt	2 color 4 7/8” Block Var #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color 3 1/2” Block	Yes	Team Texas Patch	-	Wilson
1985	Home	2 color 4 7/8” Block Var #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color 3 1/2” Block	No	Team Texas Patch	-	Rawlings
	Blue Alt	2 color 4 7/8” Block Var #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color 3 1/2” Block	Yes	Team Texas Patch	-	Wilson
	Red Alt	2 color 4 7/8” Block Var #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color 3 1/2” Block	Yes	Team Texas Patch	-	Wilson
1986	Home	2 color 5” Front Block #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color Block	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	No	2 color 8” Block	2 color Block	No	-	-	Wilson
1987	Home	2 color 5” Front Block #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color Block	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	No	2 color 8” Block	2 color Block	No	-	-	Rawlings
1988	Home	2 color 5” Front Block #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color Block	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	No	2 color 8” Block	2 color Block	No	-	-	Rawlings
1989	Home	2 color 5” Front Block #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color Block	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	No	2 color 8” Block	2 color Block	No	-	-	Rawlings
1990	Home	2 color 5” Front Block #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color Block	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	No	2 color 8” Block	2 color Block	No	-	-	Rawlings
1991	Home	2 color 5” Front Block #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color Block	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road	No	2 color 8” Block	2 color Block	No	-	-	Rawlings
1992	Home	2 color 5” Front Block #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color Block	No	-	-	Russell
	Road	No	2 color 8” Block	2 color Block	No	-	-	Russell
1993	Home	2 color 5” Front Block #2	2 color 8” Block	1 color Block	No	Arlington Stadium	HEC Memorial after Aug 22	Russell
	Road	No	2 color 8” Block	2 color Block	No	Arlington Stadium	HEC Memorial after Aug 22	Russell

*Among my collection of many Rangers game worn jersey photos of 1992, there is only one with a Rawlings tag. It is on a Dickie Thon road gray jersey, and though it has team set tagging, it is not year tagged. However, two facts make it almost certainly from 1992. First, Thon joined the Rangers on December 16, 1991, after the end of the 1991 season. Second, it has a tag style that Rawlings did not begin to use with other teams until the 1992 season.

Through the 1980s, even though the Rangers seldom used player nameplates, it is not uncommon to find individual jerseys with “cover up” plates put over other player names so that jerseys could be reissued without removing the old name beneath, letter by letter.

The Texas Rangers wing of my collection, featuring one of each style for an almost complete set. The Rangers certainly know how to keep a collector busy.

© GameWornGuides.com

Jersey styles and variations come and go, rarely is the lineup the same two seasons running.

1994-2000

1994 only

1995-1999

2000-2008

2000 only

2001-2008

2001- 2008

2004-2008

2006-2008

Rangers Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1994	Home	No	2 color Block	2 color Block	No	Team Diamond*	-	Russell
	Road	No	2 color Block w/Serifs	2 color Block	No	-	MLB 125th	Russell
1995	Home	No	2 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	Yes	Team Diamond	All Star Game	Russell
	Road	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Team Diamond	All Star Game	Russell
1996	Home	No	2 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	Yes	Team Diamond	-	Russell
	Road	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Team Diamond	-	Russell
1997	Home	No	2 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	Yes	Team Diamond*	Jackie & MH Memorial	Russell
	Road	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Team Diamond	Jackie & MH Memorial	Russell
1998	Home	No	2 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	Yes	Team Diamond	-	Russell
	Road	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Team Diamond	-	Russell
1999	Home	No	2 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	Yes	Team Diamond	-	Russell
	Road	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Team Diamond	-	Russell
2000	Home	No	2 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	Yes	Texas Flag Logo	1999 W Div Champs	Rawlings
	Road	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Texas Flag Logo	1999 W Div Champs	Rawlings
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Texas Flag Logo	1999 W Div Champs	Rawlings
2001	Home	3 color Front Block	3 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	Yes	Texas Flag Logo	AL 100th Anniv	Rawlings
	Road	No	4 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Texas Flag Logo	AL 100th Anniv	Rawlings
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Texas Flag Logo	AL 100th Anniv	Rawlings
2002	Home	3 color Front Block	3 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	Yes	Texas Flag Logo	-	Rawlings
	Road	No	4 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Texas Flag Logo	-	Rawlings
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Texas Flag Logo	-	Rawlings
2003	Home	3 color Front Block	3 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	Yes	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road	No	4 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	Yes	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
2004	Home	3 color Front Block	3 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road	No	4 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Vest	2 color Front Block	2 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	No	-	-	Majestic
2005	Home	3 color Front Block	3 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	No	Texas Flag Logo	26 Patch (Johnny Oates)	Majestic
	Road	No	4 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	No	Texas Flag Logo	26 Patch (Johnny Oates)	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	No	Texas Flag Logo	26 Patch (Johnny Oates)	Majestic
	Alt Vest	2 color Front Block	2 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	No	-	26 Patch (on right chest)	Majestic
2006	Home	3 color Front Block	3 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road	No	4 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt White Vest	2 color Front Block	2 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	No	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Gray Vest	3 color Front Block	3 color Block	3 color Block or Block Cond	No	-	-	Majestic
2007	Home	3 color Front Block	3 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road	No	4 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt White Vest	2 color Front Block	2 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	No	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Gray Vest	3 color Front Block	3 color Block	3 color Block or Block Cond	No	-	-	Majestic
2008	Home	3 color Front Block	3 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road	No	4 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Block	3 color Block Cond Lt or Block XCond	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt White Vest	2 color Front Block	2 color Block	2 color Block or Block Cond	No	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Gray Vest	3 color Front Block	3 color Block	3 color Block or Block Cond	No	-	-	Majestic

* Interleague Play logo patch worn in place of team diamond at home on June 12,13
 MH memorial patch worn after September 8.

© GameWornGuides.com

Change to Flex Base

Rangers Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2009	Home White	No	4 color Special Block	4 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	4 color Special Block	4 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
2010	Home White	No	4 color Special Block	4 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	4 color Special Block	4 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	Bobby Bragan patch, Spring Training only	Majestic
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
2011	Home White	No	4 color Special Block	4 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	4 color Special Block	4 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
2012	Home White	No	4 color Special Block	4 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	40th Anniversary	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	4 color Special Block	4 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	40th Anniversary	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	40th Anniversary	Majestic
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	40th Anniversary	Majestic
2013	Home White	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
2014	Home White	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo		Majestic
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
2015	Home White	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	MACKO patch Spring Training Only	Majestic
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
2016	Home White	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
2017	Home White	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
2018	Home White	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo	-	Majestic
2019	Home White	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Stadium Final Year/MLB 150th	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Stadium Final Year/MLB 150th	Majestic
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Stadium Final Year/MLB 150th	Majestic
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block	3 color Special Block	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Stadium Final Year/MLB 150th	Majestic
2020	Home White	No	3 color Special Block/ Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/ Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Stadium Inaugural	Nike
	Road Gray	No	3 color Special Block/ Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/ Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Stadium Inaugural	Nike
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block/ Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/ Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Stadium Inaugural	Nike
	Alt Powder Blue	No	3 color Special Block/ Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/ Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Stadium Inaugural	Nike
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block/ Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/ Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Stadium Inaugural	Nike

* Texas flag patch is notably smaller and with a gold border starting 2019

© GameWornGuides.com

These five styles continue from previous years

Switch to Vapor Premiere Elite

Rangers Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2021	Home White	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	-	Nike
	Road Gray	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	-	Nike
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	-	Nike
	Alt Powder Blue	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	-	Nike
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	-	Nike
2022	Home White	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	50th Anniversary	Nike
	Road Gray	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	50th Anniversary	Nike
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	50th Anniversary	Nike
	Alt Powder Blue	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	50th Anniversary	Nike
	Alt Red	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	50th Anniversary	Nike
2023	Home White	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	-	Nike
	Road Gray	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	-	Nike
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	-	Nike
	Alt Powder Blue	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	-	Nike
	City Connect	Custom 2 color	Custom 2 color	-	-	-	Eagle/Panther patch	Nike
2024	Home White	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow (perf)	2" 3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Energy Transfer Ad patch	Nike
	Road Gray	No	4 color Special Block/Drop Shadow (perf)	2" 3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Energy Transfer Ad patch	Nike
	Alt Blue	No	5 color Special Block/Drop Shadow (perf)	2" 3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Energy Transfer Ad patch	Nike
	Alt Powder Blue	No	6 color Special Block/Drop Shadow (perf)	2" 3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*	Energy Transfer Ad patch	Nike
	City Connect	Custom 2 color (perf)	Custom 2 color (perf)	-	-	Energy Transfer Ad patch	Eagle/Panther patch	Nike
2025	Home White	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*‡	Energy Transfer Ad patch‡	Nike
	Road Gray	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*‡	Energy Transfer Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Blue	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*‡	Energy Transfer Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Powder Blue	No	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	3 color Special Block/Drop Shadow	No	Texas Flag Logo*‡	Energy Transfer Ad patch‡	Nike
	City Connect	Custom 2 color (perf)	Custom 2 color (perf)	-	-	Eagle/Panther patch‡	Energy Transfer Ad patch‡	Nike

© GameWornGuides.com

Home, Road and Alternate Jerseys

1972 Home Spring Training

Far Left: A surviving Senators' final-style flannel that was spared the indignity of conversion. Next to it, a converted Senators/Rangers flannel still featuring the original "1971 Set 1" shirt tail tagging of the Senators.

Airbrushed 1971 Senators photo on 1972 card

Card shows flannel jersey from 1972 Spring Training

The first Texas Rangers team took the field for the 1972 season wearing new double knits. One could easily surmise that the Rangers, therefore, have no history in flannel. But, that is not so. When the Senators packed up and left Washington, DC to become the Rangers after the 1971 season, they brought all of their equipment with them, including all remaining 1971 uniforms. Then, unbelievably, these jerseys were converted into Rangers jerseys by painstakingly removing all of the Senators scripts from the fronts, then re-sewing Rangers lettering on. This amount of work would be unthinkable today. Today, the final set of Senators' uniforms could certainly be auctioned off as highly sought-after collectibles. But back in 1971, they were nothing more than obsolete baggage.

The new Rangers team appeared on 1972 baseball cards, with most players shown from the neck up, and wearing red caps. Clearly 1971 Senators' player photos, they were primitively airbrushed by Topps' artists to remove any trace of the Senators' logos. Note too, that the 1972 Rangers wore blue, not red hats.

The flannel jerseys might have been gone forever as soon as the season-issue double knits arrived. But frugally, the converted Senators flannels lived on in Spring Training for another year, best seen on baseball cards.

The "ghosts" of the removed Senators wordmark are still clearly visible

© GameWornGuides.com

1972 Road Spring Training

I had the opportunity to examine this jersey on the light table. Tagged as a 1971 Set 2 and with Ted Williams' Senators-style #9 on the back (original) I was able to look for evidence of the Senators wordmark on front. It was faint, but it was there. The top photo shows the jersey on the light table with the clearest points of the ghosts highlighted in blue. I've then overlaid a 1970 Senators wordmark from a jersey I had in the shop and was able to confirm the points of intersection. The button spacing and placement helps with alignment. The bottom photo shows the Senators wordmark superimposed where it would have appeared on Williams' 1971 Senators jersey, converted to Rangers for 1972 Spring Training by a very, very frugal team.

© GameWornGuides.com

1972-1974 Home

1972

1974

Stephen Kraljic collection

Button front with knit blue/white/red sleeve ends, no team sleeve patch.

No numbers on the front; see "Overview" table for rules regarding names and numbers on the back. During this period, names are one-color (red) and are sometimes Block Wide and sometimes Standard Block.

Numbers on back are a Rangers-only Block variant, two-color red/royal.

Uniforms from this period show heavy wear as they were obviously used and re-used through the minor leagues.

1973

1974

1973–Note Block Wide lettering

© GameWornGuides.com

1972-1974 Road

1974

Click here for a link to the actual Letter of Opinion

1974

Button front gray with knit blue/white/red sleeve ends, no team sleeve patch. No numbers on the front. During this period, names are one color (red) and are sometimes Block Wide and sometimes Standard Block. Numbers on back are a Rangers-only Block variant, two-color red/royal. Uniforms from this period are heavily worn as they were obviously used and re-used through the minor leagues.

Right: This 1972 year--tagged jersey may have been reissued in the minors. Look at the number "8"- nearly a full inch smaller from the (presumed) original "2" next to it. This example uses Block wide (variant) for a very long name!

1972

© GameWornGuides.com

1975-1980 Home

1977

Nearly identical to the 1972–1974 style, except this jersey is now a pullover with a two-button Henley neck. Numbers on the back remain the same Senators carryover font. Player names, however, change to two-color Varsity red/royal, a font rarely seen for player names in MLB. Names on back are omitted in 1980 only.

No sleeve patch used in 1975; 1976 has special Texas Bicentennial patch, 1977–1980 has a nearly identical patch, minus the years on the 1976 version. However, sleeve patch jumps back and forth from one sleeve to the other on home jersey only during these years (see year-by-year overview table. Based on all the other inconsistencies found on Rangers jerseys of the 1970s, it is hard not to dismiss this as simply another example of poor quality control rather than being done for a reason.

The Marc Okkonen illustrations in the Dressed to the Nines exhibit on the Baseball Hall of Fame website shows this style being worn incorrectly starting in 1976.

1980 only—
no NOB

Above Left: 1976-only patch. Above Right: 1977–1980 patch. Top Left: Note the two different 3s on the back. Evidence of either an inexact restoration or if not, poor original team quality control. Black sleeve stripe is a 1977-only memorial armband.*

1976

Stephen Kraljic Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1975 Road

One-year style. Three-color "TEXAS" on front, red/white/blue, two-button neck design. Block numbers are three-color red/white/royal blue. Notice the narrow white/then wide blue outline style. Names one color royal blue. These one-year jerseys are extremely difficult to find in the hobby.

Rawlings is the manufacturer. (formerly Wilson). Wilson continues to be manufacturer for home jerseys.

(Top Left) Note tagging for two different jerseys (likely "Set 1" and "Set 2") for the same player in the same year, plus autographed photo (top right) most likely showing the actual jersey at the top left being worn.

(Right) These road jerseys were worn at home on a few occasions with white pants.

© GameWornGuides.com

1976-1980 Road

1976

Patch used 1976 only

Sleeve Patch: In 1976: special Rangers "1776–1976" patch used on left sleeve, 1977–1980: The same "look" patch continues, minus the years at the top, and it moves to the right sleeve.

1977

1978

1979

Pullover with two-button Henley neck. Goodman jerseys used in 1976; Rawlings in 1977–1980. New "TexaS" team wordmark introduced on road jersey in 1976 in red/white. Numbers on back only, in three-color red/white/royal using Block font, unlike the home jersey which uses a custom number font. Notice the narrow white/then wide blue outline style. Names on back 1976–1979 are Block, one-color (royal), yet another difference from the home jersey, and are inconsistently sewn with different degrees of arch and spacing. No NOB 1980.

1980

Patch used 1977-1980

1980 only - no NOB

© GameWornGuides.com

1981-1982 Home

Top middle: Block Extra Condensed is used for most names, it appears only very short names got Block Condensed (below left and right). This is different from road jerseys of this era, which seem to use Block Standard exclusively.

Same basic look that dates back to 1972. The jersey once again is a full button-front as it had been in 1972–1974. This time, the sleeve-end knit trim is wider, and Rawlings is the maker.

New "TR" disc patch sewn on the right sleeve in both years.

Numbers on the back finally change to Block Standard, matching the road jerseys, which have used this style since 1975.

Names on back are often in Block Extra Condensed font, two-color. Shorter names (like those two at right) may be set in Block Condensed. Nameplates used on home jerseys in these two years.

© GameWornGuides.com

1981-1982 Road

1981

Bill Henderson Collection

1981

1981

Same basic look of the 1976–1980 style, except, like the home jersey, changes to a full button-front. Sleeve patch is new "TR" team disc logo. In 1981, on the road jersey, the patch is on the left sleeve, and in 1982 it moves to the right sleeve. Although I have seen some of these with nameplates (top right), which was not standard. Most likely, all were sewn with names directly on the jersey, then if reused, a nameplate with the new player's name would be sewn over top.

1982

© GameWornGuides.com

Rangers Jerseys Demoted to the Minor Leagues

While every team sent its MLB jerseys to the minors in the 1980s and before, the Rangers were especially hard on their equipment, seemingly using and reusing every uniform beyond its useful life, often stripping not only names and numbers, but front team crests as well. I have restored a number of these, Very few unrestored originals remain in existence.

© GameWornGuides.com

1983 Home

Bill Henderson Collection

One-year home style features state of Texas "TR" logo introduced by the team in 1981 on the front with arched "RANGERS" arched wordmark, wide knit blue/white/red sleeve trim.

Jersey made by Rawlings, number on back is in the same colors as the front logo— royal/red. Names on back are one-color royal blue, on a nameplate. Block Condensed used for shorter names, Block Extra Condensed for longer names. No sleeve patches in 1983.

© GameWornGuides.com

1983 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

One-year road style features TR logo on the front, arched white/red "TEXAS" wordmark. A very attractive style that could have lasted far longer than a single year. Two-color numbers on the back, white/red. One-color NOB, white, on a nameplate. These jerseys are made exclusively by Wilson.

© GameWornGuides.com

1984-1985 Home

On this jersey, look carefully to see the "Foli" name plate sewn over top of the original name, which had been sewn directly to the jersey. Not typical, this was probably done to make a quick change mid-season.

Rawlings made; identify by the wide blue/ white/red sleeve trim and the State of Texas/ Rangers script patch on the left sleeve.

Two-color royal/red numbers on the front and back, one-color royal names on back, usually with no nameplates. But the Rangers have a habit of covering old names with nameplates if jerseys are reissued.

© GameWornGuides.com

1984-1985 Alternate Blue

Bill Henderson Collection

These jerseys were used both at home and on the road. Identify by the wide red/white/blue knit sleeve trim and the state of Texas/Rangers script patch on the left sleeve. Two-color white/red numbers on the front and back, one-color white names on back. Nameplates used.

© GameWornGuides.com

1984-1985 Alternate Red

Bill Henderson Collection

These jerseys were used sometimes as alternates at home, and also as road jerseys. Identify by the wide blue/white/red sleeve trim and the state of Texas/Rangers script logo patch on the left sleeve. Two color white/royal numbers on the front and back, one-color white names on back, nameplates used.

© GameWornGuides.com

1986-1993 Home

Bill Henderson Collection

1986

1987

1990

1991

1993

The team adopts what some have called a "Texas Dodgers" look; sleeve ends are now plain and more traditional, as the wide, colorful knit sleeve trim disappears. Two-color numbers on front and back, royal/red. Names on back one-color (royal blue) The front number font is unique to the Rangers, it is not identical to the Dodgers' numbers. Rawlings is the team's official supplier 1986–1991, Russell takes over in 1992

HEC Memorial after August 22, 1993

© GameWornGuides.com

Rangers Nolan Ryan Jerseys

Nolan Ryan was a lock to be a first ballot Hall of Famer by the time his career reached Texas in 1989, about the time the collectability of MLB was growing. A search of "game worn" Ryan Rangers jerseys on the web produces an avalanche of results. But it has long been claimed that Ryan preferred "only" to wear Goodman-made jerseys. What of all the Rawlings and Russell jerseys in our search results? Something can help to prove or disprove the Goodman story, and that is the appearance of manufacturers' logos on jersey sleeves in 1987. Rawlings was allowed to display their mark 1987-1991; Russell 1992–1993. If Ryan was wearing a jersey by another maker, there would not be a sleeve logo on his jersey, by contract. Searching news photos will tell you if he was wearing the contracted jerseys...or not, and they show that Ryan indeed did not always wear Goodman jerseys. Here are two letters of opinion from me; one for a Goodman jersey, and one for a Rawlings. You be the judge.

© GameWornGuides.com

1986*-1993 Road

Two-color royal/white "Texas" on front. Team sleeve patch disappears. Two-color name and numbers on back, royal/white. Nameplates no longer used. Wilson is the supplier 1986, Rawlings 1987–1991; Russell 1992–1993.

The Rangers wore the new 1986 road uniforms during the final month of the 1985 season as a "preview" of the next season.*

© GameWornGuides.com

Rangers Team Tagging 1977-1999

These examples show that the Rangers used multiple manufacturers and had tagging styles that changed frequently. There are even legitimately different styles of tagging used in the same year by the team (1993 for example). These examples probably do not represent all of the variations.

I have purposely excluded any examples of tagging from purported Nolan Ryan jerseys. There are so many Ryan counterfeits that I want to avoid showing tagging here that may be fake.

© GameWornGuides.com

1994-2000 Home

2000

1994–1999

2000

1994 marks the change to a red as the team's primary color from royal blue. Two-color red/royal "Rangers" on front, red knit trim on sleeves and front.

Two-color red/royal name and number on back, name on a plate.

Rangers diamond-shaped shield with star patch on left sleeve 1994–1999. Texas flag team alternate logo replaces it 2000.

1995

1997 with very rare Interleague play patch

© GameWornGuides.com

1994 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

This jersey style was used for only one year—identify it by the simple, two-color red/white Texas on the front and the MLB 125th patch that should be on the right sleeve of any game worn jersey. Red knit trim used on sleeves but not on the front of this jersey. Oddly, Block with serifs numbers (on back only); this font used only on this style and this year (home jerseys in 1994 used Block). All others are standard Block. Names directly sewn with no nameplates.

© GameWornGuides.com

1995-1999 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

1997: "MH" memorial patch for broadcaster Mark Holtz added after September 8.

MeiGray Group "Texas Rangers Collection" tagging was added after the jersey was retired from use and before it was sold by the team.

- Gray jersey with red knit trim on sleeves, red/blue/white lettering throughout.
- Blue is added as an outline color to the "Texas" logo on the front (now red/blue/white).
- Diamond-shaped Texas Rangers new logo patch added to left sleeve
- Name goes on a plate, Extra condensed type style is used for longer names.

© GameWornGuides.com

2000 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

One-year-style gray jersey with blue knit trim on sleeves only, TEXAS in blue with red, white outline and then an additional gray drop shadow. The gray outline was very subtle—in fact, it was too subtle to be seen from further than three inches away. Outline will change to more visible black in 2001.

Block condensed font used for most names, extra condensed font used for long names. Names and numbers blue/red/white, names on nameplates. Game worn jerseys with the gray Texas drop shadow outline layer should always have the 1999 Division Champions patch on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2000-2008 Alternate Blue

2000

"TEXAS" on front is white/gray/royal/red. Writing is sewn to look 3D, a technique known as "bevel."

Name is on a nameplate, 2000–2003, then direct sewn 2004–2008. Number on back is three-color white/royal/red. Texas flag patch on left sleeve, white knit trim on ends of sleeves.

(Right) Block Condensed Light is the font used for "normal" length player names; (Above) Extra Condensed style used for long player names. Note that on both, the 2nd (blue) outline is very thin, and the 3rd (red) outline is thicker.

© GameWornGuides.com

2001-2008 Home

2001

2003

(Top left, top right) Longer player name uses Block Condensed font; while short names (Bottom left) use Block Standard.

Black 3D drop shadow is added to “Rangers” logo on front. Numbers added to front. Front and back numbers are three-color dark royal/red/black 3D drop shadow. Names are on nameplates 2000–2003, direct sewn 2004–2008, two-color royal/red. Home jerseys use Block for short names, Block Condensed for long names. Rawlings is the contracted maker 2001–2002, Majestic 2003–2008.

Bill Henderson Collection

2003

© GameWornGuides.com

2001-2008 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

2002

2002 Tagging

Below: 2002, as used in the All-Star Game by Alex Rodriguez

2002

- Identify by four-color "TEXAS" lettering on front now with black drop shadow, royal/red/white/black 3D drop shadow
- Four-color numbers royal/red/white/black 3D drop shadow
- Three-color names in royal/red/white, on plate 2001–2003, then direct sewn 2004–2008.

2001

© GameWornGuides.com

2004-2008 Alternate Home Vest

- White vest with blue knit trim on front and sleeve openings, with a red/white "T" and 3D blue drop shadow on left chest.
- Royal blue undershirt has Texas flag logo sewn on left sleeve.
- Numbers on front and back are two-color royal/red. They are sewn very low; the top of the number is an inch below the bottom of the "T".
- Names are on nameplates, two-color royal/red. Lettering colors and styles follow the home jersey.
- The white vest is discontinued after 2008.

© GameWornGuides.com

2006-2008 Alternate Road Vest

Team inventory tagging is sewn inside the jersey tail.

- The Rangers add yet another alternate uniform for 2006, this time a road vest version of their gray jersey.
- The gray vest features blue knit trim around the sleeve holes and on the front. It has the same team lettering on the front as the standard road jersey, MINUS the black drop shadow, and the vest adds player numbers to the front in three-color blue/red/white, using Front Block font.
- A three-year run; 2008 is the final year for the gray vest, which is retired along with the home white vest.

© GameWornGuides.com

Rangers Player Name Lettering

- In the-2001–2008 style, the Rangers do not appear to have set rules when sewing player names on jerseys. All of the jerseys above are claimed to be game worn, all by the same player.
- The first three examples are from 2001, and all use versions of Block Condensed. “A” uses two-color royal/red. “B” is Block Light Condensed (meaning the red layer is identical to the main color on the first jersey, and the blue layer is one step thinner and sewn on top). “C” is also in Block Light Condensed, with a very thin second color (blue).
- The last two jerseys, “D” and “E”, are from 2002. These NOBs are both in Block Extra Condensed, three-color. On “D” the second (blue) layer is very narrow.
- While I could be tempted to say that this is a documented difference between 2001 and 2002–2008 jerseys, it probably depended on who was cutting the letters at the sewing shop at the time, using individual judgment on how the name would look best.

Nobody is perfect, but in the thousands of photos I have cataloged in preparation of this book, the Rangers seem to have the most trouble with mixing alphabets on player NOBs.

Very likely, their shop had trays of pre-cut letters, already tacked together in their multi-colored layers. The person sewing the name pulls the letters out of the bins and sews them on the nameplates.

And, doubtlessly what happens is that the letters in the bins get mixed up, and the careless result is at left: Block Condensed names that get an Extra-Condensed letter in the middle (far left), and vice versa (near left).

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2013 Home

Bill Henderson Collection

OK, I admit I find something perversely funny about a player name this long in a three-color plus drop shadow style using a fancy font that is apparently not available in either a "condensed" or "extra condensed" style.

The 2009 uniform line is changed top to bottom, yet retains the same overall "look" that the Rangers have sported since 1994. 2009 jerseys are exclusively Cool Base, Rangers regular double knits are history.

All of the Rangers 2009 jerseys now say "Texas" on them –the team name is nowhere to be found. We cannot think of another example of a team prior to this that has simply spelled out its city or state name on all of its jerseys, home and away. The home jersey wordmark is four-color, including a black 3D drop shadow.

Player name and number font changes to a stylized version of Block, adding little tweaks to the characters, matching the "Texas" wordmark and similar to the style used by the Los Angeles Angels. Oddly, though, the order of the twill colors is different on front and back of this jersey. Ultra-thick four-layered numbers and letters include a black drop shadow, and they are a regular drop shadow, not 3D shadow like the front wordmark.

Sleeve-end sewn-on knit trim changes to a narrow red/blue braid, replacing the prior year's plain blue knit trim.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2013 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

- The 2009 road jersey is very similar to the 2008 version.
- Front lettering is the same, as is the use of the Texas state flag on the left sleeve.
- The only changes from the prior year's design are the new player name and number font and the change of sleeve-end braid color to blue/red from the earlier blue only.
- 2009 jerseys are exclusively Coo Base, regular double knits are history for the Rangers.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2013 Alternate Blue

2010

Even though the team has a complete uniform makeover for 2009, the basic blue jersey is mostly identical to its 2000–2008 counterpart. The wordmark is a four-color white/gray/blue/red design making for a very thick appliqué. It is now made in Cool Base fabric only.

Player name and numbers change and are in the new-for-2009 style. Three-color design used on the blue jersey is simpler than on the home and road jerseys, rendered here in white/royal blue/red and no drop shadows.

The Texas state flag patch is used on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2013 Alternate Home Red

The Rangers add a red alternate to the lineup for the first time since 1985. It is intended for home use only.

The red jersey features simpler white knit trim on the sleeve ends, and a three-color wordmark that lacks the drop shadow found on the home and road jerseys. The front wordmark is done in a fancy, beveled style that makes it look 3D, in the same style as that used on blue jerseys of 2000–2008.

Player name and numbers are in the new style, and are also a simpler three-color design than on the home and road jerseys, rendered here in white/gray/royal blue. No drop shadows.

The Texas state flag patch is used on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2019 Home

For 2014, the front wordmark is simplified by removing the black drop shadow. The order of the colors is changed as well, as the “TEXAS” is now rendered in blue/white/red. The back number and the player NOB is changed as well, identical to the front wordmark, now in blue/white/red.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2019 Road

Changes are the same as those made to the home white jersey. The front wordmark is simplified by removing the black drop shadow. The order of the colors is changed as well, as the “TEXAS” is now rendered in blue/white/red. The back number and the player NOB are changed similarly, now also in blue/white/red.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2019 Alternate Blue

Of the Rangers' four jerseys, the blue one is least changed for 2014.

The blue jersey is simplified by losing the fussy and complex gray "bevel-cut" layer on the team wordmark, making it now a three-color design (white/blue/red). Player name and number on the back, however, does not change, and it is the only jersey in the Rangers set of four that is left alone. It remains three-color, white/blue/red, now just like the front wordmark.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2019 Alternate Home Red

The front wordmark is changed, losing its fussy gray three-dimensional beveling, but remains three-color. In place of the removed gray, an additional red outline is substituted; the lettering is now white/red/blue.

On the back, the lettering of both NOB and player number changes from white/gray/blue to white/red/blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016: Flex Base Jersey Construction and Branding

Read the full story on MLB's adoption of Flex Base jerseys for 2016 in Chapter 2.

In 2016, all teams adopt Majestic's new "Flex Base" on-field game jerseys, which are made of Cool Base fabric, but with several new elements designed to make them lighter and more breathable. The new jerseys have mesh side panels that run the length of the jersey, and one on the back tail called the "Air Belt." They also use "Kiss Cut" layering for front decorations, names, and numbers, which Majestic says is 10-20% lighter than traditional layered twill. Finally, the MLB logo on the back neck is now a rubberized patch, called CFX by Majestic, and the heat-pressed tag on the front tail differs from Cool Base jerseys of old.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Home

2021

2020

2022

The team name returns to the front of the Rangers 2020 home jersey, where only “TEXAS” has appeared since 2009. In a new script font only slightly reminiscent of the one the team used from 1984–1993, “Rangers” appears in blue/white/red on front of Nike’s version of Majestic’s Flex Base jersey. The team’s ornate player name and number font returns on this set, here in blue/white/red drop shadow. Red/white/blue trim encircles both sleeve ends, and the Texas state flag patch returns to the left sleeve, and bowing to player requests, the patch has been reduced in size.

For 2020, the Rangers’ Inaugural Season at Globe Life Field patch appears on the right sleeve. In 2022, the team’s 50th anniversary logo takes residence on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Road

2020

2022

The Rangers' 2020 full redesign of their uniforms includes their road gray jerseys, which retains "TEXAS" in blue/white/red from the last incarnation, now on Nike's version of Majestic's Flex Base template. The back font on player names and numbers remains the same as well, but now appears in blue/white/red drop shadow, while the Texas state flag patch returns to the left sleeve, and bowing to player requests, the patch has been reduced in size. Sleeve-end braid is now red/white/blue.

For 2020, the Rangers' Inaugural Season at Globe Life Field patch appears on the right sleeve. In 2022, the team's 50th anniversary logo takes residence on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2022 Alternate Home Red

2020

2022

Like the road jersey, the 2020 version of the red alternate jersey is substantially similar to the previous version, now on Nike's version of Majestic's Flex Base template. "TEXAS" appears again on front in white/red/blue as before, and the back font on player names and numbers remains the same as well, but now appears in white/red/blue drop shadow. The Texas state flag patch returns to the left sleeve, smaller than in prior years, and sleeve-end braid is now red/white/blue.

For 2020, the Rangers' Inaugural Season at Globe Life Field patch appears on the right sleeve. In 2022, the team's 50th anniversary logo takes residence on the right sleeve. For 2020–2022, these are worn for Friday home games. This style is discontinued after the 2022 season to make room for the City Connect jersey launched in 2023.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2022 Alternate Home Powder Blue/2023 Alternate Home

2021

2020

2022

Powder blue returns to MLB with a vengeance in the late 2010s, and in 2020 the Rangers also re-adopt the color, which was once a feature of their road jerseys. “Rangers” script adorns the front of this Nike version of Majestic’s Flex Base jersey, here rendered in white/blue/red drop shadow (the home jersey does not have the drop shadow). The team’s ornate player name and number font appears on this new set, here in white/blue/red drop shadow. Red/white/blue trim encircles both sleeve ends, and the now-smaller Texas state flag patch appears on the left sleeve. These were intended for use for Sunday home games.

For 2020, the Rangers’ Inaugural Season at Globe Life Field patch adorns the right sleeve. In 2022, the team’s 50th anniversary logo takes residence on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Alternate Road

2020

2022

The 2020 version of the blue alternate jersey is substantially similar to the previous version, now on Nike's version of Majestic's Flex Base template. "TEXAS" appears again on front in white/blue/red as before, and the back font on player names and numbers remains the same as well, but now appears in white/blue/red drop shadow. By player request, a smaller Texas state flag patch returns to the left sleeve, while sleeve-end braid is red/white/powder blue through 2021, and changes to red/white/blue in 2022. For 2020, the Rangers' Inaugural Season at Globe Life Field patch appears on the right sleeve. In 2022, the team's 50th anniversary logo takes residence on the right sleeve. After having been worn at as an alternate at home and on the road for many years, it becomes strictly a road alternate beginning in 2020.

A comparison of the 2020-2021 red/white/powder blue sleeve trim on left, vs. the red/white/blue sleeve trim starting in 2022 on right.

© GameWornGuides.com

2023 City Connect

The Rangers' entry into City Connect combines several references to the rich history of baseball in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, including the Fort Worth Panthers, the Dallas Eagles, and the Dallas-Fort Worth Spurs. The cream-colored Nike jersey features midnight blue braid trim around the sleeve openings, and a midnight blue/cream "TX" logo that mirrors the Old English font the Eagles wore on their caps with a spur added to reference the Spurs. Front and back player numbers in red/cream are in a typeface borrowed from the Panthers' 1920 championship medal. The sleeve patch is a combination of an Eagle and a Panther. Two other details are included that reinforce the theme, but are invisible on the field, though attractive at retail. The motto "Dream the Big Dream," heat pressed above the jock tag, is a quote from former Arlington Mayor Tom Vandergriff, who brought the Rangers to Arlington. Finally, "4-21" heat pressed inside the collar represents the date of San Jacinto Day, when Texas won its independence from Mexico. Appropriately, it also is the anniversary of the Rangers' first game in Arlington in 1972, and the debut date of these jerseys in 2023.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Nike “Vapor Premiere Elite” Jersey Template

Nike Flex Base 2020–2023

Nike Vapor Premier Elite 2024

Following league-wide sweeping changes to MLB jerseys with all teams switching from Nike’s 2020–2023 continuation of the Majestic Flex Base jersey shell to its new Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) template, the jerseys of the 2024 season become an anomaly—a “one and done” season of changes that brought intense scrutiny from players and fans alike. Based on the negative feedback, especially from MLB players, Nike rolled back some but not all of the 2024 changes in time for the 2025 season.

The full rundown of the changes is outlined earlier in “The Basics” chapter, but generally speaking, 2024’s crop of jerseys had changed from earlier versions in several key ways.

- VPE home jerseys are off-white, or light cream color. The earlier Flex Base white jerseys are a bright, purer white. Grays are standardized.
- The front placket is narrower on VPE, which often causes team wordmark lettering that crosses the placket to break differently.
- Neck and sleeve trim elements (when used) are no longer sewn on top of the jersey material, but are now “sewn-in” to the jersey at the seams. Placket trim adornment remains the same, though the trim is now spaced closer together with the narrowing in placket size.
- For improved visibility, the MLB logo on the back of the jersey is moved several inches lower onto the back, down from the collar placket area where it had been since 2000.
- VPE loses the integrated mesh side and back tail panels that had been part of the Flex Base jersey template.
- Player names on VPE are much smaller, and for many teams are done in a standardized block font, all using a much steeper, nearly semi-circular arch.
- For teams with front numbers, the new 2024 font is simply always a reduced size of the back numbers. This was not the way it had been in the past for most teams, with front numbers being a font variant (smaller but usually wider and bolder) than the back font.
- Team logo sleeve patches, and in some cases sponsor sleeve patches change from traditional raised embroidery to flat printed plastic or to sublimated cloth/twill
- All lettering is done using a new more lightweight (thinner) kind of matte-finished twill (commonly called “Nike Twill”). Most, but not all jerseys incorporate barely visible micro-perforation on the numbers, front and back.
- Universally, nameplates are no longer used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Home

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Rangers recently updated home jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the "Rangers" script splits in a slightly different place than before. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than sewn on to it, and the team's ad patch appears on the right sleeve while the Texas flag patch is on the left. The Rangers use perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Road

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Rangers recently updated road jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the "TEXAS" lettering splits the across the "X" rather than between the "E" and "X" as before. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than sewn on to it, and the team's ad patch appears on the right sleeve while the Texas flag patch is on the left. The Rangers use perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Road

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Rangers dark blue alternate jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the "TEXAS" lettering splits the across the "X" rather than between the "E" and "X" as before. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than sewn on to it, and the team's ad patch appears on the right sleeve while the Texas flag patch is on the left. The Rangers use perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Home

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Rangers popular powder blue alternate jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the "Rangers" script splits in a slightly different place than before. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than sewn on to it, and the team's ad patch appears on the right sleeve while the Texas flag patch is on the left. The Rangers use perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024-2025 City Connect

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Rangers year-old City Connect jersey. For most teams, the most visible change is the league-wide shrinking of the back names and numbers. The Rangers' City Connect, however, has no name on back, and the numbering and front logo do not look to be much smaller, if at all. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it as before. The team's ad patch appears opposite the eagle/panther patch starting in 2024, marking another addition, which also includes the use of perforated numbers, consistent with the switch to VPE as well. Overall, it is one of the least noticeable conversions to VPE in all of MLB. Carryover City Connect jerseys are not updated in 2025, despite the updates to the team's other jerseys for the 2025 season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Home

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. The jersey also features the new-for-2025 white Nike jock tag used on a handful of jerseys around MLB. Otherwise, these remain the same as in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Road

The 2025 season brings many changes to road gray jerseys across MLB. The 2024 VPE gray jerseys suffered from significant sweat-staining issues during games, so 2025 gray jerseys revert back to the same base fabric used for Flex Base, but applied to the VPE template (no mesh side panels or “Air Belt” back panel). Other pre-2024 elements return, including neck and sleeve trim being sewn on to jerseys again rather than sewn in. The redundant, jersey-colored band of trim around the neck opening is also deleted. Back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. VPE’s placket remains narrow, so the “TEXAS” script breaks in the same place as in 2024, that is to say, awkwardly across the “X”. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Road

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Home

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

Batting Practice and Spring Training Jerseys

1982-1983 Batting Practice

Stephen Kraljic collection

Royal blue mesh jersey with wide knit white/red/ white racing stripes sewn in across the shoulder tops.“TR” Texas state logo on front left chest. Every example I have seen of this type jersey has the logo SCREENED on, not sewn on. Numbers on the back are white vinyl heat-press type. They are in a stock catalog font, different from the style of the Rangers’ game jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

1984-1993 Batting Practice

1990

1989

Above Right: Large rectangular red Rawlings tag on example helps us date it as 1992–1993. Left: 1989 example is made by Majestic and uses Majestic Varsity font for numbers.

Royal blue mesh, white/red "Rangers" script sewn on front. Two-color – white/red numbers sewn on back only. The font for the numbers varies from year to year and seems related to which manufacturer makes the jersey. Majestic Bold is used on Majestic jerseys, Both Block and Block with Serifs on Rawlings jerseys. No player names on back are used.

1992

Bottom right: The sewn-in elastic stripes on the sleeve tops on this jersey style are easily damaged by bleach. On casual examination it appears that the elastic is only red/white/red, but it is actually quite a bit wider, with a thick blue stripe in the elastic on each side. Many examples have the blue edges on both sides bleached to a pale blue, like this jersey shown.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid 1980s-1993 / Mid 1990s
Alternate Batting Practice Zip-Necks

Majestic offered these zipper-neck batting practice jerseys they called "The Gamewarmer" to all MLB teams starting in the mid 1980s through the early 1990s (the Rangers wore this style wordmark from 1984 through 1993). Some teams adopted them, putting names and numbers on the backs. Others simply issued them to players who wanted to wear them like a jacket, with no lettering on the back.

I do not have any photos of the Rangers wearing this style, though they well may have. Examples from other teams showed that these came in both mesh and solid fabric styles. This solid-fabric jersey is the only example with Rangers lettering I have in my photo archives.

© GameWornGuides.com

1994-1999 Batting Practice

Stephen Kraljic collection

1998

Royal blue mesh with red/white "Rangers" on front. Two-color red/white numbers on back, no player names used. Both Majestic and Russell make sets of these for the Rangers. Notice that Majestic-made jerseys have their "house font," Majestic Block Bold (hallmark is the 8-sided inside holes on the "8"). Russell jerseys use Athletic Block lettering, same as found on the team's game jerseys that are also made by Russell.

1994

1994

1996

1994

2000-2002 Batting Practice

Heavyweight royal blue mesh, gray/ white/blue/red "Rangers" across the front. This style was made in both regular mesh as well as a shiny micro-mesh. Both are shown above. Block numbers only on the back, no names. Three-color white/ royal/red sewn on.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003-2004 Batting Practice

- New softer non-mesh tech fabric, red piping on shoulders.
- “T” with Texas flag on the front.
- Three-color white/royal/red .
- White/red Block numbers only, no names used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005-2006 “Rangers” Batting Practice

The Rangers again change batting practice jerseys for 2005, and they now have two of them. Both are royal blue with red sleeve inserts and piping trim, both are listed in the MLB Style Guide as “Home or Away.”

The RANGERS one goes “retro," resurrecting the 1984–1993 lettering script.

Numbers on the back are Block three-color white/blue/red. No names are used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005-2006 “Texas” Batting Practice

- TEXAS batting practice jersey is royal blue with red sleeve inserts and piping, both are listed in the MLB Style Guide as “Home or Away.”
- Jersey has the same beveled, 3-D-looking lettering on the front as the blue alternate game jersey.
- Numbers on the back are identical to home BP jersey on prior page. Block three-color white/blue/red. No names are used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2008 Batting Practice

The 2007 version looks very similar to the 2006 edition, with the exception that a new red side panel is added.

Numbers on the back are Block, two-color white/red. No player names are used.

All logos and numbers are heat-applied appliqués, not sewn tackle twill.

The Rangers joined all other teams and participated in the MLB switch to Cool Base batting practice jerseys. While in recent years they had used two different batting practice jerseys, for 2007–2008, they only have one.

The Rangers used these in at least one regular season game on 8/24/2007 vs. the Mariners.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2010 Batting Practice

For 2009, the Cool Base pullover batting practice jersey says “TEXAS” across its front in non-3D white/gray/royal blue/red. On back, no names and three-color numbers in the new stylized font, white/royal blue/red. Red accent stripes adorn the sides, all lettering is heat-applied appliqué, not tackle twill.

While most teams showcase their batting practice jersey in games during Spring Training, photos show that the Rangers wear their alternate blue game jersey nearly exclusively for Spring Training games.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2013 Batting Practice

The Rangers 2011–2013 batting practice jersey is a button-front, light-weight Cool Base shirt in royal blue with red side panels. Numbers on back are three-colors white/blue/red. While most teams wear their batting practice jerseys in Spring Training games, the Rangers appear to rarely use them for that, wearing their similar looking blue alternate jerseys exclusively. Therefore, finding photos of players wearing them are uncommon.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2016 Batting Practice

MLB and Majestic changed all teams' batting practice jerseys for 2014, but changes to the Rangers' BP jersey are very minor. Knit sleeve end and neck trim in blue/red/blue was added, red side panels are made slightly smaller than in 2013. Finding pictures of Rangers players wearing BP jerseys are very difficult, as the team rarely wears them. In Spring Training, they wear regular season game jerseys for all their contests.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's new for 2016 Spring Training Jerseys in Chapter 8.

2016 Spring Training

For the first time in 2016, MLB introduces a Spring Training-specific jersey intended to be worn for workouts and games in the pre-season. The jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features a special printed twill, decorated with "2016" and Spring Training symbols, as the main twill layer for every team. The Rangers use their regular season blue alternate as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill/ blue/red. The jersey also features a rubberized, CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading "2016" and "AZ" representing where the Rangers spend Spring Training. The "PLAYER 16" jersey shown above is a prototype made up for the team.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Spring Training

Spring Training-only jerseys return for all teams in 2017 with some minor design modifications. Just as in 2016, the jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features special printed twill, this year decorated with “2017” and Spring Training symbols. However, all teams now use the same twill, in single-color white with gray printing, replacing the many team-specific combinations from the year before.

The Rangers again use their regular season blue alternate as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill. The jersey features a recolored version of the rubberized CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading “2017” and “AZ” representing where the Rangers spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2019 Batting Practice

With many players opting for lightweight cage jackets, which are devoid of player identification, instead of traditional BP jerseys with player names and numbers, Majestic introduces a replacement product that may be an attempt to gain acceptance by the pros on field while being more attractive to fans at retail. New for 2017, official team batting practice jerseys are replaced with what Majestic calls a 3/4 Sleeve BP Trainer. The new hybrid is cut in a pullover jacket silhouette, including a short zipper at the neck, but made of Cool Base jersey material. The underarm and back panels are of Cool Base mesh, like the sides and tail of Flex Base jerseys. Team logos and other lettering is in what Majestic calls “lightweight twill” (as described in Chapter 8). The Majestic logo is applied to the middle of the left sleeve, and a new, heat-pressed Cool Base tag adorns the left front tail. The Rangers jersey is royal blue with red back and underarm gussets. The "T" logo from their caps appears on the front left chest in white/royal blue/white 3D drop shadow. The back of the jersey is blank. Player number in white/royal blue/red in special Rangers font on left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Spring Training

The 2018 Spring Training jerseys continue the general design of the previous year, again featuring all player name and number lettering using each team's regular fonts, in only one layer of twill printed with special Spring Training and 2018-year-specific patterns. The Rangers use their regular-season blue alternate as their base. The name and back numbers are sewn on in white patterned twill. A new CFX patch, shaped like home plate, is stitched to the right sleeve, featuring "2018" and "AZ" representing their Spring Training home.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Spring Training

The 2019 Spring Training jersey template evolves to create yet another iteration of the theme of the last three years. This time, jersey backs abandon the single-color printed twill treatment of the past and return to regular season style of multi-layered team-color twill like 2016, yet without 2016's printed patterns. The Rangers use their regular-season blue alternate as the base for this design, carrying a new CFX patch on the right sleeve, featuring "2019" and "ARZ," referencing their Spring Training home. The name and back numbers are white/blue/red.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2022 Spring Training

2020

2022

Spring Training is simplified for 2020, league-wide. For the first time since 2016, Spring Training jerseys eliminate the special sleeve patch indicating the year and location of a team's Spring Training home, and now the lettering is the same non-patterned, multi-layered twill as the teams wear in the regular season, making many teams' spring jerseys identical to their regular-season alternates. For 2020–2022, the Rangers use a design separate from their new, regular-season standard set, trimmed like their blue alternate, but with "TX" on a Texas-shaped patch on the front left chest instead of TEXAS lettering, with white/blue/red drop shadow name and back numbers. The 2022 version has the team's 50th anniversary patch on the right sleeve. This style is discontinued after 2022.

2022

© GameWornGuides.com

2023 Spring Training

For 2023, the Rangers move away from their previous Spring Training-only jersey, instead opting to use their regular season blue alternates, likely a result of Nike simplifying the number of jerseys each team uses. Made on Nike's version of the Flex Base template, this jersey has "TEXAS" on front in white/blue/red with player names and numbers on back in white/blue/red drop shadow. Sleeve-end braid is red/white/blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

Special Events Jerseys

1993 Turn Back the Clock to the 1940s “Fauxback”

The Rangers and the Brewers played two games wearing 1940s style throwback uniforms: Brewers at Rangers on May 1,1993 and Rangers at Brewers on July 6, 1993. The Rangers wore the same cream-colored knit uniforms with red felt lettering for both home and away games. When the Turn Back the Clock craze was just getting started in the early 1990s, the Rangers wanted to participate—but had little actual MLB history to draw upon. So, they concocted Rangers flannels as they might have looked if the team had existed in the 1940s and asked Mitchell & Ness to make them. Therefore, these are “might have been” TBTC jerseys— or “fauxbacks”— not copies of anything real. They are made of knit fabric, and they do not have tagging on the front tail as later TBTC versions of this jersey do.

I could not resist including this period excerpt from Jayson Stark, my favorite baseball writer. Sort of sums it all up for me.

Philadelphia Inquirer/Jayson Stark/Week in Review/May 9, 1993: THROWBACKS: On May 1, Week in Review officially declared Turn Back the Clock Day to be a once brilliant idea that had outlived its usefulness. It's always been tough enough pretending that, say, Veterans Stadium was the Baker Bowl. But last weekend, when the Texas Rangers tried to roll 'back time and get folks to reminisce about those good old 1940 Rangers, that put us over the line. They supposedly were reenacting a game that night between the 1940 Rangers and the 1920 Milwaukee Brewers. But one minor problem was that the Rangers didn't exist until 1972 and the Brewers didn't come along until 1970. And the dignitaries on hand allegedly included Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who couldn't stay for the whole game because he had to go back to the war, which his army didn't even enter for another year. So turning back the clock is one thing. But inventing your own clock was something else entirely. "Yeah, I don't know how they did that," said Week in Review's favorite Ranger, Jeff Huson. “We must have been in Peabody's time machine." Huson said another thing that made it tough to pretend that it was 1940 was the presence of Jose Canseco, who Was trying to look like a contemporary of Joe DiMaggio's—"especially when he drives up in his Lamborghini. I don't think they had them back then. I think. they had horse-drawn carriages." Since Huson was on the disabled list, he said he was in charge of looking up important facts about the beloved 1940 Rangers. His research showed they had a record of, uh, 153- 1. "Hey, if we're gonna make up a team," he said, "might as well make them pretty good." Some historians believe Nolan Ryan was the fifth starter for that club. But Huson's research disproved that. "Nah, he was the batboy," Huson said. "He wasn't quite old enough. They had child labor laws back then, you know." Yes, but one thing they didn't have was any Turn Back the Clock Days. And we now know they had the right idea.

© GameWornGuides.com

1993-1995 St. Patrick's Day

Top Left: This jersey style may have been worn in 1993. #19 is signed by Juan Gonzalez, who played for the team in 1993-1994. Bottom Left: The #51 has an MLB trademark screened on the front and was issued to #51 Mark Brandenberg who played in 1995.

Front wordmark, two-color back numbers are screened on in white/black. Look at those odd sleeve end "cuffs."

© GameWornGuides.com

1994 Turn Back the Clock to the 1960s

- The Rangers hosted the Twins on May 8, 1994.These navy blue chalk-pinstripe flannels look very much like 1961 expansion Washington Senators jerseys, fitting because the Rangers were born from the Senators when that team deserted Washington after the 1971 season.
- To meet the Rangers' wishes, Mitchell & Ness designed jerseys that said "Rangers" on the front, but looking like the last Senators uniforms, even though the Rangers never wore jerseys that looked like these.
- The Twins wore 1965 gray flannels by Mitchell & Ness.
- Script and numbers are sewn in two-color, red with navy blue outlining.

Left: 1966 Washington Senators Uniform. Note that the Senators used the same unusual number font was used on the early Rangers home uniforms,with the odd-ly-shaped #1! It is very likely that the team continued to use the same lettering house even after the team moved to Texas from Washington.

© GameWornGuides.com

1996 St. Patrick's Day

This style green mesh jersey was worn in 1996, using the current team wordmark pattern instead of the retro script one. Numbers are sewn on, two-color Block, white/ dark royal blue.

Stephen Kraljic collection

© GameWornGuides.com

1996 Turn Back the Clock to the 1930s "Fauxback"

Stephen Kraljic collection

- In a virtual repeat of their 1993 appearance, the Rangers hosted another Turn Back the Clock day wearing Mitchell & Ness knit uniforms that simply "look like" they are from the 1930s, but are not a copy of any real uniform (aka "fauxbacks").
- The Orioles were the visiting team that day, and they wore 1930s-style AAA International League Orioles knit uniforms.
- The 1996 Rangers tops can be differentiated from the 1993 versions because they feature a Mitchell & Ness tag on the tail as well as a smaller tag reading "T.B.C. 4-21-96," the date of the game.

© GameWornGuides.com

2002 Turn Back the Clock to 1961 Washington Senators

Bill Henderson Collection

- The Rangers visited the Oakland Athletics for a three game series they billed as “The Guts and Glory," July 19, 20, 21, 2002. The Rangers wore the road uniforms of the 1961 Washington Senators while the A’s dressed as the 1972 Athletics.
- The Rangers uniforms are made in knit by Rawlings and are as plain as road uniforms come– devoid of trim and with single-color navy blue Block Bold numbers on back.
- An original 1962 Senators uniform is shown below right. The front wordmark is a little different, and numbers on back are in the McAuliffe font.

Original 1962 Senators road uniform

© GameWornGuides.com

2002 Turn Back the Clock to 1961 Washington Senators

Bill Henderson Collection

- Billed as “The Triumphant Glory Series*," the Rangers played the A’s July 27 and 28, 2002. The Rangers dressed as the expansion 1961 Washington Senators (the ancestral forebearers of the modern Texas Rangers).
- Rawlings made these poly knit jerseys with tackle twill lettering.
- Numbers on back are Block with Serifs.
- Original 1961 Senators uniform is shown below. Note the use of the variant version of Block (pointy tipped “1”) that carried over and was used by the Rangers 1972–1979.

Original 1961 Senators Uniform

* “Triumphant Glory?” I wonder who came up with that? the 1961 Senators finished the season 41 ½ games out… tied for 10th (and last) place with—-the 1961 Kansas City A’s!

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Turn Back the Clock to 1974

Bill Henderson Collection

In 2004, the Rangers appeared at home in relatively close, but not exact copies of their 1974 uniforms. While there is no sleeve patch (like 1972–1974), the names on back are two-color Block Condensed Font (like 1981–1982) and they should actually be one-color to properly reprise 1974.

Majestic did a reasonably good job (but not a perfect one) of copying the Rangers-only variant of Block numbers used by the team on home jerseys throughout the 1970s. An 'A' for effort.

These uniforms were worn for two games, July 30 and July 31 against Oakland, to whom they had finished in second place 30 years prior in 1974.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Turn Back the Clock to 1983

Bill Henderson Collection

- On August 7 and 8, 2004, the Rangers appeared in Baltimore as the 1983 Rangers, wearing reasonably good copies of their one year-only 1983 uniforms. Perhaps the fabric is a little too dark blue, and the sleeve end stripes on the copies were somewhat narrower than on the originals.
- The gray pants the team wore were good copies of the pants the team wore… from ten years earlier in 1974. 1983 pants would have been white.
- The number font used on the TBTC jerseys was the wrong one, as they use the 1972–1980 Rangers Block variant font. Authentic 1983 jerseys would have used Block Standard font.

© GameWornGuides.com

2006 Hispanic Heritage

Bill Henderson Collection

- On May 5, 2006 the Rangers hosted a special date to promote their relationship with the Hispanic community. Since “Rangers” is the same word in both languages, they simply altered the script to say Los Rangers for the day.
- The team used the older 1984–1993 jersey script style that still appears as an alternate on jackets and period batting practice jerseys.
- A special Cinco de Mayo 2006 patch appears on the right sleeve, the standard Texas state flag patch is on the left.
- Player names are two-color, blue/red, no nameplates. Front wordmark and back player numbers are three-color, blue/red/black drop shadow.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Turn Back the Clock to 1968 Washington Senators

1968 Original
(with 1969 patch)

The Rangers appear as the 1968 Washington Senators on May 4, 2008, vs. the 1968 Oakland A's. Majestic uniforms are a reasonably good copy, but team script is a bit thicker and more slanted than the original (left).

Red cap is nearly identical to the one adopted by the current Washington Nationals and worn by them in 2008.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 40th Anniversary Celebration Turn Back the Clock Dates

According to a Rangers Press release, December 14, 2011:

"To celebrate the Texas Rangers' 40th Anniversary, the team has scheduled four 'Turn-Back-The-Clock' games in 2012 when the club will wear the home uniform from a different year in Rangers history. The visiting club on each date will be in the road uniforms of the respective years. In addition, the first 30,000 fans will receive a 40th Anniversary promotional item on each date."

- Saturday, May 12 vs. Los Angeles Angels—1974 white home uniform
- Saturday, June 16 vs. Houston—1986 white home uniform
- Saturday, July 7 vs. Minnesota—1994 white home uniform
- Saturday, August 11 vs. Detroit—1976 powder blue home uniform "

Did they say "powder blue HOME uniform"? Someone in the Rangers' Public Relations office needs to go back and look at some photos from the 1976 season, when the home uniform was most definitely white and the ROAD uniform was powder blue. Yes, the Rangers wore their blue jerseys at home a couple of times in 1975 (inset right) but the all-blue 1976 uniform set was their ROAD duds.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Turn Back the Clock to 1974

May 12, 2012: These photos show the Rangers hosting the Angels wearing Turn Back the Clock to 1974 uniforms (the Angels actually wore 1972 road replicas). The Rangers' Majestic uniforms are rather good copies of the originals, even using the obscure and correct number font from 1972–1979 that was actually a holdover from the 1971 Washington Senators.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Turn Back the Clock to 1986

June 16, 2012: The Rangers truly put together a concerted effort to make their 40th anniversary year a special one, and worked hard with Majestic to create replicas of historic uniforms that were very faithful to the originals.

The 1986 script jersey is nearly perfect in every way, right down to the oversized numbers on front. Were it not for the Majestic "M" on the sleeve, these could easily be passed off as original 1986 jerseys. It is made of full-weight knit fabric and is not Cool Base. The visiting Astros also wore 1986 uniforms.

The jersey above (with tagging below) was issued to Rafael Palmeiro, who retired in 2005, for a pregame ceremony on the day of this throwback game. It features the team's anniversary patch, which was used on regular-season jerseys that year, but not on the jerseys that players wore in the throwback game on June 16.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Turn Back the Clock to 1994

July 7, 2012: The 1994 replica jerseys are true and faithful reproductions of the originals, replicated in full-weight knit by Majestic. They are nearly indistinguishable from the originals, including the intentional omission of the MLB 125th patch, which the Rangers wore only on their road uniforms that year. The visiting Twins also dressed in 1994 uniforms.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Turn Back the Clock to 1976

August 11, 2012: A near-exact replica of the 1976 road jersey was commissioned by the Rangers for their 40th anniversary celebration, and sewn by Majestic. This jersey selection is odd only in that it is a road powder blue, but is made to be worn at home for this game. The visiting Tigers also dressed in replica 1976 road uniforms —theirs in gray—-which pitted two road-uniformed teams against each other. In this day of alternate uniforms of every hue, likely no one even considered this an issue.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's Memorial Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

2013 Memorial Day

On the road in Arizona for May 27, Memorial Day 2013, the Rangers wore a set of gray Cool Base uniforms with the main lettering color (blue) replaced front and back with military desert camouflage twill. While camo-on-gray is usually impossible to read, the Rangers' use of multiple colors of outlining plus a black drop shadow make these only "slightly-passably-visible" from the seats.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Negro Leagues Tribute (Ft. Worth Black Panthers)

The Rangers visited Detroit for the Tigers' 14th annual Negro Leagues Weekend in 2014, and wore knit uniforms made of a convincingly gray-flannel-appearing fabric by AIS, the Tigers usual supplier for these games. The Rangers uniforms were made to replicate those of the Fort Worth Texas Black Panthers.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Memorial Day

On the road for a second straight year on May 26, Memorial Day 2014, the Rangers again wore their road grays with the blue twill lettering replaced with desert camouflage twill. But, because the team had tweaked their uniforms for the 2014 season, the black drop shadows have been removed from all lettering, both in the wordmark and in player name and number. As a result, the Rangers' lettering rendered in desert camouflage/ white/red on gray fabric makes the writing all but invisible from any distance greater than ten feet.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Memorial Day

The Rangers are on the road again for Memorial Day, May 25, 2015, so their jerseys are identical to 2014. Once again, the top layer of all player names, numbers, and the team wordmark is desert camouflage, while the rest of the jersey remains the same as usual. The same issues of camo text on a gray jersey reappear as in the year prior. In 2015, the MLB Silhouetted Batter neck tag is changed to dark green/khaki/white rather than its typical colors from 2014.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Independence Day

Read the full story on MLB's Independence Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

For Independence Day 2015, all 29 U.S.-based teams adopt patriotic "Stars and Stripes" uniforms for the first time. For this day, all uniforms are re-lettered in a combination of red, white, and blue, regardless of what the team's normal color palate might be. Jersey trim and patches remain the same as the team's regular jerseys. All teams sport a stars and stripes version of the MLB Silhouetted Batter logo on the back collar. The Rangers wear their home white jerseys with the red-background version of the starred twill, which features large white stars; all lettering outlined in blue, including their front logo as well as back numbers. Two-layer twill replaces the usual three-color lettering on the jerseys. Player names on back are in blue. An American flag patch is sewn on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Turn Back The Clock to 1976-1980

Stephen Kraljic collection

For the third time, the Rangers throw back to their late 70s powder blue road uniforms with distinctive two-button Henley collar. In a July 18 game against the Astros, who wear their "rainbow guts" uniforms, the Rangers wear these Majestic knit jerseys, which are very good reproductions of the originals. Red/white wordmark on front, blue names sewn directly on back, and red/white/blue numbers on back. One discrepancy: this jersey has no sleeve patches, while the Rangers wore one every season this style jersey was used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Mother's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Mother's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

For the first time in 2016, all teams wear special pink-trimmed uniforms Mother's Day, Sunday, May 8. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Mother's Days), while the Majestic sleeve logo is rendered in pink and the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark pink/light pink/white.

The Rangers wear their road gray jerseys with the typical three-color front logo lettering reduced to pink with dark gray outlines. The usually three-color player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, and the standard three-color back numbers are pink/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of pink, gray, and white (unusual, as it changes the representation of a state flag's familiar colors). All jersey trim, normally red/blue, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Memorial Day

The 2016 Memorial Day jerseys are constructed in the Flex Base style for the first time, and the ChromaFlex MLB logo at back neck becomes black and dark gold for all teams. The new, league-wide template, with higher-visibility woodland camo lettering and black outlines, makes this set more legible than in prior years. The Rangers apply the camouflage trimmings to their road gray jerseys for the game on May 30. The typically three-color front lettering and back numbers are rendered in two-color woodland camo with a black outline, and player names appear in single-color black. Like other teams, their sleeve patches are reduced to shades of green, gray, and black (unusual, as it changes the representation of a state flag's familiar colors), and trim elements are also simplified to single-color black from the usual red/blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Father's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Father's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

For the first time in 2016, all teams wear special light blue-trimmed uniforms Father's Day, Sunday, June 19. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized front tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Father's Days), while the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark royal blue/light blue/white.

The Rangers wear their road gray jerseys with the typically three-color front logo lettering reduced to light blue with dark gray outlines. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while back numbers, usually three-color, are light blue/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of light blue, gray, and white (unusual, as it changes the representation of a state flag's familiar colors). All jersey trim, normally red/blue, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Independence Day

MLB creates yet another new Independence Day jersey template for the 2016 iteration, now built on Majestic's new Flex Base jersey construction. Each Independence Day jersey has a ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB appliqué sewn on the back of the neck. The Rangers are on the road and wear their road jersey. All clubs have a choice of two styles of star-spangled lettering twill and the Rangers select the red twill version with blue outlines to replace their typically three-color front lettering and back numbers, with a blue player name on back. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. New for 2016, team sleeve patches are now embroidered in red, white, and blue, and since the Rangers patch is the flag of Texas, the blue in this version is much darker than the normal blue. This creates an unusual situation where MLB is changing the colors of a state flag (not unlike they did with the Orioles' patch) to honor America. All jersey trim, normally red/blue, becomes single-color red.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Turn Back the Clock to 1986

The Rangers wear 1986 road throwbacks twice in 2016: on July 20 at the Angels and August 6 at the Astros. In both cases, the opposing home teams also wear their 1986 home throwbacks. The Rangers road uniforms are gray knit by Majestic, and feature royal/white lettering throughout. Overall, very faithful duplicates of the originals.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Mother's Day

Pink-trimmed Mother's Day jerseys return on May 13–14, 2017. Once again, the Flex Base jerseys have the usual front left tail Majestic heat applied vinyl locker tag and team inventory tag inside the bottom of the placket. Returning as well is the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon glued on left chest; the pink Majestic sleeve logo; and the dark pink/light pink/white ChromaFlex MLB Silhouetted Batter applique stitched on the back of the collar. All multi-colored lettering is done in the lightweight-twill style. The Rangers wear their home white jerseys with the front logo lettering in pink/dark gray. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while back numbers are pink/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of pink, gray, and white, which makes for an unusual situation with the Texas state flag changing colors. All jersey trim, normally blue/red, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Memorial Day (Road)

The next version of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single-color black, while the back-of-collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment, which makes for an unusual situation with the Texas state flag changing colors. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Rangers apply this style to their road gray jerseys as worn on May 27–28, 2017 and May 28, 2018.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Memorial Day (Home)

Starting in 2017, Memorial Day is represented all days of the three-day weekend, meaning some teams, like the Rangers, have both home and road versions of this jersey. The new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single-color black, while the back-of-collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment, which makes for an unusual situation with the Texas state flag changing colors. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Rangers apply this style to their home white jerseys as worn on May 29, 2017 and May 26–27, 2018.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Father's Day

Light blue-trimmed Father's Day jerseys return on June 17–18, 2017. Once again, the Flex Base jerseys have the usual front left tail Majestic tagging and set tagging at the inside bottom of the placket. Returning as well is the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon glued on left chest, the light blue Majestic embroidered sleeve logo, and the dark royal blue/light blue/white back collar ChromaFlex MLB Silhouetted Batter patch.

The Rangers wear home white with the front logo lettering in light blue/dark gray. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while back numbers are light blue/dark gray. All jersey trim, normally blue/red, becomes dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of pink, gray, and white, which makes for an unusual situation with the Texas state flag changing colors.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Independence Day (Road)

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less-busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two different color options for the new twill – appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 1–2, 2017, the Rangers wear their road gray jersey with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color blue. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue, much less of an issue here as those are the colors of the Texas state flag to begin with. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. All jersey trim is single-color red.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Independence Day (Home)

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less-busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two different color options for the new twill–appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 3–4, 2017 and July 2–4, 2018, the Rangers wear their home white jersey with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color blue. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue, much less of an issue here as those are the colors of the Texas state flag to begin with. All jersey trim is single-color red.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Turn Back the Clock to 1977

Stephen Kraljic collection

Original
1977

For a fourth time, the Rangers throw back to their two-button, powder blue road jerseys used from 1976–1980, here advertised as the 1977 version, on July 8, 2017. This entry is a decent representation of the originals, rendered in full knit by Majestic. The red/white/blue sleeve-end and collar trim is well-matched to the 1977 set, while the red/white "TEXAS" wordmark and Block numbers on back in red/white/blue check-in well, though the outline layers are not as thick as they were 40 years prior. Though the blue name on back is sewn without arch, as it was in 1977, the font used is quite different. Finally, this version lacks the team's sleeve patch which was originally worn on the right sleeve, and the Danny Thompson memorial armband with #4 on the left, both of which were part of the 1977 set.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Turn Back the Clock to 1999

The Rangers throw back to when they were a red-dominant team with these 1999 jerseys, worn on August 12, 2017. Excellent reproductions, as one would expect for such a recent style, these feature all lettering in red/blue including front “RANGERS” wordmark and player numbers and names on plates on the back. Red knit trim appears just above sleeve ends and around the collar and placket, while the Rangers diamond-shaped logo patch is on the left sleeve of these Majestic full-knit jerseys, as it was on the originals.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Players Weekend

To highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans, MLB introduces the colorful Players Weekend promotion. In addition to relaxed regulations on team-standard color and design of cleats, bats, and other equipment, MLB encourages players to wear nicknames on the backs of a new set of very colorful jerseys. Meant to evoke the look of youth league designs, the two-toned Cool Base pullovers feature bright and contrasting body and sleeve colors, and include a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people in their lives with handwritten black marker messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature a variant of the MLB logo showing the growth of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat-pressed Majestic manufacturer and set tags are applied on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. All numbers on back are in single color Varsity, and the player names in 2 ¾" single color Block Condensed, regardless of the team's usual font. On August 25–27, 2017 and August 24–26, 2018, the Rangers wear jerseys with powder blue bodies and red sleeves with white nicknames and red numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide red/white/red trim. The front features their home jersey lettering, here done in red/white/red kiss-cut lightweight twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Players Weekend

The third incarnation of Players Weekend turns the colorful jersey concept on its ear, reducing all teams to monochromatic designs in either black or white, with all team sleeve patches and trim removed, leaving a clean but stark template. Gone are the contrasting sleeves and special patches with messages of inspiration. MLB says that this new approach is to emphasize the colorful, personalized cleats, bats, and other gear the players choose for the promotion, which spans August 23–25, 2019. Jerseys are now button-front Flex Base, with appropriate Majestic manufacturer and set tagging. Back-of-collar CFX MLB logo is now silver and black. All teams also wear a memorial patch for Angels pitcher Tyler Skaggs, a white “45” in a black circle, on the left sleeve. Most teams removed this patch before auctioning off the jerseys. The Rangers wear a white version of their home jersey with the front lettering and back varsity numbers rendered in white/gray with gray nickname on back.

Players Weekend nicknames aren’t limited to letters, Hunter Pence chose the shrug emoticon ¯_(□)_/¯ for 2019, as seen above.

© GameWornGuides.com

2022 Turn Back the Clock to 1972

As they had done twice before, the Rangers throw back to their original 1972 home uniforms, this time, in honor of their 50th anniversary season in 2022. Overall, they are very nicely executed throwbacks, though the sleeve trim is a little wider than on the original, shown here for comparison. Of course, the Nike logo on front and MLB logo on back are anachronistic, but kudos to the team for using the correct and unusual number font from 1972 that was carried over from the 1971 Washington Senators. Of note, front team name and back numbers are traditional two-layer twill vs. kiss cut. Worn five times during the season: April 30, June 25, August 13, September 25, and October 5.

1972

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 World Series “Gold Program”

The Rangers celebrate their 2023 World Series Championship in the same way as many teams before them, by adding a touch of gold to their jerseys. Here, the Rangers used their home white jersey as the base, replacing the white layer of their front and back lettering with non-metallic gold twill. One sleeve is occupied by an ad patch, while the other replaces the Texas flag patch with a special 2023 World Series Champions patch. The MLB logo on back is also gold for the occasion. This is the first World Series Gold Program jersey (as Nike calls it) to be made on the Vapor Premier Elite template, so the other features of these jerseys apply here - smaller back number and back name with more pronounced curve, narrower placket, and sewn on (rather than sewn on) sleeve-end trim. Back numbers are perforated.

© GameWornGuides.com

Prototypes and Oddballs

1974-1976 Prototype Home?

There are prototypes and samples for probably every uniform ever approved and put into production, and when we come across them, we like to share them here. This uniform has the Wilson 1974–1977-style laundry tag, with the prototype tag that we have learned to recognize inside the collar that describes all the features of the sample uniform in alphanumeric code. No room for a name is allowed on the back. The jersey has the two-button Henley neck that was adopted in 1975, along with the wide, knit sleeve ends adopted for that year. Because a photo of the matching pants in included, we can see the (ridiculously) wide side stripes that came into use about that time as well. But while the wide stripes were worn with the road blues from 1975 onward, they waited to be worn with the home uniform until 1976.

1975 above,
1977 at right

© GameWornGuides.com

1975-1976 Prototype Road?

This Rawlings road jersey was likely a sample, shown to the team, as the Rangers were making the switch to their new 1975 uniform set. The Rawlings tagging shown here was first used in about 1973, which checks out, and many of the other details of the jersey, such as the blue base fabric and two-button neck, were adopted by the team. However, the sleeve stripes on this example are reversed in color order from what eventually appeared on the field. Similarly, the front and back lettering is only two-color red/blue, where the actual lettering in 1975 and 1976 differed. Finally, there is no name on back of this example, but the team did use player names in 1975 and 1976. Rawlings was the primary manufacturer of the Rangers' road sets at this time (sharing with Goodman and Sons in 1976), but it is unclear if this example was made for the big switch in 1975, or the more incremental changes that took place for 1976.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mix-and-Match 1975-1976 Road

This interesting pregame photo shows a one-year style 1975 road jersey worn in batting practice, while the player behind is clearly wearing the 1976 road uniform with its sleeve patch and different front crest. It is unclear if the team continued to use the older uniforms for BP, or if this one happened to get mixed up with the new ones, given their general similarity.

© GameWornGuides.com

1984 Prototype Road

The jersey that "won" over our prototype and was most often used on the road in 1984. Note that the new script is the same as the prototype's.

It is a good guess that this is a Wilson prototype road gray jersey prepared prior to the 1984 season. The Rangers were trying out new jersey designs that winter, and finally settled on a combo of three jerseys for 1983– one each in red, white and blue. No gray uniform in sight.

The tag in the neck is Wilson's 1978–1985 style tag, the front script is identical to that used in production newly for 1984.

Doug Rader was the Rangers' new manager for 1983. It is always safest for the uniform company to make a sample using the name of someone who they are sure is going to be on the club—why risk trying to sell a new design sullied with the name of a possibly just-traded player?

© GameWornGuides.com

Late 1980s Spring Training Practice

- White mesh jersey, the Rawlings jock tag sewn inside the front tail is from 1988–1991, the small sewn-on sleeve tag was rarely seen later than 1987. So we'll call this a 1988 model.
- Odd because both the front crest and the back numbers are screened on instead of sewn, if used by the big club it was probably a Spring Training issue. We have seen many of these floating around the hobby identified as such. The Rangers' regular season BP was blue with wide shoulder stripes and sewn on crest and player numbers.

© GameWornGuides.com

Rangers Minor League Jerseys

I normally don't include minor league jerseys here, but these styles show up frequently and are often misidentified as MLB Rangers issues. In prior editions we had even speculated the top one was an MLB prototype design. The top style examples are very attractive in royal blue mesh and has the team's new-for-1984 wordmark on the front in red outlined with white. It also has the Rawlings red-label tag in the tail, and 1984 was the last year this tag was used. Note the glued-on Rawlings script on the left sleeve, opposite of where it is placed on MLB jerseys.

The bottom example is all screened on and uses the 1972–1982 wordmark. The non-MLB issue Russell tagging suggests it is from the 1980s.

© GameWornGuides.com

1992-1993 Prototype Road

Bill Henderson Collection

I customized this jersey with Kenny Rogers' name and number the way I assume the Rangers might have done so if this jersey style had reached production.

The origin of this jersey remains a mystery to me. They are gray versions of the Rangers 1988–1993 white home jerseys. I found about two dozen of them in an outlet warehouse in about 1998.

I strongly suspect that these were prototypes made for the Texas Rangers that were not used. Here are some of my ideas:

I suspect that they were intended for the professional team's use. The main reason is that the set of jerseys I found had all the "odd" sizes not normally made for retail sale (38, 42, 46, etc.). Also, notice the Russell "R" in the Rangers' two-color (blue/red) split as used on their home jerseys

Russell first supplied the Major Leagues in 1992, and this Diamond Collection logo tag appeared that year as well. The specific variation of the tag is consistent with that used in 1992 and early 1993 only. The Rangers road uniforms in 1992–1993 were gray, but had the word "TEXAS" spelled across the front. Could it be possible that the Rangers were considering switching to this design for their road uniforms in 1992 or 1993, and then did not?

They might have been made for a minor league Rangers affiliate. While possible, minor league teams do not usually get the "Diamond Collection" tag. They instead get a different type of "authentic" tag that Russell also sewed on to college jerseys.

I have checked with my Rangers sources and no one can tell me anything about them. Who knows?

© GameWornGuides.com

1994 Last-Minute Style Changes

MLB Style Guide
August 1993

MLB Style Guide
January 1994

For years, there's been a running joke that the Rangers can't decide if they are a red team with blue accents, or a blue team with red accents. It seems their indecision on uniform matters reaches back decades, and nowhere was their waffling more apparent than in the saga of their 1994 uniforms.

Shown at top left is the original style sheet for their 1994 jerseys, dated August 1993. It reflects a home uniform with red/white front lettering and red back lettering. The road uniform has similar red/white front lettering, but red/white player numbers on back with red names.

By January of 1994, the sheet was updated to show that a blue outline had replaced white on the front lettering of the home jerseys. Accompanying this second set of drawings was a memo from MLB, dated February 8, 1994 (just days before Spring Training), indicating that yet more adjustments had been made that were not reflected on the January renderings, and that player names and numbers on the home jersey would also be outlined in blue. There were no other changes to the road jersey at that time. However, when the Rangers took to the field for Opening Day on April 4 in New York, their road jerseys had gained a previously unmentioned white outline on the player names. Nowhere in these style sheets is the left-sleeve patch, worn in 1994 on the home uniform, ever represented.

Though the 1994 home jersey stuck around for many years, the 1994 road jersey lasted just one, replaced by a version that included red/blue/white lettering, and the same sleeve patch as the home jersey. For the Rangers, the more things change, the more they...change.

The Rangers' jerseys as they (finally) appeared on-field in 1994, home at top, road on bottom.

© GameWornGuides.com

1999 Hall of Fame Game Throwback

Above: Juan Moreno pitches in this throwback at the 1999 Hall of Fame Game, other photos from this date.

Below: An original from 1993, made by Russell, for the sake of comparison to the throwback

The 1999 Baseball Hall of Fame class featured George Brett, Nolan Ryan (among others), so to celebrate, the Royals and Giants were invited to Cooperstown to compete in the annual Hall of Fame Game on July 26, 1999. The Royals wore their then-current road uniforms, but the Rangers used the celebration as a chance to throwback to Ryan's years with the team. This jersey is one of the special throwbacks made up for the game. However, a close inspection reveals it is anything but special. The jerseys appear to have been very hastily put together, with rough sewing that approaches carelessness. The front numbers are much too small compared to the original 1986-1993 models, and the sleeve patch date from 1984-1985, before this set of jerseys was adopted and before Ryan was even on the team. Really, the best tribute to him is the use of his name on the tag, which was assume was on every jersey, and went unseen by anyone but the wearer. We assume that the team must have had short notice about playing in the game, and that Russell had even shorter notice to make these up. But there's just enough off about this jersey that it would have been very hard to believe it was actually used by the Rangers if we didn't know the story behind it. Yet, what is most incredible is that Russell made this exact style for the Rangers just six years before...and they still managed to fall so short of making an accurate and fitting tribute to one of the Rangers' best-loved franchise icons.

Original 1993

© GameWornGuides.com

2001 Unused Turn Back the Clock to 1976-1980

Original 1979

Though the tag on front and A-Rod's autograph on the jersey indicate that this jersey was to be worn on July 18, 2001, we have confirmed that this was not the case. True, the Orioles and Rangers were planning to have a throwback game as part of the second match of a doubleheader that day. But between games, a train carrying hazardous chemicals derailed near Camden Yards, causing the postponement of this, and two other games in Baltimore. The Orioles were able to reuse their jerseys in a game against the Royals later in the year, but we have found no evidence that the Rangers wore this for their remaining games against the Orioles, or any other games that season. Perhaps it is all for the best, as these were not very accurate reproductions, as noted below.

The front is accurate, however, the team lettering on the back is not. The NOB lettering font is not the right one, as this font style was used on 1975-1979 home jerseys only. Player names on the road jersey were one-color, blue. Numbers are the home font, not the proper Wilson-sourced road one, and should be three-color, red/white/blue. Jersey is also missing the Rangers team patch that ought to be sewn on the right sleeve (an original jersey shown top right).

Train fire postpones third straight Orioles game

By David Ginsburg, Excerpted from CBC Sports, July 20, 2001

A persistent fire aboard a derailed train forced postponement of Friday night's scheduled Angels-Orioles game at Camden Yards, the third game knocked out by the accident.

The derailment occurred late Wednesday afternoon between games of a scheduled day-night doubleheader against the Rangers. Because the accident took place deep in a lengthy tunnel, cleanup operations have been slow and arduous.

The 60-car freight train was carrying hydrochloric acid and other hazardous chemicals.

The second game of Wednesday's doubleheader was postponed, and a split doubleheader between the Orioles and Texas on Thursday also was called off.

© GameWornGuides.com

2001 Factory Frankenstein Jersey

A reader sent this to me after purchasing it from an online seller, and asked what in the world it was. It has a 2001 patch on the right sleeve, and a tag sewn inside the button flap with the word “SUCCESS” computer embroidered on it in a style identical to how typical manufacturer-applied game jersey tagging appears in that year range.

But the front wordmark is all wrong. It is four-color gray/white/blue/red 3D drop shadow, like the four-color road gray jersey (shown for comparison at bottom left), but with the colors all mixed up.

Now, the Rangers had just introduced the blue alternate jersey for 2000 and wore it very frequently, so I won’t jump to the conclusion that it is a prototype for a hasty redesign. And past experience with the short-lived 2000 road jerseys hopefully taught the Rangers a lesson against pairing low-contrast colors immediately next to each other. It could be a one-off design exercise, or a sewing error. But it is the odd factory-appearing “SUCCESS” tag that throws me and makes me wonder what this is and how it came to be.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003 Prototype Vests

- Shown here are Majestic factory tagged prototypes for 2003. Their codes “ALT2” and “ALT2A” indicates they are preproduction samples.
- At a casual glance, these might be mistaken for a production Rangers 2004 alternate vest, but differences abound.
- First, the front numbers and the “T” logo are on opposite sides from the 2004 jersey.
- Logo colors on one of them are exactly reversed from the 2004 vest, which has a red “T” with a blue drop shadow.
- Numbers on the prototype are three-color and feature a drop shadow. The production jersey has no drop shadow. Front numbers are also sewn higher up than the eventual production jersey.
- The prototypes use a thin red/white/blue knit braid trim at neck and the arm holes, while the production vest uses a different trim placement of blue knit trim only.

The production 2004 vest for comparison

© GameWornGuides.com

2006 Hispanic Heritage Prototype

On May 5, 2006 the Rangers wore special Cinco de Mayo-themed jerseys with “Los Rangers” on front. Here we have a prototype of that jersey, which is very close to what the team selected to wear that day.

This jersey’s pedigree as a sample is apparent in a few details. First, it is size 46, a common sample size, and the “0062” code on the back of the laundry tag indicates it is a team-issued jersey. Next, the use of “PLAYER” and “6” on back are typical sample elements, where “6” stands for the year in which the jersey is intended to be used. Further, it carries interior tagging with the tell-tale sample coding “RANH06-cdm” indicating it is a Rangers (RAN) 2018 home jersey (H) for I2006 (06) Cinco de Mayo (cdm).

The prototype lacks the Texas flag patch on the right sleeve that was present on the final model, replacing it with the special Cinco de Mayo patch, which was on the right sleeve on the jersey used in the game. Otherwise it is identical.

Right: The jersey as used on-field in 2006.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2012 Mystery Prototype Flex Base

Top: Cloth tag from a prototype 2012 BP jersey with Majestic "mountain" logo.

Bottom: Heat-pressed tag from this jersey with updated "M" logo, and a missing "N" in "Engineered"

Here is a mystery jersey, one that appears to be a prototype for the 2016 introduction of Flex Base, but leaves us with lots of questions.

First, some facts. It is a 2009-2013 style Rangers blue alternate jersey, made up for star player Josh Hamilton, who left the Rangers as a free agent after the 2012 season (he returned in 2015, but by then, the Rangers didn't use this style of jersey). So that would seem to limit this to the 2009-2012 range. Yet, the logo on the sleeve and on the jock tag (more about those later) was introduced by Majestic in 2014, and not seen on an on-field jersey until 2016. However, Majestic did file the logo with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office in 2012, so the art for it existed at least that early. So, for that reason, we're guessing this dates in the 2011-2012 range.

Elsewhere in this book (including later in this chapter) we have seen Flex Base prototype jerseys worn by players in 2012 Spring Training. Those are usually tagged with the then-standard heat-pressed Cool Base jock tags, laundry tags with a "063A" code, and team tagging indicating them as "Test A" jerseys. This example, however, has some distinguishing characteristics that lead us to believe it might have come earlier.

First, the jersey's construction mirrors Flex Base, with mesh side panels and back tail. Here, however, those panels (and the lining inside the collar) are of a much lighter and far stretchier material than the mesh used in regular Flex Base jerseys. It is almost like gauze. Similarly, the heat-pressed jock tag here is of a completely different style than Test A and Flex Base, a design we've seen on sample BP jerseys for the 2012-2014 seasons. (Those BP samples had cloth tags and the old Majestic "mountain" logo, rather than heat-pressed with the Majestic "M" logo like this one.) Like the Test A jerseys of 2012, the MLB logo on the back of the neck of this jersey is embroidered, not CFX as on regular Flex Base. (continued)

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2012 Mystery Prototype Flex Base, continued

Top row: Details of the front lettering (left), player name (center), and player number (right). Note that the lettering appears to be one layer of white, perforated twill with red dyed edges and blue and gray heat pressed on. From the look of it, the red was applied to the white twill, which was then perforated, with the blue and gray added after perforation.

Bottom left: Washed-out wash tag with what appears to be 0730 as style code, the same as standard Flex Base jerseys, but it is very hard to make out.

Bottom right: A closeup of the mesh tail (with white paper underneath to show detail) vs. that of a Flex Base jersey. Note the very raw hem of the sample jersey vs. the white Flex Base jersey.

Where the Test A jerseys had heat-pressed, multi-color perforated mesh lettering, this sample uses what looks like a single layer of perforated twill with heavy silk screened ink or a heat-pressed material that appears to cover over the perforations in some spots but not in others. It appears to be a single layer of white twill with the red dyed on and the blue and gray heat pressed on.

Oddly, the wash tag here seems to have an 0730 code, typical of regular Flex Base jerseys, vs. the updated code for the Test A jerseys used in 2012 Spring Training. The tag itself is washed out, showing some wear and likely laundering. Given the size of the jersey (46), it is unlikely that Hamilton wore this as he usually wore larger jerseys, and 46 is typical for Majestic samples. However, the wear could indicate that the sample was laundered many times to test how well it would stand up to use and washing.

What's most noticeable about the jersey is how light it is. It weighs just 10.6 ounces. Two other game worn size 46 Flex Base jerseys we tested (Astros home and Red Sox home alternate) weighed in at 12.9 and 12.2 ounces respectively. If Majestic were aiming for a light jersey, they hit the mark here. Perhaps even too light to stand up to a season of abuse.

It is hard to know for sure exactly when this example was made, though we know that Hamilton was one of the players who tried out the Test A style jersey during Spring training in 2012 (see next page), which means he may have been asked to review this sample too. We could not find any images of him wearing this unique style of jersey in Spring Training or the regular season.

Thus far, this is the only example of this type of Flex Base prototype we have seen. More research is required.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Sample Spring Training Flex Base “Test A”

In other chapters (Dodgers, Tigers, White Sox) we have noted instances of prototype Flex Base jerseys used in 2012 Spring Training, four years before their official release. Each of those entries has examples of the jerseys, which shows strip tagging reading “Test A” and a wash tag with “063A” as the style code.

Here, we do not have a similar Rangers jersey to share “in the cloth,” but we have discovered photos of Rangers slugger Josh Hamilton wearing such a jersey in Spring Training 2012. The attributes of the jersey match up exactly with other Test A jerseys we have observed.

In these images, you can see the tell-tale heat-pressed mesh numbers and letters as well as mesh side panels that were a common Flex Base feature, but not part of Cool Base jerseys of this era.

Majestic claimed to work with more than 50 players when developing the Flex Base jerseys, and this jersey was yet another example of this early testing.

Of note, this is not the sample jersey on the previous page. That one has sewn lettering and a different Majestic logo on the sleeve. Further this jersey has the Rangers’ 2012 40th anniversary patch, which is not present on the example on the previous pages.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Prototype Turn Back the Clock to 1972

So many prototype jerseys like this are sewn and presented to the teams for consideration. This one happens to be in my personal collection. It is a prototype for one of the series of throwback games hosted by the Rangers throughout their 2012 40th anniversary year. The actual version used in the game is shown below right, displaying lettering more "correct" for what had been worn in 1972: Senators-style numbers and one-color red player names. The sample above uses the generic Block font in two colors for both player number and names, and like many prototypes, uses the customized identification of "Player #5"

As used in the 2012 game

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 “Frankenstein” Road Jersey?

This one is more likely an error rather than a prototype. Super-utilityman Chris Gimenez appeared in 69 games for the Rangers in 2014–2015, though he wore #60 only in 2014. This jersey’s inside seam tagging identifies it as a team-spec jersey shell that would have been made for and issued to Gimenez. Most likely, however, the stitcher simply pulled the pre-stitched lettering from the bin for the team’s alternate blue jersey and created this oddball by accident.

Though primarily a catcher over a 10-year career with six teams, Gimenez also played both corner outfield spots, both corner infield spots, DH, and appeared in 11 games as a pitcher, a career about as distinctive as this jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Sample Independence Day

Harrison Katapodis/dormroomjerseys on eBay

As we have seen elsewhere in this book, for the 2018 season at least, MLB and Majestic spared no expense creating samples of jerseys with even the slightest proposed change. Here, we have a sample of an Independence Day jersey made up for the Rangers, rendering all twill in different colors, and adding the American flag patch to the right sleeve. This is identical to what the Rangers wore for Memorial Day Weekend games at home in 2018, so the sample's mission was accomplished. But, the Rangers also wore the exact same jersey for Memorial Day in 2017, rendering this sample overkill. But if that was the policy, at least they stuck to it.

This jersey's pedigree as a sample is apparent in a few details. First, it is size 46, a common sample size, and the "0730" code on the back of the laundry tag indicates it is a team-issued jersey. Next, the use of "PLAYER" and "18" on back are typical sample elements, where "18" stands for the year in which the jersey is intended to be used. Further, it carries interior tagging with the tell-tale sample coding "RAN-STARS&STRIPES-HJ-D1-1-2018" indicating it is version 1 (D1-1) of a Rangers (RAN) 2018 home jersey (HJ) for Independence Day (STARS&STRIPES).

The 2018 season seemed to be a high-water mark for "in-the-cloth" samples of jerseys for every occasion, as we have seen many other examples for other teams.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020 Nike Sample Home Oddball

The 2020 season was one of two big uniform changes for the Rangers. First, they completely redesigned their full uniform set for that season. And, like every other MLB team, their uniforms switched from Majestic to Nike that year as well.

This jersey's possible pedigree as a sample is apparent in a few details. First, it is size 46, a common sample size, and the player number "20" represents the year for which the sample was made. The use of "Nike" as the player name, rather than "Player" is unusual for MLB samples, however, Nike has done this for samples made in other sports in the past, and we have come across one other MLB jersey done this way for the Astros.

We have seen a few other 2020 samples made up for other teams that were not changing their uniforms, which were made just so teams could see their jerseys with the new Nike branding. Most of those had "0730" coded wash tags and heat-pressed neck tags, indicating that they were likely made before the final decisions on Nike branding were completed. This jersey has the "0890" wash tag code, like all other on-field Nike jerseys. It is possible that this was a later creation, made specifically for the team's uniform overhaul, though it lacks some typical prototype tagging that would support this.

© GameWornGuides.com

Commemorative Patches

Rangers Patches

1976

1977 "4" armbands (both home and road jerseys)

- 1976: USA Bicentennial Patch.
- 1977: Danny Thompson memorial armband with #4 (all season).
- 1993: Arlington Stadium Patch (Final Year), left sleeve.
- 1993, after August 22: HEC for former owner H.E. "Eddie" Chiles, right sleeve .
- 1995: All-Star Game Patch.
- 1997, June 12–13: Interleague patch on left sleeve instead of team patch for two games only, first year of Interleague Play commemorative (2 eagles with baseball). This patch was worn for the very first games of Interleague play only between the Rangers and Giants.
- 1997, after September 7: "MH" Memorial Patch for broadcaster Mark Holtz, in addition to Jackie Robinson patch: both on right sleeve.

1993, after August 22

1993

June 12–13, 1997

1997, after September 7

© GameWornGuides.com

September 16, 2005

- 2000: AL West Champs (of 1999).
- 2000, July 16: Red AIDS ribbon for “Until There’s a Cure” Day in San Francisco.
- 2005: “26” for former manager Johnny Oates (all season).
- 2005, September 15: Red Cross patch, left chest, for Hurricane Katrina relief.
- 2010, Spring Training: Bobby Bragan memorial oval, long-time front office employee of the Rangers.
- 2011, July 8–10: Black ribbons in memory of Rangers fan Shannon Stone, who died from a 20-foot fall after catching Josh Hamilton's toss of a foul ball into the left field stands.
- 2012: Rangers 40th Anniversary 2013, July 6: “Support West” patch in honor or 15 people who died in a fertilizer explosion on April 17 in West, Texas.

© GameWornGuides.com

- 2013, August 24: The annual Civil Rights game was held in Chicago, and for the first time, participants wore only a patch and no special uniform.
- 2015, Spring Training: MACKO patch in memory of clubhouse manager Joe Macko, who died December 2014.
- 2017, July 29-30: Ivan Rodriguez Hall of Fame commemoration.
- 2019: Final Season at Globe Life Park in Arlington.
- 2020: Inaugural season at Globe Life Field.
- 2022: 50th Anniversary.
- 2022, May 31: Green Mental Health Awareness Month ribbon against the Rays, who wore this same ribbon for all of May 2022 in recognition of Mental Health Awareness Month, following the suicide of bullpen catcher Jean Ramirez.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024-2025 Advertising Patches

With the start of the 2023 season, teams were permitted to sell an advertising patch, up to four inches square, to appear on one of their jersey sleeves. The sleeve on which the patch appeared could change from player to player, and each team that sold a patch handled the placement differently.

The Rangers did not have an ad patch in 2023, but before the 2024 season, they struck a sponsor patch deal with Energy Transfer, an energy-related service company. The patches first appeared on Opening Day in 2024.

The patch is white-bordered circle with a blue ring with “Energy Transfer” in white letters surrounding a blue company logo on a white circle for the home white, powder blue, and City Connect jerseys. The colors flip to be a blue-bordered circle with a white ring with “Energy Transfer” in blue letters surrounding a white company logo on a blue circle for the road and dark blue jerseys.

In 2024, the patch is on the right sleeve of each jersey, except the City Connect, where it is on the left. It alternates sleeves based on player handedness starting in 2025.

© GameWornGuides.com

Rangers Postseason Patches

2010 World Series (right sleeve)

2015 AL Division Series (right sleeve)

2011 World Series (right sleeve)

2016 AL Division Series (right sleeve)

© GameWornGuides.com

Rangers Postseason Patches Continued

2023 World Series
(left chest)

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Authenticity

1971-1972 Ted Williams Texas Rangers Spring Training Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: December 26, 2019 Certification Number: 191226E12

This letter will serve as the opinion of Sports Investors Authentication LLC regarding the item in review.

Description: Presented is a 1971-1972 Texas Rangers "Wilson" gray flannel size 48 jersey of #9, manager Ted Williams. The jersey is tagged 1971 Set 2; the Rangers' first year of existence as an expansion team was 1972. Quoted, from Bill Henderson's Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys (eighth edition): "The first Texas Rangers team took the field for the 1972 season wearing new double knits. One could easily surmise that the Rangers, therefore, have no history in flannel. But, that is not so. When the Senators packed up and left Washington, DC to become the Rangers after the 1971 season, they brought all of their equipment with them, including all remaining 1971 uniforms. Then, unbelievably, these jerseys were converted into Rangers jerseys by painstakingly removing all of the Senators scripts from the fronts, then re-sewing Rangers lettering on. This amount of work would be unthinkable today. Today, the final set of Senators' uniforms could certainly be auctioned off as highly sought after collectables. But back in 1971, they were nothing more than obsolete baggage."

This jersey appears to be a bona-fide example of this event. Scant light table evidence of the removal of the Senators script with underline exists, and the tail tagging as Set 2 1971 links it to the defunct Senators. Willams had been the Senators' manager in 1971, and when the team moved to Texas for 1972 he retained his position. The 1972 Rangers kept the team colors of the 1971 Senators, and so the number on back is original, and displays more fading and wear than the newer, replacement Rangers wordmark on front.

Matching exemplars and period photos, the Rangers team word marks is sewn in a straight line. When the team unveiled flashier red-white-and-blue trimmed jerseys for the regular season, the Rangers wordmark was arched on the front and player names were added to the back. The Wilson tag in the back of the collar is the correct style for 1971. The size 48 in the neck tag, the correct size for Williams, is hand-embroidered onto a Wilson tag that originally lacked a machine-embroidered size designation. This is not common, but we have seen other examples of this practice that we assume was employed when the maker had run out of pre-sized tags, and so modified a blank tag to match.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey is in very good condition and shows signs of wash wear commensurate with use by the team manager, who would have not have been very active while wearing it. Review on the light table indicates the removal of the front Senators script, and that the back number is original.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged, lettered, and numbered. It is consistent with known exemplars. It exhibits use and wash wear, and its alterations are significant and explainable. Therefore, it is the considered opinion of Sports Investors Authentication that this jersey is genuine and was worn by manager Ted Williams in both the 1971 season of the Washington Senators, and in the 1972 Texas Rangers' Spring Training.

David Randolph
Managing Member

Bill Henderson
Lead Authenticator

www.sportsinv.com Sports Investors Authentication info@sportsinv.com

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Pat Jarvis 1974 Texas Rangers Spring Training Road Jersey

Examination Date: November 6, 2022 Certification Number: 22-1106J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Texas Rangers road gray button-front Wilson jersey, size 44. "Rangers" arched on front in red with a blue drop-shadow and a white embroidered star on the leading "R". Red-white-blue knit sleeve end trim and around the neck. The placket is lined with linen as is the standard with Wilson pro jerseys of the period. Autographed in what appears to be ball-point pen, "Pat Jarvis" on the right front chest below the wordmark. On back, the well-worn numbers "33" in red outlined with blue in the Rangers font as used 1972-1974. As received, the name on back "JARVIS" arched in red, clearly a replacement name in bright red twill and when viewed on the light table, not exactly matching the outlines of the shadows beneath it.

Pat Jarvis was signed by the Chicago Cubs organization as a pitcher in 1960, and toiled in the minor leagues for several years before the Atlanta Braves traded for him and gave him a chance on their MLB roster in 1966. He stayed in the majors pitching for the Braves for seven seasons through 1972, and was traded to the Expos for the 1973 season. During his eight years pitching in the bigs, he appeared in 249 games, had an 85-73 record with a respectable 3.58 ERA. Jarvis was traded to the Texas Rangers before the 1974 season, but failed to make the MLB roster that year, and his career was over. Jarvis never played a regular season game for the Texas Rangers.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rangers jerseys 1972-1974 are generally year tagged with a two-digit year hand-embroidered on a square of jersey fabric stitched into the back of the neck below the Wilson tag. This jersey has no such tag nor evidence that one was ever there. We can isolate its use to 1972-1974 as these are the only years this exact style jersey was worn by the Rangers.

Restoration Performed: As the name on back on this jersey was clearly a replacement, its owner asked me to remove it to see if there was light table evidence of a different name having been sewn there. After careful examination I can say that there was no such evidence. It was apparent that "Jarvis" was the only name that was visible having been there, and the original ghost revealed that the font originally used was accurate for the 1972-1974 Rangers. The current replacement had used a stock letter set that was close but not exactly like the original. The well-worn #33 on back appears to be original to the garment and there are no signs that another number was ever there.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

A search of the Rangers roster for these years showed that Hall of Famer Frank Howard wore #33 in 1972, and pitcher Jim Kremmel wore #33 in 1973. No player was issued #33 in 1974. It is my conclusion that this jersey was issued to Pat Jarvis for 1974 spring training, and when he failed to make the team, the jersey was returned to the trainer's room, and probably stripped of its name on back. It is possible that Lenny Randle wore it in spring training 1975 without a name on back, as he was roster #33 for 1975. My guess is that this jersey had a long second life in the Rangers' minor league system, where all of their equipment ended up. It is incredibly uncommon to find a Rangers jersey of this vintage in better condition than this one.

Wear & Repairs: After stripping the incorrect name from the back, I used the team fonts (there are several that were used interchangeably at the time) to recreate the name using the visible ghosts. After cutting the letters from twill fabric, I distressed and dyed the lettering to make it better match the rest of the jersey's lettering, and then stitched it in place with suitably faded matching thread.

Above: As received, name on back had been replaced with an inexact font, shown at right overlaid with the proper font matching the original faint ghosts (black lines). Jarvis' time with the Rangers was short, he was there only during the weeks of 1974 spring training before he was released prior to opening day. A photo assumedly from that time is shown at right, the only image I could find of Jarvis in a Rangers uniform. In these years, players wore prior years' regular uniforms in the spring.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good condition: the front lettering and back numbers are all original, and the player name on back is properly restored with lettering near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by pitcher Pat Jarvis in 1974 spring training with the Texas Rangers.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Dock Ellis 1979 Texas Rangers Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: December 20, 2020 Certification Number: 20-1220J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Columbia blue two-button neck pullover Texas Rangers of pitcher Dock Ellis. Rawlings size 44. 2 1/2" red-white-blue sewn-in knit sleeve ends. Similarly colored 1" neck trim. Texas Rangers red/white/blue shield patch on the right sleeve. "TEXAS" arched on front in the teams stylized wordmark font in red outlined with white. Player name in the correct font for the 1979 Rangers, "D. Ellis" in medium blue; three-color #17 in red/white/medium blue centered on the back in the team's proper font.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings red label tagging correct for 1979 is sewn inside the bottom of the front left tail. A "Set 1 1979" flag tab is stitched pinched beneath its right side. Stitched to the left of the Rawlings tag is a small rectangle of Columbia Blue twill with "17 79" (player #17, 1979) hand chain stitched on it in dark blue in the familiar hand of the Rawlings stitcher. All of these match the details of other 1979 Rangers' road jerseys in our exemplar library.

Wear & Repairs; Restoration Performed: This jersey shows a full season worth of wear, with some staining and some white marks of unknown origin on the tops of the shoulders. As received, the jersey wore a non-standard #20 on back and had no player name on back. Light table examination showed that two names had been on it before: BABCOCK (strong image) and D. ELLIS (faint image). Both players wore #17 on the 1979 Rangers. Ellis from the start of the season until early June when he was traded, then Bob Babcock from July. At some point before the end of the season, Babcock changed his number to 20. My educated assumption is that the #20 lettering on back was locally sourced, and did not come from Rawlings, as it is neither the exact font or same size as the standard font used by the Rangers on road jerseys. Notably, the correct font also used a narrow white outline bordered by a wider blue one. The numbers on the back of this jersey as received had same-width outlines. Removal of the #20 more clearly revealed the ghosts of the original #17 below in its proper (smaller) size. The fact that no name was present on the back probably indicates that the jersey was used again in spring training. The fact that the original "TEXAS" is still on the front suggests it was spared a trim to the minor leagues. Many uniforms of these style were sent to the Tucson, Arizona minor league club where they were used to the point of destruction.

The jersey was restored to its original configuration. Notably, the corners of many of the letters in the correct team font used for the restored player name align with small holes that had been caused by the name's removal back in 1979. Pictures of the restoration are shown on the back of this page.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good used condition, and has been professionally restored to its original configuration. It has correct team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and was originally worn by Dock Ellis of the 1979 Texas Rangers, then by Bob Babcock of the 1979 Rangers.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

As received for evaluation and eventual restoration, the jersey had back numbers that did not match the team tagging, nor did the match the team template in terms of font, outline styles or size. The back numbers were removed and examination on the light table revealed trace lines of the ghosts of the original number 17 on back. The ghosts of the name BABCOCK were easily visible, but further examination showed that another name had been there before, though only a few trace lines were visible. The Rangers' condensed font was used to reveal that "D. ELLIS" had been there prior. His first initial was used because catcher John Ellis had the simple designation "ELLIS" on his shirt. In the bottom photo the tiny pinholes visible on the light table align with the corners of the original removed player name.

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Jim Kern 1980 Texas Rangers Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: August 4, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0804J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Columbia blue two-button neck pullover Texas Rangers jersey of pitcher Jim Kern. Rawlings size 44 with 2" extra length (marked and measured; length is 36" to the end of the back tail). This is appropriate for the 6' 5" 205 lb. pitcher. 2 1/4" red-white-blue sewn-in knit sleeve ends. Similarly colored 1" neck trim. Texas Rangers red/white/blue shield patch on the right sleeve. "TEXAS" arched on front in the team's stylized wordmark font in red outlined with white. Three-color #35 in red/white/medium blue centered on the back, 7" from the collar as correct, in the team's proper three-color font. In 1980 for a single year the Rangers had no player names on back.

Working in the first year of a 5-year contract in 1980, he tried to pitch through a hyper extended elbow sustained in spring training and then a neck injury during the season, going 3–11 with two saves and a 4.83 ERA in 38 games before going on the disabled list for the rest of the season in July.Jim Kern went 3-11 for the 1980 Rangers. (Wikipedia, Baseball Almanac)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings red label tagging correct for 1980 is sewn inside the bottom of the front left tail. A "Set 1 1980" flag tab is stitched pinched beneath its right side. Beneath that is a small white tab that says 2 inch extra length. On the outside of the tail, stitched to the left of the Rawlings tag is a small rectangle of Columbia Blue twill with "34 80 1" (player #34, 1980 set 1) hand chain stitched on it in dark blue in the familiar hand of the Rawlings stitcher. All of these match the details of other 1980 Rangers' road jerseys in our exemplar library.

Wear & Repairs: This jersey shows a full season worth of wear, with some characteristic sun-fading especially on the back and the tops of the shoulders and some tiny white spots that look like bleach stains between the back numbers. The twill is slightly puckered from hot water washing and is burnished from use. The fact that the original "TEXAS" is still on the front suggests it was spared a trip to the minor leagues. Many uniforms of these style were sent to the Tucson, Arizona minor league club where they were stripped, re-lettered, and used to the point of destruction. In faded black marker on the outer tail is written 34# L. McLin; Larry McLin was a pitcher drafted by the Rangers in 1982, so it is probable that McLin wore this in Spring Training in 1982 or 1983. He was never called up to the majors.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good used condition, without alteration or contrivance. It has correct team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and was worn by Jim Kern of the 1980 Texas Rangers

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Nolan Ryan 1989-1992 Game Worn Jersey with 1989 Pants

Examination Date: February 5, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0201JP25

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Texas Rangers white home jersey with pants, Nolan Ryan #34. Goodman and Sons 7-button full weight knit, size 44. "Rangers" scripted across the front and underlined, royal blue over red. Number 34 on the left front and centered on back in the same colors and in the correct Goodman-specific font used for the Rangers. "Ryan" name on back in one-color Royal Blue arched above in the correct font/size. Matching white team pants with team strip tagging in the waist. Working zipper, one-button closure, 7 belt tunnels, two slash pockets with button closure, all intact. 1989 was Ryan's first year with the Rangers, and it is well known that regardless of his team, Ryan preferred and specified Goodman-made uniforms for his use, and the Rangers obliged.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings made the rest of the team's jerseys in 1989-1992 and they are year flag-tagged, but Goodman-Ryan ones are notably not player tagged. The Goodman tag inside the back of the neck designates the jersey as size 44. The pants have a Goodman tag inside the waistband with a small size 34 flag tag. A machine-embroidered strip tag is also stitched into the waistband, "Ryan 34-25 '89 Set 1" This tag matches other Ryan-attributed pants in our exemplar library, and we have examples of these numbered as high as set 7. Because the jersey is not year tagged, and Ryan played for the team wearing this style 1989-1992 (in 1993 the jersey was the same style but had distinguishing sleeve patches not present on this example) without an photo matching we can't decisively pin this jersey to any particular year.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows signs of light wash/wear. A light table evaluation of the garment shows that the lettering is all original and without contrivance or alterations. The pants show slightly more wear but are still in excellent condition. There are a few stray fabric pulls and some graying of the seams from wash and wear.

Conclusion: This jersey and pants set in review is in excellent used condition, is properly lettered, and numbered, and has no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications for and worn by Nolan Ryan of the 1989-1992 Texas Rangers, the pants are tagged for use in 1989.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Nolan Ryan 1991 Texas Rangers Team Issue Autographed Home Jersey

Examination Date: January 31, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0131J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Texas Rangers white home jersey, Nolan Ryan #34. Rawlings 6-button full weight knit, size 44 (marked and measured). "Rangers" scripted across the front and underlined, Royal Blue over red. Number 34 on the left front and centered on back in the same colors and in the Rawlings block font used by the Rangers. "Ryan" name on back in one-color Royal Blue arched above in the correct font/size. Ryan game jerseys often specified 1" extra length, and while this one does not have special tailoring marked, it is 34" from collar to tail; an inch longer than normal. The jersey is correctly lettered for a Rawlings example. This jersey was presented without provenance. The jersey is autographed on the right front below the Rangers script. I have no professional opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.

It is well known that regardless of his team and throughout his career beginning with his time during the mid 1970s on the California Angels, Ryan preferred and specified Goodman-made uniforms for his use, and the Rangers obliged him. There are tiny distinguishing features that allow a careful observer to tell what kind of jersey Ryan is wearing in game photos; the shape of the "3" on the front of his jersey, the shapes of the letters on his name on back (most notably the letter "N") and very small detail differences with how the Rangers script is drawn. But most notably, Goodman jersey have no brand-logo on the sleeve end as Rawlings jerseys always did. A casual survey of news photos shows that during 1990-1991 while Ryan usually wore Goodman jerseys, he in fact clearly sometimes wore Rawlings ones. So it cannot be said that Ryan "always wore Goodman jerseys" as is sometimes claimed by collectors.

A survey of exemplars shows a significant number of year tagged autographed Rawlings Nolan Ryan Rangers jerseys exist, signed by Ryan in exactly the same spot, and with team tagging that is similar to or identical to this one. Research shows that while he was a Ranger, Ryan was under contract with Score Board, Inc. a new and innovative company, whose mission it was to provide licensed authentic, autographed memorabilia to the hobby. At this time, the sports memorabilia industry was in its infancy, and there was no attempt to designate any of these signed jerseys differently than ones that were actually game issued or used. Therefore, we can't say for sure which jerseys were issued to players to wear, and which were made for signing for Score Board. They were essentially identical: made in the same place at the same time by the same people.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings locker tag is stitched to the left outer front tail of the jersey in the correct style for 1991. The tag notes the jersey's size as 44. Pinch sewn to the right side of the tag is a flag tab, "SET 1 1991". Stitched below is 1" x 1/2" white twill tag with machine embroidery in dark blue, "34 1". This tagging matches exemplars. Rawlings was the licensed provider of Rangers jerseys in 1989-1992 and these jerseys are year flag-tagged. Only Rawlings was permitted to display its brand name script on the end of the right sleeve.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows no obvious signs of wash/wear. A light table evaluation of the garment shows that the lettering is all original and without contrivance or alterations.

Above: Tagging on evaluated jersey, below comparison tagging on another 1991 exemplar.

Conclusion: This jersey in review is in excellent unused condition, is properly lettered, and numbered, and has no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to the team specifications of Nolan Ryan of the 1991 Texas Rangers.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Ivan Rodriguez 2000 Texas Rangers Team Issue Road Game Jersey

Examination Date: December 7, 2021 Certification Number: 211207J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Rawlings size 50 six-button gray road Texas Rangers jersey issued to catcher Ivan Rodriguez. The size is reasonable for the player to have worn at this stage of his career. One year style, "TEXAS" is arched across the front in four colors- Dark Royal blue, red, white and an almost invisible gray drop shadow. A single corse of royal blue knit trim rings the sleeve ends. Rangers Texas flag patch on the left sleeve, 2000-only Rangers 1999 Western Division Champions patch on the right sleeve. The MLB Silhouetted Batter logo patch is stitched to the center of the back collar, in its first year of use on all MLB jerseys. The player number "7" and the name on back in properly extra-condensed team font RODRIGUEZ are all in three-layer stitched twill, Dark Royal blue, red and white. The name is sewn first to a matching gray nameplate with a serged edge. This nameplate is extra long, with more than two extra inches of fabric at each end.

Regarded as one of the best ever catchers ever to play the game, Rodriguez was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in 2017 in his first year of eligibility. Off to a great first half in 2000, Rodriguez broke his thumb on late July and missed the final third of the season. In his career of 21 seasons, he played 11 of them with the Rangers. He appeared in the MLB All-Star game 14 times.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings was the official on-field uniform supplier to the Rangers and just a few other teams in 2000, and contractually was allowed to display its circled-R logo on the end of the left sleeve, direct-embroidered in dark Royal. Authentic Collection Rawlings tagging is stitched inside the left front tail. Two side-by-side flag tabs pinched beneath the bottom edge of the Rawlings locker tag show the size as 50, and a tailoring tag that says "Minus 2 inch body and sleeves length" (measuring these elements, the body is minus 2 inches, the sleeves are 1" shorter than normal). Pinch-sewn under the right side of the locker tag is a flag that says SET 2 2000. Finally, above these tags is a MieGray Group embroidered tag signaling this jersey as part of the Texas Rangers Collection. MeiGray was the team's exclusive Memorbilia partner for a number of years.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey presents as new, without signs of use or washing. All elements including the tagging are crisp and unblemished. This is a perfect example of a Rangers 2000 team issued road jersey.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged and lettered, with tailoring as consistent with known exemplars. It has no contrivances but does not exhibit obvious wear. It is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine and was team issued made to the specifications of Ivan Rodriguez of the 2000 Texas Rangers.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Alex Rodriguez 2003 Texas Rangers Game Used MVP-Year Auto'ed Home Jersey

Examination Date: August 5, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0805J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Majestic white size 52 with special tailoring (marked and measured) six-button home Texas Rangers jersey, Alex Rodriguez #3. Navy trim sewn near the end of each sleeve, Rangers' Texas state patch on the left sleeve, supplemental velcro closure under wordmark. RANGERS arched on the front in dark Royal blue over red with a black drop shadow. Player number 3 below and centered on the back in the same colors. Player name is arched on back in two colors, dark Royal over red in the proper font for the 2003 Rangers. Name is correctly stitched to a double-needle serged edge nameplate. The MLB Silhouetted Batter logo in red-white-blue is stitched to the center of the back of the neck. The jersey is autographed in blue marker on the left back, and inscribed "2003 Game Used" I have no professional opinion on the autograph. A blue hologram sticker is applied to the back number that reads "AROD 4 ASI 2303". In 2003 Rodriguez led the league in home runs for the third consecutive year and earned his first of three career MVP awards. (Baseball Almanac) He led the American League in home runs, runs scored, and slugging percentage, and won his second consecutive Gold Glove Award. He also led the league in fewest at-bats per home run (12.9) and became the youngest player to hit 300 homers. (Wikipedia)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Majestic locker tag in the correct style for 2002 is sewn to the outside left tail. Pinch sewn beneath it are three sets of flag tags: from the left, Set 3 2003, size 52 tab, and two overlaid tabs: +1" slv and +2" body. This size and tailoring is consistent with other 2003 Alex Rodriguez jerseys in our exemplar library. On the inside side seam is a Majestic manufacturer garment style tag that notes this jersey as a model 0062, the proper code for team-issue. The Majestic twin peaks logo is direct embroidered in blue to the end of the left sleeve.

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that all stitched elements on this jersey are original and untampered with. The jersey shows signs of use and light wash wear, and remains dirty with several spots on the front and back, as well as dirt and what appears to be pine-tar marks on the top of the right sleeve. Rodriguez was very aware of the collector value of his game worn gear, and wore multiple sets of uniforms throughout the season.

Conclusion: This jersey is properly tagged, lettered and tailored for the player, matching exemplars. All elements are original and uncontrived. After a careful examination, I would conclude that the jersey is authentic and worn by Alex Rodriguez of the 2003 Texas Rangers.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Alex Rodriguez 2002 Texas Rangers Road Game Used All-Star Jersey

Examination Date: May 24, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0524J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Rawlings size 50 six-button gray road Texas Rangers jersey, special tailoring noted, issued to infielder Alex Rodriguez. The size and tailoring matches exemplars for this player. "TEXAS" is arched across the front in four colors- Dark Royal blue, red, white with a black drop shadow. A single corse of dark royal blue knit trim rings the sleeve ends. Rangers' Texas flag patch on the left sleeve, 2002 All-Star Game patch on the right sleeve. The MLB Silhouetted Batter logo patch is stitched to the center of the back collar, in its second year of use on all MLB jerseys. The player number "3" (with black drop shadow) and the name on back in properly extra-condensed team font RODRIGUEZ is in three-layer stitched twill, Dark Royal Blue, red and white. The name is sewn first to a matching gray nameplate with a double-needle serged edge. The jersey is autographed on the back by the player, with the inscription below "2002 Game Used All Star". (I have no professional opinion on the autograph). There is a blue holographic disk label on the back number 3 on which is printed "AROD 3 ASI 3047".

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Rawlings was the official on-field uniform supplier to the Rangers and just a few other teams in 2002, and contractually was allowed to display its circled-R logo on the end of the left sleeve, direct-embroidered in dark Royal. Authentic Collection Rawlings tagging is stitched inside the left front tail. Two side-by-side flag tabs pinched beneath the bottom edge of the Rawlings locker tag show the size as 50, and two overlaid tailoring tags that say "2 inch extra length", and "Sleeve 1 inch extra length". Pinch-sewn under the right side of the locker tag is a flag that says 2002 SET 2. Measuring the jersey, it is 37" long confirming its 2" extra length tag, and the sleeves appear to be 1/2" longer than standard.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey overall shows light use, and has been washed. The tags are slightly curled from washing. During the 2002 All-Star Game, Rodriguez made a diving play where the front of his jersey was ground into the dirt. Very close inspection shows wear to the jersey front below the "X" and many parallel rows of light vertical scuffs/scratches in the twill of the "X" in TEXAS. Further, the Velcro closure behind the X has brown dirt infused thoroughly into the adhesive that held it in place for stitching. This jersey may have been made specifically for use in the All-Star game, or it could have been issued prior and the sleeve patch added. But since the game patch remains on the sleeve, we can safely assume it was removed from use after the All-Star game.

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Juan Gonzalez Texas Rangers Blue BP Jersey circa 1992

Examination Date: August 3, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0803J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Blue mesh pullover Texas Rangers batting practice jersey, Rawlings size 44. Sewn-in red-white-blue knit "racing" stripes on the top of each sleeve from the neck to the armhole. "Rangers" scripted with underline on the front in white over red, layered and stitched tackle twill. On back in white outlined with red is the number "19" in the correct font as used by Rawlings for the 1992 rangers. The size is reasonable for the player: from our library, we have evidence that Gonzalez wore size 42 jerseys at the start of his career, graduated to 44 by 1991, then moved to size 48 in the mid 1990s.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: There is no Rawlings script embroidered on the sleeve end as is correct for 1992. (Starting in 1992, only Russell and Majestic were allowed to use their logos on sleeves). There is something intelligible written on the tag in faded black marker (looks like AFT14). Rawlings red tag in the style correct for 1991-1992 is stitched properly on all four sides to the outside left front tail, and shows the size as 44. White printed fabric Rawlings tag in the neck also identifies the size as 44. While early 1990s BP jerseys were not team tagged by the Rangers, this has all the hallmarks of a team-issued jersey. Notably, in 1992 Rawlings was not authorized to sell retail copies of BP jerseys; that right was contractually awarded only to Majestic and Russell.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows signs of moderate wash and wear, yet it has been spared the fate of so many of these Rangers BPs that have been bleached, which ruins the sleeve-top stripes. A light table examination does not reveal any signs of tampering or contrivance; there are no signs that any other numbers have been on this jersey before.

Conclusion: While not year or team tagged, this jersey has several points of positive reference that allow me to conclude that it was team issued. There are no signs of contrivance, and therefore it is reasonable to conclude that this is a team issued and game-worn jersey issued to Juan Gonzalez in the 1992 season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Raphael Palmeiro 1991 Texas Rangers Team Issue Autographed TBTC Jersey

Examination Date: April 2, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0402J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Texas Rangers turn back the clock style white home jersey, Raphael Palmeiro Majestic 6-button full weight knit, size 50 (marked and measured). "Rangers" scripted across the front and underlined, Dark Royal Blue over red. Number 25 on the left front and centered on back in the same colors and in the proper block font used by the Rangers. "Palmeiro" name on back in one-color dark Royal Blue arched above in the correct font/size. It is autographed on back between the name and number. I have no professional opinion on the autograph, but the jersey is accompanied by a JSA certificate authenticating it. Retired from MLB since after the 2005 season, size 50 is reasonable for the player. On August 11, 2012 the Rangers hosted a pregame ceremony honoring their 40th Anniversary All-Time Team, chosen by fan balloting. Palmeiro was one of two players named as the team's top first basemen. The jersey is accompanied by a photocopied letter of authenticity from the personal collection of Ivan Rodriguez, originally offered by Hunt Auctions. A survey of exemplars including one in our personal collection confirms that this is a team issued Rangers jersey from the 2012 season, with a Majestic 62TB garment style code (inside seam tag). It has a very slight purplish cast to the white fabric as do all others in this set. The Rangers 2012 40th anniversary patch is stitched to the right sleeve.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Majestic locker tag is sewn to the outer left tail, in the correct style for 2012. Pinch-sewn beneath the bottom border is a small flag tab noting the size, 50. Beneath that is a 1" x 3" serged edge tag with "TBTC 1986" machine embroidered on it in black.

Wear & Repairs: The jersey shows no obvious signs of wash/wear, as would be expected given its purpose. A slight dirt scuff mark is on the front near the numbers. A light table evaluation of the garment shows that the lettering is all original and without contrivance or alteration.

Conclusion: This jersey in review is in excellent condition, is properly lettered and has no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to the team specifications for Rafael Palmeiro, formerly of the Texas Rangers.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Stan Thomas Texas Rangers 1975 Game Worn Home Jersey

Examination Date: April 29, 2025 Certification Number: 25-0429J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: As received, Texas Rangers home jersey made by Wilson, team-converted to Tulsa Drillers jersey for minor league use. 2-button Henley neck; red, white, and blue knit trim sewn-in at the neck and around the sleeve ends. Replacement "Drillers" on front in red over dark Royal Blue, original #23 on back, severely worn and partly detached, with no name above, but showing the marks of multiple names having been there previously. This jersey was generally filthy with ground-in dirt, many glue marks and scuffing stains all over it, in fair condition at best. It has no sleeve patch, nor evidence that one was ever present as was correct for 1975 Rangers jerseys and showing that it did not see service in 1976 when a sleeve patch was used. It had been altered, taken in 4" on the sides with full-length side-seam darts, effectively making it a size 40.

Restoration Performed: I was commissioned to restore the jersey to its original 1975 MLB Rangers appearance. I started by removing the Drillers lettering from the front; a light table analysis clearly showed the ghost of the former placement of the Rangers wordmark. On back, the ghosts of two overlaid names were distinctly visible. Besides the original THOMAS (who had been issued #23 in 1975, and who at 6' 2" and 195 this jersey would have fit) the second ghost of BRILES was apparent. Notably, #23 Stan Thomas was traded to the Indians after 1975, and Nelson Briles was acquired from the Royals and joined the Rangers in 1976's spring training. While Briles was eventually issued his preferred number #34 for the regular season, my conclusion is that this was Briles' 1976 spring training jersey. #34 had previously belonged to teammate Mike Bacsic, who changed his number to #25 for the regular season, likely so the veteran pitcher could have his preferred number that he had worn for most of his career. After 1976 spring training, this jersey became expendable and was shipped off to Tulsa to begin its next stage of life.

I thoroughly cleaned the jersey body, and other than being filthy and full of dried on glue it was in generally solid shape.. All replacement lettering was cut from original patterns tuned to match the shape of the removed lettering: Rangers script from the original team die-cut pattern, complete with its small hand-embroidered star on the leading letter "R"; and the back lettering- which in 1975 was mostly hand cut with some irregular angles and outlines evident. I removed the side dart stitching, allowing the jersey to return to its original size, and fixed a couple of small holes in the fabric with team-style darned repairs. A few small un-repaired holes remain on the front where the Drillers crest was removed. With wash shrinkage the garment now measures as a 42, not its

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

original 44. I spot-stitched the back numbers in a few small places as they were coming detached, without removing any existing stitching. The replacement lettering was media blasted to give it the patina of wear to match the rest of the fabric.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Tagging matches exemplars. Wilson tag noting the size 44 in the center of the back of the neck. A small strip tag is stitched below, "75 Set 1" is hand chain stitched onto it, in the familiar hand of the Wilson factory stitcher.

Here, as received, jersey then stripped and showing major glue staining and ground in dirt as well and the and the ghost impressions of both former wordmarks, on back the ghost of both THOMAS and BRILES is visible on the light table. THOMAS name is highlighted for visibility.

Conclusion: As restored, the jersey in review is now in generally good condition: The knit trim is intact and surprisingly bright and unfaded, while some tiny holes and stains still exist from ground in dirt and removed glue, the jersey is properly restored with lettering near-identical to original. The jersey has no contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Stan Thomas of the 1975 Texas Rangers.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Joe Lahoud 1976 Texas Rangers Game Worn Home Jersey

Examination Date: January 13, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0113J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Wilson size 42 1976 Texas Rangers home pullover Henley two-button neck style jersey. "Rangers" arched on the front in red and Royal blue with a small embroidered white star on the leading "R". On back the number "3" in the same red and blue. The name on back had been removed. Wide, red-white-blue stretchy knit trim on both sleeve ends and around the collar. The very hard to find Rangers one-year 1976 patch is still affixed to the left sleeve.

Joe Lahoud played in all or part of eleven seasons in MLB primarily as an outfielder and designated hitter, for the Boston Red Sox (1968–71), Milwaukee Brewers (1972–73), California Angels (1974–76), Texas Rangers (1976) and Kansas City Royals (1977–78). For the 1976 Rangers, he appeared in 38 games and compiled a .200 average with one home run. The jersey is reasonably sized for the 6", 202 lb., player.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson tagging is sewn into the back of the neck in the correct stye for 1976. Immediately beneath it, inside the back of the neck is a small rectangle of white jersey fabric with "76 1" (1976 Set 1) hand chain stitched on it in the familiar hand of the Wilson factory stitcher and matching exemplars (Some said: "76 Set 1")

Restoration Performed: As received, this jersey was in poor condition. The jersey body was filthy with dirt and grease and had a three inch oval jagged hole about three inches in diameter ripped from the left stomach area, with fabric wholly missing. A smaller hole repeated on the back adjacent to the front damage; almost as if the jersey had gotten caught in some sort of machinery. The twill of the front wordmark and back number were both bleached many shades lighter than original, and they were so stiff they could not easily be bent. This fading is typical of 1976 Rangers jerseys, but this jersey was exceptionally damaged. The thread had failed in

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

many spots, and as presented it was not acceptable for display. Its owner opted to do a complete replacement of the front and back lettering so it could be enjoyed, and asked me to repair the holes in it as well. The name on back ghosts were visible on the light table, matching the team alphabet font pattern. These jerseys were typically sent to the minor leagues for reuse when their MLB service was through, and that is why it is rare to see one with the 1976 sleeve patch still attached as these were typically stripped.

In restoration, the original lettering was completely removed; and the jersey was spot scrubbed, pretreated and washed. The fabric holes were backed up with pieces of similarly colored ivory cloth from team pants, and were darned into place as they would have been had the work been performed in the clubhouse. Using original team patterns the wordmark, number and name on back were created and tweaked to match the ghosts left on the fabric. Prior to stitching, they were media blasted to soften the sheen, dulling the colors to better match the overall patina of the garment. Notably, the restored player name arch is less than perfect, just as it originally was.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in fair restored condition: holes have been repaired, and all lettering has been restored with intentionally-distressed lettering near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Joe Lahoud of the 1976 Texas Rangers.

Photos before restoration show jersey condition, below center, the light table reveals the shape and placement of the original name on back.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Bill Fahey Texas Rangers 1975 Game Worn Home Jersey

Examination Date: February 17, 2023 Certification Number: 23-0217J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: As received, Texas Rangers home jersey made by Wilson, team-converted to Tuscan Toros jersey for minor league use. 2- button Henley neck; red, white, and blue knit trim at the neck and around the sleeve ends. "Toros" on front in red over dark Royal Blue, #14 on back, worn and partly detached, with FAHEY arched above in the Rangers' distinctive fonts. Stitching marks show that the player name had been covered up with a plate overtop, the back numbers were very worn and discolored, and the jersey was generally filthy with ground-in dirt, glue marks and scuffing stains all over it, in fair condition.

Fahey was a Rangers' backup catcher in 1975. He appeared in only 21 games that season and in 37 at bats he hit an even .300. In his eleven-year career, he played for four different teams and appeared in 383 MLB games. Notably, he was the first player selected in the very first round of the 1971 draft, by the Washington Senators, the team that moved and became the expansion Rangers in 1972.

Restoration Performed: I was commissioned to restore the jersey to its original MLB Rangers appearance. I started by removing the TOROS lettering from the front; a light table analysis clearly showed the ghost of the former placement of the 1976 Rangers wordmark. As the back lettering was excessively worn and discolored, I was asked to replace it exactly with new lettering to exactly match the original. Though 1975 Rangers jerseys did not use a sleeve patch, this same style jersey was worn in 1976, and the owner requested I sew an original 1976 Rangers patch on the sleeve that he supplied. Though this jersey did not show obvious signs of having a sleeve patch in place, adding it is not incorrect since teams at that time regularly re-issued the prior year's uniforms to players for backup use the following season.

I thoroughly cleaned the jersey body, and other than being filthy, happily it needed no repairs. All lettering was cut from original patterns tuned to match the shape of the removed lettering: Rangers script from the original team die-cut pattern, complete with its small hand-embroidered star on the leading letter "R"; and the back lettering- which in 1976 was mostly hand cut with some irregular angles and outlines evident.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Tagging matches exemplars. Wilson tag noting the size 46 (marked and measured) in the center of the back of the neck. A small strip tag is stitched below, "75 Set 2" is hand chain stitched onto it, in the familiar hand of the Wilson factory stitcher.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Here, as received, jersey then stripped and showing ground in dirt and the ghost impressions of both former word marks, template for front laid in place over ghosts.

Conclusion: As restored, the jersey in review is now in very good condition. The knit trim is intact and surprisingly bright and unfaded, it is properly restored with lettering near-identical to original. The jersey has no alterations or contrivances of of any kind. It has a team-issue tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Bill Fahey of the 1975 Texas Rangers.

© GameWornGuides.com

Chapter 31

Tampa Bay Rays

Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys

1970-2025, Tenth Edition

William F. Henderson

Rays Uniform History Notes

- One of the two newest teams in Major League Baseball, the Rays nonetheless have more uniform history than one might expect. When the Devil Rays took the field in 1998, they wanted to make a mark with non-traditional uniforms. The front featured a large, wild wordmark and Devil Ray design that transitioned from blue through green to yellow.
- The Devil Rays' basic uniform elements–colors and logo–were created in 1995. Note that in the three years' time that Tampa Bay was awarded the MLB expansion franchise in early 1995 and the time the team played its first game in April 1998, much authentic official merchandise was created and sold, some of which was never actually worn by the club. These items included an "official" cap style unused by the team, and a purple batting practice jersey. There is also an alternate style of the team's inaugural year sleeve patch using different colors than the one adopted by the team that we often times find for sale on eBay that we suspect was planned for use but superseded by another version (both versions are shown in the patches section of this chapter).
- The Rays' inaugural style was certainly different from other teams' and no one would call it traditional. The front wordmarks were so large that they necessitated the elimination of a shirt button on many examples, substituting Velcro inside the jersey to help keep it closed. The herringbone-pattern "Glacier" style twill that formed the home "Devil Rays" emblem and the road "Tampa Bay" crest (as well as the BP jersey's predictive use of the nickname "Rays") were specially woven so that they shifted colors from one end of the logo to the other: going from aqua blue through various shades of green, to yellow at the far left. A black devil ray with a long tail floated below the wordmark on all jerseys.
- Other than the team artwork, the uniform fabrics were indeed rather traditional: solid colored cloth in white, gray, or black, with very simple black knit trim at the sleeve ends only. Player numbers were in three-color block, featuring purple and black as the main colors, separated by white.
- Just three years later for the 2001 season, the team performed a radical conversion to a more traditional style, dropping the wild colors and design. The team began to refer to themselves informally simply as the "Rays" on their jersey fronts, though the official team name remained unchanged. Colors are modified, dropping the bright purple and iridescent greens and yellows, replacing them with dark green and a deep purplish shade of blue. In addition to standard home white and road gray, an alternate home vest is added to the suite of options.
- For 2005, they kept the same basic design but shuffled the deck again, dropping the sleeved white jersey, adding a road vest and an alternate green jersey closely resembling the BP jersey.
- Then after just three more years, 2008 saw an official name change to make the team name officially simply "Rays," accompanied by a complete redesign of the team image: colors, official team name, and logos, for the third time in ten years. This is unprecedented in MLB, eclipsing even the mercurial '70s Padres and '80s-'90s Astros.
- The 2009 season introduced a new dark blue alternate, while a Columbia blue alternate was added in 2010. Between 2013-2017, the team also used a blue "fauxback" pullover intended to look like a 1970s throwback, from before the team existed.
- With the change to Flex Base in 2016, the sunbursts on all jersey fronts were standardized (they had been larger on the alternates).
- One of two remaining holdouts with nameplates (with the Indians), the Rays finally switch to direct-sewn player names after 2018.
- In 2022, the Columbia blue alternate is replaced with a similar light blue alternate with a"sunburst" on the left chest, a jersey which had been used as the team's Spring Training jersey since 2016.
- In 2023, the team elevates the 1998-2000 home throwbacks, frequently used for Turn Back the Clock games, to alternate status.
- In 2024, a City Connect jersey channels Tampa's skate and street culture with a weathered asphalt look and grip-tape-textured lettering. "Tampa Bay" returns to the chest for the first time since 2007, styled with flame-tipped letters. Logos include a skating ray, palm trees, and a pelican—each tied to local landmarks. Despite vibrant pops of color, the jersey presents as a minimalist faded black tee.
- During their whirlwind first 16 seasons, the Rays went through a complete re-branding twice, changed their team name, overhauled logos, switched color schemes, and had an astonishing 13 distinct jersey styles. From the psychedelic gradients of the late-'90s Devil Rays to the clean, sunburst-emblazoned Rays of the 2000s, few teams packed more uniform evolution into such a short span. Since 2014, however, changes have slowed, with just three new jersey sets.

I am always looking for new information and better photographs. If you can share new information, or offer corrections to this material, please send a note to me, at gamewornguides@gmail.com.. Please tell me which page you are referencing. All contributors will be recognized by name in a future edition.

© GameWornGuides.com

Year by Year Summary

---------- 1998-2000 ----------

2001-2004

2001-2007

2001-2004

----------2005-2007 ----------

Rays Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1998	Home White	No	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	Inaugural Patch	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	Inaugural Patch	-	Russell
	Black Alternate	No	Block Bold 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	Inaugural Patch	-	Russell
1999	Home White	No	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	Team Logo Patch	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	Team Logo Patch	-	Russell
	Black Alternate	No	Block Bold 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	Team Logo Patch	-	Russell
2000	Home White	No	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	Team Logo Patch	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	Team Logo Patch	-	Russell
	Black Alternate	No	Block Bold 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	Team Logo Patch	-	Russell
2001	Home White	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	AL 100th Ann.	Russell
	Home White Vest	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	AL 100th Ann.	Russell
2002	Home White	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Russell
	Home White Vest	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Russell
2003	Home White	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Russell
	Home White Vest	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Russell
2004	Home White	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Russell
	Home White Vest	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Russell
2005	Home White Vest	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Road Gray Alt Vest	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Green	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 Color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
2006	Home White Vest	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Road Gray Alt Vest	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Green	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 Color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
2007	Home White Vest	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	10 Seasons Patch	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	10 Seasons Patch	Majestic
	Road Gray Alt Vest	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alternate Green	Front Block 2 color	Block 2 Color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	10 Seasons Patch	Majestic

© GameWornGuides.com

2008-2020

2009-2020

2010-2020

2013-2017

Change to Flex Base

Rays Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2008	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
2009	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
2010	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Columbia Blue	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
2011	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Columbia Blue	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
2012	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Columbia Blue	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
2013	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Columbia Blue	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Retro	Special 1 color	Special 1 color	Special 1 color	No	St. Petersburg City Disc	-	Majestic
2014	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	"Zim" Memorial*	Majestic
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	"Zim" Memorial*	Majestic
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	"Zim" Memorial*	Majestic
	Alt Columbia Blue	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	"Zim" Memorial*	Majestic
	Alt Retro	Special 1 color	Special 1 color	Special 1 color	No	St. Petersburg City Disc	"Zim" Memorial*	Majestic
2015	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Columbia Blue	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Retro	Special 1 color	Special 1 color	Special 1 color	No	St. Petersburg City Disc	-	Majestic
2016	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Columbia Blue	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Retro	Special 1 color	Special 1 color	Special 1 color	No	St. Petersburg City Disc	-	Majestic
2017	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Columbia Blue	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Retro	Special 1 color	Special 1 color	Special 1 color	No	St. Petersburg City Disc	-	Majestic
2018	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	20th Anniversary		Majestic
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	20th Anniversary		Majestic
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 1 color	Yes	20th Anniversary		Majestic
	Alt Columbia Blue	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	20th Anniversary		Majestic
2019	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	MLB 150th/VJN disc	Majestic
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	MLB 150th/VJN disc	Majestic
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	MLB 150th/VJN disc	Majestic
	Alt Columbia Blue	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	MLB 150th/VJN disc	Majestic
2020	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Nike
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Nike
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Nike
	Alt Columbia Blue	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Nike

* Don Zimmer memorial patch added June 8
 VJN memorial for first owner Vince Naimoli starting August 30

© GameWornGuides.com

These four styles continue from previous years

Switch to Vapor Premiere Elite

Rays Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2021	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Nike
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Nike
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Nike
	Alt Columbia Blue	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Nike
2022	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Nike
	Road Gray	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Nike
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Nike
	Alt Lite Blue Sunburst	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch	-	Nike
2023	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	25th anniversary patch‡	-	Nike
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	25th anniversary patch‡	-	Nike
	Alt Lite Blue Sunburst	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	25th anniversary patch‡	-	Nike
	Alt Nostalgia Devil Rays	-	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Yes	25th anniversary patch‡	-	Nike
2024	Home White	-	Nike Block 2 color (no perf)	Nike Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch‡*	-	Nike
	Alternate Navy	-	Nike Block 2 color (no perf)	Nike Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch‡*	-	Nike
	Alt Lite Blue Sunburst	-	Nike Block 2 color (perf)	Nike Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch‡*	-	Nike
	Alt Nostalgia Devil Rays	-	Nike Block 3 color (perf)	Nike Block 3 color	No	-	-	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 3 color (perf)	Nike Standard Block 1 color	No	-	Sunburst patch	Nike
2025	Home White	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch‡*	-	Nike
	Alternate Navy	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch‡*	-	Nike
	Alt Lite Blue Sunburst	-	Block 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Manta Ray Team Patch‡*	-	Nike
	Alt Nostalgia Devil Rays	-	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	-	-	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 3 color (perf)	Nike Standard Block 1 color	No	-	Sunburst patch	Nike

‡ patch sleeve varies based on handedness of player

* There are different versions of the Manta Ray patch depending on the sleeve on which it is worn - the Ray always faces forward

© GameWornGuides.com

Home, Road and Alternate Jerseys

1998-2000 Home

Very large, non-traditional multicolored Devil Rays logo and lettering on the front, sublimated colors on a glacier twill background. Jerseys may feature anywhere from five to seven buttons on front. See descriptor on next page. Name and number on back only, name on a plate. Three-color Block purple/white/black. No team year or set tags used.

left, Left sleeve Inaugural patch, 1998 right, Team patch 1999-2000. MLB Silhouetted Batter patch at center of back of neck used in 2000 only.

© GameWornGuides.com

1998-2000 Jersey Buttons – 5, 6, or 7?

In past editions of this book, we have stated with authority that the first generation of Devil Rays jerseys had only five buttons, and in place of the usual middle button–right in the middle of the wordmark–these is a Velcro closure. Why? Well, because every jersey in your author's collection has five buttons and Velcro. But several wrote and commented that this was wrong, and provided photos of game jerseys with six buttons: the third button from the top button "shoehorned" into the tiny space between the upper and lower words in the huge wordmark. Still others have six buttons, but with the sixth one at the bottom of the placket, and use Velcro instead of a button in the middle. On occasion, seven-button versions also appear. Needless to say, the whole issue is mysterious.

We have tried to determine a pattern in all this, but have been unsuccessful. We first suspected it might be related to the size of the jersey; perhaps on larger jerseys there is room for that middle button. But we don't believe this is right, because of the jerseys in our collections are sizes 44, 48 and 52, and all have five buttons and Velcro. And since all these jerseys were made by Russell, it is not a manufacturer thing. The best we can say is, a few jerseys just have six buttons while many others have five. Some have Velcro while others don't.

So, unless someone knows the secret to determining when a jersey gets five, six, or seven buttons, or has Velcro or not, let's just say that all three options are correct. On this page we feature jerseys of all three styles.

© GameWornGuides.com

1998-2000 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

Very large, multi-colored, non-traditional "Tampa Bay" lettering and logo on the front. The lettering is so large there is little room for the third button from the top, and it is often (but not always) replaced with a large Velcro closure. Name and number on back only, name on a plate, Block style, three-color black/white/purple, both name and number. No team year or set tagging used, team issued jerseys should have small 100% polyester tag under Russell tag on tail and no size tag inside the neck. The MLB Silhouetted batter patch is added to the back of the neck in 2000.

(Above left) Left sleeve Inaugural patch, 1998.
(Above right) Team patch 1999-2000.

MLB Silhouetted Batter patch at center of back of neck in 2000 only.

© GameWornGuides.com

1998-2000 Alternate

1999-2000

1999

Bill Henderson Collection

1998

(Above) Left sleeve Inaugural patch, 1998. (Below) Team patch 1999-2000.

MLB Silhouetted Batter patch at center of back of neck in 2000 only.

1999-2000

Very large, multicolored Devil Rays lettering and logo on the front. The lettering is so large there is little room for the third button from the top, and it is usually (but not always) replaced with a large Velcro closure. Name and number on back only, name goes on a plate. Three-color name and block numbers on back – purple/black/white. On black jerseys, the purple numbers are Block Bold (Not Block), with very thin black and white outlines.

No team year or set tagging used, team issued jerseys should have small 100% polyester tag and any tailoring tags under Russell tag on tail, no size tag inside back collar.

2000

(Above) Notice the MLB logo on the back collar, identifying this jersey as one made in 2000.

© GameWornGuides.com

2001-2004 Home

2001

The Rays change their look for 2001, keeping only the player number font from their inaugural design. The new look is much more traditional, losing the oversized psychedelic-shaded front logo. The word “Devil” is dropped from use on the uniforms though it officially remains in the team name...at least for the time being.

Green/white/green knit trim is added to the sleeve ends and the placket.

A new simpler Devil Ray patch adorns the left sleeve.

Front of jersey says “Rays” in four-color design, dark green/white/royal blue and black 3D drop shadow. Notice the tail on the “Y," and how it differs from the treatment on the team vest (next page). Numbers on front and back, both follow the same three-color combination. One-color name – dark green, on a nameplate.

No team year or set tags used, small 100% Polyester flag with size under jock tag on tail is found on game spec jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

2001-2004 Alternate Home Vest/2005-2007 Home Vest

Bill Henderson Collection

The Rays added this white vest as an alternate home jersey in 2001. Notice that the Rays wordmark lettering on the front of the vest is different than that on the regular (sleeved) home jersey, The vest has a fancy tail with the Devil Ray logo attached to the end.

In 2005, this jersey becomes the standard home jersey, as the sleeved white jersey is discontinued.

The vest is usually worn with a plain dark green undershirt, few players wear one with the ray patch sewn on, as is specified in the style guide. No team year or set tags used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2001-2004 Road

Above- Notice the odd tailoring on this Andy Sheets game worn jersey from 2001. It has one extra inch of length added–by having a second hemmed shirt bottom sewn below the original one! We can only guess that the infielder got the jersey and wore it, complained that it was too short, and it was sent back for alterations.

Gray jersey body with green/white/green knit trim on sleeve ends, down front, and around collar. Front of jersey says “Tampa Bay” in a more traditional script than prior design, now arched across front. Tampa Bay wordmark is four-color: green/white/royal blue/black 3D drop shadow. Block numbers on front left and back is three-color, dark green/white/royal blue. Name goes on a plate, one-color, dark green. No team year or set tags used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005-2007 Road

Tampa Bay lettering is tampered with yet again in 2005. The T and the Y at the start and end of the word mark now have tails that extend across the lettering (see next page for 2004 logo compared with 2005).

Three-color block numbers on both front and back, green/white/blue. One-color dark green names on back, sewn on nameplates.

No team year or set tags used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005-2007 Alternate Road Vest

The Devil Rays unveil their fourth alternate jersey type in just the eighth year of their existence. The Tampa Bay script is tampered with yet again in 2005. The T and the Y at the start and end of the lettering wordmark now have short tails that extend across the lettering (Right) 2004 wordmark compared with 2005.

Dark green undershirts are worn with plain sleeves; no patches. Three-color Block numbers on both front and back, green/white/blue. One-color green names on back, sewn on nameplates. No team year or set tags used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005-2007 Alternate Green

The Devil Rays unveil a dark green button-front alternate jersey in 2005. It has the TB logo from their batting practice jersey on the left chest. There is thin strip of green/white/blue knit trim on the front and around the collar and near the sleeve ends. However, only the white color in the trim is visible unless the observer is standing less than a foot away!

Devil Ray team patch sewn on left sleeve. The Rays' official style guide unmistakably shows the front and back numbers to be three-color, white/dark green/blue, just like the 2000-2002 batting practice jersey. However, in actual practice, the numbers on game-worn jerseys appear to all have been only white/blue, the green layer omitted. Not surprisingly, some retail-lettered jerseys exist with the three-color lettering as specified in the style guide. Names on back are one-color white, sewn on nameplates. No team year or set tags used.

The official MLB style guide clearly shows three-color numbers, white/green/blue though I had to extensively lighten this photo to allow you to see it!

© GameWornGuides.com

2008-2023 Home

There is again a complete team identity change for 2008, as the team's press release explains, below. On the back, player names are in one-color navy sewn on nameplates. The numbers are two-color, navy over white in Block standard style. In 2008-2009, these jerseys are knit only, not Cool Base. (Devil) ray patch on sleeve. Cool Base jerseys appear 2010 and after.

With the change to Flex Base in 2016, the sunburst increased in size to match the two blue alternate jerseys. Nameplates are removed for 2019 onward and a nearly invisible white outline is added to player name on back.

> ...After months of speculation about coming changes, the Rays spilled the beans about the subtraction of "Devil" from the name, their new team colors -- navy blue and light blue -- and a new icon, a bright yellow sunburst invoking the magnificence of life in the Sunshine State.
>
> The new home and away uniforms feature "Rays" in navy-blue lettering cast with a light-blue shadow. The sunburst gleams from the letter "R." The two hues of blue suggest the deep-blue waters and bright-blue sky for which Florida is known. The elongated tail of the "R" further reinforces the water imagery.

Majestic makes these jerseys from 2008-2019, Nike takes over for 2020-2023.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008-2023 Home, continued

Starting in 2016, the sunburst is made larger on the Rays logo (above), and 2019 brings the removal of nameplates with the addition a nearly invisible white outline to the navy player name lettering (below). Nike takes over manufacture of the jerseys starting in 2020, with the company's logo appearing on right chest (top right). Nike changes the code for this jersey from RAH1 to RAYL (middle right).

© GameWornGuides.com

2008-2022 Road

Road gray jerseys are identical to the home whites, except for the color of the jersey body. Numbers are Block, two-color blue/white, names are Block one-color navy, on nameplates. In 2008-2009, these jerseys are knit only, not Cool Base. Cool Base follows in 2010 and after. Road jersey also uses the ray sleeve patch. With the change to Flex Base in 2016, the sunburst increased in size to match the one used on the two blue jerseys. Nameplates are omitted for 2019 and onward, and a white outline is added to player name on back. The team eliminates the road gray jersey after 2022.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008-2022 Road, continued

Starting in 2016, the size of the sunburst increases on the Rays logo (above), and 2019 brings the removal of nameplates with the addition a white outline to the navy player name lettering (below). Nike takes over manufacture of the jerseys starting in 2020, with the company's logo appearing on right chest (top right). The road gray jersey is discontinued after 2022.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2023 Alternate Navy

This new-for-2009 jersey is made in Cool Base fabric only through 2015, before moving to Flex Base. Names on back are white, one-color Block on nameplates, numbers are two-color Block navy/white. Manta ray sleeve patch added in 2019. Nameplates are removed for 2019 onward, and the player name on back takes on a nearly invisible navy outline. Starting in 2023, this jersey becomes the team's primary road jersey when the gray uniform is deleted, although it is still occasionally worn at home as well. Majestic makes these jerseys from 2009-2019, Nike takes over for 2020-2023.

A detail of the player name on a 2021 Nike jersey, with subtle blue outline on lettering barely visible, and certainly not discernible from the stands.

Excerpts From a Tampa Bay Ray press release, winter 2009:

"The Rays unveiled their new navy blue alternate jersey today.

The jersey will be worn occasionally at home games and on the road. It will debut on May 1 when the Rays play host to the Boston Red Sox. The jersey is a navy blue button-down with RAYS outlined in white trim with a light blue shadow across the chest. The sunburst emanating from the "R" is forty percent larger than the sunburst on the team's home and road jerseys. Light blue piping surrounds the sleeves and collar and extends down the front of the jersey. Rays apparel, marked by our signature sunburst and light blue accents, has been embraced by fans throughout the state of Florida and across the nation," Rays President Matt Silverman said in the release. "The amplified sunburst on our new alternate jersey represents the brightness of our organization and its growing impact throughout the Tampa Bay region and central Florida."

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2023 Alternate Navy, continued

2017

Note the style code change from Majestic's RAAA to Nike's RA3A.

2020

© GameWornGuides.com

2010-2021 Alternate Home Columbia Blue

For 2010 the Tampa Bay Rays add a second alternate jersey, this one meant only to be worn at home. They choose to wear it during Sunday home games.

The color is “Columbia blue," the same as the Royals used as their alternate jersey color, from 2008 through 2011 (in 2012 the Royals changed their jersey fabric and made it a bit deeper blue).

Names on back are white/blue sewn on nameplates. Numbers are Block, navy/ white.

The sunburst in the “R” of “Rays” is 40% larger on the alternate jerseys than on the white and gray jerseys, until 2016, when all jerseys use the larger graphic.

No manta ray sleeve patch until 2019 when it is added. Nameplates are removed for 2019 onward. This style is discontinued after 2021. Majestic makes these jerseys from 2010-2019, Nike takes over for 2020-2021.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013-2017 Alternate Home 1970s “Faux-back”

2014

2016

The story of the first use of these jerseys is told later in the chapter, as these were originally worn as a one-off in 2012. The team decided to add these as an alternate uniform choice for future years, and sets were made for 2013-2017. The 2014 set has the “ZIM” patch on the right sleeve for Don Zimmer.

All adornment is in twill, player names and numbers use a special “mod” retro 1970s font. 2016 jersey construction switches to Flex Base.

© GameWornGuides.com

Rays Tagging

Rays jerseys are not tagged in any way by the team from 1998 through the 2008 season.

2009 jerseys are tagged on the inside of the front tail behind the Majestic label.

2010 jerseys not tagged.

2011-2103 jerseys tagged vertically below the last button.

2014-2019 jerseys have Majestic QR code tagging, which continues with Nike jerseys from 2020-2023.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016: Flex Base Jersey Construction and Branding

Read the full story on MLB's adoption of Flex Base jerseys for 2016 in Chapter 2.

With the change to Flex Base in 2016, the sunburst increased in size on the home and road jerseys to match the two blue jerseys.

In 2016, all teams adopt Majestic's new "Flex Base" on-field game jerseys, which are made of Cool Base fabric, but with several new elements designed to make them lighter and more breathable. The new jerseys have mesh side panels that run the length of the jersey, and one on the back tail called the "Air Belt." They also use "Kiss Cut" layering for front decorations, names, and numbers, which Majestic says is 10-20% lighter than traditional layered twill. Finally, the MLB logo on the back neck is now a rubberized patch, called CFX by Majestic, and the heat-pressed tag on the front tail differs from Cool Base jerseys used prior to 2016.

© GameWornGuides.com

2022 Alternate Home Light Blue/2023 Alternate Light Blue

Starting in 2022, the Rays elevate their Spring Training jersey to alternate status, replacing the Columbia blue “Rays” version of prior years. The jersey has the Rays’ sunburst logo on front left chest in white/yellow/navy with blue/white back numbers and white/blue player name on back. The team’s Devil Ray patch resides on the left sleeve. In 2022 this jersey is worn only as a home alternate, before becoming an alternate for both home and road use in 2023.

Despite being a regular season jersey, the jersey’s code on the Nike heat pressed tag still reads “RAST” where the “ST” originally stood for “Spring Training.”

© GameWornGuides.com

2023 Alternate Home Throwback

For the 2023 season, the Rays again elevate a special jersey into their regular rotation, this time, the 1998 throwback jersey becomes an official home alternate. These Nike iterations of the Rays' inaugural home jersey sport the large, non-traditional, multicolored Devil Rays logo and glacier twill lettering on the front. The color scheme is slightly different from the originals, with front-lettering elements outlined in black rather than the purple from the late 1990s. Similarly, the color gradient pattern is more an interpretation than a reproduction, with the colors on the throwback leaning darker than the originals. Player names are rendered in purple/white/black on nameplates, while back numbers in Block share the same color pattern. The 2023 version includes the team's 25th anniversary sleeve patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Nike “Vapor Premiere Elite” Jersey Template

Nike Flex Base 2020-2023

Nike Vapor Premier Elite 2024

Following league-wide sweeping changes to MLB jerseys with all teams switching from Nike’s 2020-2023 continuation of the Majestic Flex Base jersey shell to its new Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) template, the jerseys of the 2024 season become an anomaly - a “one and done” season of changes that brought intense scrutiny from players and fans alike. Based on the negative feedback, especially from MLB players, Nike rolled back some but not all of the 2024 changes in time for the 2025 season.

The full rundown of the changes is outlined earlier in “The Basics” chapter, but generally speaking, 2024’s crop of jerseys had changed from earlier versions in several key ways.

- VPE home jerseys are off-white, or light cream color. The earlier Flex Base white jerseys are a bright, purer white. Grays are standardized.
- The front placket is narrower on VPE, which often causes team wordmark lettering that crosses the placket to break differently.
- Neck and sleeve trim elements (when used) are no longer sewn on top of the jersey material, but are now “sewn-in” to the jersey at the seams. Placket trim adornment remains the same, though the trim is now spaced closer together with the narrowing in placket size.
- For improved visibility, the MLB logo on the back of the jersey is moved several inches lower onto the back, down from the collar placket area where it had been since 2000.
- VPE loses the integrated mesh side and back tail panels that had been part of the Flex Base jersey template.
- Player names on VPE are much smaller, and for many teams are done in a standardized block font, all using a much steeper, nearly semi-circular arch.
- For teams with front numbers, the new 2024 font is simply always a reduced size of the back numbers. This was not the way it had been in the past for most teams, with front numbers being a font variant (smaller but usually wider and bolder) than the back font.
- Team logo sleeve patches, and in some cases sponsor sleeve patches change from traditional raised embroidery to flat printed plastic or to sublimated cloth/twill
- All lettering is done using a new more lightweight (thinner) kind of matte-finished twill (commonly called “Nike Twill”). Most, but not all jerseys incorporate barely visible micro-perforation on the numbers, front and back.
- Universally, nameplates are no longer used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Home

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Rays longstanding home jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the blue trim around the neck and placket appears closer together, and the "RAYS" script splits in a slightly different place than before. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than sewn on to it, and the blue stripe appears much wider as a result. The team does not use perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. The manta ray patch varies sleeves based on player handedness. To accommodate the variable sleeve placement, the team creates a "reverse" ray patch, so the ray will be swimming "forward" regardless of the sleeve on which it appears

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Navy

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Rays dark blue alternate jersey, which is also now their primary road jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the light blue trim around the neck and placket appears closer together, and the "RAYS" script splits in a slightly different place than before. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than sewn on to it, and the light blue stripe appears much wider as a result. The team does not use perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.The manta ray patch varies sleeves based on player handedness. To accommodate the variable sleeve placement, the team creates a "reverse" ray patch, so the ray will be swimming "forward" regardless of the sleeve on which it appears. While this is the team's primary road jersey, it is also occasionally worn at home as an alternate.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Light Blue

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Rays light blue alternate jersey, which was elevated from a Spring Training jersey in 2022. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the navy blue trim around the neck and placket appears closer together. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than sewn on to it, and the dark blue stripe appears much wider as a result. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. The manta ray patch varies sleeves based on player handedness. To accommodate the variable sleeve placement, the team creates a "reverse" ray patch, so the ray will be swimming "forward" regardless of the sleeve on which it appears

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Home Throwback

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Rays throwback alternate jersey, which hearkens back to their inaugural season. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. Nameplates are no longer used. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, but the "DEVIL RAYS" script and graphic splits in about the same place than before. It appears that the connections between the "E" and "V" in "DEVIL" and the "R" and "A" in "RAYS" was extended to make the break between letters happen. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than sewn on to it, and the dark blue stripe appears much wider as a result. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

Note the elongation in the connections between the "D" and "E" and the "R" and "A" on VPE in 2024, likely to allow the lettering to break across the narrower placket without cutting the letters themselves.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024-2025 City Connect

"Skating Ray" logo inside jersey collar

The Rays, a team with a very colorful history, enter the City Connect fray with a jersey that looks like the asphalt of an old parking lot. And, its intentional. According to the team's press release skate/street culture and weathering by the Tampa sun are inspirations.

- The words "Tampa Bay" are on the front of their jerseys for the first time since 2007, the first and most obvious way to represent the entire area. The stylized flames coming off the top of each letter are an homage to street art and skate media like "Thrasher" magazine.
- Another logo features three palm trees and a pelican, both of which have several ties to the area. The three palms logo can be seen on a Florida Historical Marker, such as the one located at Perry Harvey Sr. Park in Tampa -- home of the "Bro Bowl," Florida's first public skatepark. The pelican is featured on St. Petersburg's city flag, and it is a nod to the St. Petersburg Pelicans, who played in the Florida State Negro Baseball League in the 1940s and '50s.
- A third logo is the "skating ray," which is exactly what it sounds like -- a ray on a skateboard.
- The uniforms are designed to look weathered and sun-faded, a familiar feeling on the Gulf Coast, and the Rays used skateboarding grip tape texture on inside the letters and numbers of the jersey.
- The gradient elements of the lettering recall the team's inaugural jerseys, while the band of gradient on the right sleeve end only seems a nod to their unused original alternate jersey prototype, which had "rainbow" trim on just the right sleeve as well.

All that combines into a jersey that, despite the tiny pops of vibrant color, looks like a worn, blank, black t-shirt on the field, with only the player's name on back clearly visible. Made on the Vapor Premier Elite template, this jersey has perforated back numbers in 2024. Carryover City Connect jerseys are not updated in 2025, despite the updates to the team's other jerseys for the 2025 season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Home

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Navy

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

Of note, gray jerseys received many updates across MLB in 2025 in response to sweat-staining issues and player feedback. The Rays do not have a traditional gray jersey since they deleted the style in favor of this blue jersey after the 2022 season. As a result, none of their jerseys move to the updated version of the VPE template (which uses Flex Base fabric, eliminates the extra band of fabric on the neck opening, and replaces sewn-in trim for sewn-on trim) in 2025. While this is the team's primary road jersey, it is also occasionally worn at home as an alternate.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Light Blue

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Home Throwback

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone.

© GameWornGuides.com

Batting Practice and Spring Training Jerseys

1998-2000 Batting Practice

Black mesh 2-button Henley pullover with large and colorful "RAYS" nickname script lettering on front (as opposed to the full team name on the game jerseys). This "nickname" script is used on the Batting Practice jersey only.

Player name is one-color white, on a plate. Number is three-color, white/black/white.

© GameWornGuides.com

2001-2002 Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

Until I actually held one of these in my hands, I did not realize that the white name is outlined with blue, and numbers on the back are outlined with two colors; blue and black. Even from three feet away the outline colors are all but invisible! If the effect is intentional, it is certainly very subtle. Most likely, it looked good on paper but translated poorly to fabric in actual use.

Dark green mesh 2-button Henley, small new TB logo on front left chest. The player number is three-color, the NOB is two-color – though the color combination has such poor contrast it is nearly impossible to see any color but the white. White block outlined with royal blue and then black. Name is two-color, white/royal blue. Player name is sewn on a plate.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003-2006 Batting Practice

2004: patch on sleeve from opening series in Tokyo

Softer, non-mesh fabric. Very dark green (a cross between dark green and charcoal) jersey has team's TB logo on the left chest, lighter green sleeve inserts. Player name and number are now one color, and an extra bold Block font is used for the numerals.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007 Batting Practice

Devil Rays' 2007 Cool Base batting practice jersey features a one-button neck and contrasting white and royal blue side panels

Numbers are white/blue/black, names are white/blue, though against a dark green background the outlines are invisible.

All designs and player names/numbers are heat-pressed appliqués, and not sewn tackle twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008-2010 Batting Practice

With the Rays' uniform design change for 2008, they receive a new batting practice jersey as well. This Cool Base style batting practice jersey is a pullover with one-button Henley-style neck.

The front team wordmark is rendered in navy outlined with white and a light blue 3D drop shadow. Player names in white and back numbers in navy/white Block Bold. Side panels are white on bottom and light blue at top. All lettering is heat-pressed not sewn.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2013 Batting Practice

The Rays join the rest of the teams in Major League Baseball by switching to button-front batting practice jerseys for 2011. The sunburst on the front of this jersey is the same as the blue alternates, and is larger than the one on the team's white and gray jerseys of the era.

The Rays' also change their side panels, making them solid Columbia blue instead of blue/white.

Two-color Block font numbers on back only navy/white with one-color white names.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2016 Batting Practice

All teams in MLB get newly designed batting practice jerseys for 2014. The Rays add more color to theirs by making the sides and entire back panel Columbia Blue, the color of one of their alternate jerseys. Names on back are white outlined with navy; player numbers are the reverse, navy outlined with white. Knit trim is added to neck and sleeve openings in navy/Columbia blue. This jersey uses the special alternate front insignia with the extra-large sunburst (compared to the team's white and gray jerseys of the era).

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's new for 2016 Spring Training Jerseys in Chapter 8.

2016 Spring Training

Bill Henderson Collection

For the first time in 2016, MLB introduces a Spring Training-specific jersey intended to be worn for workouts and games in the preseason. The jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features a special printed twill, decorated with "2016" and Spring Training symbols, as the main twill layer for every team. The Rays use a new design for this jersey, based on their regular-season Columbia blue jersey, but with "Rays" lettering replaced by the sunburst graphic. The back numbers are blue patterned twill/white. The name on back is white patterned twill/blue on a nameplate. The jersey also features a rubberized, CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading "2016" and "FL" representing where the Rays spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Spring Training

Spring Training-only jerseys return for all teams in 2017 with some minor design modifications. Just as in 2016, the jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features special printed twill, this year decorated with “2017” and Spring Training symbols. However, all teams now use the same twill, in single-color white with gray printing, replacing the many team-specific combinations from the year before.

The Rays again use a new design for this jersey, based on their regular-season Columbia blue jersey, but with "Rays" lettering replaced by the sunburst graphic as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill. The jersey features a recolored version of the rubberized CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading “2017” and “FL” representing where the Rays spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2019 Batting Practice

With many players opting for lightweight cage jackets instead of traditional BP jerseys with player names and numbers, Majestic introduces a replacement product that may be an attempt to gain acceptance by the pros on field while being more attractive to fans at retail. New for 2017, official team batting practice jerseys are replaced with what Majestic calls a 3/4 Sleeve BP Trainer. The new hybrid is cut in a pullover jacket silhouette, including a short zipper at the neck, but made of Cool Base jersey material. The underarm and back panels are of Cool Base mesh, like the sides and tail of Flex Base jerseys. Team logos and other lettering is in what Majestic calls “lightweight twill” (as described in Chapter 8). The Majestic logo is applied to the middle of the left sleeve, and a new, heat-pressed Cool Base tag adorns the left front tail. The Rays jersey is blue with light blue back and underarm gussets. The sunburst logo, also seen on their Spring Training jerseys, appears on the front left chest. The back of the jersey is blank. Unlike most other teams, these are used by the Rays “blank,” without any player identification added.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Spring Training

The 2018 Spring Training jerseys continue the general design of the previous year, again featuring all player name and number lettering using each team's regular fonts in only one layer of twill printed with special Spring Training and 2018-year-specific patterns. The Rays again use a design distinct from their regular season lineup, based on their regular-season Columbia blue jersey, but with "Rays" lettering replaced by the sunburst graphic. The name and back numbers are sewn on in white patterned twill. A new CFX patch, shaped like home plate, is stitched to the right sleeve, featuring "2018" and "FL" representing their Spring Training home.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Spring Training

The 2019 Spring Training jersey evolves to create yet another iteration of the theme of the last three years. This time, jersey backs abandon the single-color printed twill treatment of the past and return to regular season multi-layered team-color twill like 2016, yet without 2016's printed patterns. The Rays use the same base jersey they introduced n 2016, carrying a new CFX patch on the right sleeve, featuring "2019" and "FLA," referencing their Spring Training home. The back numbers are blue/white and the name on back is white/blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Spring Training

Spring Training is simplified for 2020, league-wide. For the first time since 2016, Spring Training jerseys eliminate the special sleeve patch indicating the year and location of a team's Spring Training home, and now the lettering is the same non-patterned, multi-layered twill as the teams wear in the regular season. For 2020, the Rays use the same Spring Training jersey as years prior, a special jersey not part of their regular season rotation (until it becomes an official alternate in 2022), with blue/white back numbers and white/blue player name on back. Though the jersey shares the same design as the team's previous spring jerseys, Nike changes the tag code to "RAST" from Majestic's "RAAS."

© GameWornGuides.com

Special Events Jerseys

1999 Turn Back The Clock to 1960s FSL Tampa Tarpons

Game played July 17, 1999. Being in the MLB for only one year did not stop the Devil Rays from turning back the clock in 1999… and dressing in flannels as the Tampa Tarpons, an old Florida State League team affiliated with the Reds during the early 1960s flannel era. Their opponent that day was the 1969-attired New York Mets.

© GameWornGuides.com

1999 Turn Ahead the Clock

August 14, 1999 at Kansas City: After many years of searching, we have finally found two game worn examples of the elusive Rays' 1999 Turn Ahead the Clock jersey, to learn what the lettering on the back looked like. This uniform concept, predicting what the team's uniforms might look like in the future, was not popular and barely received any mention in the press.

Back lettering is in the same "futuristic" type style used by many of the teams in MLB who participated in this promotion. Names are vertically sewn, assuming that people in the future will read better when things are written sideways.

© GameWornGuides.com

2000 Turn Back the Clock to 1966 FSL St. Petersburg Saints

May 29, 2000, The Devil Rays dressed as the 1966 minor league St. Petersburg Saints of the Florida State League in wool flannel jerseys by Ebbets Field Flannels.

Their opponents that day were the Baltimore Orioles, who wore their 1970 gray road uniforms.

Photos courtesy of Rob Loeffler

© GameWornGuides.com

2000 Turn Back the Clock to 1922 FSL St. Petersburg Saints

From the Corpus Christie Caller, August 13, 2000:

Both teams wore replica uniforms as part of a salute to 100 years of American League baseball. The White Sox had the uniforms of their 1906 World Series championship team. Tampa Bay wore the uniform of the 1922 Florida State League champion St. Petersburg Saints.

August 12, 2000: The Rays invited the White Sox to a Turn Back the Clock contest, where the home team dressed at the 1922 St. Petersburg Saints (of the minor league Florida State League). The White Sox dressed as the 1906 White Sox in their distinctive monochrome dark blue road uniforms.

The Rays are one of the few teams who have used real flannel uniforms from Ebbets Field Flannels for Turn Back the Clock contests.

© GameWornGuides.com

2002 Rays of Hope/St. Patrick's Day

On March 17, 2002, the Rays wore special kelly green versions of their BP/Spring Training jerseys for St. Patrick's Day. Rather than the white/blue lettering on back of their usual BP, these had just white twill for player names (on a nameplate) and numbers. They were autographed and auctioned off after the game to support the Rays of Hope Foundation, which was the team's charity at the time. The foundation's logo is embroidered on to the left sleeve above the Majestic logo. Game photos from the day are scarce, but several of these jerseys have turned up in the hobby over the years.

Times photo — MICHAEL RONDOU

SEARCHING: Rightfielder Ben Grieve has trouble finding the ball after a pop fly by Bobby Kielty in the eighth inning. The play was ruled a hit in the Rays' 7-4 loss to Minnesota at Florida Power Park.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005 Turn Back the Clock to 1960 University of Tampa

The Rays enjoy participating in Turn Back the Clock contests, but given their short span of existence they don't have much of their own history to call upon.

On June 18, 2005 the Rays dressed as the 1960 University of Tampa team to honor their manager Lou Piniella who played there then. They played the St. Louis Cardinals, who dressed in 1982 road uniforms. The University of Tampa uniforms were made by Majestic in pinstriped knit with red lettering.

© GameWornGuides.com

2006 Turn Back The Clock to 1975 FSL Tampa Tarpons

Original 1975 (Reds affiliate) Tarpons jersey, for comparison. Different number font is used.

The Rays played a June 24, 2006 game dressed as the 1975 Tampa Tarpons of the Florida State League. They wore poly knit replicas of the Tarpons' uniforms, made by Majestic. Their opponent that day was the Atlanta Braves, who dressed in 1975 road blue uniforms.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007 Turn Back the Clock to 1955 FSL St. Petersburg Saints

The Rays played the Dodgers on June 22, 2007 honoring the 1955 Dodgers' World Series championship team. The Devil Rays wore wool flannel uniforms of the 1955 St. Petersburg Saints of the Florida State League, made by Ebbets Field Flannels. Lettering is felt.

We note that while MLB Turn Back the Clock games became popular and even commonplace, on-field uniforms made of real flannel and felt grew rarer as the years went on, as more teams opted for the old styles sewn in double knit fabric.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Turn Back the Clock to 1989-1990 St. Petersburg Pelicans

The Rays played the Houston Astros on June 21, 2008.

The St. Petersburg Pelicans were the only champions of the short-lived Senior Professional Baseball Association, which played only one and a half seasons in 1989-1990.

Knit pinstriped uniforms made by Majestic. The Astros wore 1980s-style rainbow uniforms.

Left, and below: Original 1989 Pelicans road jersey for comparison*

Number font is close but not quite the same, wordmark should be sewn at a slight angle; otherwise accurate.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Negro Leagues Tribute (1938 Jacksonville Red Caps)

- Game played against the Pirates in Pittsburgh on June 28, 2008 on African American Heritage Day.
- The Rays dressed as the Negro American League's 1938 Jacksonville Red Caps.
- Uniforms made in double knit by AIS.
- Varsity back numbers in red/navy, no player names on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Turn Back the Clock to 1998

July 11, 2009: With their fondness for throwback games, this 2009 contest was the first time that the Rays actually were able to wear their own uniforms for the event.

The Rays wore uniforms from their inaugural season of 1998 when they were known as the "Devil Rays" (though the sleeve patch dates from 1999-2000).

These look very, very close to the Russell-made originals. Three-color names and numbers on back (purple/white/black), player names on nameplates.

In this game the Rays wore a fitted cap with the team logo on front, sold at retail prior to 1998 but never worn on the field by the Devil Rays! The one actually worn in 1998 had the “TB” on the front.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Turn Back the Clock to 1970s FSL Tampa Tarpons

August 13, 2010: Once again appearing as a minor league team in their annual Turn Back the Clock exercise, the Rays appeared as a 1970s Tampa Tarpons team at home, playing the Baltimore Orioles who wore their unusual and controversial (at the time) all-orange 1971 uniforms.

Original 1970s-era jersey

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Negro Leagues Tribute (1951 Tampa Smokers)

Steve Kraljic Collection

The Rays' July 2, 2011 Turn Back the Clock game generated more press than any such event in memory, all over a smoking cigar. The Tampa Smokers were a minor league team, their name referring to the city's cigar industry. But the Rays' support of the "Tobacco Free Florida" initiative mixed politics with their game, causing revisionist history to be created, and the lit cigar to be removed from the jersey front. Their opponent on this day were the Cardinals who dressed in 1953 uniforms. Two-color name and Varsity style numbers, red/black.

(Right) Non-revisionist Smokers jersey replica by Ebbets Field Flannels; its cigar intact

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Turn Back the Clock to 1979 “Faux-back”

June 30, 2012 the Rays invited the Tigers for a “Turn Back the Clock” game to the 1970s. One problem: the Rays did not exist then. So, they borrowed the design concept of the Padres 1978-1979-era uniforms, selected from the blue color palate, and made these up, incorporating their own design mod-style bold yellow numbers and names. The 1979-era city patch for St. Petersburg is added to the left sleeve. The visiting Tigers wore their 1979 road uniforms.

The term “fauxback” was coined to describe these Rays uniforms that never were. The Rays are not the first team to do this; the Texas Rangers twice wore “never-were” throwback uniforms in the 1990s so they could participate in throwback games.

Reaction in the press was mixed, but most seemed amused by the idea. As shown earlier in this chapter, this design was picked up as a team alternate uniform in 2013-2017 and worn again occasionally.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 Memorial Day

Read the full story on MLB's Memorial Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

May 27, 2013, MLB decreed that all teams would wear camouflage-twill lettered jerseys for their Memorial Day games. The Rays hosted the cross-state Marlins, and wore their home white uniforms with all lettering and wordmarks in desert camouflage. Player names are sewn to nameplates. The Rays are one of the few teams who still use player nameplates in modern times.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Memorial Day/Armed Services Day

These camouflage-lettered gray uniforms were worn twice by the Rays in 2014: first for Armed Services Day at the Angels on May 17, then less than two weeks later for memorial day in Toronto against the Blue Jays on May 26. Player names on nameplates. Desert camouflage lettering outlined in white on gray uniforms is a horrible combination, providing the visibility that camouflage is best known for.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Turn Back the Clock to 1988 “Faux-back”

Bill Henderson Collection

August 10, 2014: The Rays were the guest at the Cubs’ 1988-retro day during the Cubs’ yearlong celebration of Wrigley Field’s 100th birthday. Since the Rays did not exist until 1998, they did the next best thing, wearing a yellow-trimmed variant of their retro-themed alternate “fauxback” uniforms, which are supposed to resemble what the Rays might have worn had they existed in the 1980s. These are fun, and while I suppose the Rays could have worn their regular dark blue home fauxbacks, the Cubs were picking up the tab for this game, so new uniforms were ordered and auctioned after the game. Note the Don Zimmer memorial patch (worn on team jerseys starting June 8th).

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Memorial Day

Repeating the look worn for 2013 Memorial Day, the Rays use their home whites for Memorial Day on May 25, 2015. Once again, the top layer of back numbers and the team wordmark is desert camouflage, and the names on back are single-color camo on nameplates. The MLB Silhouetted Batter neck tag is changed to dark green/khaki/white from its typical colors, as it appeared on the 2013 Memorial Day jersey. The rest of the jersey remains the same as usual.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's Independence Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

2015 Independence Day

For Independence Day 2015, all 29 U.S.-based teams adopt patriotic "Stars and Stripes" uniforms for the first time. For this day, all uniforms are re-lettered in a combination of red, white, and blue, regardless of what the team's normal color palate might be. Jersey trim and patches remain the same as the team's regular jerseys. All teams sport a stars and stripes version of the MLB Silhouetted Batter logo on the back collar. The Rays wear their road gray jerseys with the blue-background version of the starred twill, which features large white stars; all lettering outlined in red, including their front logo as well as back numbers. Two-layer twill replaces the usual three-color front lettering on the jerseys. Player names on back are in red on a nameplate. An American flag patch is sewn on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's Mother's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

2016-2017 Mother's Day

All teams wear special pink-trimmed uniforms for Mother's Day, May 8, 2016 and May 13-14, 2017. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Mother's Days), while the Majestic sleeve logo is rendered in pink and the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark pink/light pink/white. The Rays wear their road gray jerseys with the front logo lettering in pink with dark gray outlines, losing its usual drop shadow layer. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray on a nameplate, while back numbers are pink/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of pink, gray, and white. All jersey trim, normally blue, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Memorial Day

The 2016 Memorial Day jerseys are constructed in the Flex Base style for the first time for the event, and the ChromaFlex MLB logo at back neck becomes black and dark gold for all teams. The new, league-wide template, with higher-visibility woodland camo lettering and black outlines, makes this set more legible than in prior years. The Rays apply the camouflage trimmings to their road gray jerseys for the game on May 30.

The typically three-color front lettering loses the drop shadow and becomes two-color camo/black, while back numbers are rendered in woodland camo with a black outline and player names appear in single-color black on a nameplate. Like other teams, their sleeve patches are reduced to shades of green, gray, and black, and trim elements are changed to single-color black from the usual blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Father's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Father's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

For the first time in 2016, all teams wear special light blue-trimmed uniforms Father's Day, Sunday, June 19. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized front tag applied to the front left tail. Every team Also features the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Father's Days), while the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted batter patch appears in dark royal blue/ light blue/white.

The Rays wear their home white jerseys with the front logo lettering in light blue with dark gray outlines, losing the usual drop shadow layer. The player names on back are sewn in single-color dark gray on a nameplate, while back numbers are light blue/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of light blue, gray, and white. All jersey trim, normally blue, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Independence Day

MLB creates yet another new Independence Day jersey template for the 2016 iteration, now built on Majestic's new Flex Base jersey construction. Each Independence Day jersey has a ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB appliqué sewn on the back of the neck. The Rays are at home and wear their alternate dark blue jersey. All clubs have a choice of two styles of star-spangled lettering twill and the Rays select the blue twill version with gray outlines for their typically three-color front lettering and for their back numbers, with a gray player name on back on a nameplate. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. All jersey trim, normally light blue, becomes single-color red.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Memorial Day (Road)

The next incarnation of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single-color black, while the back-of-collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Rays apply this style to their road gray jerseys as worn on May 27-29, 2017 and May 28, 2018.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Powder Blue “Faux-backs”

The Rays have had two pullover “fauxbacks” over the years, one powder blue and one dark blue, and the dark blue version was brought on as an official alternate in 2013-2017. The powder blue version, used only once before in 2014, returns for two games in 2017, on June 10 and August 12. It is identical to the earlier version, with the addition of the new Majestic logo on the left sleeve and the heat-pressed set tags on front. It also lacks the Don Zimmer memorial patch the team wore that year. Powder blue full-knit body with yellow raglan sleeves and V-neck opening. Navy/white/powder blue braid at sleeve ends. All adornment is in twill, player names and numbers use a special “mod” retro 1970s font.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Father's Day

Light blue lettered Father's Day jerseys return on June 17-18, 2017. Once again, the Flex Base jerseys have the usual front left tail Majestic tagging and set tagging at the inside bottom of the placket. Returning as well is the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon glued on left chest, the light blue Majestic embroidered sleeve logo, and the dark royal blue/light blue/white back collar ChromaFlex MLB Silhouetted Batter patch.

The Rays wear road gray with the front logo lettering in light blue/dark gray. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while back numbers are light blue/dark gray. All jersey trim, normally blue, becomes dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of light blue, gray, and white.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Independence Day

The next version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less-busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two different color options for the new twill – appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck.

On July 1-4, 2017 and July 2-4, 2018, the Rays wear their road gray jersey with blue patterned twill/red front logo lettering and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color red. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue. All jersey trim is single-color blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Players Weekend

To highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans, MLB introduces the colorful Players Weekend promotion. In addition to relaxed regulations on team--standard color and design of cleats, bats, and other equipment, MLB encourages players to wear nicknames on the backs of a new set of very colorful jerseys. Meant to evoke the look of youth league designs, the two-toned Cool Base pullovers feature bright and contrasting body and sleeve colors, and include a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people in their lives with handwritten black marker messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature a variant of the MLB logo showing the growth of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat-pressed Majestic manufacturer and set tags are applied on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. All numbers on back are in single color Varsity, and the player names in 2 ¾" single color Block Condensed, regardless of the team's usual font.

On August 25-27, 2017 and August 2426, 2018, the Rays wear jerseys with powder blue bodies and yellow sleeves with white nicknames and yellow numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide yellow/white/yellow trim. The front features their home jersey lettering, here rendered in navy/white/navy drop shadow with white/yellow sunburst.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018-2019, 2021-2022 Turn Back the Clock to 1998

This style is worn:

2018: March 31, June 9, June 23, September 8

2019: April 20, May 11, June 15, August 17, August 31, September 21

2021: May 29, June 26, July 31, August 21, September 25

2022: May 28, June 25, July 30, August 20, September 24

As they did in 2008 for their 10th anniversary, the Rays honor their 20th anniversary in 2018 with a throwback to their first home jersey. These Majestic Flex Base jerseys look very close to the Russell-made originals, with the large, untraditional multicolored Devil Rays logo and lettering on the front. The color scheme is slightly different from the originals, with front lettering elements outlined in black rather than the purple from the late 1990s. Similarly, the color gradient pattern is more an interpretation than a reproduction, with the colors on the throwback leaning darker than the originals. Player names are accurately rendered in purple/white/black on nameplates, while back numbers in Block share the same color pattern.

The team and its fans liked the style so much, it returned in 2019, 2021, and 2022 for occasional throwback games as well. The 2018 version sports the team's 20th anniversary patch on the left sleeve, while the 2019 has the MLB150 anniversary patch on the right sleeve and adds the "VJN" memorial for original owner Vince Naimoli starting August 30. The 2021-2022 version is made by Nike and has the Nike logo on front right chest.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Memorial Day (Home)

The 2018 Memorial Day jerseys repeat the pattern of 2017, with dark olive green/black front lettering and numbers joined by solid-color black player names on back. The outlines are nearly impossible to see as the two colors are so close in hue to each other. The back-of-collar MLB logo and team-specific sleeve patches also are repeated from 2017 with an olive green and black treatment. Trim elements are again simplified to single-color black, and a green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, is stitched to the right sleeve. The Rays apply this style to their home white jerseys on May 26-27, 2018.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Players Weekend

The third incarnation of Players Weekend turns the colorful jersey concept on its ear, reducing all teams to monochromatic designs in either black or white, with all team sleeve patches and trim removed, leaving a clean but stark template. Gone are the contrasting sleeves and special patches with messages of inspiration. MLB says that this new approach is to emphasize the colorful, personalized cleats, bats, and other gear the players choose for the promotion, which spans August 23-25, 2019. Jerseys are now button-front Flex Base, with appropriate Majestic manufacturer and set tagging. Back-of-collar CFX MLB logo is now silver and black. All teams also wear a memorial patch for Angels pitcher Tyler Skaggs, a white “45” in a black circle, on the left sleeve. Most teams removed this patch before auctioning off the jerseys. The Rays wear a white version of their home jersey with the front lettering and back Varsity numbers rendered in white/gray with gray nickname on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

Prototypes and Oddballs

Pre-1998 “Rainbow Sleeve” Alternate

Note that regular sleeve patch, not the Inaugural one used in 1998, is sewn on these two jerseys.

In prior editions of this Guide we had noted spotting a few of Rays jerseys with the “mistake” of having one knit rainbow sleeve end. Turns out that these were not errors, but instead this was the original design for how these black jerseys were to be worn by the team.
As you can see in the photos at right, they showed up in several official places, including the Rays’ inaugural press conference hosted by the Commissioner of Baseball himself, and in the Rays’ first two retail catalogs in 1996-1997. Never worn by the team on the field, finding one is a happy rarity today.

(Left, below)) The rainbow sleeve black jersey was pictured on the cover of the 1996 team catalog, and on the inside of the 1997 one. (Right) Note team’s first manager Larry Rothschild holding one at the 1996 press conference announcing the birth of the Devil Rays and that the lettering on that one has different colors than those finally decided upon.

© GameWornGuides.com

Pre-1998 Unused Batting Practice

This is likely another example of a jersey style planned to be used by the team, but that was lost somewhere along the way between the Rays' launch as an entity in 1996 and the team taking the field in 1998. I had seen this style jersey with "authentic merchandise" (replica) tagging many times, but finding one with Diamond Collection (on field specification) as this one has, is uncommon. While an "Authentic" This particular example with its neck size tag and heat-applied sleeve logo can be identified as a retail sale item and not a jersey that was made for on-field use. Its back is blank. I have not seen one of these with an on-field spec embroidered sleeve logo.

© GameWornGuides.com

Purple and Green Batting Practice Jerseys

From time to time I have come across purple mesh Diamond Collection tagged batting practice jerseys and suspect that early on these are were planned for MLB team on-field use. This decision seems to have changed in the period between the time the franchise is awarded in 1995 and the team began to play its games in 1998.

Some purple jerseys claimed to be game used may be minor league, most were made for retail sale. Purple BPs were not used on-field by the MLB team. We have not yet come across a purple jersey with an embroidered sleeve Majestic tag, the type used for on-field gear. All the ones so far I have seen are the decal-type featured on retail sale models.

Green team issued or game worn versions of the Rays mesh batting practice jersey also appear from time to time, these are often minor league issue. Rawlings sleeve tagging is a good clue, as Rawlings did not have the MLB contract for any on-field gear during this time period.

© GameWornGuides.com

2000-2003 Unused Prototype Turn Back the Clock to 1968?

This jersey is something of a mystery. It appears to be a Tampa Tarpons throwback jersey, likely to around the 1960s when the minor league club was affiliated with the Cincinnati Reds. The Rays have done a handful of Tarpons throwback nights, but they have never used this jersey style in any of them. The jersey's tagging dates it to around 2000-2003, which puts it between other Tarpons throwback games by the Rays. The Rays also used Russell to make their on-field jerseys through 2004, so the time period lines up in that regard.

However, this jersey does not show any typical signs of a prototype, and in fact, leans closer to retail with the size tag in the neck. The tag is cut so the size is not readable, but the jersey measures to about a size 52, which is also unusual for a sample. Note in the photo of the neck tag that the jersey appears to have the outline of an MLB logo that would have been sewn on the back of the collar, but is not present on the jersey any longer. The "47" on back, which often stands for a year a jersey is meant to represent (or be used) does not make sense for the Tarpons, a team founded in 1955. Note also that the jersey's sleeve lacks a manufacturer logo, which at this time would have been unusual, especially since Russell was permitted to have their logos on sleeves for MLB jerseys they made. Perhaps the lack of logo is what caused the cut tag, which is normally used to show a jersey rejected for some sort of mistake or manufacturing error.

One possibility is that this was used for a throwback game for the second incarnation of the minor league Tarpons, a Yankees affiliate founded in 1994. We could not find a record of such a throwback game, so our research will continue.

Left: A game used 1968 Tarpons jersey, likely the inspiration for this throwback.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005 Prototype Road Vest

Majestic made this prototype road vest for the team's consideration prior to the 2005 season. As is typical of Majestic prototypes, it has team-issued inside seam tag number (0062 = full weight knit for team use) and the generic "Player #5" lettering on its back. Placket code tag tells us its origin.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Prototype Home

Photos: Gary Taylor

The Rays changed their overall look for the 2008 season, the third time in their 11-year history to that point. Here we have a prototype home jersey for that change that is very close to their final on-field jerseys for that year. As is typical of samples, the back is lettered "PLAYER" (on a nameplate) and "8" where the 8 stands for 2008, the year of intended use. The jersey is also a typical sample size 46, and bears a sample tag sewn in to the front placket reading "RAYH-0062-08-03" meaning Rays Home 0062, 2008, version 3 (0062 is the style code for a team-issue Majestic knit jersey of this era).

The front lettering of this sample with the filled-in "A"

The front lettering of the team's final jersey with the open "A"

At first glance, one might assume this was the version of the jersey the team approved for use, but close inspection of the front lettering reveals that the open space in the "A" is filled in with blue, where the final version of the jersey had this spot open, leading to a more awkward split of the three-color letter over the placket. It is possible that was what the filled-in letter was intended to address. It is hard to tell from photos, but the shade of the light blue drop shadow may be darker on this sample than what was used on-field, but that may also be a result of the photo lighting. Notably, the sample omits the ray patch on the sleeve, which appeared on this jersey starting in 2008.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Prototypes: Alternate Navy

A year after overhauling their uniforms, introducing new home and road jerseys in 2008, the Rays add a dark blue alternate for 2009. Here we have two prototypes for that jersey. Both feature the name and number of team star Carl Crawford, a practice not common (rather than using "PLAYER" and the year for the number) but not unprecedented. The photos show incomplete tagging for both jerseys, but the top one is a 46, typical of samples, though its sample tagging was removed from inside the placket. The bottom jersey does have a sample tag, reading "RAY A-09-CBJ-2" for Rays Alternate 2009 Cool Base Jersey version 2. However, the size tag is not visible for that one.

Given a quick look, the two seem identical. And they almost are. However, note the sunburst on the bottom jersey. It is in a different position from the one above, and it is overlapped by the "R", rather than appearing on top of it. It seems that this very subtle difference is the only thing that separated these two iterations.

When the team introduced this jersey, they touted that the sunburst was 40% larger than the one on the home jersey, and that modification appears here as well, showing that tinkering with the sunburst was an important element for the team.

Notably, both samples include the ray patch on the left sleeve, a patch that appeared on the team's home and road jerseys starting in 2008, but not on the dark blue alternate until 2019. Perhaps the team thought there was enough dark blue here already. Curiously, they also lack the MLB logo on the back of the neck for reasons unknown.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Prototype Alternate Columbia Blue

Photos: Gary Taylor

Just two years after overhauling their uniforms, introducing new home and road jerseys in 2008, and one year after rolling out a dark blue alternate, the Rays add a Columbia blue alternate for 2010 (it may be the slowest multi-uniform roll out in history).

Here we have a prototype for that jersey. Like the navy blue alternate prototypes a page earlier, this one features the name and number of a star player, here, Evan Longoria, a practice not common (rather than using “PLAYER” and the year for the number) but obviously not unprecedented. The jersey is a 46, typical of samples, and there is sample tagging inside the placket reading “RAY B-ALT-D1-1-2010” for Rays Blue Alternate, design 1, version 1, 2010”.

In this case the first time was the charm, with this design 1, version 1 being “the one” for the team, as it exactly represents the alternate the team wore starting in 2010.

© GameWornGuides.com

Oddballs

(Left) From Spring Training 2008: As a joke, the names of the Rays' top three starting pitchers are listed directly above those of the Braves legendary trio of Glavine, Avery, and Smoltz on this batting practice jersey, testimony in the belief that the Rays' pitching was every bit as good if not better than Atlanta's in their heyday. The Rays did, in fact, go on to win the American League pennant in 2008 with this combo.

Another example came in Spring Training 2012 when a jersey appeared for coach Tom Foley, with the name on back reading FO-LEE to prank his high opinion of infield prospect Hak-Ju Lee. Foley decided to wear it to coach third one day when Lee was playing shortstop.

(Left) Pitcher Jae Seo oddly sported this jersey with an upside-down nameplate in 2007.

(Above) I do not have a confirmed explanation of the red jersey shown here. It sports the same front tail tag as is usually found on full-weight knit (not Cool Base) jerseys. My guess could be that it was a proposed Independence Day jersey for 2011. It appears to be a pre-2012 Majestic tag and the cap is a 2011 Stars and Stripes model.

© GameWornGuides.com

Retail Oops

WRONG

When the Rays announced their new-for-2009 blue game jersey, the press release promised:

"…The sunburst emanating from the "R" is forty percent larger than the sunburst on the team's home and road jerseys. Light blue piping surrounds the sleeves and collar and extends down the front of the jersey."

Back then, we noticed early batches of retail Authentic jerseys being sold which did not have the new, larger sunburst. It was probably a mistake or perhaps an early production run before the team's design was finalized. Later jerseys have the correct wordmark.

You need to have a sharp eye to catch this one.

RIGHT

© GameWornGuides.com

Good Sport

ST. PETERSBURG - When Rocco Baldelli pulled on his jersey Tuesday, he didn't know someone was pulling his leg.

Maybe he was distracted by the ``This Week in Baseball'' crew that followed him around before the game at Tropicana Field against the Reds, chronicling his every move. He will become the second rookie to be player-host of the show when it airs sometime before the All-Star break.

But the jersey stunt wasn't a part of the TWIB script. Throughout the top of the first inning - during which he made a nice diving catch in center field - the name on the back of the No. 5 jersey was ``Rocco.’

First base umpire Ed Rapuano let Baldelli in on the joke after the top of the first.

``I said, `are you serious?' '' Baldelli said. ``And then I came in and everybody was laughing at me. ... He was goofing around. He thought it was funny. I think he realized that I was getting pranked on.''

Equipment manager Chris Westmoreland was just following orders when he had the jersey customized.
``I think [pitcher Steve] Parris was behind that,'' Baldelli said. ``I'll call him out. I'm sure a lot of other people were, too, but I only know about him. I had no idea.’

(Rays’ mlb.com website press release, June 11, 2003)

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Pregame Tribute to Don Zimmer

Dreck Damian Collection

Fan favorite and baseball institution Don Zimmer capped a 65-year career by spending his final 11 years in baseball as a coach with the Tampa Bay Rays. Zimmer died on June 4, 2014.

Zimmer spent most of his playing years as a Dodger. In a pregame ceremony on June 7, 2014, both the Rays and the Visiting Dodgers lined up wearing Zimmer's number 23 on Brooklyn-script jerseys, white for the Rays and gray for the visiting Dodgers. Each jersey has a "ZIM" patch sewn to the right sleeve.

Shown here is a home white version of the tribute jersey.

https://www.nydailynews.com/2014/06/08/joe-torre-leads-rays-tribute-to-don-zimmer/

© GameWornGuides.com

May 1-3, 2015: “Road” Games at Home

Rays coming home for weekend to play Orioles
By Marc Topkin, Tampa Bay Times Staff Writer
Tampabay.com, Tuesday, April 28, 2015

…Expect more of a "generic" presentation at the Trop, likely without the usual Rays-themed promos and in-game activities. Rays players may not get their walk-up songs played,

The Orioles will be responsible for the expenses in staging the games and will get the ticket and concessions revenue. Unclear on who gets parking money.

The Trop was chosen by mutual decision of the teams. Philadelphia and Washington were considered. The Orioles Sarasota spring stadium came up in internal discussions…

In the wake of rioting that spread across Baltimore in April 2015, the Orioles were forced to play three “home” games in Tampa against the Rays on May 1-3. As a result, the O’s wore home uniforms at the Trop, while the Rays wore their road grays.

© GameWornGuides.com

2021 Prototype Turn Back the Clock to 1998

The Rays introduced a throwback to their inaugural rainbow-style jerseys for Thursday games in 2018. It was such a hit, they stuck with it for the next several years, skipping only the pandemic-shortened 2020, before adding the style as a full-time alternate in the MLB Style Guide for the 2023 season. Here, we have a sample of such a jersey intended for use in 2021. Why prototype a jersey if the team had already been using it for a few seasons? Before the 2020 season, many teams saw samples of their existing jerseys bearing the new Nike logo, first used in 2020. Possibly because this style was skipped in 2020, its prototype, now with Nike branding, was issued for 2021. As is typical of samples, the back is lettered “PLAYER” (on a nameplate) and “21” where the 21 stands for 2021, the year of intended use. The heat-pressed inventory tag also reveals some info, and leaves us with some mysteries. It reads “RAY-LUJ-D1-1-2021” where “RAY” is for the team name, “D1-1” means design 1, sample 1, and “2021” is the year. The “LUJ” notation is confusion, as it is not a common code on jerseys, and we are unsure what it stands for. There is also a small, handwritten “2” on the bottom corner of the tag, which could mean that other copies or versions were made up for team review. Ultimately the team did reintroduce this style for the 2021 season as it appears in this sample.

© GameWornGuides.com

2021: The Many Rays of Chris Mazza

A correct, patch-free example of this style of throwback jersey.

Relief pitcher Chris Mazza took to the field on July 31, 2021 with one more ray than his teammates. That day, his 1998 throwback jersey featured the team's current manta ray patch on the left sleeve - a patch that was neither worn in 1998, nor by any of his other teammates on that uniform in 2021. The Rays wore this jersey five times that season, and Mazza only appeared in one of those games, so his bonus ray was short-lived. However, if the photo of him wearing this jersey (at right) is any indication, he was still pretty psyched about it.

© GameWornGuides.com

2022 Jean Ramirez Memorial

On March 25, 2022, every member of the Rays took to the field wearing “Ramirez” and number 98 on the backs of their blue Spring Training jerseys in honor of Jean Ramirez, their bullpen catcher who died by suicide in January of that year. Each jersey also had a small label by the jock tag with the players’ name and number (for identification purposes) and a special “JR” decal in memory of Ramirez. After the game, the jerseys were signed and auctioned off, with proceeds benefiting the Suicide Prevention Program at the Crisis Center of Tampa Bay, which offers a variety of services aimed at preventing suicidal behavior and intervening with affected people.

© GameWornGuides.com

2023 Prototype Home

Soon after Nike took over MLB jersey manufacturing in 2020, they had intended to release their Nike Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) template as early as 2022. However, a source told Uni-Watch in 2022 that the plans were “pushed back at least to 2023, and possibly even 2024.” Ultimately, the new template was in fact delayed to 2024, but here we have evidence that prototypes were made up in advance of the 2023 season, if not earlier.

This Rays home jersey, at first glance, is mostly the same as what they wore before and after the switch from Nike’s version of Flex Base to VPE. Closer inspection reveals that the template is VPE - including the lower MLB logo on back, smaller player name lettering, the band of fabric around the neck opening, sewn-in sleeve-end trim, a lightweight sleeve patch, and perforated back numbers (the home jerseys ultimately did not use perforated numbers). The tell-tale “Player” and “23” on back reinforce this as a sample, intended for the 2023 season.

Oddly, the name on back lettering appears to be purple/white on this example, rather than the navy/white the team then used, and the color used here on the numbers. It could be a trick of lighting, but if it is the case, it may have been a manufacturing mistake, or even a change the team considered and vetoed.

The heat-pressed inventory tag also reveals some info, and leaves us with some mysteries. It reads “DH0500 RAY 2023 CONV. JERSEY HOME P2.” There is also a small, handwritten “2” on the bottom corner of the tag. Here, “RAY” and “2023 home” are self explanatory. The “DH0500” indication is not clear, although Nike has used a “DX” prefix for four-digit style numbers in its Vapor Premier Elite line for colleges, so this may be an internal model number for the pro jerseys. The use of “Conversion Jersey P2” is also unclear, unless it refers to converting from the Flex Base template to this one, and this is a second iteration of a sample.

© GameWornGuides.com

2023 Prototype Alternate Blue

RGVDEAL on eBay

Here is another example of a 2023 Nike Vapor Premier Elite prototype jersey. Unlike the home prototype also shown in this chapter, this example is for what appears to be a rejected version of a new alternate jersey.

Given the details of this jersey, including the lower MLB logo on back, smaller player name lettering, the band of fabric around the neck opening, sewn-in sleeve-end trim, and perforated back numbers, it is clear it is an early VPE sample. The tell-tale "Player" and "23" on back reinforce this as a prototype, intended for the 2023 season.

In contrast to the home sample that had a few slight style details changed, this alternate is unlike anything the Rays wore before or since. It is medium blue in color and includes the same blue/white sleeve trim. We've seen other odd alternate samples in this jersey color, but this is the only one we've seen with this sleeve-end trim, most use blue/royal blue/white. It also features very strange gray knit trim around the collar and placket, an odd choice for a jersey of this color.

The jersey sports the team's sunburst logo on front left chest, with numbers in navy/white and player name in white/navy. The overall design concept is similar to their Spring Training jersey that debuted in 2016 and later became a full-time alternate, though that one is on a light blue jersey.

Like that of the home sample, the heat-pressed inventory tag on the alternate also reveals some info, and leaves us with some mysteries. It reads "DQ6267 RAY 2023 CONV. JERSEY ALT2 P1." There is also a small, handwritten "1" on the bottom corner of the tag. Here, "RAY" and "2023 ALT2" is self explanatory, assuming that the navy alternate was considered ALT1. The "DQ6267" indication is not clear, although Nike has used a "DX" prefix for four-digit style numbers in its Vapor Premier Elite line for colleges, so this may be an internal model number for the pro jerseys. The use of "Conv. Jersey" and "P1" is also unclear, unless it refers to converting from the Flex Base template to this one, and this is a first iteration of multiple samples.

Ultimately, the Rays did not adopt a new alternate like this blue jersey, electing to transfer their existing lineup to VPE rather than trying something new.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Prototype Home/Prototype Alternate Dark Blue

In advance of the switch to Nike Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) in the 2024 season, Nike made prototypes of jerseys on the new template for team review. By the point that these samples were made, teams had already seen some early drafts with many missing or incorrect details, just to get a sense of the materials and construction. However, many of the later samples, like the ones shown here, were very close to what eventually appeared on the field in 2024. These Rays home and dark blue alternate versions are examples. In many ways they replicate the team's home and dark blue alternate jerseys that they had worn for years, just carried over to VPE. This meant that the original sleeve-end trim was now sewn into the edge of the sleeve instead of on it, player names and numbers are smaller with names more arched, and back numbers are perforated (which was not an element of the team's final, on-field home or alternate dark blue jerseys for 2024).

Note the sample information that is on the Nike tags, which read "RAYS HOME JERSEY 44 REGULAR FIT" and MARLINS ALT1 JERSEY 44 REGULAR FIT" with 44 being the size, which was not typical in earlier Nike samples, which were usually size 46. Also, the designation of "regular fit" was something not commonly seen on jersey tags, so it may have indicated the intent to use "bucket sizing" on jerseys, where there were a handful of standard cuts in different proportions available to players rather than the specific customizations of years past. Nike's 2024 pants were also done in bucket sizing, which was very unpopular with players. It is unclear what the text "DH0500-100" and "DH0500-410" on the front tags mean. They are likely internal production codes, as all 2024 samples we have seen have different codes in these spots that we have not yet deciphered.

© GameWornGuides.com

Commemorative Patches

Rays Patches

1998

(Above) The gold, blue and black version of the Inaugural Patch was not used by the team but shows up for sale from dealers now and again. We suspect that this is an earlier pre-approved design the patch that was supplanted, but got far enough along in the approval process that many were produced for retail sale.

March 30-31, 2004, Opening Series in Tokyo

2007

2014, starting June 8

June 17, 2016

- 1998: Inaugural Patch-sewn to left sleeve, replaced in 1999 by the team patch.
- 2004, March 30-31: For the opening games of the 2004 season, the Devil Rays played the Yankees in Tokyo, Japan, and wore their BP jerseys as game jerseys. All players wore a square, white RICOH sponsorship patch on their right sleeve.
- 2007: 10 Seasons patch.
- 2014: Starting June 8: “ZIM” patch for coach Don Zimmer.

- 2016, June 17: “Orlando” patch on right chest of the white home jersey, along with the team wearing the cap of the Orlando Rays. I have to imagine that these were one-day patches and were removed, and the jerseys remained in use. I have never seen a jersey with patch affixed for sale.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018

2019, starting August 30

- 2018: 20th anniversary patches, Columbia blue border for white, gray, and dark blue jerseys, dark blue border for Columbia blue jersey. Left sleeve.
- 2019, starting August 30: VJN memorial for original owner Vince Naimoli. Right sleeve, rest of season.
- 2022, Most of May and June 1; 2023, May 2-7; 2024, May 20-30, 2025, May 19-28: Green ribbon, left chest, in recognition of Mental Health Awareness Month, following the suicide of Rays bullpen catcher Jean Ramirez.
- 2022, June 24: Rainbow-colored pride-themed sunburst logo patch on right sleeve. Players had the option to wear the patch, all but five Rays did. The following year, MLB informed the team they could not wear pride caps or patches, despite the fact that other teams were still allowed to do so.
- 2023: 25th anniversary patch
- 2024, March 9-10: Heat-pressed Mercasid sponsor patch and embroidered MLB World Tour Dominican Series patch for games in DR vs. Red Sox

2023

March 9-10, 2024

© GameWornGuides.com

2023-2025 Rays Advertising Patches

With the start of the 2023 season, teams were permitted to sell an advertising patch, up to four inches square, to appear on one of their jersey sleeves. The sleeve on which the patch appeared could change from player to player, and each team that sold a patch handled the placement differently.

As of press time, the Rays had not yet made a deal with a jersey patch sponsor. In 2023, the location of the team's 25th Anniversary patch (which replaced the ray patch for the season) varied depending on the handedness of each player, and in 2024, the ray patch returned, also on varying sleeves, perhaps in preparation for a sponsor that did not materialize. To accommodate the variable sleeve placement, the team creates a "reverse" ray patch, so the ray will be swimming "forward" regardless of the sleeve on which it appears

Left sleeve

Right sleeve

© GameWornGuides.com

Rays Postseason Patches

2008 World Series
(right sleeve)

2019 AL Wild Card
2019 AL Division Series
(right sleeve, below “VJN” patch, MLB150 patch removed)

2013 AL Wild Card
2013 AL Division Series
(right sleeve)

2020 World Series

© GameWornGuides.com

Chapter 32

Boston Red Sox

Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys

1970-2025 Tenth Edition

William F. Henderson

Red Sox Uniform History Notes

- The Boston Red Sox are one of the most traditional teams in baseball, avoiding unnecessary changes to their uniforms. The basic appearance of their home uniform has not changed since 1936. Their road uniforms change infrequently, though they have cycled through a few variations in the time covered by this book. Additionally, they have added red alternate in 2003 and then added a blue alternate jersey in 2009.
- 1970 through 1972 home jerseys are cream-colored flannel, plain and without trim of any kind. “RED SOX” is arched across the front in the display font known as “Tuscan,” also used by the Los Angeles Angels during the 1960s and the New York Mets on their road jerseys. Player numbers on the back are red outlined with navy, and are in a once-common baseball number font (McAuliffe) that is today associated with the Red Sox alone, but had been used by many teams in the 1930s through 1960s.
- Road uniforms for 1970 to mid-1972 are gray flannel with “Boston” spelled out in bold navy/red Block letters on front. Back numbers are also navy outlined with red, and are in the McAuliffe/Red Sox” font.
- The Red Sox introduce pullover knit tops and sansabelt pants mid-year 1972. Home knits featured a red/blue/red trimmed V-neck but otherwise looked just like the flannels they replaced. The road knits, however, change appearance from the old flannels, spelling out “BOSTON” in the same Tuscan font as the home jersey wordmark, and using numbers on back that were red outlined with navy, the same as the home uniform. The same red/blue/red V-neck trim is used on the road jersey as the knit home. Flannels and knits are used interchangeably through the end of the 1972 season, both at home and on the road.
- The pullover look continues only through 1978, after which the Red Sox switch back to traditional button-front jerseys and belted pants, a trend that most other teams eventually followed. Both home and road uniform jerseys return to the same design used 1938-1968, although the road change back number from McAuliffe to Varsity font. The new button-front home jersey for 1979 has thin red knit trim on the placket on either side of the buttons, the road jersey is gray, totally devoid of trim and has “Boston” spelled out in plain navy blue block letters.
- For 1990 the road jersey wordmark returns to the Tuscan “Boston” and McAuliffe font returns to the back number, both last used in 1978. Names are added to road jersey backs for the first time in team history. The only trim on the new road jersey is thin red knit trim near the sleeve end. The home jersey remains the same.
- The introduction of alternate jerseys began in 2003 with a red home alternate, initially worn only on Friday nights. A navy blue road alternate followed in 2009.
- In a minor design change for 2009, the road jersey’s front wordmark change to simple navy blue, still in Tuscan font, and back names/numbers go single-color blue as well. The home jersey remains the same, while minor changes are made to the trim on the red alternate.
- For 2014, the road jersey reverts to a design more consistent with its traditional look, very close to the prior 2008 model.
- In 2021, the Red Sox are the first team to unveil a City Connect uniform. The bold, daring design is a bright yellow jersey that paid tribute to the Boston Marathon, using its official yellow and blue color palette and incorporating nods such as bib-style sleeve patches with the area code “617” and typography styled after the marathon finish line. Despite bearing no resemblance to the club’s traditional look, it became popular with fans, and is worn frequently during hot streaks.
- In 2025, the team introduced a new City Connect 2.0 uniform that shifted from commemorating the marathon to celebrating Fenway Park itself, particularly the Green Monster. The design included a slate green jersey (mimicking the color of the wall) with white lettering and yellow front numbers styled after scoreboard tiles, along with white/green/white trim and a scoreboard-style “B” patch. An additional unique detail is scoreboard-inspired notches in the back numbers.
- The navy blue road alternate is retired after 2024 to make room for the yellow City Connect 1.0 style, which was promoted to full alternate status in 2025. As a result, the red alternate jersey—previously worn only at home—is now also used for select road games, marking the first time since 1933 that a Red Sox jersey worn on the road bore “RED SOX” instead of “BOSTON” on the front.
- Notable for collectors is the fact that the Red Sox, along with the Yankees, are the only teams to have never used player names on home jerseys (other than MLB’s gimmicky late-2010s Players Weekend jerseys). Along with the Brewers, the Sox were the last team in baseball to add player names to road jerseys, for the 1990 season (noting that the Yankees remain the only team to use no names on any player uniforms, home or road).

I am always looking for new information and better photographs. If you can share new information, or offer corrections to this material, please send a note to me, at gameworngguides@gmail.com. Please tell me which page you are referencing. All contributors will be recognized by name in a future edition.

© GameWornGuides.com

Year by Year Summary

Style continues onward

Red Sox Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1970	Home White Flannel	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
	Road Gray Flannel	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
1971	Home White Flannel	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
	Road Gray Flannel	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
1972	Home White Flannel	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
	Road Gray Flannel	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
	Home White*	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
	Road Gray*	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
1973	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
1974	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
1975	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	Mass. Bicentennial	-	McAuliffe
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-		-	McAuliffe
1976	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	(Tom Yawkey) Armband+	-	McAuliffe
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	(Tom Yawkey) Armband+	-	McAuliffe
1977	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
1978	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	McAuliffe
1979	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1980	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1981	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1982	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1983	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1984	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1985	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1986	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
1987	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	Fenway Park 75th	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 1 color	No	-	Fenway Park 75th	-	Rawlings
1988	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings
1989	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Varsity 1 color	No	-	-	-	Rawlings

* The Red Sox made a mid-season switch to double knits in 1972, but wore both for the rest of the season.. There are sets of both flannels and double-knit jerseys year tagged 1972

 The Mass. Bicentennial patch was also worn part of 1976
+ Starting July 10

© GameWornGuides.com

Red Sox Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1990	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	(Tony C) Armband	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	(Tony C) Armband	-	Rawlings
1991	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Rawlings
1992	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	JRY Armband	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	JRY Armband	-	Russell/Rawlings
1993	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Russell/Wilson
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
1994	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	MLB 125th Anniv	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	MLB 125th Anniv	Russell
1995	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
1996	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
1997	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	Jackie Robinson	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	Jackie Robinson	Russell
1998	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
1999	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	All Star Game	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	All Star Game	-	Russell
2000	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
2001	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	AL 100th Charter Member	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	AL 100th Charter Member	Russell
2002	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	#9 (Williams) Armband(t)	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	#9 (Williams) Armband(t)	Russell
2003	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Russell
2004	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Russell
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Russell
2005	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
2006	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
2007	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
2008	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	Yes	-	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic

(t) Worn after 7/5

Style continues onward

© GameWornGuides.com

1979-2025

2009-2013

2009-2025

2009-2024

2014-2025

Change to Flex Base

Red Sox Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2009	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 1 color	Block 1 color	No	Red Sox Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
2010	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 1 color	Block 1 color	No	Red Sox Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
2011	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 1 color	Block 1 color	No	Red Sox Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
2012	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	Johnny Pesky 6	Fenway Park 100 yrs	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 1 color	Block 1 color	No	Red Sox Patch	Fenway Park 100 yrs/ Pesky armband 	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	Johnny Pesky 6	Fenway Park 100 yrs	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Johnny Pesky 6	Fenway Park 100 yrs	Majestic
2013	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	B-Strong*	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 1 color	Block 1 color	No	Red Sox Patch	Black Armband*	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	B-Strong*	-	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	B-Strong*	-	Majestic
2014	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Red Sox Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
2015	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Red Sox Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
2016	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Red Sox Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
2017	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Red Sox Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
2018	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Red Sox Patch	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	Majestic
2019	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	MLB 150th Anniversary	Majestic
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Red Sox Patch	MLB 150th Anniversary	Majestic
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	MLB 150th Anniversary	Majestic
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	MLB 150th Anniversary	Majestic
2020	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Nike
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Red Sox Patch	-	Nike
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Nike
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	Nike

 Armband for Johnny Pesky starting August 14 on road jersey. "6" disc memorial patch added to other jerseys on August 17.
*For bombing victims at the Boston Marathon: Temporary armbands worn April 16. On April 21, BStrong (Boston Strong) patch added to all but road gray. April 22 Road gray gets permanent armband.

© GameWornGuides.com

These four styles continue from previous years

Switch to Vapor Premiere Elite

Red Sox Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2021	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Nike
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Red Sox Patch	-	Nike
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	-	-	Nike
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	-	-	Nike
	City Connect	No	Custom 2 color	No	-	617 patch	-	Nike
2022	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	Jerry Remy memorial	-	Nike
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Red Sox Patch	Jerry Remy memorial	Nike
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	Jerry Remy memorial	-	Nike
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Jerry Remy memorial	-	Nike
	City Connect	No	Custom 2 color	No	-	617 patch	Jerry Remy memorial	Nike
2023	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	Mass Mutual Ad patch‡	-	Nike
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Mass Mutual Ad patch‡	-	Nike
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	Mass Mutual Ad patch‡	-	Nike
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Mass Mutual Ad patch‡	-	Nike
	City Connect	No	Custom 2 color	No	-	617 patch	Mass Mutual Ad patch	Nike
2024	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color (no perf)	No	-	Mass Mutual Ad patch‡	Tim Wakefield memorial‡	Nike
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color (no perf)	Nike Block 2 color	No	Mass Mutual Ad patch‡	Tim Wakefield memorial‡	Nike
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color (perf)	No	-	Mass Mutual Ad patch‡	Tim Wakefield memorial‡	Nike
	Alt Road Blue	No	Red Sox Font 2 color (perf)	Nike Block 2 color	No	Mass Mutual Ad patch‡	Tim Wakefield memorial‡	Nike
	City Connect	No	Custom 2 color (perf)	No	-	617 patch/Tim Wakefield memorial	Mass Mutual Ad Patch	Nike
2025	Home White	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	Mass Mutual Ad patch‡	-	Nike
	Road Gray	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Mass Mutual Ad patch‡	-	Nike
	Alternate Red	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	Mass Mutual Ad patch‡	-	Nike
	Alternate Yellow	No	Red Sox Font 2 color	No	-	617 patch	Mass Mutual Ad patch	Nike
	City Connect 2.0	Custom 1 color	Custom 1 color	No	-	Mass Mutual Ad patch‡	Circle B patch‡	Nike

‡ patch sleeve varies based on handedness of player

© GameWornGuides.com

Home, Road and Alternate Jerseys

1970-1972 Home

The Red Sox opened the 1972 season in traditional button-front flannel jerseys, introduced their knit jerseys in mid-June, and wore both styles interchangeably through season end.

One of the most tradition-minded teams in baseball, the Red Sox uniform had changed little since the Great Depression in the 1930s. Since 1933, the home uniform had been cream-colored button-front with thin red knit trim up the front, around the collar and at the sleeve ends, and “Red Sox” spelled out across the front in a consistent and recognizable lettering font. In 1968, all the red trim was eliminated, leaving a very plain jersey, as seen here.

© GameWornGuides.com

1970-1972 Road

The Red Sox opened the 1972 season in traditional button-front flannel and then wore them interchangeably with the new knits from mid-June through the end of the year.

Road gray uniforms are exceptionally plain with no trim of any kind, and over the years had almost always been solid gray with a block-style navy blue “Boston” spelled across the front. The 1969-1971 road jerseys were treated to a red outline around both the “Boston” wordmark and the numbers on back.

The team’s flannels were tagged for many years by local sporting goods company Tim McAuliffe Uniform Company. McAuliffe continued as supplier of the team’s knit uniforms through the 1978 season when they were replaced by Wilson.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid 1972-1978 Home

1972

1973

1972

The Red Sox joined the double-knit era by converting their traditional jersey design into a pullover, with thin red/blue/red knit V-neck trim. These were introduced in mid-June to a lukewarm response. These were worn interchangeably with the old flannels through the end of the 1972 season, then full-time from 1973 on. Numbers on back always in Red Sox font, two-color, red/navy. No names ever on the back of home jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid 1972-1978 Road

1974

1976

1975

Introduced in mid-June 1972, the road jersey is reborn as a pullover just like the home one, with slim red/navy/red neck knit trim. “Boston” is spelled across the front in two-color in the same lettering style as the “Red Sox” wordmark on the home jersey. They were worn interchangeably with the old flannels through the end of the 1972 season, and then full-time from 1973 on. The road jersey now has “Boston” sewn in the “Tuscan” font. Two-color numbers on back, red/navy, in McAuliffe/Red Sox-style number font. No names on back.

1973

Alex Prignano Collection

1976

© GameWornGuides.com

1979-2023 Home

1979

1988

The home jersey returns to the more traditional button-front design. Thin red knit trim is added to the front placket, last seen on Red Sox jerseys in 1967. Two-color numbers on back, red/navy, in the Red Sox/McAuliffe number font. No names ever on back of Red Sox home jerseys. Made by Wilson from 1979-1991, Russell from 1992-2003, Majestic from 2004-2019, Nike from 2020-2023. A timeless jersey design first introduced in 1933.

© GameWornGuides.com

1979-2023 Home, continued

1988

Since Wilson retains the contract for Red Sox home jerseys during the era that Rawlings is the official MLB supplier (1987-1991) no Wilson manufacturer brand logo is allowed to be shown on home jersey sleeves during that time.

1989

© GameWornGuides.com

1979-2023 Home, continued

Starting 1992, official MLB supplier Russell takes over as the maker, and Russell's "R" contractually appears on the jersey's right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

1979-2023 Home, continued

2002

Starting in 2000, the Russell "R" logo moves to the left sleeve, and the MLB logo appears on the back of the collar.

2004

2005

Majestic takes over as jersey maker for 2005. The Majestic Triple Peaks logo appears on the left sleeve.

2012

© GameWornGuides.com

1979-2023 Home, continued

2015

2018

2022

Left-sleeve Majestic logo changes with the introduction of Flex Base in 2016. Nike takes over manufacture in 2020, and their logo appears on right chest. Note the change in style code from BQHH for Majestic to BQ1H for Nike.

© GameWornGuides.com

1979-1989 Road

1979

1980

1982

1984

1985

1986

No names on back, midnight blue (darker than navy) numbers on back, in Varsity font. 1979-1983 has Boston spelled with a space: “BOS TON” while 1984-1989 has the space removed. Wilson made the Red Sox road jerseys through 1983 with seven front buttons spaced evenly from top to bottom, placing the second button from the top in the middle of the wordmark, forcing the awkward split. Starting in about 1984, the second button is moved up about ¼," making room for lettering without a gap. For more detail than you can imagine exists on the topic of where the space goes in the word “Boston,” see: http://letsgosox.blogspot.com/2007/06/red-sox-80s-road-uniform-thesis-last.html

© GameWornGuides.com

1979-1989 Road, continued

In 1987, Rawlings took over the manufacture of the road uniforms, and changed from seven to six buttons on the front, with an extra wide gap for lettering to cross between buttons 2 and 3, employing the same button spacing they used for the other teams in baseball. As official supplier for MLB at this time, Rawlings featured their tiny logo script on the end of the right sleeve of all jerseys in this run.

© GameWornGuides.com

1990-2008 Road

1990

"Boston" stylized lettering last used in 1978 returns after a 12 year absence. Jerseys remain button-front design.

Two-color numbers on back, red/navy, return to Red Sox/McAuliffe font also last seen on the road jersey in 1978.

Block two-color player names added to back in 1990, the first time any Red Sox jerseys have ever featured player names. No nameplates on Rawlings jerseys 1990, added in 1991.

Rawlings is manufacturer in 1990-1991, As official supplier for MLB at this time, their tiny logo script appears on the end of the right sleeve of all jerseys in these two years.

Above left: 1990 tagging variation

Above right: Rawlings left sleeve logo, 1990-1991

1991

1990

© GameWornGuides.com

1990-2008 Road, continued

1992

1993

1994

Russell takes over manufacturing between 1992-2004, with their "R" logo on the right sleeve 1993-1999, moving to the left sleeve 2000-2004.

1997

2002

2004

© GameWornGuides.com

1990-2008 Road, continued

2005

Jason Varitek wore the captain "C" 2005-2011.

2006

2008

2008

Majestic takes over manufacturing between 2005-2008, with their logo on the left sleeve. In 2008, Cool Base road jerseys appeared for the first time as an option for players. Based on game used examples, they did not catch on with many players at this time.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003-2008 Alternate Home

2003

2007

2004

2008

With new ownership coming on board in 2002, the Red Sox lean in, appropriately, on their namesake color. This is the Red Sox's first alternate jersey, and is meant to be worn on weekend day games at home, though its use expands over the years. Red body with navy blue placket and sleeve knit trim.

Two-color Red Sox/McAuliffe style numbers on back in navy/white. It is worn at home only, so no player names are used on the back. Made by Russell 2003-2004, then Majestic 2005-2008.A Cool Base version debuts in 2006, though knit is still available through the rest of this jersey's run.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2013 Road

Soon after going all-in on red with a new home alternate, the team removes nearly all of their namesake color from their road uniforms. The new design borrows from history, but is not a direct copy of any previous style.

One-color navy "BOSTON" is arched across the front using the Red Sox "Tuscan" wordmark type font. The "Hanging Sox" logo patch is used on left sleeve, introducing the only red in the set. Block one-color navy name on back is used without a nameplate. Back numbers are in Red Sox/ McAuliffe font, also one-color navy. The team wears both Cool Base and knit versions of this jersey 2009-2013.

(Below) Briefly in 2009, this uniform was actually paired with BLUE socks. Given the team's name and fan outcry, that did not last long.

Steve Kraljic Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2023 Alternate Home

2009

2010

In 2009, the red alternate jersey loses its blue trim to match a new-for-2009 blue road alternate that lacks trim as well. It is now solid red in color, and otherwise the same as the previous iteration. Wordmark on front and numbers on back are two-color, navy/white.

The team wears both Cool Base and double knit versions of this jersey between 2009-2015 (though use of knit declines during this time), and Flex Base thereafter. Majestic is manufacturer from 2009-2019, Nike takes over in 2020.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2023 Alternate Home, continued

2013

2015

2019

2022

Note the change in style code from BQAA for Majestic to BQ3A for Nike.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2023 Alternate Road

2010

2010

Briefly in 2009, this uniform was actually paired with BLUE socks (right) and an alternate "Hanging Sox" logo cap. Given the team's name, and fan outcry, the socks did not last long.

A navy blue road alternate jersey, the first road alternate in team history, is introduced for 2009. Front BOSTON is identical style to that used on the 1990-2008 road jersey, here rendered in red/white. Back player names and numbers are two-color, red/white. No nameplates used.

The team wears both Cool Base and double knit versions of this jersey between 2009-2015 (though use of knit declines during this time), and Flex Base thereafter. Majestic is manufacturer from 2009-2019, Nike takes over in 2020.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009-2023 Alternate Road, continued

2013

2015

2019

Note the change in style code from BQAB for Majestic to BQ3B for Nike.

2023

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2023 Road

The Red Sox return to the past by reintroducing an updated version of their 1990-2008 road jersey, replacing the plain navy-on-gray model they had adopted for the 2009 season. There are two changes from the earlier design: the sleeve ends are now devoid of trim and the jersey gains the addition of the "Hanging Sox" logo on the left sleeve. "Boston" is arched across the front in the team's traditional Tuscan font, in red/navy. McAuliffe-style numbers on the back, and player names direct-sewn in Block Condensed all in red/navy. Full knit versions are still available at the start of this run, but disappear with the switch to Flex Base in 2016. Majestic is manufacturer from 2014-2019, Nike takes over in 2020. The left-sleeve patch is deleted after 2022, in favor of an advertising patch.

2014

2015

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2023 Road, continued

2016

Note the change in style code from BQR3 for Majestic to BQ23 for Nike.

2022

© GameWornGuides.com

2016: Flex Base Jersey Construction and Branding

Read the full story on MLB's adoption of Flex Base jerseys for 2016 in Chapter 2.

In 2016, all teams adopt Majestic's new "Flex Base" on-field game jerseys, which are made of Cool Base fabric, but with several new elements designed to make them lighter and more breathable. The new jerseys have mesh side panels that run the length of the jersey, and one on the back tail called the "Air Belt." They also use "Kiss Cut" layering for front decorations, names, and numbers, which Majestic says is 10-20% lighter than traditional layered twill. Finally, the MLB logo on the back neck is now a rubberized patch, called CFX by Majestic, and the heat-pressed tag on the front tail differs from Cool Base jerseys of old.

© GameWornGuides.com

2021-2023 City Connect

The Red Sox, one of baseball's most tradition-laden teams, unveiled MLB's first City Connect jersey in 2021, and its variance from anything related to the team's colors and branding set the tone for things to come. Boston's City Connect takes its full inspiration from the Boston Marathon, which is run at the same time as the team's annual 11 AM game on Patriots' Day, a local holiday. The yellow, blue, and white color scheme stems from the official colors of the marathon, and the front and back lettering on the jersey copy the fonts used on the finish line in 2013, the year of the marathon bombing. The patch on the left sleeve is a take on the marathon runners' bibs, mimicking the colors but using "617" - Boston's area code - as the bib number. The patch even has a tiny line of stitching that extends diagonally from each corner of the patch into the jersey material, reminiscent of safety pins runners use to hold their numbers on their shirts. It is very difficult to see, even with the jersey in hand, and completely invisible from more than a few inches away. The opposite of that attention to detail is the blank heat-pressed tag above the jock tag. Many teams use that space, which is never seen when players wear the jersey, to reinforce the theme. The Red Sox do not fill the space, nor do they explain why the tag is applied if not used. The 2022 version of this jersey has the Jerry Remy memorial patch on the right sleeve, while a sponsor patch is on the right sleeve in 2023.

(Left) The mysterious blank tag on the front tail of the jersey.

(Near right) A view of the finish line painting that inspired the jersey.

(Bottom right) A 2013 Boston Marathon runner's bib, the source for the jersey's sleeve patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Nike “Vapor Premiere Elite” Jersey Template

Nike Flex Base 2020-2023

Nike Vapor Premier Elite 2024

Following league-wide sweeping changes to MLB jerseys with all teams switching from Nike’s 2020-2023 continuation of the Majestic Flex Base jersey shell to its new Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) template, the jerseys of the 2024 season become an anomaly - a “one and done” season of changes that brought intense scrutiny from players and fans alike. Based on the negative feedback, especially from MLB players, Nike rolled back some but not all of the 2024 changes in time for the 2025 season.

The full rundown of the changes is outlined earlier in “The Basics” chapter, but generally speaking, 2024’s crop of jerseys had changed from earlier versions in several key ways.

- VPE home jerseys are off-white, or light cream color. The earlier Flex Base white jerseys are a bright, purer white. Grays are standardized.
- The front placket is narrower on VPE, which often causes team wordmark lettering that crosses the placket to break differently.
- Neck and sleeve trim elements (when used) are no longer sewn on top of the jersey material, but are now “sewn-in” to the jersey at the seams. Placket trim adornment remains the same, though the trim is now spaced closer together with the narrowing in placket size.
- For improved visibility, the MLB logo on the back of the jersey is moved several inches lower onto the back, down from the collar placket area where it had been since 2000.
- VPE loses the integrated mesh side and back tail panels that had been part of the Flex Base jersey template.
- Player names on VPE are much smaller, and for many teams are done in a standardized block font, all using a much steeper, nearly semi-circular arch.
- For teams with front numbers, the new 2024 font is simply always a reduced size of the back numbers. This was not the way it had been in the past for most teams, with front numbers being a font variant (smaller but usually wider and bolder) than the back font.
- Team logo sleeve patches, and in some cases sponsor sleeve patches change from traditional raised embroidery to flat printed plastic or to sublimated cloth/twill
- All lettering is done using a new more lightweight (thinner) kind of matte-finished twill (commonly called “Nike Twill”). Most, but not all jerseys incorporate barely visible micro-perforation on the numbers, front and back.
- Universally, nameplates are no longer used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Home

The 2024 incarnation of the classic Red Sox home jersey sticks to the established script in spirit, allowing for some of the template changes forced on teams from the switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite template. The material is now a slight off-white color, and the red knit trim around the neck and placket is now spaced more closely together than in years past. The lack of a name on back means the change in lettering size is not an factor here, though the back numbers are slightly smaller (down to 7 3/8" from 7 1/2"), and possibly sewn on lower, than in previous jerseys, though that may be as a result of the difference in size versus placement. Nike's style code on the front tag now reads BQHO, changed from BQ1H of their Flex Base template. Numbers on back are not perforated. This single-season style includes the Tim Wakefield memorial patch on one sleeve and the sponsor patch on the other.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Road

The 2024 version of the Red Sox road jersey varies little from those before it, even as it adopts the new Nike Vapor Premier Elite template. The new name on back font is smaller and more arched than the previous incarnation, making it the most obvious change. Back numbers shrink slightly down to 7 3/8” from 7 1/2”. Nike’s style code on the front tag now reads BQRD, changed from BQ1H of their Flex Base template. Numbers on back are not perforated. This single-season style includes the Tim Wakefield memorial patch on one sleeve and the sponsor patch on the other.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Home

Of the Red Sox full suite of jerseys, the red home alternate may be the one that appears to have changed the least with the switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite template. Aside from some of the template's smaller details, like the new sewn-in collar that matches the jersey color and essentially disappears for teams without collar trim, the most noticeable change is the smaller back numbers. The effect is lessened somewhat with this jersey as it features no name on back, which was also shrunken down from previous seasons. However, the slightly smaller back number (down to 7 3/8" from 7 1/2") make them appear to be sewn lower than in past seasons. Nike's style code on the front tag now reads BQA1, changed from BQ3A of their Flex Base template. Numbers on back appear to be perforated on this contrary to the home and road jerseys. This single-season style includes the Tim Wakefield memorial patch on one sleeve and the sponsor patch on the other.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Road

The Red Sox road alternate exists in the Vapor Premier Elite template for one season only - but not because the many changes in lettering size were unpopular. After the 2024 season, the team retires this jersey in favor of making their yellow City Connect 1.0 a regular entry into their 4+1 rotation. As with the road jersey, the name on back lettering was shrunken and standardized compared to previous years. Back numbers shrink slightly down to 7 3/8" from 7 1/2". Nike's style code on the front tag now reads BQA2, changed from BQ3B of their Flex Base template. These jerseys use perforated numbering on back. This single-season style includes the Tim Wakefield memorial patch on one sleeve (the only jersey that uses a patch with a white border to contrast it from the blue jersey) and the sponsor patch on the other.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 City Connect

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a few small changes to the Red Sox inaugural City Connect jersey. For most teams, the most visible change is the league-wide shrinking of the back names and numbers. The Red Sox City Connect, however, has no name on back, and the numbering does not look to be much smaller, if at all. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it as before, and the stripes appear wider. Contrary to the team's other jerseys, here, the ad patch is always on the right sleeve and the "617" patch is on the left. For 2024, the Tim Wakefield memorial is above the "617" patch on the left sleeve. Inconceivably left over from Nike Flex Base is the blank heat-pressed tag above the jock tag that still serves no purpose. Even more incredible, it remains the same shape as it was when it was introduced, regardless of Nike changing the shape of the heat-pressed tags for 2023. It still makes no sense. Numbers are perforated.

Left: The blank tag above the jock tag remains, despite having no purpose. Notice it is the pre-2023 shape, contrasting with the current shape seen under the jock tag.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Home

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. For teams that ditched custom name and number fonts for league-wide standardization, the 2023 team fonts return for 2025. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

For the Red Sox iconic home jersey, those changes mainly mean that back numbers are enlarged to their former size of 7 1/2" up from 7 3/8" form 2024. Aside from the VPE changes, the team's ad patch also changes shape for 2025. The jersey also features the new-for-2025 white Nike jock tag used on a handful of jerseys around MLB. Otherwise, these remain the same as in 2024.

Left: Red Sox player Rob Refsnyder wearing the home jersey for a community event in 2025. Note the new white Nike jock tag.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Road

The 2025 season brings many changes to road gray jerseys across MLB. The 2024 VPE jerseys suffered from significant sweat-staining issues during games, so 2025 gray jerseys revert back to the same base fabric used for Flex Base, but applied to the VPE template (no mesh side panels or “Air Belt” back panel). Other pre-2024 elements return, including neck and sleeve trim being sewn on to jerseys again rather than sewn in. Like other 2025 jerseys, gray jerseys also have back name and numbers enlarged, in most cases back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Unless a team has contrasting trim that encircles the collar opening, the superfluous, jersey-colored set-in band of trim (which was largely invisible) is also deleted. For teams that ditched custom name and number fonts for league-wide standardization, the 2023 team fonts return for 2025 here as well. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. Separate from the VPE changes, the team’s ad patch changes shape for 2025.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Red

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. For teams that ditched custom name and number fonts for league-wide standardization, the 2023 team fonts return for 2025. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches.

For the Red Sox comparatively plain red alternate, those changes mainly mean that back numbers are enlarged to their former size of 7 1/2" up from 7 3/8" form 2024. Separate from the VPE changes, the team's ad patch changes shape for 2025. Otherwise, these remain the same as before. However, with the deletion of the blue road alternate jersey, the team starts to wear the red jersey as a road alternate. It is the first time since 1933 that a jersey worn on the road says "RED SOX" rather than "BOSTON" on the front

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Home “Boston”

The Red Sox add their Patriots’ Day/Marathon Monday jerseys to full alternate status in the MLB Style Guide in 2025, despite wearing the jersey only one day each year. It is likely this is done to ensure its availability to them, as other teams were made to add special Spring Training and BP jerseys they wear as alternates, even when they are only used in spring or pregame (the Tigers and Yankees with their blue jerseys, for example). Though the Red Sox wore this style in 2024, the version they used that day was still Flex Base, despite the league-wide switch to Nike Vapor Premier Elite (VPE). It is possible this happened because of production difficulties, or because this jersey was not an official alternate for the season in the guide. The 2024 version was also worn on April 15, so each player wore “42” for Jackie Robinson Day, which may also have held back production of this jersey on the VPE template. Regardless, the Red Sox are one of only a few teams permitted to break Nike’s 4+1 rule (four regular jerseys and a City Connect), as this one-day style is allowed to remain in rotation given its importance to the team and city as a commemoration of the 2013 Boston Marathon bombing. The switch to VPE means the placket trim is closer together than on the previous version, and even though the lettering breaks across the “S” and “T” as before, the “T” overlaps the trim differently as a result. The “B Strong” patch appears again on left chest, and the backs of the jerseys are the same as the Red Sox typical home jerseys, including the lower MLB logo due to the smaller collar and placket. It appears that back numbers are the same size as before (7 1/2”), but since no 2024 VPE version exists, we can’t compare. The team’s ad patch changes for 2025 as well.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Home Yellow

In advance of releasing a City Connect 2.0 jersey in 2025, the Red Sox elevate their City Connect 1.0 style to full alternate status in the MLB Style Guide for the season, deleting their blue road alternate to make room. The team had a strong winning record in this style since its introduction and it had become a fan and team favorite. City Connect jerseys that were introduced prior to 2025 did not have any changes made in advance of the 2025 season, such as reverting to larger names and numbers. With the change from City Connect to alternate status for this jersey, we are unsure if there have been any major updates. One notable change is that the jersey now has the new-for-2025 white Nike jock tag, that has been used on a handful of jerseys around the league. (The blank heat-pressed tag above the new jock tag is still there too, again, for no discernible reason.) However, we cannot tell if the back numbers are perforated as they were in 2024, since those perforations were almost impossible to see without holding the jersey in-hand. More research is required to be sure on all counts. One thing is clear, the team's sponsor patch is updated for the 2025 season, as it is on all its other jerseys, and for this style only, patches do not alternate sleeves based on player handedness. The "617" patch is always on the left sleeve, while the sponsor patch is always on the right.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 City Connect 2.0

The Red Sox go from honoring one local sports landmark to another, elevating their Boston Marathon-inspired CC 1.0 to home alternates and replacing them with a new set that takes its cues from Fenway Park's vaunted Green Monster. Called "Fenway Greens" by the Red Sox, the jersey color is meant to represent the Green Monster's longstanding paint hue (known by the team as "Scoreboard Green" which is different from the other green around the ballpark called "Fence Green"). "RED SOX" is spelled out in white on front in a font that echoes the hand-painted details of the scoreboard. White/green/white trim, recalling the white stripes throughout the Green Monster, encircle the sleeve and collar openings. Front numbers appear in bright yellow ("Safety Yellow" officially as a paint color...Seriously!) that echoes the paint on Fenway's foul poles and the yellow numbers of Green Monster scoreboard tiles that are used to represent runs scored in an in-progress inning. Back numbers are in a similar font, but white, following from the manual scoreboard's other, and more frequently-used tiles. In an impressive detail, back numbers also have a small notch at the top that cuts into each number. The notch represents how each single-number tile appears as each tile has a hole at top center to hang them up inside the Green Monster. (The number "4" does not have the notch because it does not overlap the hole on the tiles.) Speaking of which, the ancient and spartan concrete walls inside the Monster inspired the gray inner collar of the jersey, which also has a heat-pressed "1912" to honor the year Fenway Park opened. One sleeve is adorned with a patch with a white "B" on a green field and a thick white border that recalls the notation above the "Hit (H)" and "Error (E)" lights on the scoreboard. A final Green Monster detail is out of sight when worn on-field, but attractive at retail - a head pressed series of red and green dots that represent the balls, strikes, and outs lights on the board. Aside from the inaccuracy of the jersey reading "Red Sox" rather than "Boston" as the Green Monster itself does, it is a very spot-on representation of the landmark that inspired it.

© GameWornGuides.com

1970-1994 Red Sox Team Tagging

© GameWornGuides.com

1995-2012 Red Sox Team Tagging

Up until Majestic took over the jersey contract in 2005, Red Sox team tagging is rather inconsistent, even for different jerseys in the same year. These pages show multiple variations in tags for any given year, and there is no absolute guarantee even that all of these examples represent authentic team issued jerseys. I always attempt to show tags from “common” player jerseys and avoid the superstars’ whenever possible, to decrease the odds of showing counterfeit tagging.

*

There is some controversy in the hobby about jerseys with this style tagging for 2003 and 2004. The controversy is discussed that these "large number" versions of the 2003 and 2004 year tags are an exception, and are said to be usually only seen on Manny Ramirez jerseys. Some collectors contend Manny had these made up and sold them as game worn, and some have questioned the wear patterns on them (many of them have almost identical wear). Jerseys with this style tag are more of an exception than a rule for those two years. I am reporting this here simply to make people aware. I have no evidence one way or another about the situation.

© GameWornGuides.com

Batting Practice and Spring Training Jerseys

Mid 1980s Alternate Zip-Neck Batting Practice

Majestic supplied this half-zip style “Gamewarmer” batting practice jersey to most but not all MLB clubs starting in the mid-1980s. The Red Sox used the style briefly. Features slash pockets and thin red and white knit trim on the collar and sleeve ends. The small Majestic logo is spelled out on the right pocket edge. These were issued and used by coaches with names but without numbers and used by players with the backs blank.

© GameWornGuides.com

1989-2002 Batting Practice

1989-1996 back number style

1997-2002 back number style

Blue mesh pullover with red/white sleeve end and V-neck knit trim. “RED SOX” wordmark on the front, in same Tuscan style as team’s home jersey.

Two-color numbers on back, red/white, in Varsity or Majestic Varsity font 1989-1996, in special Red Sox number font 1997-2002. No names on back. These same style jerseys were used by Red Sox’ minor league clubs, although usually feature white numbers and have player names on the back.

1992

© GameWornGuides.com

1989-1991 Alternate Batting Practice/Spring Training

Majestic-tagged, navy blue mesh with red/white sleeve end trim and V-neck. Red Sox alternate Hanging Sox logo sewn to the left chest. This style jersey seems to have been used concurrently with the 1989-2002 batting practice jersey shown on the prior page. Many photos in my collection show it in use as a Spring Training game jersey. Two-color number on back, red/white. Numbers in a very bold Varsity font variant, not the Red Sox number font. No names on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

Batting Practice Jersey Lettering Variations

(Below) This is another different variation of this jersey, notice the difference in sleeve and neck trim vs. the others on this page. We have seen this version on instructors and minor league players but have yet to see it on MLB players either in Spring Training or in season. Just an FYI.

(Left, Right) The sharp V-neck with the two wide stripes is the version seen on MLB jerseys.

Over the course of the last couple of decades, Majestic changed the shape of the Red Sox logo lettering on BP jerseys. From 1989 to about 1999, the “R” was the same general shape as used on the home jerseys. Starting around 2000, Majestic went to using a much different version, with the easiest differentiator being the letter “R”, which now had a circle in the middle and no “points” so to speak. Then, in 2007, they returned to the shape that was closer to the home jersey version. This can be helpful with dating a Red Sox BP jersey, especially the final few years of the blue mesh pullovers and the St. Patrick’s Day mesh jerseys. However, it isn’t a perfect system, as BP jerseys seemed to carry over in use for multiple years, and it is possible that Majestic even produced both in the same year(s).

© GameWornGuides.com

2003-2006 Batting Practice
(two back lettering variations)

Early 2003

Early 2003

New softer non-mesh. Moisture-wicking fabric, highly susceptible to fading and pulls.

Early 2003: Two-color names on back– navy/white (top center)

Mid 2003-2006: Names and numbers' colors reverse: white/navy (bottom left)

Mid-2003 through 2006

2004

At a point early in the 2003 season, the team changed the lettering colors on the jersey back from navy/white to white/navy. Insiders tell me that the original intent was for the navy over white lettering on the back to match the lettering on front. But when the players were out on the field, club personnel noticed they were challenging to read from a distance, so they were changed at some point before the mid-season All-Star break.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2010 Home Batting Practice

For the 2007 all-MLB batting practice jersey makeover, the Red Sox have two styles to wear. Their home one is solid red with small blue inserts under the arms. It looks very close in appearance to the 2003-2006 batting practice jersey.

Two-color player numbers in the Red Sox font on the back only. No player names are used.

All lettering and numbers are heat-applied appliqués, and are no longer sewn tackle twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2010 Road Batting Practice

The road version of the batting practice jersey reverses the colors from the home version, and is blue with red inserts under the sleeves. “Boston” is spelled across the front. This is the first time the Red Sox have utilized different batting practice jerseys for home and road, something the team will embrace going forward.

Two-color Red Sox-style/McAuliffe numbers are used on the back. All lettering and numbers are flocked and heat pressed on.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2013 Home Batting Practice

Major League Baseball changes all teams' batting practice jerseys to button fronts for 2011. While most other teams also change the side panel trim at the same time, the Red Sox stay with the small blue panels under the arms as their only contrasting color. All lettering sewn on, front and back. McAuliffe/Red Sox-style numbers on back in two-color twill, white outlined with navy. Player names return to batting practice jerseys after a four year absence.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2013 Road Batting Practice

Major League Baseball changes all teams' batting practice jerseys to button fronts for 2011. Blue Cool Base jersey body, red panels remain under the arm. The Red Sox retain both the home and away batting practice jerseys in their wardrobe.

All lettering sewn on, front and back. McAuliffe/Red Sox-style numbers on back in two-color twill, red outlined with white. Player names return to batting practice jerseys after a four year absence.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2016 Home Batting Practice

All the teams in MLB received new batting practice jerseys for 2014. The Red Sox's home BPs receive very subtle, almost unnoticeable alterations. Red and navy striped knit trim is added to the collar and the sleeve ends, and the blue side inserts are made larger than the previous style, now extending halfway down the jersey side. All lettering remains the same, white outlined with navy, names on back used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2016 Road Batting Practice

Players have NOB, #78 is likely a Spring Training instructor

All the teams in MLB received new batting practice jerseys for 2014. The Red Sox's road BPs receive very subtle, almost unnoticeable alterations. Red and navy striped knit trim is added to the collar and the sleeve ends, and the red side inserts are made larger than the previous style, now extending halfway down the jersey side. All lettering remains the same, red outlined with white, names on back used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Spring Training

Read the full story on MLB's new for 2016 Spring Training Jerseys in Chapter 8.

For the first time in 2016, MLB introduces a Spring Training-specific jersey intended to be worn for workouts and games in the pre-season. The jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features a special printed twill, decorated with "2016" and Spring Training symbols, as the main twill layer for every team. The Red Sox use their regular season red home alternate, but adding a name on back, as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are blue patterned twill/white. The jersey also features a rubberized, CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading "2016" and "FL" representing where the Red Sox spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Spring Training

Spring Training-only jerseys return for all teams in 2017 with some minor design modifications. Just as in 2016, the jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features special printed twill, this year decorated with “2017” and Spring Training symbols. However, all teams now use the same twill, in single-color white with gray printing, replacing the many team-specific combinations from the year before. The Red Sox again use their regular season red home alternate, here with a name on back as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill. The jersey features a recolored version of the rubberized CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate highway sign, reading “2017” and “FL” representing where the Red Sox spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2019 Home Batting Practice

With many players opting for lightweight cage jackets, which are devoid of player identification, instead of traditional BP jerseys with player names and numbers, Majestic introduces a replacement product that may be an attempt to gain acceptance by the pros on field while being more attractive to fans at retail. New for 2017, official team batting practice jerseys are replaced with what Majestic calls a 3/4 Sleeve BP Trainer. The new hybrid is cut in a pullover jacket silhouette, including a short zipper at the neck, but made of Cool Base jersey material. The underarm and back panels are of Cool Base mesh, like the sides and tail of Flex Base jerseys. Player number lettering is in what Majestic calls “lightweight twill” (as described in Chapter 8). The Majestic logo is applied to the middle of the left sleeve, and a new, heat-pressed Cool Base tag adorns the left front tail. The Red Sox jersey is red with blue underarm gussets. “Red Sox" appears arched in white/navy across the chest. Unlike nearly every other team which has issued this style jersey with a blank back and player numbers only on the left sleeve, the Red Sox letter theirs traditionally, with player names and numbers on the back, names in Block and player number in Red Sox font, both in white/navy.

In our first look at the new BP jerseys for 2017, we were somewhat surprised that while player numbers are sewn in the new lightweight “kiss cut” twill, team wordmarks are sewn in the old-fashioned layered twill style.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2019 Road Batting Practice

The Red Sox continue their practice of issuing different home and road BP jerseys. The road BP is blue with red underarm panels, compared to the home's red with blue panels. The word "Boston" is arched across the front in red/white, Unlike nearly every other team which has issued this style jersey with a blank back and player numbers only on the left sleeve, the Red Sox letter theirs traditionally, with player names and numbers on the back in red/white. The new hybrid is cut in a pullover jacket silhouette, including a short zipper at the neck, but made of Cool Base jersey material. The underarm and back panels are of Cool Base mesh, like the sides and tail of Flex Base jerseys. The Majestic logo is applied to the middle of the left sleeve, and a new, heat-pressed Cool Base tag adorns the left front tail.

In our first look at the new BP jerseys for 2017, we were somewhat surprised that while player numbers are sewn in the new lightweight "kiss cut" twill, team wordmarks are sewn in the old-fashioned layered twill style.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Spring Training

The Red Sox' 2018 Spring Training jerseys continue the general design of the previous year, again featuring all player name and number lettering using each team's regular fonts, in one layer of twill printed with special Spring Training and 2018-year-specific patterns. The Red Sox use their regular-season red home alternate, here with a name on back, as their base. The name and back numbers are sewn on in white patterned twill. A new CFX patch, shaped like home plate, is stitched to the right sleeve, featuring "2018" and "FL" representing their Spring Training home.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Spring Training

The 2019 Spring Training jersey evolves to create yet another iteration of the theme of the last three years. This time, jersey backs abandon the single-color printed twill treatment of the past and return to regular season multi-layered team-color twill like 2016, yet without 2016's printed patterns. The Red Sox use their regular-season red home alternate, here with a name on back, as the base for this design, carrying a new CFX patch on the right sleeve, featuring "2019" and "FLA," referencing their Spring Training home. The name and back numbers are blue/white twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Spring Training

Spring Training is simplified for 2020, league-wide. For the first time since 2016, Spring Training jerseys eliminate the special sleeve patch indicating the year and location of a team's Spring Training home, and now the lettering is the same non-patterned, multi-layered twill as the teams wear in the regular season, making many teams' spring jerseys identical to their regular-season alternates. For 2020, the Red Sox use their regular-season red home alternate, here with a name on back, with blue/white name and back numbers.

© GameWornGuides.com

Special Events Jerseys

1997 Turn Back the Clock to 1908

August 29 and 30,1997: Recreating the 1908 Red Sox with help from Mitchell & Ness, the games were Interleague contests played against the Atlanta Braves in their first game back in Boston since the Braves bolted in 1952 for Milwaukee.

The visiting Braves wore 1912 Boston Braves road uniforms. Reportedly, Braves' manager Bobby Cox objected strongly to his team wearing uniforms that said "Boston" on front.

© GameWornGuides.com

2002 Negro Leagues Tribute (1948 Boston Royal Giants)

On July 13, 2002, the Boston Red Sox dressed in 1948 Boston Royal Giants uniforms to honor the Negro Leagues. The shirts are modeled after a uniform that player Herb Holmes' great-grandson found in a foot locker. Over time, the team had also been known as the Boston Giants, Quaker Giants, Philadelphia Giants and Boston Colored Giants.

In this game, the Red Sox faced the Toronto Blue Jays who were wearing the Turn Back the Clock uniforms of Toronto's 1930 Chatham All-Stars. The game worn uniform at top left is autographed by Rickey Henderson in 2002. It is the only year he played for the Red Sox.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003 Turn Back the Clock to 1903

The Red Sox and the Pirates recreated the 100th Anniversary match-up of the 1903 World Series during interleague play on June 5, 2003.

The uniforms were reproduced in polyester by AIS. Player numbers would not have been used in 1903, but they were included here for the fans' convenience and following MLB rules.

During this game, the Jumbotron video screen was kept dark, and the scoreboard showed the team names as the "Boston Americans" against the "Pittsburg Pirates." They used a megaphone to make announcements from the field.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004-2007 St. Patrick's Day/2007 Red Auerbach Tribute

2006

Spring Training, 2004

The 2005 jerseys used nameplates, the other years (2004, 2006-2007) had direct-sewn names.

April 20, 2007

- St. Patrick's Day green jerseys: They are actually green mesh batting practice jerseys. These jerseys are made of mesh fabric (and have manufacturer tagging) last used by the team for its 2002 blue BP jerseys. Notice the "Hanging Sox" patch sewn to the left sleeve, not used on the team's regular BP jerseys at that time.
- Same style jersey also worn for regular season game, April 20, 2007 honoring Red Auerbach of the Boston Celtics (thus the green color connection) who passed away the previous winter. On that day, the jersey also featured a small "VT" screened on the left sleeve above the Hanging Red Sox patch, honoring the victims of the Virginia Tech killings of that week.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005 Special Gold Trimmed Ring Ceremony

Eighty-six years after their last championship in 1918, the Red Sox finally had a chance to celebrate. For the ring ceremony before the game on April 11, 2005, the team wore these special jerseys. Notice the normally red/navy lettering and numbers were all outlined with metallic gold. The effect was subtle. Immediately following the ceremony, the team changed into regular home jerseys, with the same 2004 World Champions patch, which the team wore for that day only.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007 Turn Back the Clock to 1982

- On June 22, 2007 the Red Sox played the Padres in a Turn Back the Clock game wearing early 1980s-style uniforms. The host Padres wore 1982 home uniforms.
- The 2007 Majestic uniforms are inexact copies of the originals, featuring front script that is too tall and thin. This is such a simple design it would not have taken too much more work to get it exactly right. Likely a stock typeface was used to replicate the BOSTON lettering instead of making an attempt to copy the exact earlier art.
- And, as is the norm, the players wore these uniforms in 2007's baggy style, varying from the skin-tight look used when these were originally worn.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Celtics Celebration/2010 St. Patrick's Day

2008

- This jersey is a special style Cool Base batting practice jersey made with white side panel inserts, white and navy back numbers, and a white and navy front RED SOX wordmark. All lettering is flocked and heat pressed, not sewn-on twill.
- They were worn on June 20, 2008 in a regular season game at home celebrating the Celtics NBA World Championship that had just occurred a few days before. However, it did not appear on St. Patrick's Day in 2008.
- While the team wore different all white St. Patrick's uniforms in 2009, they returned to this identical style for 2010, except the 2010 jersey had a white shamrock on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 St. Patrick's Day/Earth Day

Getting double duty yet again from their St. Pat's jerseys, the Red Sox added the Earth Day logo patch to the right sleeve and reused the green-trimmed white Cool Base jerseys for Earth Day on April 22.

All lettering is one-color, green, and a flocked/ heat pressed type. A green shamrock patch adorns the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2012 St. Patrick's Day

2011 and 2012 St. Patrick's Day uniforms are green with white/navy lettering, and white side panels and a white panel across the back. Names and player numbers are white/navy twill. 2012 had the Fenway Park 100 patch on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Turn Back the Clock to 1918

On May 21, the Red Sox and Cubs wore 1918 uniforms to mark the Cubs' first visit to Fenway Park since the 1918 World Series.

Faithful Majestic knit reproductions, with blank, white fronts, these suits could not have been plainer. Photo at far left is from 1918 original and shows different hose than worn in the Turn Back the Clock contest.

Varsity Bold numbers on back are not authentic; teams did not wear player numbers until the 1930s. Then, truly the only thing that distinguished this club were their “red socks."

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Turn Back the Clock to 1912

This Turn Back the Clock game is especially interesting for a couple of reasons.

Held on April 20, 2012, the Red Sox invited the Yankees to Turn Back the Clock to the April 20, 1912 opening of Fenway Park, the Red Sox home for the past 100 seasons. The Yankees, who were the opponents for the 1912 contest, participated, wearing the road uniforms of the 1912 NY Highlanders, as they were known at the time. Significant fact number one is that this is only the second throwback game the Yankees have ever played, and the first they have played wearing their own old uniforms (the other was a Negro League tribute game).

Significant fact number two is that, in being very faithful to the era they represented, neither team wore player numbers on their backs. It was the very early 1930s when the Yankees first introduced player numbers to the game, but in 1912 players did not wear them. There has not been another throwback game where uniform numbers were omitted!

The Majestic knit replica uniforms are as plain as uniforms come. Pure white with "RED SOX arched across the front in red. Majestic logo on the sleeve in a very un-1912 touch.

(Above left) 1919 home uniform. Front team name hardly visible, probably due to the film type or lens filter. (Above right) 1912 road jersey in gray pinstripes

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Turn Back the Clock to 1936

Steve Kraljic Collection

Game played vs. the Oakland Athletics on May 2, 2012, as part of the Red Sox celebration of the opening of Fenway Park 100 years ago. Both teams wore 1936 uniforms

Interestingly, the Red Sox 1936 throw-back uniform is so similar to their current 2012 uniform that it is almost unrecognizable as a nostalgia jersey! The Red Sox wordmark on the front is slightly different than current, with the letters being wider. Twin knit trim red stripes adorn the sleeve ends and at the collar that do not exist on the current uniform. Back numbers are identical to current, in the “Red Sox Font” in red/navy.

Players obligingly wore their fancy striped socks in plain view with high-cuffed pants as would have been done in 1936.

1936

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Johnny Pesky Tribute

Red Sox legend Johnny Pesky died August 13, 2012. Known as “The Needle” and “Mr. Red Sox," he had played for the Red Sox 1942-1952 and overall was associated with the Red Sox for 61 of his 73 years in baseball. His number 6 was retired by the Red Sox in 2008. On August 21, all the Red Sox took the field wearing his number on their backs, and this is the way they played the game. They announced that beginning the next day all players would wear a black #6 patch on their sleeves until the end of the season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 “Boston Strong”/2014-2015 Patriots’ Day

These special “Boston” home jerseys were worn at home on April 20 and 21(for the first game of a doubleheader), 2013 the first games at home following the Boston Marathon bombing which occurred on Patriots’ Day, Monday April 15 (which was also Jackie Robinson Day). Note that these jerseys were NOT worn at home on Patriots’ Day 2013. The jerseys on that day had been the regular Red Sox home jerseys, all with the #42 on back to commemorate Jackie Robinson. According to Wikipedia, “Patriots’ Day is a civic holiday commemorating the anniversary of the Battles of Lexington and Concord, the first battles of the American Revolutionary War on April 19, 1775…Since 1969, the holiday has been observed on the third Monday in April, providing a three-day long weekend in Massachusetts...”

The Boston Marathon is run each year on Patriots’ Day, and the Red Sox have been scheduled to play at home on this date every year since 1959. In 2013, minutes after the final pitch of the 3-2 Red Sox victory in the traditional Patriots’ Day game, terrorists’ bombs detonated at the finish line of the Boston marathon, killing three people and injuring over 100 more. After a short three-game road trip to Cleveland, the Red Sox returned home, but the game on April 19 was postponed because the city was still in lockdown during the search for the bombers. April 20 and the first game of the (rescheduled game) doubleheader on April 21, the Red Sox wore these special jerseys, white with red trim like their usual home jerseys, but with “Boston” spelled out across the fronts in simple Tuscan font red letters. A round memorial patch, with the team’s fancy “B” from their caps and the word “Strong” was placed on the left chest above the wordmark. The visiting Royals wore this patch as well on April 20 only.

In subsequent years, the Red Sox again wear this jersey for their annual Patriots’ Day morning game. It is worn April 21, 2014 and April 20, 2015.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 Memorial Day

Read the full story on MLB's Memorial Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

All teams in MLB wore camouflage-accented jerseys on May 27, 2013. Playing at home against the Phillies, the Red Sox's uniforms were less objectionable than most (my editorial comment) with camo replacing the red in the front wordmark and back numbers. Outlined with navy blue, the lettering was at least visible.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2015 St. Patrick's Day

The Red Sox continue their tradition of wearing green jerseys for St. Patrick's Day in 2014 and 2015. Both years, the jerseys are based on the batting practice template of the era, with a green body, white underarm panels, and green and white striped knit trim on the collar and the sleeve ends. All lettering is white/navy. A white shamrock appears on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Special Gold Trimmed

The Red Sox received their 2013 World Series rings on their April 4 home opener of the new season. These jerseys were identical to the 2005 edition, with metallic gold providing a subtle outline around all lettering and around the World Series Champs patch on the left sleeve. Gold also outlines the MLB logo on the back of the jersey near the neck. The effect is subtle and even elegant. The Red Sox wore the Champs patch only for this game; it never appeared on their regular uniforms in 2014.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Memorial Day

Year two of this MLB-sanctioned event had all teams again wearing camouflage accented uniforms in tribute to our military forces. The Red Sox were on the road in Atlanta on May 26, 2014, and therefore altered their road jerseys to comply. The red twill of the “BOSTON” wordmark as well as player names and numbers on the back were replaced with desert camo twill outlined with navy blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015-2016 Turn Back the Clock to 1975 (Home)

2015

2015

2016 - Note updated Majestic logos on sleeve and jock tag.

For two consecutive years, the Red Sox throw back to their 1975 home pullover jerseys. On May 5, 2015, the jerseys were part of a celebration of the 30th anniversary of the AL Champs team. The opposing Rays wore their standard navy alternates. On July 20, 2016, the Sox faced the Giants, who wore 1978 orange throwbacks. These white Majestic knit pullovers are good reproductions of the originals. Aside from the neck trim, which is wider than the 1975 jerseys, and of course, the MLB logo patch on back neck, the rest of the details are solid, including the Massachusetts Bicentennial patch on the left sleeve. Both years' jerseys are identical, save for the tagging, which is updated with Majestic's new logos in 2016.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Negro Leagues Tribute (1946 Boston Royal Giants)

On May 16, the Red Sox honor the Boston Royal Giants Negro League team again, as they did in 2002. For a road game against the Mariners, who wear 1946 Negro League Seattle Steelheads jerseys, the Sox don these Majestic knit unis. “Boston” is vertically arched on front in navy, with player numbers in navy Block on back. Navy knit trim surrounds the sleeves, neck, and placket, stopping just under the last button. Compared to an original Royal Giants road jersey, these are fairly faithful reproductions, save for back numbers, which were a smaller version of Varsity in 1946.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Memorial Day

The 2015 Memorial Day jerseys from May 25 are identical to the year before, save for the MLB Silhouetted Batter neck tag, which is changed to dark green/khaki/ white rather than its typical colors from 2014. The red twill of the “BOSTON” wordmark as well as player names and numbers on the back were replaced with desert camo twill outlined with navy blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Turn Back the Clock to 1975 (Road)

Derek Damian collection

About six weeks after taking on the Rays at Fenway while wearing 1975 home throwbacks, the Sox trot out the road equivalents for a June 27 road game at the Trop. This time, the Rays do play along, wearing their “Fauxback” 70s-style unis. Like the home version, these gray Majestic knit pullovers are good reproductions of the originals. Aside from the neck trim, which is wider than the 1975 jerseys, and of course, the MLB logo patch on back neck, the rest of the details are solid, including the lack of a Massachusetts Bicentennial patch on the left sleeve, which the Sox did not wear on the road in 1975. As with most such throwbacks, the players themselves didn’t do the uniforms any favors, by wearing them several sizes too big and not wearing period-correct striped socks.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's Independence Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

2015 Independence Day

For Independence Day 2015, all 29 U.S.-based teams adopt patriotic "Stars and Stripes" uniforms for the first time. For this day, all uniforms are re-lettered in a combination of red, white, and blue, regardless of what the team's normal color palate might be. Jersey trim and patches remain the same as the team's regular jerseys. All teams sport a stars and stripes version of the MLB Silhouetted Batter logo on the back collar.

The Red Sox wear their home white jerseys with the red-background version of the starred twill, which features large white stars; all lettering outlined in blue, including their front logo as well as back numbers. The resulting look is very similar to their standard home jerseys, and becomes almost indistinguishable from the regular jerseys, especially from a distance. An American flag patch is sewn on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2019, 2021-2022 St. Patrick's Day

The Red Sox go green for St. Patrick's Day in 2016-2019 and 2021-2022. This Flex Base jersey is in solid green, with front logo and back numbers in white/gray and player name in white. The layer of gray is thin and light enough that it disappears from a distance. The right sleeve sports a white shamrock, a feature shared by many teams for the St. Patrick's Day promotion. White knit trim encircles both sleeves. Starting in 2020, it is made by Nike. A set was made for use in 2020, but COVID canceled the game. The 2020 jerseys did make their way into the hobby, but were not game worn.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2017 Patriots' Day/"Boston Strong"

With the switch to Flex Base in 2016, the Red Sox' Patriots' Day/Boston Strong alternate jersey also makes the change in template. Otherwise, all other elements remain the same as previous years. White jerseys with red trim like their usual home jerseys, but with "Boston" spelled out across the fronts in simple Tuscan-font red letters. A round memorial patch, with the team's fancy "B" from their caps and the word "Strong" is sewn-on the left chest above the wordmark. Usually worn annually, this jersey was skipped in 2018 when the game was rained out.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Mother's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Mother's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

For the first time in 2016, all teams wear special pink-trimmed uniforms Mother's Day, Sunday, May 8. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Mother's Days), while the Majestic sleeve logo is rendered in pink and the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark pink/light pink/white. The Red Sox wear their road gray jerseys with the front logo lettering in pink with dark gray outlines. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while back numbers are pink/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of pink, gray, and white.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Memorial Day

The 2016 Memorial Day jerseys are constructed in the Flex Base style for the first time, and the ChromaFlex MLB logo at back neck becomes black and dark gold for all teams. The new, league-wide template, with higher-visibility woodland camo lettering and black outlines, makes this set more legible than in prior years. The Red Sox apply the camouflage trimmings to their road gray jerseys for the game on May 30. The front lettering and back numbers are rendered in woodland camo with a black outline, and player names appear in single-color black. Like other teams, their sleeve patches are reduced to shades of green, gray, and black.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Father's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Father's Day Jerseys in Chapter 5.

For the first time in 2016, all teams wear special light blue-trimmed uniforms Father's Day, Sunday, June 19. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction with the rubberized front tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Father's Days), while the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark royal blue/light blue/white.
The Red Sox wear their home white jerseys with the front logo lettering and back numbers in light blue with dark gray outlines. All jersey trim, normally red, is changed to dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Independence Day

MLB creates yet another new Independence Day jersey template for the 2016 iteration, now built on Majestic's new Flex Base jersey construction. Each Independence Day jersey has a ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB appliqué sewn on the back of the neck. The Red Sox are at home and wear their home jersey. All clubs have a choice of two styles of star-spangled lettering twill and the Red Sox select the blue twill version with gray outlines for their front lettering and for their back numbers. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve.

When this promotion was announced, the Red Sox planned to wear their red alternate home jerseys for the game with the special twill lettering. However, on game day, the Red Sox took the field in modified white home jerseys, with patterned red/blue outlined with gray. The look was unimpressive: the lettering looked like a mottled blue and the gray outlines were almost invisible on the white jerseys, making the lettering look like single-color muddy-blue from a distance. Perhaps the lettering was prepared for the red jersey and the change to the white was made late in the process. The blue/gray combo on white seems very unusual in this case, and no other team chose that pairing for a white jersey.

(Right) Design proposal for the 2016 Independence Day jersey, rejected by the Red Sox. I can understand why. Unless a viewer was standing inches away and noticed the pattern sublimated into the twill, it looks exactly like the team's regular home alternate jersey.*

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Turn Back the Clock to 1936

Steve Kraljic Collection

The Red Sox throw back to 1936 for a second time, this time with the road version of that year's style. In a September 7 game at the Padres, who wear 1936 Pacific Coast League Padres uniforms, both teams honor Hall of Famer Ted Williams, a Red Sox legend who was a member of the 1936 PCL Padres. This gray Majestic knit jersey is a fair reproduction with some errors. The navy/red front lettering and navy back numbers in Red Sox font match up to the team's short-lived 1936-1937 road set. However, those original jerseys had navy knit trim around neck and placket, with double stripes of navy knit trim around the sleeve ends. The TBTC jersey neck and placket knit trim is incorrectly red, and the sleeve adornment, inexplicably, is red/white/red braid. See actual 1935 game uniform at right.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Mother's Day

Pink-trimmed Mother's Day jerseys return on May 13-14, 2017. Once again, the Flex Base jerseys have the usual front left tail Majestic heat applied vinyl locker tag and team inventory tag inside the bottom of the placket. Returning as well is the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon glued on left chest; the pink Majestic sleeve logo; and the dark pink/light pink/white ChromaFlex MLB Silhouetted Batter applique stitched on the back of the collar. All multi-colored lettering is done in the lightweight-twill style. The Red Sox wear their home white jerseys with the front logo lettering in pink/dark gray. Back numbers are pink/dark gray. All jersey trim, normally red, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Turn Back the Clock to 1967

Visiting St. Louis on May 16, 2017, the Red Sox break out 1967 road throwbacks to join the Cardinals in celebrating the 1967 World Series between the two teams, 50 years later. Full-knit gray jerseys by Majestic aren't all that close to the original flannels. While the back numbers are in the correct McAuliffe font, still used by the Sox today, the block "BOSTON" on front is much less bold than the originals. Hard to believe it could be so easy to mess up such a simple jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Memorial Day (Home)

The next incarnation of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. The back-of-collar MLB logo switches to an olive green and black treatment as well. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Red Sox apply this style to their home white jerseys as worn on May 27-28, 2017 and May 26-28, 2018.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Memorial Day (Road)

The next incarnation of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single-color black, while the back-of-collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Red Sox apply this style to their road gray jerseys as worn on May 29, 2017.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Father's Day

Light blue-trimmed Father's Day jerseys return on June 17-18, 2017. Once again, the Flex Base jerseys have the usual front left tail Majestic tagging and set tagging at the inside bottom of the placket. Returning as well is the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon glued on left chest, the light blue Majestic embroidered sleeve logo, and the dark royal blue/light blue/white back collar

ChromaFlex MLB Silhouetted Batter patch. The Red Sox wear road gray jerseys with the front logo lettering in light blue/dark gray. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while back numbers are light blue/dark gray. The team's sleeve patch is also simplified to shades of light blue, gray, and white.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Independence Day

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less-busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two color options for the new twill – appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 1-4, 2017 and July 2-4, 2018, the Red Sox wear their road gray jersey with blue patterned twill/red front logo lettering and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color red. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Players Weekend

To highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans, MLB introduces the colorful Players Weekend promotion. In addition to relaxed regulations on team-standard color and design of cleats, bats, and other equipment, MLB encourages players to wear nicknames on the backs of a new set of very colorful jerseys. Meant to evoke the look of youth league designs, the two-toned Cool Base pullovers feature bright and contrasting body and sleeve colors, and include a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people in their lives with handwritten black marker messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature a variant of the MLB logo showing the growth of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat-pressed Majestic manufacturer and set tags are applied on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. All numbers on back are in single color Varsity, and the player names in 2 ¾" single color Block Condensed, regardless of the team's usual font. On August 25-27, 2017 and August 24-26, 2018, the Red Sox wear jerseys with navy blue bodies and red sleeves with white nicknames and red numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide red/white/red trim. The front features a straight-across version of their normally arched home lettering, here rendered in red/white kiss-cut lightweight twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Special Gold Trimmed

On April 9, 2019, the Red Sox celebrate their 2018 World Series victory by bringing gold back into their home jerseys as they had in 2005 and 2014. Much the same as those earlier jerseys, this Majestic Flex Base entry adds a metallic gold outline to the front “RED SOX” lettering and back numbers. The MLB logo on the back of the collar shifts to gold as well, and a 2018 World Series Champions patch, also trimmed in metallic gold to match, adorns the left sleeve,. The Red Sox originated this tradition in 2005, one that many teams have duplicated in subsequent years.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Patriots' Day/Jackie Robinson Day

The Red Sox have worn their "Boston Strong" home alternates on every Patriots Day since 2014 (except for a rainout in 2018) since first donning the style in 2013 to commemorate the Boston Marathon bombings that year. In 2019, Patriots Day falls on April 15, which is also Jackie Robinson Day across MLB, so these jerseys do double-duty. To the usual "Boston Strong" template of "BOSTON" in red on front of the team's home jersey and a "B Strong" patch on left chest comes the addition of the "42" patch on the right sleeve, worn league-wide, atop the MLB150 patch, also worn by every team that year. As is the custom on Jackie Robinson Day, all players wear 42 as well.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Players Weekend

The third incarnation of Players Weekend turns the colorful jersey concept on its ear, reducing all teams to monochromatic designs in either black or white, with all team sleeve patches and trim removed, leaving a clean but stark template. Gone are the contrasting sleeves and special patches with messages of inspiration. MLB says that this new approach is to emphasize the colorful, personalized cleats, bats, and other gear the players choose for the promotion, which spans August 23-25, 2019. Jerseys are now button-front Flex Base, with appropriate Majestic manufacturer and set tagging. Back-of-collar CFX MLB logo is now silver and black. All teams also wear a memorial patch for Angels pitcher Tyler Skaggs, a white “45” in a black circle, on the left sleeve. Most teams removed this patch before auctioning off the jerseys. The Red Sox wear a black version of their home jersey with the front lettering and back varsity numbers rendered in black/gray with gray nickname on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2021-2023 Patriots' Day/"Boston Strong"

After a one-year combination of the team's Boston Strong alternates and Jackie Robinson Day in 2019, the Red Sox return to their standard version of this special jersey for 2021 (there was no game in the COVID-shortened 2020 season). Now made by Nike with its logo on front, right chest, all other elements remain the same as previous years. White jerseys with red trim like the team's usual home jerseys, but with "Boston" spelled out across the front in simple Tuscan-font red letters. A round memorial patch, with the team's fancy "B" from their caps and the word "Strong" is sewn-on the left chest above the wordmark. Back numbers are the same as the home jerseys in color and style. The 2022 version had the Jerry Remy memorial patch on the left sleeve, and the 2023 version carried a sponsor patch. Worn April 19, 2021; April 18, 2022; April 17, 2023.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Patriots' Day/Jackie Robinson Day

The Red Sox have worn their "Boston Strong" home alternates on every Patriots Day since 2014 (except for a rainout in 2018) since first donning the style in 2013 to commemorate the Boston Marathon bombings that year. In 2019, Patriots Day fell on April 15, which is also Jackie Robinson Day across MLB, so the once-a-year home alternate jerseys did double-duty. The dates aligned again in 2024, so that year's Boston Strong alternates were the base for the annual Jackie Robinson tribute once again. This time, however, instead of the "42" in the Red Sox McAuliffe font like 2019, it was rendered in bold Dodger blue, a new tradition in MLB as of 2022. What's most odd about the jersey is that for 2024, rather than being Nike Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) like other teams, it is based on the Nike Flex Base template of years prior. Perhaps with all of the supply issues Nike had in advance of the 2024 season, they were unwilling to dedicate resources to this one-day jersey, and found enough old stock to cover the game. The jersey tagging supports this theory, as it clearly lists "2023" as the year of issue. We have not seen other jerseys to be sure this tagging was universal, but photos from the game show all of the team wearing Flex Base. As always, the team's "B Strong" patch is on the left chest, while for 2024, the Tim Wakefield patch resides on one sleeve and the team's ad patch is on the other.

Above left: Red Sox starting pitcher Kutter Crawford, whose jersey shows the underarm panels of Nike's version of Flex Base.

Above right: The team signed and auctioned off a jersey, which was a retail Vapor Premier Elite, the style they didn't wear on the field.

© GameWornGuides.com

Prototypes and Oddballs

Typical Red Sox Numbering Errors

Shown above is the Red Sox' now-classic McAuliffe uniform number font displayed correctly. But even game worn Red Sox jerseys are not immune from errors in the sewing shop. Below are the three most common errors made by the tailor.

These errors aren't limited to jerseys: in the mid-2000s, the Red Sox display of retired numbers outside Fenway Park also used an upside-down 8 to honor Hall of Famer Carl Yastrzemski. It was corrected after a few years in this unfortunate position.

Above, some examples of incorrect 6, 8, and 9 digits on Red Sox game used jerseys. In recent years, it seems the team, or manufacturers, have used the "9" digit to stand in for both 6 and 9, likely to avoid creating two sets of numbers for the similar digits. It is unclear if this was a conscious decision, or simply an oversight.

© GameWornGuides.com

1972 Prototype Home

Actual 1972

Old vs. New: Here is Tommy Harper (left) in 1972 Red Sox home flannels next to Carl Yastrzemski (right) modeling a prototype Red Sox knit uniform. This photo likely dates to early 1972 at Fenway Park. Notice the sleeve end knit trim and side stripe on the pants that did not make the cut, including what was likely a blue/red/blue color scheme (similar to what the Angels wore at the time) that was scrapped in favor of red/blue/red trim for the actual jersey (top right). Colorized by @ fenwayphotoshop on X, the color photo is a best guess at colors for these uniforms, but when compared against the black and white original, the color choices seem to be accurate. The Red Sox adopted knits in mid-1972, though they continued to mix in their flannels throughout the rest of the year.

© GameWornGuides.com

1972 Prototype Road?

Offered for your consideration is a mysterious Red Sox jersey, made by Rawlings. It appears up to pro specifications, and includes the proper 1972-1984 Rawlings tag in the neck, and a small flag tag with "Set 1, #8P, 1972" sewn inside the front, right tail.

The Red Sox switched from flannel to knit uniforms during the 1972 season (see the prior page) so it is possible this was a sample for the team's road jersey. All lettering is blue/red, which is opposite what we are used to seeing on Red Sox road jerseys now, but was the proper lettering colors for the gray flannel tops worn from 1969-1972, just before the switch to knits.

The "Red Sox" lettering, rather than "Boston" is curious - the team had not had their nickname on its road jerseys since 1933. Perhaps they, or Rawlings, were considering a change?

Rawlings did not make Red Sox jerseys until many years later (interestingly enough, when they did get the team's business, it was exclusively for road jerseys), so if this is, in fact, a sample, the team's brass was not convinced.

It is possible that this may be from one of the team's minor league affiliates as well (the "Red Sox" lettering vs. "Boston" would support that theory). However, big league uniforms were often handed down to the minors in that era, so it would be somewhat unusual to see a style not worn by the big club, in a material they had not yet adopted, in the minors. More research is required regarding this possibility.

© GameWornGuides.com

1978 Sample Home?

Here's an unusual, late-70s oddball...a Red Sox home jersey, that appears pretty close to team-spec, with Stall and Dean tags. At this point, McAuliffe supplied Red Sox jerseys to the team, but the truth behind the tag was that Brockton, MA company Stall and Dean actually manufactured the uniforms under the McAuliffe label, which it had bought several years earlier. Retail authentic jerseys were essentially non-existent at this time, but some manufacturers would make up jerseys for fans as special orders, or would create examples like this for other team or player uses. In this era, McAuliffe (actually Stall and Dean) was known for making such special orders, and this example may well have been one of those. Notice the very small size - 36 - which would have been only rarely seen on a pro player, and certainly not on catcher Carlton "Pudge" Fisk, whose number 27 is sewn on back. The proposed year for this one, 1978, comes not only from the pullover style and the fact that Fisk was a popular All-Star at that time, but also by a second small tag, sewn behind the size tag, with an "8" on it. It is not definitive proof that this was the year this was created, but with the other evidence, it seems very plausible.

Listed at 6'3" and 200 pounds, Carlton Fisk was NOT a size 36.

© GameWornGuides.com

1979 Sample Home?

If you're seeing a trend over these last two pages, you're on to something. Not unlike the possible 1978 home jersey sample by Stall and Dean on a previous page, here's a similar possible sample of the team's next iteration of a home jersey for 1979. The year is a matter of conjecture here, but it is an educated guess.

The 1979 season was when the Sox turned back to a more traditional button-down style after a few years of pullovers and sansabelt pants. Here, and on a few following pages, we see what appear to be samples for that switch. As noted earlier, McAuliffe supplied Red Sox jerseys to the team through the 1978 season, but Brockton, MA company Stall and Dean actually manufactured the uniforms under the McAuliffe label, which it had bought several years earlier. It is possible that, given the company's association with the Red Sox, it was asked to provide a sample of the 1979 home jersey for team review. Given the company's familiarity with the Red Sox, it is not surprising that this jersey looks a lot like what the team wore that year, which was actually made by Wilson. What is odd is the use of an upside-down "9" for a "6" on back - you'd think they'd know better. Oddly, there is also what we believe to be a similar, McAuliffe-tagged example on a later page that was said, by a player, to have been worn in a game. Perhaps this was a precursor to that example?

As noted above, retail authentic jerseys were essentially non-existent at this time, but some manufacturers would make up jerseys for fans as special orders, or would create examples like this for other team or player uses. In this era, McAuliffe (actually Stall and Dean) was known for making such special orders, and this example may well have been one of those too. Unlike the jersey on the page prior, we do not seem to have a year tag applied here that would give us more info on when this may have been created, and as such, what it might be.

As always, it is possible this is a home jersey for a Red Sox minor league affiliate too. At the time, four of the team's five farm clubs were called "Red Sox." But without more info on who made those teams' jerseys (assuming they weren't all just hand-me-downs) we may not be able to verify this theory either way.

© GameWornGuides.com

1979 Oddball McAuliffe Home

Historically, Tim McAuliffe Uniform Company, a small Boston-area sporting goods dealer had supplied uniforms to the Red Sox since the 1940s. The nation's much larger major manufacturers were always actively involved in courting business from all the MLB teams, and finally in 1979 Wilson wrested the team contract from McAuliffe. However, with the pending change to button-front jerseys and belted pants for 1979, McAuliffe had prepared the patterns and created samples of the new style, hoping to remain the team's supplier.

The owner of this jersey explains in detail how he came to own it, and details an in-person conversation he had with Yastrzemski at the time he had the jersey signed. Briefly, Yastrzemski confirmed that he did wear a McAuliffe uniform at the start of the 1979 season until he was pressured by the team to change to uniforms made by Wilson, the contracted supplier, shortly after the season began. He said he preferred the thicker, warmer fabric he perceived the McAuliffe uniforms were constructed from, including the heavyweight wool-flannel undershirt.

It had been common for players to visit the McAuliffe site in Brockton, MA. to have their measurements taken and uniforms tailored prior to the start of the season, and Carl Yastrzemski was one of those who liked the special attention provided to him. In 1979 McAuliffe delivered his sets of McAuliffe-made uniforms to him before the start of the season. According to the affidavit, Yastrzemski says he began the season wearing McAuliffe uniforms.

But it was not to be. After the team wore its season-used 1978 pullover jersey uniforms in Spring Training 1979, the players were issued new knit Wilson button-front uniforms for the start of the 1979 season, and McAuliffe's long association as the official provider of Red Sox uniforms came to an end.

© GameWornGuides.com

1979 Prototype Home?

The jersey pictured here may be a sample made up for the team for the 1979 season, when the Red Sox transitioned from pullover jerseys back to button-fronts. This was also a time that they moved from McAuliffe as their supplier to Wilson, so they may have contacted other firms to supply prototypes to asses quality and workmanship.

Goodman & Sons was a local, family-owned business in the Los Angeles area. For many years, they made the uniforms for the local Dodgers and Angels, but also supplied uniforms to the Mets, Astros, and a couple of other teams for brief periods. The Goodman and Sons neck tag used here dates between about 1975-1984, hence the presumed year for this sample.

Made up with star player Carl Yastrzemski's #8, this prototype tracks very closely with what the team eventually used on the field, but from another manufacturer. The only read difference is the presence of red knit trim on the sleeve ends, which is only partially visible in one photo. If this is, in fact, a sample, it is clear that after a few years of joining the pullover trend, the Red Sox were quite happy to return to their traditional uniforms, and did not want to experiment.

Another option is that this could be a "retail" jersey of the time, ordered by a fan to honor Yastrzemski in his later career (he retired after the 1983 season). McAuliffe, which at this point was a vanity label for Brockton, MA manufacturer Stall and Dean, made team-spec jerseys as custom orders at this time, and Wilson, the company that ultimately made jerseys of this era for the Red Sox, made "sample" jerseys for VIPs and business partners as well (see other pages for info on both). It seems less likely that a company across the country, not contracted by the team, might do something like this during this era, but without other documentation, it is hard to know for sure. Any info from readers is welcome.

© GameWornGuides.com

1983 Sample Home

This jersey appears to be a very well-preserved example of a Wilson 1983 Red Sox home jersey, as worn by Hall of Famer Carl Yastrzemski. Many of the details match up, proper Wilson-era tag, the embroidered “83” year tag sewn on the tail, and even the size, 42, which Yaz wore at that time. But we have one piece of evidence that proves that this one isn’t what we may think - the bag it came in. The top two photos far right are labels from a bag used to package this jersey, which include a sticker showing that this is a sample.

Yaz retired after the 1983 season, so it is very likely this jersey was made by Wilson - the team’s official supplier at the time - almost exactly to team specifications for use as a gift or VIP/sponsor souvenir. As noted elsewhere, retail authentic jerseys were essentially non-existent at this time, but some manufacturers would make up jerseys for fans as special orders, or would create examples like this for other team or player uses. Aside from the fact that the Wilson tag appears in the neck, rather than above the year tag as was typical at the time (see photo bottom right), we might not otherwise know the truth behind this one. Which is also a problem for buyers who might not be fortunate enough to be presented with the original bag, and may lack the knowledge about the tagging placement. As always, buyer beware!

© GameWornGuides.com

1984-1998 Oddball Home

Here is an unusual Red Sox home jersey, made by AIS. The date of 1984-1998 is a possible range of time this was made based on the use of the black AIS tag in the back hem. AIS never made on-field jerseys for the Red Sox, which makes this one an unusual example, especially since we have not seen other AIS Red Sox jerseys before. The Red Sox did change home jersey manufacturers from Wilson to Russell in1992, but that coincides with when Russell became the official MLB supplier, so it is unlikely that AIS made this up as a sample for the team's consideration.

AIS did, however, make custom sports uniforms for hundreds of film and TV productions (sometimes under the name SportsRobe) so it is possible this comes from one of those, perhaps even one in which Williams appeared. The size 50 jersey would be reasonable for Williams during this time.

The seller of the item said that it came from former Red Sox player George Scott, who got it from Williams himself. Though that may explain the source of the jersey, it does not clarify why AIS made it or for what reason. More research is required for this unusual example.

© GameWornGuides.com

Unusual Batting Practice

When I see a singular photo of something odd, it is easy to dismiss it. This batting practice jersey fell into that category for me, as the Red Sox have so many farm and instructional league teams that all wear variations of the parent club's uniforms. But this style has shown up a few times in recent submissions. These two jerseys pictured have different era Rawlings tagging, one from almost surely from 1987 (red tag on tail with 4 lines of washing instructions, plus the Rawlings script embroidered into the right sleeve trim) and one tag from 1988-1991. Another interesting feature is the player name on back, but without a number, which mimics the way the alternate BP zip-neck jerseys (featured on a prior page) were issued. Our best guess is that these were used only during Spring Training in 1990.

© GameWornGuides.com

1990, 1993 Prototype Road/Errors

Above: A detail from the Red Sox 1990 Style Guide sheet (dated September 1989) showing the neck knit trim was planned and approved.

This Red Sox road jersey design was never worn on the field. Notice it includes narrow red knit trim on the placket and around the back of the neck. But before a final design is settled upon, teams look at many different proposals, both on paper and in the cloth, offered up by their uniform suppliers. In a few rare cases, the team changes their mind at the last minute, after promotional materials (and sometimes prototype jerseys) have been created.

This is likely the case with these two examples. The top one has a (generally) 1988-1991 Rawlings tag sewn in it, the bottom is team year tagged 1993 by Russell, the company that won the MLB uniform contract for 1992. Both have the names of then current players on the back.

New evidence shows that the Rawlings jersey was approved by the team, as it was included in the 1990 MLB Style Guide, and in the Diamond Collection jersey catalog issued to retailers. Over the years, several Rawlings retail jerseys have surfaced that were made and sold this way. This Boggs example has proper "Set 1 1989" team-issue tagging, which could mean it was made as a prototype for approval for 1990. Also, Boggs, a star for the Sox at the time, wore 26, not 29, which could have been a careless error during quick production of a sample jersey.

The 1993 Russell jersey is especially interesting as it has the name on back of a journeyman pitcher (odd, because they usually use a star's name, the team's manager's name, or use the word "Sample" for the player name) and special tailoring tags. This makes me wonder if in fact a whole set of these were made for the team in error? So far, this has been the only such 1993 example we have encountered, so it may have just been a one-off mistake.

© GameWornGuides.com

1993 Tour of England Road

In October 1993, MLB sent minor league representatives of the Mets and Red Sox to play post-season exhibition games at London's Oval Cricket Grounds. Steve Braun, recently retired from his MLB career and serving as a coach, wore this unusual jersey that is similar but not identical to the one on the prior page. Notice that the wordmark is split "BOS" "TON" on a seven-button instead of the usual six-button front. Red knit trim appears on the placket and around the neck, a detail that Red Sox road jerseys at that time lacked, and no name appears on back as period road jerseys had. The inside of the placket on this full-weight gray knit is lined with linen, and the Wilson tag is the printed, not embroidered, style the same as appeared on period Blue Jays jerseys, for example. At the time, Wilson did not make the team's regular on-field jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

1996-1999 Minor/Instructional League Batting Practice

This is an oddball we can (mostly) explain. Red Sox batting practice jerseys like this one turn up from time to time without back numbers, but with a name on a nameplate. In our experience, these names are occasionally pitchers, but more often are minor league coaches and instructors. This BP likely belonged to Glen “Goose” Gregson, who has been a pitching instructor, coordinator, and coach through several levels of the Red Sox system. The tag on this Russell mesh BP jersey dates it to between 1996-1999, when the big club wore a similar pullover jersey rather than this button-down. It is a lighter-weight mesh than the pullovers, and in made of nylon rather than polyester. We offer it here for reference to avoid confusion that these may have come from the Boston clubhouse, rather than from the lower levels of the system.

© GameWornGuides.com

1999 Unused Turn Ahead the Clock

The Red Sox had intended to participate in this odd 1999 promotion on September 18, but fate intervened to prevent it. Planning for the promotion was done late, and the jerseys had not yet been lettered a week before the game. The jerseys were reportedly being made in the Atlanta area and the event of Hurricane Floyd prevented them from being completed and arriving in time for the game. The Turn Ahead the Clock Game was never rescheduled and so the Red Sox were not forced the indignity of playing wearing them.

I do not have 100% confirmation that the lettering design on the jersey back shown here is the one the Red Sox planned to use, but it is a very good bet. Really, we still don't even know for sure if the game jerseys were ever actually lettered for the players at all, given their late arrival.

These jerseys are as rare as the proverbial hen's teeth, we have only ever seen a few in the many years since the promotion was to have occurred.

Photo courtesy Nick DiSalvo collection

© GameWornGuides.com

2000 Spring Training Recycled Jerseys Patch Confusion

Top Left: Jersey #2, tagged 1999

Top right: Jersey #13, tagged 1999

Bottom left*: Jersey #57, tagged 1998*

Bottom right*: Two headshots from Red Sox photo day 2000, showing players wearing this type of jersey.*

Though the Red Sox have long been considered a big-spending, major market team, their practice of recycling uniforms continued into the early 2000s. They also had habit of adding current-season patches to past-season jerseys for Spring Training. As a result, jerseys that are legitimate, game used examples can appear to have year/patch conflicts that may call a jersey's authenticity into question years later. Here is one such scenario that is still seen widely throughout the hobby.

For Spring Training in 2000, the team recycled its 1999 (or earlier) home uniforms, complete with 1999 All-Star Game patch, and added the new-for-2000 MLB logo on the back of each jersey's collar. Aside from the patches, the jerseys also had the Russell logo on the right sleeve, which was only used through 1999. These even appeared for the team's photo day, where players had their headshots for the season taken. By opening day, the team took the field in new jerseys with proper logos, tagging, and patches. But these pre-2000 jerseys with the MLB collar logo sewn on can still be confusing for collectors to this day.

It is unclear why the team added the MLB patch for jerseys that were only used in spring, perhaps it was mandated by the league? And was adding hundreds of patches easier or more cost-effective than just removing the All-Star patch, or in the alternative, just leaving them there? Regardless, these are only a few examples of several we have seen in the hobby, so keep this anomaly in mind when looking for game used Red Sox home jerseys of this era.

© GameWornGuides.com

2001 Hand-Sewn Patch Problem

Red Sox reliever Sun-Woo Kim appeared in at least two games in 2001 (August 15 and 19) with his American League Charter Member Anniversary Patch sewn on the wrong sleeve. The patch was applied by legendary Red Sox receptionist Helen B. Robinson. A skilled sewer who was frequently called upon to make last-minute repairs and modifications while she managed the Red Sox switchboard, Robinson accidentally put the patch on the left sleeve of Kim's jersey, rather than the right. She had been misled by the presence of the Russell manufacturer's logo on the right sleeve of Kim's jersey, and added the patch on the opposite sleeve as it normally appeared. The logo was on the left sleeve starting in 2000, however, Kim had been issued an older Red Sox jersey with the logo still on the right. It is unclear why Kim needed a new jersey in a pinch, as he had worn a home jersey with the proper logo and patch placement earlier in the year, but for at least two games toward the end of his 2001 season, he mismatched his teammates.

Right: These two images captured from a low-res video of Kim's August 19, 2001 appearance, show him again wearing the patch on the wrong (left) sleeve, and the presence of the Russell logo on the right.

Left: Evidence of other jersey recycling by the Red Sox in 2001, this time with Hideo Nomo's road jersey as he celebrated his April 4 no-hitter. Note the "R" logo on the right sleeve vs. his teammate's logo-free right sleeve. At least Nomo's anniversary patch was sewn on the correct sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2002 Spring Training Oddball Patched Jerseys

It is not unusual for a team to wear a prior-season's jersey for Spring Training. In fact, it was a common practice for quite some time. However, the Red Sox took a very strange approach to the concept in Spring Training 2002, when several members of the team were photographed wearing the 2001 American League Anniversary patch. The only issue was, it wasn't the patch the team had worn the prior year.

The Red Sox were one of four AL clubs to wear the special "Charter Member" version of the patch, signifying that they were among the original 1901 AL teams and had not moved cities since their founding. In these four photos, the players are wearing the version without the "Charter Member" banner.

All three of the players shown here with the patch, Tony Clark, Pedro Martinez, and Johnny Damon, were new to the Sox in 2002. It is possible that the team recycled the 2001 jerseys for returning players, and made up new ones for the new additions, and somehow put on the wrong patches to "match" the rest of the team. Rickey Henderson, shown at right in the bottom photo, was also new to the Sox in 2002. Though we cannot see his right sleeve to know if he had the patch, he appears to be wearing #13, which was not his actual number. Damon, for his part, is wearing his correct #18. Clark and Henderson only played for the Red Sox in 2002, so their inclusion pinpoints the year of this anomaly.

Three of these photos are promotional, and photos of this type don't always match up with what goes on the field. But the photo of Clark at top right shows him in-game during Spring Training with the oddball jersey, so it is possible that, for Spring Training at least, all of these players used these strange jerseys.

It is a fine, picky little detail of course. But if a knowledgeable collector were to see any of these jerseys in the marketplace, he or she might write them off as fake given the mismatch of jersey and patch. Mistakes can happen. And for the 2002 Red Sox, it seems like they happened a few times, for many of the new guys.

Far left: The 2001 AL Anniversary patch seen on the jerseys on this page.

Near left: The "Charter Member" version the Red Sox actually wore.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005-2011 Jason Varitek Captain's "C"

Captain's patches are a more familiar element of hockey and football jerseys in U.S. sports, but there have been occasions where they've been worn by baseball players too.

One example is Jason Varitek of the Red Sox, who wore a captain's "C" on the front, left chest of his jersey from 2005 through his retirement after the 2011 season. As seen in these photos, the C appeared in different styles depending on the style of the jersey (always matching the color format of the jersey on which it was worn), and even made it on to batting practice jerseys and special event jerseys on occasion. Varitek is the only Red Sox player to have worn a "C" on his jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005 Majestic Sample Alternate

The Red Sox changed jersey manufacturers from Russell to Majestic for the 2005 season, concurrent with Majestic being selected to provide all MLB jerseys that year. Even though the team did not change uniform styles from 2004 to 2005, Majestic still provided them with samples of their work for review. Here is one of those examples for their red home alternate jersey. Made in size 44 with a team-issue 0062 code on the laundry tag, this full-knit jersey also has a sample tag inside the tail reading “RSX-ALT-J-05” for Red Sox alternate jersey 2005. It also bears a player number “5” on back, which was frequently used on samples, and may also (coincidentally) correspond to the year this jersey was intended to be used. The jersey appears almost identical to what the team wore in 2005, except for one very small detail - the left-sleeve Majestic manufacturer’s logo is embroidered in blue thread on this sample. By the time the team took the field in 2005, it had been changed to white, probably to make it easier to see.

Above: A view of the white Majestic sleeve logo used in 2005, the only change between this sample and the jersey as worn on the field.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005 Prototypes: Cool Base Fabric Test

Both jerseys use "05" as the player number, which indicates the year they were produced.

No, you are not seeing double...for your consideration, here we have two identical Red Sox prototype jerseys. Both were produced in 2005, the year before Cool Base was made available as an option to MLB teams. These were used as samples, most likely for team inspection, of the new material that would soon debut. For the 2006 season, each team tried out Cool Base for one of its jerseys (except the Yankees, who did not play along). Based on these samples, the Red Sox introduced Cool Base as an option for their red home alternates in 2006.

As with most Majestic samples, these jerseys each have interior strip tagging with prototype info on them, in this case "RSXA-0062-Fabric Test" ("RSXA" meaning Red Sox Alternate) for both. Both also carry laundry tags with the team-spec 0062 code on them, which was what full-knit jerseys were then using too. For their debut in 2006, Cool Base jerseys carried the new 0063 code instead.

We have seen these fabric test jerseys for several teams. Besides demonstrating how the jersey would look and feel, these sample garments were sometimes washed repeatedly and exposed to harsh conditions of heat and light to test how well they would hold up. This testing was considered very important, because the first attempt in 2004 at using new moisture-wicking, lightweight polyester fabrics for team batting practice jerseys was disappointing. These faded badly and became very ratty looking in normal use as the fabric was easily pulled and ruined. This pair looks new, so they were apparently spared from such abuse.

© GameWornGuides.com

2005 Prototype Silver Trimmed

We already told you about the 2005 ring ceremony jersey on as earlier page.

So, even more odd – here is a prototype of that design substituting metallic silver instead of the metallic gold that was adopted in the final design. The silver does not read well from a distance, which may be why gold was ultimately chosen.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Samples: Road

Companions to the red alternate sample on the next page, these two road samples show that the Red Sox were very active in trying our new things in advance of the 2009 season. Both jerseys are team-issue coded 0063 on their wash tags, and size 46, a typical sample size. The use of a star players' name and number was not common, but also not unprecedented, as seen on the following page as well.

The top sample had its prototype tag removed, but the bottom one reads "RSX-RD-09-J-3" for Red Sox Road 2009 Jersey 3. The top version is very close to what they wore on-field, though it lacks the sleeve patch.

The bottom is a departure, and is very blue with its dark blue knit trim. Note also the much thinner lettering that what was ultimately used (not unlike the following page) and the nameplate, which was not on the final choice.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Sample Alternate Home

Above: Closeup of the lettering on this sample jersey; Below: Team issued jersey of the same era. Note the differences in the letter forms and thickness of the white outlines between the two examples. Was this a test for new lettering?

The Red Sox updated their red alternate jersey for the 2009 season, eliminating the knit trim around the sleeves and placket, which would match the knit trim-free blue road alternate they introduced that year. Here is what appears to be a prototype for that jersey.

Like many other Majestic samples, this one is in size 46 and has the team-issue “0063” code on the laundry tag. It also carries an interior tag sewn in with prototype codes, this one reading “RSXA-ALT-09-J2” for “Red Sox alternate, 2009, jersey #2.” The use of a star player’s number (here David Ortiz’ 34) rather than a number indicating the year is unusual, though not unprecedented, as seen on the 2009 road samples earlier in this section. The red stitching around the sample tag, rather than the usual white thread, is also atypical, bringing some mystery to this otherwise plain jersey.

Ultimately, this jersey was much the same as what the team used on field in 2009. Because this is the second prototype (J2), it is possible that “J1” was identical to the team’s previous alternate. However, the front lettering on this jersey appears in a slightly different type style that what was typical at the time, with different letter forms (note the “R”) and narrower white outlines. Perhaps that was the difference in this version, and the team opted for the more familiar front lettering? Unless and until we find “J1” in the wild, we may never know for sure.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Prototypes: Batting Practice

Here we have a family, of sorts. These images show three iterations of proposed Red Sox BP jerseys for the 2011 season. That year, all MLB teams changed from a one-button pullover to these full-button jerseys. Each is size 46, with “Player” and “11” on back (representing the year) - all typical traits of samples. All also contain laundry tags with team-spec 0078 codes, which was the proper style code for this generation of BP jerseys. Though it can’t been seen here, none of these jerseys has a front-tail jock tag present, it is possible that the design for those had not been finalized when these were made. Each also has typical prototype strip tagging, where RSXH=Red Sox Home, and RSXR=Red Sox Road. The D1, D2, and D3 notation shows that each version had its own number, likely for ease of ordering and reference.

Since these are the only examples we have seen, we do not know if there were more styles shown, or if home and road versions had separate sets of “version” numbers. What we do know is that the Red Sox went with a more conservative approach for their BP jerseys, skipping the D1 an D2 styles here, opting for red and blue versions of the D3 version for use from 2011-2013.

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Sample Turn Back the Clock

Pants tag

Jersey tag

Jersey tag

Here we have a sample of the jersey and pants worn by the Red Sox on April 20, 2012, 100 years to the day from their first game at Fenway Park. The jersey and pants are identical to what was worn on the field, except for the presence of a back number 12 – here indicating the year of the jersey. The set made for the game did not have back numbers at all, true to the 1912 originals. Note the long tagging codes used for both jersey and pants.

April 20, 1912 was the first major league game at Fenway, but the very first game in the ballpark was an exhibition between the Red Sox and Harvard University on April 9, 1912. 100 years later, Harvard's baseball team returned to Fenway to take batting practice. Just for fun that day, one Harvard player and former Red Sox player and Harvard alumnus Mike Stenhouse suited up in 1912 throwbacks. It is very likely that Stenhouse wore the sample uniform shown here, which included the back number 12.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013-2015 Mike Napoli's Extra Button

2015

EXTRA BUTTON

NORMAL

During his Red Sox tenure from 2013-2015, Mike Napoli wore with an extra button between the words "Red" and "Sox" on many of his home and home alternate jerseys (see circles in photos on this page). The road and road alternate jersey have the letter "T" crossing the placket at this point, so it was likely not possible to carry this over to those styles. In addition, Napoli had his jerseys sewn shut starting in 2014, a tactic used by some players who prefer to use their jerseys as pullovers rather than to button them. Often, Napoli would wear at least the first couple of buttons of his jersey open (above), and we assume the extra button and/or sewing allowed him to do that without having to unbutton the jersey below the lettering to have it open enough to suit his preference.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Prototypes: Road

Here we have a whole family of 2014 Red Sox road jersey samples, showing that the team considered at least five options as it made the switch back from its 2009-2013 set with one-color navy lettering. Clearly, the team wanted to re-prioritize red, as it appears on all five versions, in one-, two-, and even three-color varieties. As we have come to expect, all of the jerseys have a team-issued 0630 code on the wash tag, and all are size 46. The use of “PLAYER” and 14 (for 2014) on back are also common for samples. Each version also has a sample tag sewn into the inside of the placket, with RSX-RJ-D1-(1-5)-2014. This stands for Red Sox Road Jersey, design 1, versions 1-5, 2014. It is rare that we get to see this many iterations of samples together at one time, and doing so permits us to see that versions 1-3 have sequential codes on the wash tags of 01190, 01191, and 01192, while versions 4-5 are coded 01224 and 01225. We have yet to decipher these numbers, but they may suggest that the final two were made later than the first three. Perhaps the team wanted more options after viewing the first three samples. Ultimately, the team chose option 2 for use on the field starting in 2014.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Pete Frates ALS Fundraiser

In a Spring Training exhibition game on March 3, 2015 (note the 3/3 date), all Red Sox players wore "Frates" and number 3 on their red home BP jerseys in honor of Pete Frates. A former Boston College baseball captain who wore #3, Frates was stricken with ALS, and popularized the viral Ice Bucket Challenge video as a fundraiser for ALS research. The Sox played Boston College, who also wore Frates name and his #3. The BC jerseys were auctioned off to benefit ALS research, and the game worn Red Sox jerseys were autographed and given to Frates' foundation to raise funds for ALS research..

Left: A game worn BC jersey from the game, shown just for fun.

Above: The tagging on these still used typical player names and numbers despite the different name and number on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2019 Flex Base Sizing Samples

Majestic changed jersey templates from knit and Cool Base to Flex Base for all MLB teams in 2016. In the lead-up to the change, the company provided teams with sample jerseys for fitting purposes, with a full set consisting of nine jerseys sized 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, and 56. We have seen other examples of such jerseys in all different fabrications elsewhere in this book, but this is the first complete set we've come across.

We feature it here in the Red Sox chapter because this happened to be that team's set of sizing jerseys, though you'd never know it by looking at them. Each is a gray, Flex Base jersey with standard heat-pressed tail tag and "0730" style code on the wash tag, indicating they were made for team issue. But other than that, the only ornamentation is a 4-inch tall, black twill number sewn on the left chest that indicates each jersey's size for easy reference.

Other examples of such sizing jerseys we have seen carry some team-specific branding, and some are even made up with a team's full front lettering. By 2016, however, it seems Majestic was no longer concerned with team lettering on sample jerseys that were used for internal sizing purposes only. And for good reason...if they turned out a full set of nine jerseys for all 30 teams, it was much easier to make 270 nearly identical jerseys than 30 different sets of nine jerseys. There was no intent for these simple, utilitarian pieces ever to see the light of day, but we present them here as a look inside the clubhouse and a glimpse into the work it takes to outfit an MLB team behind the scenes.

© GameWornGuides.com

Phantom St. Patrick's Day

Jerseys bearing the "Diamond Collection" or "Authentic Collection" tagging are supposed to be identical to jerseys worn on the field by MLB teams. Yes, we've seen our share of "Authentic" St. Patrick's Day green jerseys for teams that never actually wore them. But this one is especially interesting to me because the Red Sox HAVE been wearing St. Pat's jerseys regularly since 2004. An this one has an inside tag marked with an "0006," which is the Majestic stock code reserved for jerseys made for team issue. Retail-sale destined jerseys will have a "6000" on the tag instead. This jersey is also odd in that it has a Majestic jock tag used 2002--2015, but no back-of-the-neck Silhouetted Batter as has been on every team issued or Authentic jersey since 2000.

It may be a retail sales exercise from prior to 2004, or it could have been a prototype, made by borrowing a blank jersey from another team that regularly used these green jerseys on St. Patrick's Day, like the Phillies. Have readers seen other examples of these or is it a one-off?

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Sample Mother's Day

For MLB's league-wide celebration of Mother's Day in 2018 took a turn for the traditional. After two seasons of rendering every team's jersey twill and team patches in pink and gray, 2018 brought the return of simply using a pink ribbon patch on each team's standard jersey. (It is likely the change was made based on the manufacturing complexities for Majestic, logistical difficulties for teams' clubhouse staff, and the fact that the jerseys were very unpopular at retail). It is a small change, a "correction" really, but this prototype jersey makes clear that any change in uniforms is a big deal to manufacturers and teams.

This jersey's pedigree as a sample is apparent in a few details. First, it is size 46, a common sample size, and the "0730" code on the back of the laundry tag indicates it is a team-issued jersey. Further, it carries interior tagging with the tell-tale sample coding "RSX-MD-RJ-D1-1-2018" indicating it is version 1 (D1-1) of a Red Sox (RSX) 2018 road jersey (RJ) for Mother's Day (MD). The Red Sox were, in fact, on the road for Mother's Day in 2018, so it is likely that the road version of the jersey was selected as a test for that reason. Contrary to the jerseys worn on the field, which had adhesive pink ribbons, this prototype's ribbon is sewn on.

It seems odd, even unnecessary, to create a sample like this for something as small as the addition of a single patch. But since this particular initiative was a change from the prior year, it is likely that Majestic made these up as a "proof of concept," not only for their own production needs, but to show to teams for their review and approval. It is likely such samples were made for all MLB teams' jerseys, but so far, we have only seen two turn up, the other an example for the Dodgers.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020 Nike Samples: Home

Though Nike's 2020 entry into MLB jerseys resulted only in the rebranding and relabeling of Majestic's previous Flex Base jersey template, it appears that Nike still produced sample jerseys for team inspection. Here are two nearly identical examples, made up for the Red Sox.

This jerseys' pedigree as samples are apparent in a few details. First, they are size 46, a common sample size, and the player number "20" represents the year for which the sample was made. Further, they both carry interior tagging with the tell-tale sample coding "RSX-HJ-D1-1-2020" indicating it is version 1 (D1-1) of a Red Sox (RSX) home jersey (HJ).

Outwardly, this classic home white jersey appears just as it did on the field in 2020, a testament to the fact the team was not planning any changes for that season. However, there are still some small details in these samples that were updated before the full run of 2020 jerseys went into production. First, a heat-pressed neck tag which was not used in on-field jerseys. Next, an interior heat-pressed tag, almost twice as tall as the ones used by Majestic before and Nike after, appears inside the placket with the sample coding. This location was used by Majestic for team tagging, but Nike versions moved these tags below the jock tags on the lower front of the jerseys.

Finally, the "0730" code on the back of the laundry tags is the same used for Majestic's version of the Flex Base template. By the time these jerseys were released in 2020, the product code had been updated to "0890" to reflect the new Nike jerseys, even though nothing had really changed.

© GameWornGuides.com

Whoops! Nasty Nate's Number Switcheroo

"Nasty Nate" Eovaldi got the start for the Red Sox (COVID-delayed) Opening Day game on July 24, 2020. For the top of the first, he took the field in his #17 Red Sox home jersey (and as is Red Sox custom, it had no name on back...this will figure into the story later). However, as the third inning began, Eovaldi was wearing #7. The switcheroo was short-lived, as his expected #17 was back for the top of the fourth. So what of that missing number 1 for an inning?

"[Red Sox catcher Christian Vazquez] and I both sweat a lot," Eovaldi explained to the press. "So we had the jerseys hanging up in the batting cage. And I didn't realize his were down there, too. I glanced over and I just saw the 7 and assumed it was mine. And grabbed it off the hanger, threw it on."

Making the situation even more unusual was that Vazquez was his catcher for the game, so for one inning, both members of the battery wore the same number.

For the record, Eovaldi is known as "Nasty Nate" for his pitching prowess, not his sweating. But he did take the opportunity to throw his battery mate a nasty little curve ball of his own. Regarding Vazquez' jersey, Eovaldi - who looks like he's never missed a day in the weight room - said, "I thought it felt a little tight on my arms but it's all good." Both players, incidentally, wore size 46 that season, so take from that what you will.

© GameWornGuides.com

Whoops!

After agreeing to a 10 year/$170 million advertising patch contract with the Red Sox, MassMutual Insurance became the team's "official partner." And after earning a 10 year/$313.5 million contract with the Red Sox, Rafael Devers became the de facto face of the franchise. Devers was even featured in a season-long contest MassMutual held to celebrate the partnership. Imagine the company's concern, then, when Devers had his MassMutual patch sewn upside-down on his jersey sleeve on September 8, 2023. In one of their ads, MassMutual states, "We've been with New England for over 170 years, and with this team for 121." Apparently that didn't extend to whenever this patch was applied to Devers' sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Nike Vapor Premier Elite Sample City Connect

In advance of the switch to Nike Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) in the 2024 season, Nike made prototypes of jerseys on the new template for team review. By the point that these samples were made, teams had already seen some early drafts with many missing or incorrect details, just to get a sense of the materials and construction. However, many of the later samples, like the one shown here, were very close to what eventually appeared on the field in 2024. This Red Sox City Connect version is one of those examples. In many ways it replicates the team's City Connect jersey that they had worn since 2021, just carried over to VPE, which meant that things like the original sleeve-end trim was now sewn into the edge of the sleeve instead of on it, and the team's "617" sleeve patch was much lighter embroidery than before. The back numbers on this sample are also perforated, which was not an element of the earlier version. However, when appearing on-field in 2024, the perforations seemed much smaller than on this sample. It is unclear if the holes were smaller, or if it was just an illusion from the photos. One thing missing from this prototype, which wasn't much of a loss, was the blank, white, heat-pressed tag above the black Nike jock tag, which served no purpose on the 2021-2023 versions of the jersey.

Note the sample information that is on the Nike tag, which reads "RED SOX CC JERSEY 44 REGULAR FIT", with "CC" meaning City Connect, and 44 being the size, which was not typical in earlier Nike samples, which were usually size 46. Also, the designation of "regular fit" was something not commonly seen on jersey tags, so it may have indicated the intent to use "bucket sizing" on jerseys, where there were a handful of standard cuts in different proportions available to players rather than the specific customizations of years past. Nike's 2024 pants were also done in bucket sizing, which was very unpopular with players. It is unclear what the "DQ6286-749" text on the front tag and "042522-1" on the wash tag mean. It is likely they are internal production codes, as all 2024 samples we have seen have different codes in these spots that we have not yet deciphered.

Note the perforations on the back numbers, which appear larger here than they did on-field in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

Commemorative Patches

Red Sox Patches

1975, part of 1976

1976, starting July 10

1987

- 1975 and part of 1976, except 1975 World Series: Massachusetts Bicentennial, home jersey only.
- 1976, starting July 10: Tom Yawkey memorial armband
- 1987: Fenway Park 75th Anniversary
- 1990: "Tony C" Black Memorial armband
- 1992: Jean Yawkey memorial initials in red and odd small black rectangular patch that underlines the JRY initials and does not go all the way around the arm. Also worn on BP jersey with white letters.
- 1999 All Star Game, Worn on BP jersey as well
- 2002, after July 5: Ted Williams Memorial "9" and armband worn on right sleeve

1990

1992

1992 – odd black armband is more like a black "underline"

1999- as used (white background)

1999- gray background patch, made, but not used by Red Sox

2002, after July 5

© GameWornGuides.com

April 11, 2005

April 20, 2008 &

April 22, 2009

- 2005, April 11: World Champs patch worn on special gold-trimmed ring ceremony only, and on opening day home jerseys
- 2007, April 20: Green jersey and cap in memory of Celtics' Red Auerbach, also tiny Virginia Tech "VT" logo silk-screened in black on left sleeve of jersey in memory of those who died in a shooting there
- 2008, March 25-26: EMC sponsorship patch on right sleeve for opening series in Japan
- 2008, April 20 and 2009, April 22: Recycling patch worn for Earth Day
- 2012: Fenway Park 100 Years on right sleeve of all game and BP uniforms
- 2012, starting August 14: Black armband for Johnny Pesky, right sleeve of road jerseys only.
- 2012, starting August 21: Johnny Pesky #6 patch on left sleeve on white, red and, blue jerseys.

April 20, 2007

2012, starting August 21, white, red, blue jerseys

2012, starting August 14, road jersey only

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 - A year of patches that marked tragedies

The 2013 season started with every team in MLB wearing a patch on Opening Day commemorating the tragedy of the Sandy Hook school shooting in Newtown, Connecticut on December 14, 2012 in which 26 children and teachers died. Originally, the patch was to be worn only by the Red Sox and Yankees, the two teams closest to the locale; the commissioner of baseball asked the other 28 clubs to participate.

April 16 ONLY… armband variations

April 16, the day following the Boston Marathon terrorist bombing, the Red Sox played the Indians in Cleveland. In a hasty effort, it almost seems that players added their own armbands to their road gray jerseys, as there were a few variations from player to player. Most had a single, thin band in the middle of the sleeve, which looked to be elastic. Dustin Pedroia had a very thick band, which looked to be a different material from the others, maybe even black duct tape. Finally, starting pitcher Felix Doubront was a complete outlier, he had the armband on his right sleeve vs. left, and it looked like his is almost drawn on with paint or marker; it was clearly not elastic like the other players'.

Everyone's road gray jersey received a proper and uniform right-sleeve black armband before the game the next day. All other jerseys had the "B Strong" patch sewn to the left sleeve, and these were worn for the remainder of the season.

For the complete story on the B-Strong patch worn on all game jerseys after April 20, see the page earlier in this section entitled "2013 Boston Strong"

Starting April 16

© GameWornGuides.com

July 7, 2013 (a few players only)

October 28, 2013 Torey Lovullo only

- 2013, July 7: In Anaheim, a few Red Sox players borrowed and wore the Angels' "LEW" patch for one game, in tribute to Angels' team physician Dr. Lewis Yocum who had recently died
- 2013, October 28: Red Sox bench coach Torey Lovullo wore a "WB" patch in memory of umpire Wally Bell who died on October 14. MLB umpires wore this patch from game 4 of both LCS through the World Series, but we are not sure how long Lovullo wore it.
- 2014, April 4: "2013 World Series Champs" during Home Opener on special gold-trimmed jersey.
- 2014, April 21;
  2015, April 20;
  2016, April 18;
  2017, April 17;
  2019, April 15;
  2021, April 19;
  2022, April 18,
  2023, April 17;
  2024, April 15;
  2025, April 21: Patriots' Day, Red Sox wear the special BOSTON jerseys with the "B-Strong" patch (2018 was rained out, no game 2020 due to COVID)

April 4, 2014

April 21, 2014

© GameWornGuides.com

March 13, 2015
March 15, 2016
March 3 , 2018
March 2, 2019

- 2015, March 13 (left sleeve)
  2016, March 15 (right sleeve)
  2018, March 3 (left sleeve)
  2019, March 2 (right sleeve):
  Red Sox Foundation patch. Worn on home white jerseys in Spring Training, these jerseys are auctioned off after the game to benefit the Red Sox Foundation
- 2015, July 1: Canadian Flag for Canada Day vs. Blue Jays
- 2016, April 21: Red Sox Recycle patch for Earth Day, similar to 2008 and 2009.
- 2016, July 21: Heart of 29 patch in recognition of Rod Carew's campaign against heart disease (Carew, who is a heart failure patient, wore 29 during his Twins career. The Red Sox faced the Twins, who also wore the patch. Carew attended the game).
- 2016, September 30, October 1-2: David Ortiz Final Season patch. Red jersey on 9/30, white jersey for 10/1 and 10/2.
- 2017, April 1: Naval Academy Baseball Classic patch on left sleeve of Spring Training jersey

September 30,
October 1-2, 2016

July 21, 2016

April 21, 2016

April 1, 2017

© GameWornGuides.com

August 18-20, 2017

June 29-30, 2019

April 22, 2021

2022

June 17, 2022

April 9, 2019

March 9-10, 2024

2024

- 2017, August 18-20: Red Sox Foundation 15 Years patch. Worn of left sleeve of red home alternate (August 18) and white home jersey (August 19-20).
- 2019, April 9: 2018 World Series Champions patch worn on left sleeve of gold-trimmed home jersey on home opener only.
- 2019, June 29-30: Biofreeze sponsor patch (left sleeve) and MLB London Series patch (right sleeve) for games in London vs. Yankees. Worn on home white (June 29) and red home alternate (June 30).
- 2021, April 22: Earth Day patch on left sleeve of home jersey.
- 2022: Jerry Remy memorial patch, all season
- 2022, June 17: Red Sox Foundation 20th Anniversary, right sleeve of home jersey.
- 2024, March 9-10: Heat-pressed Mercasid sponsor patch (left sleeve) and embroidered MLB World Tour Dominican Series patch (right sleeve) for games in DR vs. Rays
- 2024: Memorial patch for former pitcher Tim Wakefield, road blue jersey version has a white border

© GameWornGuides.com

- 2024, May 20-22: Green mental health awareness ribbon for series in Tampa against the Rays, who wore the patch all month
- 2025, March 24-25: T-Mobile sponsor patch for preseason exhibition games in Monterey, Mexico.

© GameWornGuides.com

2023-2024 Red Sox Advertising Patches

With the start of the 2023 season, teams were permitted to sell an advertising patch, up to four inches square, to appear on one of their jersey sleeves. The sleeve on which the patch appeared could change from player to player, and each team that sold a patch handled the placement differently.

The Red Sox struck a sponsor patch deal with MassMutual, an insurance company. The patches first appeared in Spring Training 2023.

The patch is navy with white lettering for the team's home, road, home alternate, City Connect, and Marathon Monday/Patriots' Day white "Boston" jerseys. It is white with navy text on the team's road alternate jersey.

The placement of the patch varies depending on the handedness of each player. The exception is the team's City Connect uniform, where the advertising patch is always on the right sleeve.

To accommodate the new patch, the Red Sox eliminated the "Hanging Sox" logo sleeve patch from the left sleeve of their road jerseys prior to the 2023 season.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Red Sox Advertising Patches

Home, road, white alternate (Marathon Monday)

Red alternate, yellow alternate (City Connect 1.0), City Connect 2.0

The Red Sox continue with MassMutual as their jersey patch sponsor in 2025, however, they refresh the design of the patch in advance of the season. The new patch appears at the start of Spring Training.

The new patch now contains the company's logo in a semicircle that sits atop the company name in a rectangle. All patches have a navy field with the logo and company name in white. The version on the home, road, and white alternate Marathon Monday "Boston" jerseys has a red border. The version on the red alternate and home yellow alternate (former City Connect 1.0) has a white border.

The placement of the patch varies depending on the handedness of each player.

© GameWornGuides.com

Red Sox Postseason Patches

2004 World Series
(right sleeve)

2013 AL Division Series , 2013 AL Championship Series
(right sleeve; above armband on road jersey)

2007 World Series
(right sleeve)

2013 World Series (right sleeve; above armband on road jersey)

© GameWornGuides.com

Red Sox Postseason Patches Continued

2016 AL Division Series
(right sleeve)

2018 AL Division Series
2018 AL Championship
Series (right sleeve)

2017 AL Division Series
(right sleeve)

2018 World Series (right sleeve)

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Marty Pattin Boston Red Sox 1972 Game Worn Home Jersey

Examination Date: July 21, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0721J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1972 year-tagged Boston Red Sox #33 McAuliffe-labeled pullover, heavy weight (oddly in-between sized) 43 cream-colored double-knit jersey. The style and size is reasonable for the player in 1972; research shows he wore size 42 button front jerseys prior to 1972, and the new pullover knits fit more snugly. On jersey front, "Red Sox" arched in proper stylized team lettering font, in red outlined with Navy Blue. Red/Navy/Red V-Neck knit trim. Restored "33" on back in the Red Sox font, red outlined with Navy.

Pattin was a popular player who enjoyed a 13 year career playing for five different teams. Notably, he was the opening-day pitcher for the single season 1969 Seattle Pilots. In 1972 he compiled a record of 17-13, with four shutouts, and an ERA of 3.24. Those 17 wins proved to be his career best. In 1972, he hit the only two home runs of his major-league career. They were hit three months apart, both at Fenway Park against Milwaukee, both off former Brewers teammate Bill Parsons. (Source, Wikipedia, SABR)

As Received, Prior to Restoration: The jersey wore #15 on its back when I received it for evaluation and its eventual restoration. As 1972 was the first year the Red Sox wore knits, and the ghost of #33 was discernible on the light table, it is a solid conclusion that 33 was its original assigned number. The Red Sox began wearing knits only in mid-1972, and alternated them with a set of old style flannels during that season. As the Red Sox routinely passed their game uniforms down to the minors for further use, it is most likely that the #15 on back was a minor league alteration. The replacement back numbers are the same font as the MLB, but I will note that the stitching of the red layer to the blue backing layer is more typical of minor league issue, with very large widely-spaced stitches that are not typically characteristic of Red Sox MLB-level quality.

Restoration performed: Using the original team templates, adjusting them only slightly to match the old ghosts on the jersey, replacement numbers 33 were made and then aged/distressed to make them better match the patina of the rest of the jersey. They were stitched in place exactly over the original ghosts with stitching to match the front lettering as closely as possible.

Continued, overleaf

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: 1972 McAuliffe tagging, three-tag set on the center inside of the bottom of the front tail includes a red machine-knitted 1972 tag centered above a white-edged McAuliffe tag and square size 43 tagging below it. An odd jersey size, the "4" and the "3" are made up of two separate small tags sewn closely to each other, compared to common sizes like 42 and 44 which are displayed on a single, double-numbered tag. On the inside right of the front tail there is a white with red detailed wash instructions.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that the front lettering is original, and that the original back number had been 33. All original twill lettering is burnished, slightly faded and puckered and the thread holding it in place, while intact, is slightly bleached. There is a team-repaired tear in the front right tail, near the side hem. Aside from a few small blemishes on the cream-colored fabric, this jersey is in remarkably good original condition, lacking the extreme wear, ground-in dirt and fading seen on most 1972 Red Sox knits that were abused through overuse in the minors.

The light table reveals the ghosts of the original #33- but the shadows are faint and hard to see in any printed photo. Below, the jersey as received.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good, game-worn condition, is a reasonable size and is properly restored with a correct number set on the back. It has correct team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was worn by pitcher Marty Pattin of the 1972 Boston Red Sox.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Wade Boggs 1983 Boston Red Sox Home Game Worn Jersey and Pants, Autographed

Examination Date: April 25, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0425JP01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1983 Wilson seven-button size 42 white knit jersey, #26 issued to Wade Boggs. Red Sox jerseys in 1983 had the seven buttons evenly spaced. Red soutache trim on the placket. All lettering is in layered twill red over Navy-Blue. Numbers on back are in the Red Sox font and sewn properly 5 1/2" from the top of the collar. Boggs wore size 42 jerseys exclusively during the early years of his career. The jersey is lined inside the placket with white linen for player comfort. 1983 was Boggs' second big-league season, and he won his first of five American League batting titles that year, hitting .361 with 210 hits in 582 at bats.

Matching Wilson size 33 white pants are included, also tagged with the player's number and showing evidence of much wash and wear. The pants have red soutache down the side seam from hip to ankle. Both jersey and pants are autographed on their fronts simply "Wade Boggs" in blue Sharpie. There are a couple of extraneous blue pen marks on the jersey side and on the back number "6" that most likely happened when the jersey was being autographed. I have no opinion on the validity of the autographs.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Jersey- Wilson tag correct for 1983 is sewn to the outside of the left tail, with a small square of jersey-style white fabric zig zag stitched beneath it, on it the 2-character year designation "83", hand chain-stitched in the familiar handwriting of the Wilson factory stitcher and matching all exemplars in our library. A small very frayed flag tag is pinched below the Wilson tag that says "tapered". Pants- The pants have the Wilson tag inside the waistband with a custom size "33" hand chain stitched in black on the spot where it would normally have been embroidered on the tag by machine. Besides the Wilson tag is a white knit square with "83" hand chain stitched just like the one on the jersey. To the left of these tags is another rectangular tag with "26 23" also hand chain stitched, indicating the player's number and the inseam tailoring ordered. The pants tagging is properly sewn

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

in before the pants had been completely assembled, as none of the tag stitching is visible from the outside as stitch-through and all the stitching is concealed inside.

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that all sewn elements are original without alteration. Jersey: The linen placket lining is yellowed, puckered and stained in the neck showing signs of heavy player use. The jersey is in very good condition but shows signs of a typical full season of wear, including small pulls, puckering to the back numbers and slight fraying of the soutache trim. Pants: The pants show harder use, scuffs and abrasions abound with fraying and loose stitching in the waistband and heavier wash-fraying of the side red soutache trim. The Wilson logo in the waistband normally bright red has been bleached nearly white. There is a major 4 x 4 overstitched and fabric-backed-up team repair to the right seat of the pants to repair holes from sliding. The original zipper fly is still in place and operational.

Conclusion: The jersey and pants in review are in good, used condition, are properly lettered, and have no alterations of any kind. They have team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that both jersey and pants were made to team specifications and worn by Wade Boggs of the 1983 Boston Red Sox.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

Wade Boggs 1989 Boston Red Sox Home Game Worn Jersey and Pants, Autographed

Examination Date: August 24, 2021 Certification Number: 21-089225JP03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1989 Wilson seven-button size 42 white knit jersey, #26 issued to Wade Boggs. Red Sox jerseys in 1989 had the seven buttons evenly spaced. RED SOX in the team font arched across both panels of the front of the jersey. Red soutache trim bands the placket, continuing around the back of the neck. All lettering is in layered twill red over Navy-Blue. Numbers "26" on back are in the Red Sox font and sewn 6" from the top of the collar. The jersey is autographed by Boggs on the front left below the team wordmark in blue Sharpie.(I have no professional opinion on the autograph.) Boggs wore size 42 jerseys exclusively during his years in Boston. The jersey is lined inside the placket with white linen for player comfort. There is no visible manufacturer logo on this Wilson uniform; starting in 1987 Rawlings had the exclusive right to display branding on uniforms they made for the teams.

Matching Wilson size 33 white pants are included (again, the correct size compared to exemplars), with two slash pockets with button closures, six belt tunnels and a button at the waist. The pants are tagged inside the waistband with the player's number and show evidence of much wash and wear with team repairs. Red soutache is stitched down the side seam from hip to ankle. They are autographed by Boggs on the back of the left leg below the knee in blue Sharpie. (I have no professional opinion on the autograph.) The original elastic is intact inside the bottoms of the pants legs, though weakened by repeated washing.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Jersey- Wilson "Prestige Teams" tag correct for 1989 is sewn to the outside of the left tail, with a small square of jersey-style white fabric zig zag stitched beneath it, on it is the 2-character year designation "89", machine chain-stitched in the proper style as used in 1989 by the Wilson factory stitcher, and matching exemplars in our library. A tiny very frayed flag tag is pinched below the Wilson tag that says "BX" (meaning not known). A tiny equally frayed tag is pinched under the right side that says "42" referencing the size. Pants- The pants have the same 1989-style Wilson tag inside the waistband with a very tiny size 33 size tab, badly frayed, as well as the same "BX" tag as the jersey. Besides the Wilson tag is a 1" white knit square with "83" machine chain stitched just like the one on the jersey. To the left of these tags is another rectangular tag with "26" also machine chain stitched, indicating the player's number. The pants tagging is properly sewn in before the pants had been completely assembled, so that none of the tag stitching is visible from the outside as stitch-through; all the stitching is concealed inside. Some has written "Friedman" in black marker inside the waistband in black marker, perhaps referencing a later owner of the pants.

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that all sewn elements are original without alteration. Jersey: The linen placket lining is yellowed, puckered and stained in the neck showing signs of heavy player use. The jersey is in good condition but shows signs of a full season of heavy wear, including ground in dirt, small pulls, puckering to the back numbers and some fraying of the red soutache trim. There is a small un-repaired hole about the size of a grain of rice in the jersey front tail about 3" above the locker tag (at waist level) Pants: The pants show harder use, scuffs and abrasions abound with fraying and loose stitching in the waistband, a loose belt loop, and heavier wash-fraying of the side red soutache trim. There are team repairs to the back pockets and dark scuffs, ground in dirt and abrasions on the seat and knees The original YKK zipper fly is still in place and operational. The fabric of both the pants and jersey are dulled off-white by wear and repeated washing. It is likely that the pants were re-issued at least once, perhaps in spring training, after their MLB use was completed.

Conclusion: The jersey and pants set in review are in good, but heavily used condition, are properly tagged and lettered, and have no alterations of any kind. They have team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that both jersey and pants were made to team specifications and worn by Wade Boggs of the 1989 Boston Red Sox.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Manny Ramirez Boston Red Sox 2005 Home Jersey

Examination Date: January 1, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0101J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Boston Red Sox 2005 six button full-weight white knit home jersey of #34, Manny Ramirez. Majestic size 56. Red soutache trims the placket, two-colored red over Navy-blue Red Sox team wordmark arched across both panels of the front, player number 24 on the back in the same colors. MLB Silhouetted batter patch sewn on the back collar. Ramirez is a large man, but preferred his jerseys even larger as he wore them very loose and baggy. Size 54 and 56 jerseys are common for him to have worn. The jersey is autographed on the "2" on back. I have no opinion on the authenticity of the autograph. There is a sticker on that same numeral that says "Rich Altman's Hollywood Collection"

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Majestic locker tag correct in style for 2005 is stitched to the outside left front tail. The typical flag tab noting the size has been eliminated, and beneath it is a rectangle of surged-edge fabric with 24 56 05 machine-embroidered on it. (Player number 24, size 56, 2005). Majestic's style tag is sewn pinched inside the left side seam, and it designates this as a style 0062 jersey, the proper code for a team-issued specification garment. The tagging is correct for 2005 Red Sox team issued jerseys.

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that this jersey is unaltered, and that all sewn elements are original. There is slight wrinkling of the inside seam tag, indicating that it has been washed multiple times. I will note that the numbers on back have identical stitching (i.e. they were sewn on at the same time), and it is unlikely that the jersey was washed after it was autographed, so the wear observed most likely took place before the autograph was applied.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in excellent condition with some signs of wash-wear, is properly lettered, and numbered, and appears to have no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications for Manny Ramirez of the 2005 Boston Red Sox.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Wade Boggs 1982 Boston Red Sox Road Gray Rookie Jersey

Examination Date: December 13, 2020 Certification Number: 20-1213J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1982 Wilson seven-button size 42 gray knit jersey, #26 issued to Wade Boggs. Red Sox road jerseys 1979-1983 had the wordmark split as, "BOS TON" with a wide space between the first and last three letters, and the seven buttons evenly spaced. There is no trim on these, and very plain, single color #26 in the back in the Wilson varsity font. All lettering is in Midnight Blue twill. Boggs wore size 42 jerseys exclusively during the early years of his career. The jersey is lined inside the placket with white linen for player comfort. 1982 was Boggs' rookie year, and he batted .349, but was 121 plate appearances short of the minimum required to be considered for the batting title.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson tag correct for 1982 is sewn to the outside of the left tail, with a small square of jersey-style gray fabric zig zag stitched beneath it, on it the 2-character year designation "82", hand chain-stitched in the familiar handwriting of the Wilson factory stitcher and matching all exemplars in our library.

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that all sewn elements are original without alteration. The linen placket lining is yellowed, puckered and stained in the neck showing signs of player use.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good, used condition, is properly lettered, and has no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Wade Boggs of the 1982 Boston Red Sox.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

2005 David Ortiz Boston Red Sox Autographed Road Game Jersey

Examination Date: March 1, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0301J02

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Boston Red Sox gray, six-button size 54 road jersey of Hall of Fame DH David Ortiz. Plain gray body trimmed only with red soutache at the sleeve ends. "BOSTON" arched across the front in the team's stylized font in red outlined with Navy Blue. On the back in the same colors is the player number 34 in the Red Sox team font, and above "ORTIZ" is stitched to a fabric nameplate with a properly serged edge. Below the nameplate is the player's autograph with his number 34 written in black marker (I have no professional opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.) Ortiz wore size 54 jerseys at this point in his career, and a check of the actual chest measurement shows that it matches the size marking. All aspects of this jersey match exemplars for team-issued Red Sox 2005 road jerseys. I will note that there are several other autographed Ortiz 2005 road jerseys responsibly authenticated and that have been sold at auction, and it is very reasonable that the popular, future Hall-of-Fame player would have worn multiple jerseys during the season.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The Majestic Authentic Collection locker tag is stitched to the outside bottom front left tail in the proper style for 2005. Beneath is a 1"x 3" serged-edge rectangular piece of white knit fabric, machine-embroidered with the code "34 54 05" (Player number 34, size 54, 2005). Pinched inside the side seam is a white fabric style tag showing light wrinkling from being washed that is coded 0062, correct for team issue. The Majestic twin-peaks logo is embroidered into the end of the left sleeve.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination tells us that the lettering on this jersey is original and free from alteration or contrivance. The inside tag shows very light wash use, and the jersey itself presents well and the lettering is bright, crisp and clean.There is no notable puckering of the twill on the lettering, but there are a few tiny fabric pulls. All stitching is bright and tight.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in excellent lightly-used condition, is properly lettered and exhibits no alterations of any kind. It has team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by David Ortiz of the 2005 Boston Red Sox.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Curt Schilling 2006 Boston Red Sox Game Worn Autographed Road Jersey

Examination Date: March 5, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0305J06

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Boston Red Sox gray, six-button size 52 road jersey of pitcher Curt Schilling. Plain gray body trimmed only with red soutache at the sleeve ends. "BOSTON" arched across the front in the team's stylized font in red outlined with Navy Blue. On the back in the same colors is the player number 38 in the Red Sox team font, and above "SCHILLING" is stitched to a fabric nameplate with a properly surged edge. Above the nameplate is an inscription written in black marker to pitcher Dontrelle Willis: "Dontrelle-Keep doing what you do! God Bless + Thanks! Curt Schilling" (I have no opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.) Schilling wore size 52 jerseys at this point in his career. All aspects of this jersey match exemplars for Red Sox 2006 road jerseys.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The Majestic Authentic Collection locker tag is stitched to the outside bottom front left tail in the proper style for 2006. Beneath is a 1"x 3" surged-edge rectangular piece of white knit fabric, machine-embroidered with the code "38 52 06" (Player number 38, size 52, 2006). Pinched inside the side seam is a white fabric tag that is frayed and washed clean of any writing that had been on it. This tag would normally tell us the manufacturing codes that designate a jersey as team spec or retail spec. The Majestic twin-peaks logo is embroidered into the end of the left sleeve.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination tells us that the lettering on this jersey is original and free from alteration or contrivance. While the inside tag shows a great deal of wash use, the jersey itself presents well and the lettering is bright, crisp and clean. These are frequently seen hallmarks of a pitcher's jersey. There is some minor puckering of the twill on the back numbers. All stitching is bright and tight.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good game-used condition, is properly lettered and exhibits no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications for and worn by Curt Schilling of the 2006 Boston Red Sox.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Bill "Spaceman" Lee 1971 Boston Red Sox Boston Home Game Jersey

Examination Date: May 8, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0508J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Boston Red Sox home size 44 (marked and measured) cream colored seven-button flannel blend jersey. "RED SOX" in straight-stitched thick two color red over Navy felt across both front panels in the team font. No trim, matching Red Sox issue for 1971. The buttons are a matched white set that appear original. Jersey features diamond-shaped underarm panels with four gusseted holes on each for venting. The player number 37 as issued to pitcher Bill Lee is stitched to the back in the same thick two-color felt in the Red Sox's signature font. The size of the jersey is reasonable for the player and is consistent with other attributed to him in our exemplar library.

In 1971, the third one of his MLB career, Lee was used primarily as a reliever in Boston. He appeared in 47 games; 3 as a starter, contributing a 9-2 record and compiled an ERA of 2.74. (Baseball Almanac). He enjoyed a 14-year MLB career. On November 7, 2008, Lee was inducted into the Red Sox Hall of Fame as the team's record-holder for most games pitched by a left-hander (321) and the third highest win total by a Red Sox southpaw (94). (Wikipedia)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: 1971 Red Sox jerseys exclusively bore the tagging of Boston sporting goods dealer Tim McAuliffe. On the outside left tail there is a cluster of three tags, the 1971-vintage (white bordered) McAuliffe tag in the center, flanked below by two smaller tags; "71" in red at the left indicating the year of issue. and "44" in blue to the right, indicating the size. The tagging matches exemplars.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all stitching on this jersey is original and without alteration or contrivance. Severe fabric puckering beneath the back numbers demonstrates hot water washing and uneven shrinkage of the two dissimilar materials: the felt lettering has shrunk more aggressively that the flannel jersey. This signature puckering is impossible to replicate except through regular wash and wear. The lettering is in generally excellent condition, with some color bleeding of the blue into the red felt. The jersey is splashed across the front with muddy water, especially over the SOX on the left chest, and left dirty, clearly without any attempt to clean it, as the mud is on the plastic buttons as well which would easily come clean, so this is unwashed. Red Sox jerseys generally were relegated to the minor leagues after their MLB use was done, and it almost sees like this one was plucked off and preserved "as-used". Aside from the mud, this is in very good condition. This jersey was presented without provenance, but displays use that appears appropriate and legitimate.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is properly tagged and lettered and matches exemplars for 1971Red Sox jerseys. It exhibits appropriate use and wash wear, and appears to have no alterations of any kind. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that this jersey is genuine and issued and worn by pitcher Bill Lee during the 1971 season.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Bob Montgomery Boston Red Sox 1972 Game Worn Home Jersey

Examination Date: March 30, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0330J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1972 year-tagged Boston Red Sox #10 McAuliffe-tagged pullover, heavy weight size 44 cream-colored double-knit jersey. The style and size is reasonable for the player in 1972; 6' tall 190 lb. other jerseys attributed to him that have been offered at auction are also size 44. On jersey front, "Red Sox" arched in proper stylized team lettering font, in red outlined with Navy Blue. Red/Navy/Red V-Neck knit trim. #10 on back in the Red Sox font, red outlined with Navy.

In 1972 Montgomery compiled 77 at bats in just 24 games mostly as a backup starting catcher behind future Hall of Famer Carlton Fisk. He hit .286 with two home runs. In a ten year career spent entirely with the Red Sox 1970-1979, he appeared in 387 games hitting .258 with 23 career home runs. Montgomery is notable for being the last major-league player to bat without wearing a helmet. (Wikipedia, Baseball Almanac)

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: 1972 McAuliffe tagging, three-tag set on the center inside of the bottom of the front tail includes a red machine-knitted 1972 tag centered above a white-edged McAuliffe tag and square size 44 tagging below it. On the inside right of the front tail there is a white with red detailed wash instructions. These match exemplars for 1972 Red Sox jerseys.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all lettering is original; burnished, slightly faded and moderately puckered and the thread holding it in place, while intact, is very slightly bleached. The red bottom of the "1" on the back is torn horizontally for about 1/2" above the stitching seam; catcher's jerseys often received extra abuse in this are from the straps that crossed there and abraded the fabric. Aside from a few small blemishes on the cream-colored fabric, this jersey is in remarkably good original condition, lacking the extreme wear, ground-in dirt and fading seen on most 1972 Red Sox knits that were abused through overuse in the minors.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in very good, game-worn condition, is a reasonable size for the player. It has correct team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was worn by catcher Bob Montgomery of the 1972 Boston Red Sox.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion/Document of Restoration

Rico Petrocelli Boston Red Sox 1973 Game Worn Road Jersey

Examination Date: June 14, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0614J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1973 year-tagged Boston Red Sox #6 McAuliffe-tagged pullover, heavyweight size 42 gray double-knit jersey. The style and size is reasonable for the 6' 0" 185 lb. player who, from a survey of exemplars, wore size 42 jerseys exclusively throughout his career. On jersey front, "BOSTON" is arched in proper stylized team lettering font in red outlined with Navy Blue. Red/Navy/Red knit V-Neck knit trim. Original #6 remains on back in the McAuliffe Red Sox font, red outlined with Navy. The jersey is clearly autographed in black marker on the top left of the chest above the Boston wordmark. I have no professional opinion on the autograph.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: 1973 McAuliffe tagging, two-tag set on the center inside of the bottom of the front tail includes a very heavily worn and nearly illegible red machine-embroidered 1973 tag next to a white wash instructions tag, both heavily puckered. Inside the back of the neck is the blue bordered McAuliffe tag with the size tag, "42" centered below it, both are abraded, puckered and with ground in dirt. McAuliffe was the exclusive maker of Red Sox jerseys during the 1970s. This collection of four separate tags was found on their team prepared jerseys, and characteristically were not always sewn in the same places or groupings. Other Red Sox 1973 jerseys in our exemplar library generally show three, or all four tags sewn clustered together on the bottom of the front tail. But given the maker's inconsistency, we can ignore this variant.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all the lettering, front and back, is original. The gray jersey body has been bleached to a lighter shade than it originally was. All original twill lettering is burnished, very faded and puckered and the thread holding it in place, while intact, is slightly bleached. The red layer of twill has been bleached with detergent to a dark rose color, especially on the back number. The jersey body itself exhibits many small pulls, and the tops of the shoulders and the top of the back are notably bleached from the sun including sun-bleaching of the red trim that outlines the neck. Notable are characteristics area of brown dirt staining at the waist and up the sides which are typical of an infielders game jersey. There is also some staining under the arms from perspiration. A light table evaluation shows characteristic puckering of the knit fabric beneath the lettering which indicates many hot water washing with the lettering in place, and is impossible to replicate otherwise. The stitching is a rather large zigzag on both the front and the back and I would judge that all stitching was done at the same time, and the same sewing machine. It matches the many exemplars I have examined.

Seeing an originally-lettered 1970s road jersey with this much wear on it is uncommon. But, there are several facts which are notable. It is the correct size for the player. The embroidered writing on the year tag in the front tail are nearly obliterated, more so than any other 1970s Red Sox jersey I have ever evaluated. In fact- it took a great deal of effort to evaluate the tag to even determine that this jersey was from 1973. Although the fact that the date tag has totally lost all of its blue thread is exceptional, but I don't believe it is contrived. That tag is still firmly attached to the jersey with what appears to be its original thread, and it displays puckering beneath it which indicates to me it has not been removed.

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

I cannot do an authentication on a 1970s Red Sox jersey without calling out the following facts, presented here for your consideration. Speaking with people who were "there back then", during the 1970s McAuliffe Sporting Goods would gladly take orders from fans who wanted an on-field specification jersey, and these would be prepared and delivered identically, including with a full set of team tagging applied. There was never the intent to be dishonest or produce "fakes" that were represented as game worn jerseys to be sold to collectors. Rather, it was a different time. Collecting sports memorabilia was just not something that most people did in these years. There was no attempt made by McAuliffe to differentiate these fan jerseys from jerseys that were made for the players to wear on the field. In my career as an authenticator, I have seen many 1970s Red Sox jerseys customized for star players which I have determined to be jerseys made for fans, and then later have been represented as having been game worn. There are some things that I can look for to determine authenticity, but this process is not foolproof.

Again, concerning this jersey: While Red Sox home jerseys were often sent to the minor leagues to be used there, Red Sox road jerseys with the "Boston" script on the front in their original configuration generally do not exhibit this much wear. The reason is, they were not useful in the minor leagues without stripping the Boston lettering off the front and replacing it (usually with "Red Sox"). While it is possible that Petrocelli wore this jersey again in 1974 spring training, or could have kept it handy as a spare. After his retirement in 1976 it could have also been used in spring training again in the late 1970s. But again, if we go back to 1975, it is also entirely possible as well that a fan purchased this jersey from the team and enjoyed wearing it to every Red Sox game he went to for the next 30 years.

I will call out a few additional points which would lead me to believe that it is indeed authentic. The wear to it is "honest". That means the abrasion to the jersey in spots that would be common to a player is apparent. There are faded brown stains splattered across the front which are probably from tobacco juice. There is a characteristic brownish stain on the top of the left shoulder where a bat with pine tar might have been frequently rested while the player was standing in the on-deck circle. The fading to the jersey on the top of the shoulders and especially to the top of the number on the back compared to the team wordmark on the front, indicates many hours standing with ones back exposed in the bright sun. The notable line of brown dirt that rings the jersey at the waist where it would have tucked in into the elastic waisted pants is apparent. The aforementioned puckering to the gray jersey fabric beneath the sewn-on lettering is authentic and practically impossible to replicate illicitly.

I mention all of this additional detail not to cast doubt on this jersey's originality, but instead to explain my familiarity with this style and era of Red Sox jersey and explain why I believe that this particular one is authentic; game-worn by a star player.

Above, fabric puckering behind the back number revealing many washes in hot water; light table image shows that the back number is original to the jersey. Above right, the tail year tag and below, with photographic enhancement to show what was originally there. Below right, exemplar tagging from another Red Sox 1973 jersey showing the more typical tail tagging configuration seen on that year's jerseys.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in heavily used game-worn condition, is a reasonable size and lacks any contrivances. It has correct team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was worn by Rico Petrocelli of the 1973 Boston Red Sox.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

© GameWornGuides.com

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

Jim Rice 1988 Boston Red Sox Home Game Worn Jersey

Examination Date: February 26, 2024 Certification Number: 24-0226J03

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: 1988 Wilson seven-button size 48/tapered (marked and measured) white knit jersey, #214 issued to designated hitter Jim Rice. Red Sox jerseys in 1988 had seven buttons evenly spaced. RED SOX in the team font arched across both panels of the front of the jersey. Correct old-style red soutache trim (not the modern polyester knit trim) bands the placket, continuing around the back of the neck. All lettering is in layered twill red over Navy-Blue. Numbers "14" on back are in the Red Sox font and sewn 6" from the top of the collar. Rice wore size 48 tapered jerseys towards the end of his career. The jersey is lined inside the placket with white linen for player comfort. There is no visible manufacturer logo on this Wilson uniform; starting in 1987 Rawlings had the exclusive right to display branding on uniforms they made for the teams.

In 1988, appearing in 135 games, Rice hit .264 with 15 home runs. Playing his entire 16-year career with the Red Sox, Rice was an eight-time American League (AL) All-Star and was named the AL's Most Valuable Player in 1978.He joined Ty Cobb as one of two players to lead the AL in total bases three years in a row. He batted above .300 seven times, collected 100+ runs batted in (RBI) eight times, had 200 hits four times and 20+ home runs 11 times. He also led the league in home runs three times, RBIs and slugging percentage twice each, and averaged more than 117 hits for every 100 regular season MLB games he had played in during his career. Between 1975 and 1986, Rice led all major league players in hits, RBIs and total bases, as well as all AL players in home runs and runs scored. He was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in 2009.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Wilson "Prestige Teams" tag correct for 1988 is sewn to the outside of the left tail, with a small square of jersey-style white fabric zig zag stitched beneath it, on it is the 2-character year designation "88", machine chain-stitched in the proper style as used in 1988, the first year that machine stitching and not hand-embroidered chain-stitching was used, matching exemplars in our library. A tiny very frayed flag tag is pinched below the Wilson tag that says "Tapered". Another tiny curled tag is pinched under the right side that says "48" referencing the size.

Wear & Repairs: A light table evaluation shows that all sewn elements are original without alteration. The linen placket lining is yellowed, puckered and stained in the neck showing signs player use. The jersey is in good condition but shows signs of a full season of wear, including ground in dirt, small stains, fabric pulls, puckering to the back numbers and some typical fading and fraying of the red soutache trim.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in good, well-used condition, is properly tagged and lettered, and has no alterations of any kind. It has team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by Jim Rice of the 1988 Boston Red Sox.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

Back

Letter of Professional Opinion

David Ortiz 2010 Boston Red Sox Game Worn Autographed Road Alternate Jersey

Examination Date: April 13, 2022 Certification Number: 22-0413J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: Boston Red Sox navy blue six-button size 50 (both tagged and measured) road jersey with 1" extra length, of #34 David Ortiz . Plain Navy jersey body devoid of trim. "BOSTON" arched across the front in the team's stylized font in red outlined with white. On the back in the same colors is the player number 34 in the Red Sox team font, and above "ORTIZ" is properly stitched directly to the jersey without a nameplate. Between the back numbers is an autograph, in black Sharpie on the Navy jersey so it is hard to see. (A serialized JSA label referencing the autograph is on the front locker tag, serial number X82913. I have no opinion on the authenticity of the autograph.) Ortiz wore size 50 jerseys at this point in his career. All aspects of this jersey match exemplars for Red Sox 2010 road jerseys.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: The Majestic Authentic Collection locker tag is stitched to the outside bottom front left tail in the proper style for 2010. Beneath is a 1"x 3" surged-edge rectangular piece of white knit fabric, machine-embroidered with the code "34 50 '10" (Player number 34, size 50, 2010). Pinched inside the side seam is a white fabric style tag that is slightly wrinkled from washing, bearing the code 0062, Majestic's designation for team-spec jerseys. The Majestic twin-peaks logo is embroidered in white into the end of the left sleeve. The MLB silhouetted batter logo in red, white and blue is sewn to the back of the neck.

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination tells us that the lettering on this jersey is original and free from alteration or contrivance. The jersey shows very light use, with a couple of lines of dirty discoloration on front and characteristic wash-wrinkling of the inside seam tag which surely would have happened before the jersey was autographed. All twill is unpuckered, all stitching is bright and tight.

Conclusion: The jersey in review is in excellent condition, is properly sized, tailored, tagged and lettered and exhibits no alterations of any kind. It has a team-issue style tagging. It is my considered opinion that this jersey was made to team specifications and worn by David Ortiz of the 2010 Boston Red Sox.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

© GameWornGuides.com

Letter of Professional Opinion

1979 Carl Yastrzemski Game Worn Autographed Home Jersey; w/Undershirt, Jacket

Examination Date: May 18, 2021 Certification Number: 21-0517J01

This letter will serve as the professional opinion of William Henderson regarding the item in review.

Description: McAuliffe tagged 1979 Boston Red Sox 7-button size 42, home white jersey. Red over Navy Blue "Red Sox" in team font arched across both front panels. The player number 8 on the back in the traditional Red Sox/McAuliffe font, in the same colors. A narrow 1/8" strip of red knit trim borders the placket and continues around the back of the neck. The jersey is autographed in red felt-tip pen on front by the player, with the added inscription "#8 HOF 89". I have no professional opinion on the autograph.

Accompanying the jersey is a matching McAuliffe-tagged pro-model white, size large henley-necked wool undershirt with sewn-on Navy Blue long sleeves. The McAuliffe garment tag is sewn at the base of the neck closure, mid-chest. Also included in this set is a Navy Blue McAuliffe satin Red Sox jacket with seven snap closures and ribbed red/white/Navy knit trim at the neck, waist and sleeve ends. An ornate chenille embroidered Red Sox "twin socks" logo crest in red and white is sewn to the right chest. The jacket has slash pockets on each side, a khaki diamond suited lining for cold weather use and the McAuliffe tag sewn into the back of the neck.

1979 marked the year that the Red Sox switched from pullover jerseys back to the traditional button front jersey design that they had worn for decades in the flannel era, up through 1972. Collectors will puzzle that the jersey carries McAuliffe tagging, as in 1979 the Red Sox had signed an exclusive on-field deal with Wilson to newly supply the team's apparel. Therefore, all team-issued and game worn 1979 Red Sox uniforms should carry Wilson tagging, and this one does not.

Attached to this Letter of Opinion is a detailed notarized statement from the owner of this collection of three garments, who explains in detail how he came to own them, and details an in-person conversation he had with Yastrzemski at the time he had the jersey signed. Briefly, Yastrzemski confirmed that he did wear a McAuliffe uniform at the start of the 1979 season until he was pressured by the team to change to uniforms made by Wilson, the contracted supplier, shortly after the season began. He said he preferred the thicker warmer fabric he perceived the McAuliffe uniforms were constructed from, including the heavyweight wool-flannel undershirt.

Historically, Tim McAuliffe Uniform Company was a small Boston-area sporting goods dealer, and as a point of pride had supplied uniforms to the Red Sox since the 1940s. Notably, they were not a manufacturer themselves; rather they were a dealer who contracted with uniform manufacturers to create their wares, and the McAuliffe-branded tagging was added to their specifications. Following the death of owner Tim McAuliffe in 1969, Stall & Dean acquired the brand name and continued to use it in marketing, selling MLB

William F. Henderson
Major League Baseball Authentications / Author, The Game Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys
bill@TheDream.Shop

uniforms to the Oakland Athletics and Boston Red Sox, as well as to countless school and semi-pro and club teams. The nation's much larger major manufacturers were always actively involved in courting business from all the MLB teams, and finally in 1979 Wilson wrested the team contract from McAuliffe. However, with the pending change to button-front jerseys and belted pants for 1979, McAuliffe had prepared the patterns and created samples of the new style, hoping to remain the team's supplier.

Notably, it was common for players to visit the McAuliffe site in Brockton, MA. to have their measurements taken and uniforms tailored prior to the start of the season, and Carl Yastrzemski was one of those who liked the special attention provided to him. In 1979 McAuliffe delivered his sets of McAuliffe-made uniforms to him before the start of the season. According to the affidavit, Yastrzemski says he began the season wearing McAuliffe uniforms.

But it was not to be. After the team wore its season-used 1978 pullover jersey uniforms in Spring Training 1979, the players were issued new knit Wilson button-front uniforms for the start of the 1979 season, and McAuliffe's long association as the official provider of Red Sox uniforms was at an end.

Regarding the jacket and undershirt, from my experience there was less pressure for players to conform to manufacturer restrictions for under and outerwear; jackets were not year tagged, and in my research I do not believe Wilson made Red Sox team jackets until after 1979.

Manufacturer and Team Tagging: Jersey: McAuliffe tagging is in its usual four individual pieces, sewn to the outer left tail. There is a white-bordered "McAuliffe Uniform Company" tag embroidered in blue and red with the company's address. To its left is a blue bordered red-embroidered "1979" tag. To its right is the seven-line red embroidered washing instructions label, and finally directly below is the square blue-embroidered size tag showing 42, the proper size worn by the player throughout his playing career. The jacket has an identical McAuliffe tag stitched into the lining in the back of the neck, with a small size "MED" flag tag pinch-sewn and centered below. There is no year or player designation on the jacket's tagging. The undershirt has a similar but not identical McAuliffe tag sewn at the base of the neck button flap, indicating its construction of 90% wool 10% Nylon, its size 46-48 and "Made in Canada".

Wear & Repairs: A light table examination shows that all lettering and tagging is original without alteration or contrivance. The jersey shows very light wear and is in excellent seldom-washed condition, as is appropriate considering its story. There is a small brown stain on the top the right shoulder that may have come from a hanger it was kept on. The undershirt similarly shows light use with evidence of washing. The Jacket displays what I would consider to be a full season of wear, with the paint partly chipped off of the faces of several of the snaps. Other than that, it remains in fine original condition.

Conclusion: The notarized letter that accompanies my Letter of Opinion provides a clear and plausible explanation for what otherwise would have been a jersey whose existence might have been left to conjecture. All the elements of the construction, lack of alteration and appropriate wear to the three pieces in this lot are correct and consistent with the account provided and are accurate considering many decades of McAuliffe serving as the supplier of on-field apparel to the Boston Red Sox. In my opinion, the jersey, undershirt and jacket were issued to and game-worn by Red Sox Hall of Fame player Carl Yastrzemski.

William F. Henderson
Principal, and Professional Authenticator
5/18/21

Chapter 33

Cincinnati Reds

Game-Worn Guide to MLB Jerseys

1970-2025, Tenth Edition

William F. Henderson

Reds Uniform History Notes

- As one of the original teams in the National League, the Reds have been long on tradition and have kept major uniform changes to a minimum. They are still using the same basic team logo, and certainly the same colors, for the past 100 years or more. Except for a 1960s experiment with player names sewn below the player numbers, the Reds have been conservative, keeping a consistent team look.
- They moved from flannel to double knits in 1972 with the majority of other Major League teams. The new knit uniforms looked very much like the old flannels. The same lettering was used for home and away, and its placement stayed roughly the same. Names remained in an unusually large font (designed to be readable from the back row) and back numbers remained small.
- The biggest change was the Reds' switch to pullover jerseys, worn mostly skintight by players during the first decade of the new era. Belt-less pants shared the same red and white banded trim at the waist as at the ends of the shirt sleeves. Tall Block-lettered player names carried over to the knits from the last flannels.
- During the 1970s, 1980s, and through 1992, the changes to the Reds' uniforms were superficial: a stripe added to the sleeve trim, player names being made a bit smaller, and numbers a bit larger, minor changes of fonts that mostly accompanied changes in uniform manufacturers, change of the team crest construction from embroidery to sewn twill, a nearly invisible white outline being added where there was none before. But to the casual observer, there seemed to be no changes at all.
- In 1993, the Reds became the last team in baseball to abandon the then-dated 1970s pullover jersey and belt-less pants. However, at the same time, the Reds became the first team in the majors to bring back the old-time-looking vest as their everyday home uniform. The 1993 Marlins also included a vest, but as an alternate jersey.
- Road jerseys from 1993 to 1998 had the odd characteristic of front player numbers being sewn on the right side of the jersey, opposite of all other teams.
- For 1999, the team changes its road jersey to a vest, complimenting the home vest. The home has red pinstripes, and the road is solid gray. Also in 1999, black drop shadows are added to everything: logos, wordmarks, player names, numbers, and even Mr. Red picks up the drop shadow-infested elements on his tiny uniform.
- A red alternate is added for 2003-2004, featuring an old-time Reds logo on the chest, modeled after the version on the 1956-1960 uniform.
- The alternate jersey changes for 2005-2006, picking up the same modern drop shadow logo as the home jersey.
- Another minor redesign in 2007 keeps the traditional Reds logo on the chest but changes all of the lettering on the jerseys: "Cincinnati" wordmark, player name and numbers, to a retro-looking gaslight era 1900s turn-of-the-century font. The use of black as a color element is lessened, but black drop shadows persist through this writing of 2025. The vests, home and away, are replaced by traditional sleeved jerseys in 2007, which continue to enjoy a long run into 2025.
- In 2014, the Reds add a tan camouflage jersey with a script "Reds" wordmark to their lineup for military appreciation days. It is retired after the 2017 season and replaced for 2018-2021 by a version of their "Wishbone-C" home jersey with olive green lettering, matching the league-wide Memorial Day jersey template of that era.
- In 2019, the Reds held an unprecedented 15 Turn Back the Clock games as part of their 150th anniversary celebration (the Cubs had previously established an unofficial record in 2014 at 10). Each uniform represented a specific era from the team's history, spanning from 1902 to 1999. This was one of the most extensive throwback uniform programs ever.
- The 1936 "Reds" script returns in 2020, now on a new red alternate jersey that replaces the "wishbone-C" version that was last updated in 2007 (the script was previously used on 2011-2016 batting practice jerseys).
- In 2023, the Reds debut their first City Connect uniform, featuring a black jersey with "CINCY" across the chest in squared block letters. The chest lettering includes red and white trim in a drop shadow style. The jersey also includes five very narrow red stripes on each sleeve (representing the team's five World Series titles), a stylized "C" patch on the right sleeve, and red player names on the back.
- In 2025, a minimalistic home white alternate is added to the lineup, a stripped down of the existing home jersey devoid of trim except for a single red stripe on sleeve ends. It has a "wishbone-C" on the left chest.
- From 1970-2025, the Reds' uniform evolution shows a club that has mostly leaned traditional, with long stretches of consistency broken by bold experiments—like the 1990s vests, 3D drop shadows, and the modern City Connect look. Despite these changes, the team has kept a core identity centered on its signature red and a consistent presence of Mr. Red.

I am always looking for new information and better photographs. If you can share new information, or offer corrections to this material, please send a note to me, at gameworngguides@gmail.com Please tell me which page you are referencing. All contributors will be recognized by name in a future edition.

© GameWornGuides.com

Year by Year Summary

Reds Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1970	Home White Flannel	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray Flannel	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1971	Home White Flannel	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray Flannel	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1972	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1973	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1974	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1975	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1976	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	NL 100th Anniversary	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	NL 100th Anniversary	Wilson
1977	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1978	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1979	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1980	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1981	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1982	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1983	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1984	Home White	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Bold block 1 color	Bold block 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Wilson
1985	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	-	-	Goodman
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 1 color	Reds varsity 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
1986	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	-	-	Goodman
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 1 color	Reds varsity 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
1987	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 1 color	Reds varsity 1 color	XLG Block 1 color	No	-	-	Rawlings

© GameWornGuides.com

Reds Game Jerseys

* Reds 1994 NL Anniversary and 1997 Jackie Robinson Patch are sewn on the left chest of the home vest jersey, just above the team logo crest

 All of these patches are worn on the sleeve of the home vest's undershirt 1993-1998, and on the sleeve of the home and road vests' undershirts 1999-2006. Red and black undershirts are used starting 1999; red only, 1993-1998.

1993-1998, except 1997

1997 only

2003 -2004

2005 -2006

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
1988	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	All Star Game	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	All Star Game	-	Rawlings
1989	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
1990	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
1991	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	-	-	Rawlings
1992	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	-	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	XLG Block 2 color	No	-	-	Russell
1993	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Team "C" Logo	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Team "C Reds" Logo	-	Russell
1994	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Team "C" Logo	Reds Special MLB 125th*	Russell
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Team "C Reds" Logo	Reds Special MLB 125th*	Russell
1995	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Team "C" Logo	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Team "C Reds" Logo	-	Russell
1996	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Team "C" Logo	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Team "C Reds" Logo	-	Russell
1997	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Team "C" Logo	Jackie Robinson*	Russell
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Team "C Reds" Logo	Jackie Robinson*	Russell
1998	Home White	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Team "C" Logo	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Reds varsity 2 color	Reds varsity 2 color	Block 2 color	No	Team "C Reds" Logo	-	Russell
1999	Home White	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Russell
2000	Home White	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Reds 25/10 Anniv	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Reds 25/10 Anniv	-	Russell
2001	Home White	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Russell
2002	Home White	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Riverfront Memorial	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Riverfront Memorial	-	Russell
2003	Home White	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Inaugural Season	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Inaugural Season	-	Russell
	Alternate Red	-	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Inaugural Season	-	Russell
2004	Home White	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Russell
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Russell
	Alternate Red	-	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Russell
2005	Home White	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red (New)	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Majestic
2006	Home White	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red (new)	Front Block 3 color	Block 3 color	Block 3 color	No	Running Man	-	Majestic

© GameWornGuides.com

Reds Game Jerseys

2007-2025

2007-2025

2007-2019

2013-2021

2014-2017

2018-2021

Change to Flex Base

2020-2025

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2007	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C"	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
2008	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	Nuxy memorial disc	Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C":	Nuxy memorial disc	Majestic
	Alternate Red	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	Nuxy memorial disc	Majestic
2009	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C"	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
2010	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C"	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
2011	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	Sparky oval memorial	Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C"	Sparky oval memorial	Majestic
	Alternate Red	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	Sparky oval memorial	Majestic
2012	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C"	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
2013	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man		Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C"		Majestic
	Alternate Red/Rojos	-	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man		Majestic
	Alternate Red #2	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man		Majestic
2014	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C"	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red/Rojos	-	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red #2	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Alternate Camouflage	-	Reds Font 2 color	Reds Font 2 color	No	Old time Running Man	American Flag	Majestic
2015	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	All-Star patch	Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C"	All-Star patch	Majestic
	Alternate Red/Rojos	-	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red #2	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	All-Star patch	Majestic
	Alternate Camouflage	-	Reds Font 2 color	Reds Font 2 color	No	Camo Reds "C"	American Flag	Majestic
2016	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	Bernie Stowe Patch	Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C"	Bernie Stowe Patch	Majestic
	Alternate Red/Rojos	-	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red #2	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	Bernie Stowe Patch	Majestic
	Alternate Camouflage	-	Reds Font 2 color	Reds Font 2 color	No	Camo Reds "C"	American Flag	Majestic
2017	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C"	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red/Rojos	-	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red #2	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Alternate Camouflage	-	Reds Font 2 color	Reds Font 2 color	No	Camo Reds "C"	American Flag	Majestic
2018	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C"	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red/Rojos	-	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Alternate Red #2	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Majestic
	Alt Memorial Day white	Reds Font 2 color	Reds Font 2 color	Reds Font 2 color	No	Old time Running Man	Olive bar with stars	Majestic
2019	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Robinson Memorial (left chest)/Old time Running Man	Reds 150th	Majestic
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Robinson Memorial (left chest)/Reds "C"	Reds 150th Road	Majestic
	Alternate Red/Rojos	-	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Robinson Memorial(left chest)/Old time Running Man	Reds 150th	Majestic
	Alternate Red #2	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Robinson Memorial(left chest)/Old time Running Man	Reds 150th	Majestic
	Alt Memorial Day white	Reds Font 2 color	Reds Font 2 color	Reds Font 2 color	No	Robinson Memorial (left chest)/Old time Running Man	Reds 150th/Olive Bar with stars	Majestic
2020	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Nike
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds "C"	-	Nike
	Alternate Red/Rojos	-	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Nike
	Alt Red Reds script	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Mr. Red head	-	Nike
	Alt Memorial Day white	Reds Font 2 color	Reds Font 2 color	Reds Font 2 color	No	Old time Running Man	Olive bar with stars	Nike

© GameWornGuides.com

These five styles continue from previous years

Reds Game Jerseys

Year	Style	Front Numbers	Back Numbers	NOB	Nameplate?	Left Sleeve	Right Sleeve	Manufacturer
2021	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	Joe Morgan memorial	Nike
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds “C”	Joe Morgan memorial	Nike
	Alternate Red/Rojos	-	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	Joe Morgan memorial	Nike
	Alt Red Reds script	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Mr. Red head	Joe Morgan memorial	Nike
	Alt Memorial Day white	Reds Font 2 color	Reds Font 2 color	Reds Font 2 color	No	Old time Running Man	Olive bar with stars/Joe Morgan memorial	Nike
2022	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man	-	Nike
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds “C”	-	Nike
	Alt Red Reds script	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Mr. Red head	-	Nike
2023	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man*‡	Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds “C”‡	Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Red Reds script	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Mr. Red head*‡	Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 3 color	Custom 1 color	No	Stylized “C”‡	Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
2024	Home White	Reds Font 3 color (perf)	Reds Font 3 color (perf)	2” Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man*‡	Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color (perf)	2” Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds “C”‡	Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Red Reds script	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color (perf)	2” Reds Font 3 color	No	Mr. Red head*‡	Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt. Red Mr. Red head	Reds Font 3 color (perf?)	Reds Font 3 color (perf?)	2” Reds Font 3 color	No	-	Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 3 color	2” Custom 1 color	No	Stylized “C”‡	Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
2025	Home White	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Old time Running Man*‡	Pete Rose Memorial/ Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
	Road Gray	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Reds “C”‡	Pete Rose Memorial/ Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alt Red Reds script	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Mr. Red head*‡	Pete Rose Memorial/ Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
	Alternate White	-	Reds Font 3 color	Reds Font 3 color	No	Mr. Red head*‡	Pete Rose Memorial/ Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike
	City Connect	-	Custom 3 color	2” Custom 1 color	No	Stylized “C”‡	Pete Rose Memorial/ Kroger Ad patch‡	Nike

‡ patch sleeve varies based on handedness of player

* Starting 2023, both of the team’s Mr. Red patches come in two versions based on which sleeve they appear. The “reversed” Running Mr. Red (which is worn on the right sleeve of the home jersey) has his Wishbone-C logo on the wrong side of the jersey as a result of the change.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mr. Red – The Reds' Smiling Mascot

Mr. Red in the 1950s and 60s

The sprightly, smiling, and spry image of the baseball-headed Mr. Red has long been a part of the Reds' history, and has often been displayed on the team's uniform as a patch.

Until 1998, Mr. Red ran from left to right, displaying the number 27 on his chest. In a 1998 team logo update, Mr. Red added pinstripes and black trim to his outfit, and changed directions so he now runs from right to left. His uniform number is no longer visible, and now the team logo on his chest can be seen instead.

Mr. Red wears #27 for a good reason. Teams normally carry a 25-man roster. The loyal fans in Cincinnati are considered the 26th man. Therefore, Mr. Red has been assigned the next available roster number, #27.

Mr. Red in the 1970s

Mr. Red circa 1999

As he appeared on the left chest of the 1956 home uniform

Mr. Red of the 1950s and 60s returns for 2007

© GameWornGuides.com

Home, Road and Alternate Jerseys

1970-1971 Home

1971

The Reds' 1970-1971 home jersey design was first used in 1968. It is a plain, cream-colored flannel, void of trim. Back numbers are rather small, and the player name font is large, making it rather clumsy for long names. The Reds' front wordmark is chain-stitched onto red twill, then the patch is sewn onto the jersey chest. We believe that a set of 1971 tagged uniforms was made and used in the 1970 World Series and then purposely reused in the 1971 season. The 1971 flannel uniforms were used in 1972 Spring Training.

1971

1971

1970

© GameWornGuides.com

1970 Road

After many years of sleeveless vests, the sleeved road jersey was reintroduced and used 1967 through 1971. “Cincinnati” in vertical arch Block Condensed, curved across the chest. These are made from gray flannel. 1970’s twill wordmark is outlined with white. Block Bold player numbers are on front and back. Back numbers are a scant inch smaller than most teams’, and names an inch larger.

Long names are a special challenge for the stitcher, with the Reds’ very tall name font.

The Reds’ road jersey wordmark was not outlined with white in the 1970 World Series. We believe that the jerseys used in the WS were tagged 1971 and used the following season.

© GameWornGuides.com

1971 Road

Compared to the 1970 version, the "Cincinnati" wordmark is slightly bolder and it loses its white outline. Gray flannel with a slight blue tint continues.

Names are a rather tall block font, back numbers are a small 7 ½". The font is the Wilson variant of Block Bold. The 1971 flannel uniforms were used in 1972 Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

1972-1984 Home

1981

1976

White knit pullover with red and white knit trim. Knit sleeve trim is red/white. Rawlings is the sole vendor for these 13 seasons.

One-color red numbers on front chest. Note proper placement, vertically centered in relation to Reds logo. Name and number on the back, also one-color red. Reds logo is made from red twill with white chain stitched embroidery (bottom left). Numbers are Block Bold – which is regular Block with the added thickness equal to one outline layer. Tall player names used, no nameplates. Wilson Block font used.

1976

1974

© GameWornGuides.com

1972-1984 Home, continued

1982

1984

© GameWornGuides.com

1985-1987 Home

Goodman and Sons 1985-1986

It is a good thing Dave Concepcion's name was not one letter longer. In the Reds' huge name type style, it would have wrapped around to his belt loops.

Jersey is basically the same – the lettering detail changes a bit. Still white knit pullover with red and white trim. Sleeve stripes red/white 1972-1987.

Reds logo is now made from two layers of tackle twill fabric sewn on top of each other (right), compared to earlier chain-stitched style 1967-1984. Number font changes to Reds Varsity variant in 1985, most noticeable in the numeral 2 above with its long diagonal stroke.

Two-color, red/white numbers on front chest. Note proper placement in relation to Reds logo. Name and number on the back, also two-color red/white. Huge, 4 ” tall red names now outlined in white (adding another ½”), no nameplates, standard Block name type font.

© GameWornGuides.com

1985-1987 Home, continued: Rawlings 1987

1987

1987, and Rawlings becomes the official supplier of uniforms to the major leagues. While not every team goes along, the Reds switch from Goodman back to Rawlings, keeping the same jersey design as 1985-1986. The Rawlings embroidered script appears on the red stripe of the sleeve trim on the right arm as is permitted by the new licensing agreement.

Somewhat oddly, they keep the Goodman player name and number fonts (see the signature diagonal stroke "2") instead of going back to the standard Rawlings block font they had used prior to 1985. All lettering is solid red, and the front Reds crest remains layered twill as Goodman had done it, vs. the earlier embroidered style used by Rawlings and Wilson. 1987 is the only year with two stripes at the sleeve ends AND the Rawlings script embroidered on the sleeve end trim.

© GameWornGuides.com

1972-1984 Road

1979

1980

1976

The Reds usually specified manufacturers' tags to be hidden inside the shirttail of the garment. This often makes determining manufacturers difficult from photos.

1983

The Reds' giant NOB font is clumsy for long names

Gray pullover with one-color red Cincinnati in vertical arch across front. Two knit sleeve trim stripes in red/white. Single-color red name and numbers. Numbers are in Block Bold 7". Huge 4" names used, no nameplates, standard Block type font.

© GameWornGuides.com

1972-1984 Road, continued

1983

1980

1982

© GameWornGuides.com

1985-1987 Road

1985

1986

1987

Rawlings takes over supplying the Reds' road uniforms for the 1985 season, replacing Wilson. The jersey design remains the same as before, but the player lettering changes. Names on back are ever so slightly smaller and lighter in stroke, and the player number font changes to a variant we have nicknamed "Reds Varsity" characterized by blockier, squarer-edged numerals, a higher crossbar on the 5 and a diagonal on the 2. Mid-season 1985 switch from 7" to 8" numbers surprised everyone, even Koch's, who sewed the jerseys!

For 1987, the Rawlings script appears embroidered into the left sleeve's red knit sleeve-end stripe.

© GameWornGuides.com

1988-1992 Home

A slight change: there are now three sleeve stripes, red/white/red. Prior to 1988 there were only two, red/white. Subtly, all designs and lettering are outlined with white, even Dave Concepcion's captain "C" (right). Reds logo has a red outline and continues in two-layer tackle twill, compared to earlier chain-stitched embroidery style. Numbers and names are in unique Reds Varsity two-color red/white. Names are still the large, 4" version of Block. Rawlings is the maker 1988-1991, Russell takes over for 1992 with an identical jersey except for the sleeve branding mark.

1988

1989

1990

© GameWornGuides.com

1988-1992 Road

1989

1990

Similar changes as to the home jersey. Gray pullover in all years. Three sleeve stripes replace the earlier two. They are red/white/red. Now two-color red/white vertical arched "Cincinnati" arched across the front. Name and numbers are now two-color red/white as well. Numbers are in the Reds Varsity font. Note long, wide center stroke on the 3, above. Huge two-color 4" names used; no nameplates. Block Standard name type font. Rawlings is the maker 1988-1991, Russell takes over for 1992 with an identical jersey except for the sleeve branding logo.

1988

1992 - Russell

1991

© GameWornGuides.com

1970

1975

1987

1992

- The Reds have used three basic methods to create their jersey front crest over the years. All three start with a red twill oval patch as the base.
- Earlier jerseys use a completely chain-stitched white “C” and team name, through 1985.
- Bottom left: The all-embroidered patch is seen through in the late 1980s on many batting practice jerseys.
- Near left: The all-twill design is seen starting with 1985 Goodman jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

Reds Tagging 1972-1992

(Above) Both jerseys are tagged 1988 set 1, though the manufacturer's tags are different as old stock is used up.

Ever see a size 41 jersey? A Reds insider tells us that a certain famous player would purposely order custom made size 41 or 43 jerseys in order to corner the market on game worn jerseys to sell, since no one else could get this odd size.

Home and road tagging shows differences, whether the uniform was customized by Rawlings or Wilson. Reds tags are difficult to spot in photographs because they are generally hidden inside the garment.

© GameWornGuides.com

1993-1998 Home Vest

Button-front vest replaces the pullover jersey that had been used basically unchanged for the past 21 seasons. Name and numbers are two-color red/white. Note correct placement of front number. Special Reds Varsity style numbers still used. Vest always worn with a red undershirt. The undershirt has a white twill wishbone-C logo sewn to the left sleeve. Russell "R" logo on right sleeve end.

The 1993 reintroduction of the classic MLB vest that season is shared with the expansion Florida Marlins, who have a vest of their own. Vests were last seen in 1971 and had been worn by several teams in the flannel era including the Reds, A's, Pirates, Indians and Orioles.

Official issue Amapro® undershirt to accompany the vest jerseys.

Red Russell "R" on back of the neck is a feature of these vests. Note this oddity: when there is a pinstripe dead-center on the jersey, the Russell logo is intentionally embroidered off-center so it is not right on top of the stripe!

Note placement of special Reds 1994 MLB 125th Anniversary Patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

1993-1998 (Except 1997) Road

(Above) Ron Gant's jersey from the 1995 All-Star Game, with the All-Star Game patch on the sleeve.

Gray button-front jersey with red pinstripes. Number and name style identical to home jersey. Note correct placement of front number. It goes on the right chest, opposite to nearly every other jersey you'll ever see!

Name and numbers are two-color red/white; special Reds Varsity font numbers used. Name on back now "normal-size" two-color Block lettering.

© GameWornGuides.com

1997 Road "Bobbed Sleeve"

Very likely, after the first set was altered by the local tailor, subsequent sets were ordered with shortened sleeves. Note the presence of the factory's Russell "R" logo on the back neck on some of the jerseys shown on this page.

In 1997, MLB honored Jackie Robinson with a sleeve patch to be worn by every team in baseball -- major leagues and minor leagues. The Reds' Deion Sanders decided this was not enough, and altered the sleeves of his road uniform, cutting them down to resemble the style that Robinson wore while on the Dodgers 50 years earlier (he also wore his pants cuffed up to his knees, as did Robinson).

Period news sources report that MLB executives objected strongly, claiming that the move by Sanders was a violation of the league's interpretation of the rule on player uniforms: "all players jerseys must have sleeves no more or less than 1" in length from each other."

However, the Reds players banded together, and instead got permission to shorten all of the players' shirt sleeves, so that the team would be in compliance with the rule. All this happened by April 12, 1997.

The new sleeves were only three inches off the shoulder, and required quite a bit of tailoring. The sleeve ends are trimmed and re-hemmed by a seamstress. The patches on both sleeves (Reds team patch on the left; Robinson on the right) had to be removed and resewn higher on the sleeve. Contractually, the team needed to display the Russell R on the sleeve. It appears that some players have the R re-embroidered on the new, short uniform sleeve, or on the center of the back collar, above the name on back.

In a public relations move, the team auctioned the cutoff sleeve ends, signed by the player who wore them.

The whole team went back to regular-length sleeves in 1998.

Bill Henderson Collection

Aaron Boone with his cut sleeves (right) and those exact sleeve ends from the author's collection (above). You can see the marks from where the patches were re-moved from each. The small slip of sticky paper carries the logo of a downtown Cincinnati-area tailor who must have done the work.

© GameWornGuides.com

1997 Road “Bobbed Sleeve”, continued

Reds, Deion uni-fied

Team shortens road sleeves to conform with Robinson tribute

Associated Press

SAT 04/12/1997 HOUSTON CHRONICLE, Section Sports, Page 9, 2 STAR Edition

CINCINNATI -Deion Sanders hopes everyone is satisfied - and Jackie Robinson is honored by the Cincinnati Reds' new road look.

Rather than force Sanders to drop his personal tribute to Robinson, the Reds decided to change their road uniforms to conform with Sanders' short-sleeve look.

The center fielder drew the National League's wrath this week by shortening the sleeves on his road jersey so he could look more like Robinson. His teammates agreed to adopt the look, conforming with league rules that everyone have the same sleeve length.

"It's an issue that shouldn't be an issue," Sanders said Friday. "We're not going to blow it out of proportion. We've all gotten together as a team.

"One thing we don't want to do is make it out to be a race issue. I'm just trying to pay a tribute to him."

Sanders saw a picture of Robinson on a cereal box in Spring Training and decided to pull up his pants legs and wear his uniform sleeves short to emulate the Hall of Famer. When NL senior vice president Katy Feeney saw the shortened sleeves during a game in Colorado this week, she warned the club that it would be fined for an improper uniform.

Sanders' teammates urged general manager Jim Bowden to adopt the short-sleeve look for road uniforms, which would satisfy the league's concerns. As long as they all have short sleeves, there is no violation.

"I think if you're going to succeed, you succeed as a team in unity," Bowden said Friday. "The issue over the sleeves is not something I want to divide the clubhouse.

"The intention was to honor Jackie Robinson, and we're happy that the Reds can do it in a way that's going to attract national attention."

The sleeve change got national attention at the start of a season honoring the Brooklyn Dodger who broke baseball's color barrier 50 years ago. Sanders chose the personal tribute because he thinks it's an honor to dress the way someone else does.

"This is the ultimate way to pay tribute to him. If I go to a park and watch a football game and see kids out there with bandannas and gloves unfastened and the same style of facemask, I would be thrilled," said Sanders, who wears his Dallas Cowboys uniform that way. "I feel if Jackie Robinson was in the stands or watching TV and saw a guy running around there with a lot of enthusiasm portraying the look he had, I think he'd be thrilled. I'm not doing it for a fashion statement."

Manager Ray Knight consented to the change after players told him they supported Sanders.

"I said, `No problem.' I just wanted to make sure that the pitchers would be comfortable with it," Knight said. "I asked Jeff Brantley about it, and he said it was unilateral. So I gave it my blessing.

"I think everybody respected Deion for what he was doing."

Reds Keeping Short Sleeves

AP

CINCINNATI -The Cincinnati Reds will continue to wear their sleeves short for road games in tribute to Jackie Robinson, even though there's some question about whether that was the style Robinson preferred. The Reds shortened the sleeves on their road uniforms to honor Robinson. Deion Sanders started the short-sleeve look after seeing a photo of Robinson with his sleeves high.

The team adopted the style after the National League warned that one player may not wear sleeves that are substantially shorter or longer than his teammates'. There has been some question about whether Robinson wore his sleeves short with the Dodgers. Robinson's former roommate told shortstop Barry Larkin that Robinson never shortened his sleeves. "Joe Black told me that Jackie did not wear his uniform up like that," Larkin said. "But the point that Joe Black made to me was that any way you can have the legacy continue or tell the story of Jackie Robinson is good.“

Copyright (c) 1997 Seattle Times Company, All Rights Reserved.

1999-2006 Home Vest

2004

Captain's "C" is unique to Barry Larkin's jersey.

2001

Black 3D drop shadows are added to all jersey lettering. Numbers are now regular Block style. Name and numbers are three color red/white/bla 3D drop shadow style. No nameplates used. These Reds vests were worn with red or black undershirts.

© GameWornGuides.com

1999-2006 Road Vest

2003

Road jersey front numbers return to the left side of the chest in this style.

Solid gray vest with black knit trim around the arm-holes; numbers are standard Block style. The wordmark's 3D drop shadow is unusual: it changes perspective from left to right on the word … look closely. Name and numbers are three color: red/white/black 3D drop shadow. Front numbers switch back to the left chest; no nameplates used.

Jersey is worn with a red or black undershirt. Mr. Red mascot sewn to the left sleeve of the undershirt.

Game worn 1999 Barry Larkin road jersey features a Reds wishbone-C as a captain's C on the right chest. Larkin's home jersey featured this mark as well.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003-2004 Alternate Home

2003

The red alternate jersey debuts for 2003, the Reds' first year in their new Great American Ballpark, and is worn for home Sunday games only. For the first time since 1960, the wishbone-C logo on the jersey front is absent the word REDS inside of it. Name and numbers are three-color: white/red/black 3D drop shadow.

2004

2003-Barry Larkin's jersey with captain "C"

2004

Bill Henderson Collection

© GameWornGuides.com

2005-2006 Alternate Home

Bill Henderson Collection

The red alternate jersey is modified for 2005.

Knit trim on sleeves and jersey front is changed to plain black.

Reds logo is the old familiar one, nearly identical to that on the batting practice jersey, with REDS in the center; Mr. Red patch is sewn on the left sleeve; Three-color numbers are added to the front: white/red/back 3D drop shadow, like the numbers on the back. Names on back remain white/red/black 3D drop shadow, with no nameplates used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2023 Home

Bill Henderson Collection

The Reds redesigned their uniforms for 2007 in a way that is subtle, yet significant. Moving away from the pinstripes and vest-style jerseys they had worn at home since 1993, the new white uniforms are intended remind the fans of the Big Red Machine uniforms of the 1970s.

Home jerseys retain the REDS wishbone-C shield logo on the left chest, and player numbers on the right chest. Thin red knit trim adorns the sleeve ends and the front placket, wrapping up around the back of the collar. In an old-timey touch, the mustached Mr. Red character from the 1950s uniform front returns as a sleeve patch.

A new custom type font is introduced for all numbers and letters. It is an elegant serif Gaslight-era font that looks like it would have been right at home on uniforms from 100 years ago (if players wore numbers and had their names displayed then, which they did not). All lettering is red, outlined with white, then treated to a black 3D drop shadow. Majestic makes these from 2007-2019, Nike takes over manufacture in 2020.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2023 Home, continued

2007

2012

2019

2020

Note the change in style code from Majestic's REHH to Nike's RE1H.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2023 Road

Bill Henderson Collection

On the game used example above, notice the "I" in the player name is sewn on upside down; the shadow is on the wrong side.

Road gray jerseys receive the same subtle updating/backdating as the home ones, with the Cincinnati wordmark now rendered in the Reds' new Gaslight-style font. The vertical arch front lettering features a black drop shadow that falls to the right of the main text all the way across. This is unlike the style it replaced, where the drop shadow fell to the right on the left side of the chest and to the left on the right side of the chest (really! - look and see).

MLB Properties has encouraged teams doing redesigns to try to keep common design elements from the past whenever possible. The Reds have kept their primary logo, used on the chest of the home and alternate jerseys, and on the sleeve of road jerseys. The white C logo with black drop shadow also remains unchanged on their hats and helmets from previous years. Majestic makes these from 2007-2019, Nike takes over manufacture in 2020.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2023 Road, continued

2011

2015

2016

2021

Note the change in style code from Majestic's RER2 to Nike's RE22.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2017 Alternate Home Red/2018-2019 Alternate Red

Bill Henderson Collection

The 2007 red alternate jersey is similar to the 2006 one, with lettering and front number placement. Placket and sleeve end trim changes to white. Numbers and player name are sewn in three-color tackle twill in the Reds' new Gaslight-type font white/red/black 3D drop shadow. No nameplates are used. The revised, 1950s old-timey Mr. Red patch adorns the left sleeve. These are used only as an alternate at home through 2017, then used selectively both at home and on road for its final two years, 2018-2019 before being retired.

Majestic makes these jerseys for their full run, 2007-2019.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2017 Alternate Home Red/2018-2019 Alternate Red, continued

© GameWornGuides.com

2013-2022 Alternate Home "Los Rojos"

The Reds add a "Los Rojos" alternate into their rotation of official on-field options for 2013, even though they wear it only once or twice each year. Fronts feature "Los Rojos" script with underline and a black drop shadow. Sleeve patch and jersey back lettering are identical to the standard red alternate jersey. Placket and sleeve ends are trimmed with narrow black and white knit trim, not the plain white knit trim as is found on the standard red alternate jersey. Worn at home 5/11/2013, 9/27/2013; 9/7/2014, 8/21/2015, 5/5/2016, 9/16/2016, 5/5/2017, 9/22/2017, 5/5/2018, 9/28/2018, 9/6/2019, 9/20/2020, and 5/5/2021. It is also worn once on the road, 8/13/2016 (at Milwaukee for the Brewers' Hispanic Heritage game where they wore their "Cerveceros" jerseys). The 2019 version has the team's 150th anniversary patch on the right sleeve. Nike takes over as manufacturer in 2020. Though it is removed as an official alternate after 2021, it is worn once more on 9/23/22.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2017 Alternate Home Camouflage

A surprise addition to the 2014 uniform lineup, these digital desert camouflage Cool Base (2014-2015) and Flex Base (2016-2017) jerseys have olive-tinted brown lettering with a white outline (and on these jerseys only, no drop shadow). An American flag patch is sewn to the right sleeve, and the Reds' traditional wishbone-C (last seen on the chest of the 2004 alternate jersey, and on the undershirt sleeve of the 1998 road vest) is sewn to the left.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016: Flex Base Jersey Construction and Branding

Read the full story on MLB's adoption of Flex Base jerseys for 2016 in Chapter 2.

In 2016, all teams adopt Majestic's new "Flex Base" on-field game jerseys, which are made from Cool Base fabric, but with several new elements designed to make them lighter and more breathable. The new jerseys have mesh side panels that run the length of the jersey, and one on the back tail called the "Air Belt." They are especially noticeable on pinstriped or other jerseys that are not a solid color, and the Reds' camo jersey is one such example. The sides and tail are solid brown, and though the tail is not typically seen, the mismatched sides are visible in game action. They also use "Kiss Cut" layering for front decorations, names, and numbers, which Majestic says is 10-20% lighter than traditional layered twill. The MLB logo on the back neck is now a rubberized patch, called CFX by Majestic, and the heat-pressed tag on the front tail differs from Cool Base jerseys of old.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018-2021 Alternate Home Military Appreciation

After wearing camo jerseys to honor the military from 2014-2017, the Reds retire that jersey in favor of adopting the league-wide Memorial Day style at home in 2018. This Majestic Flex Base jersey swaps out the usual red/white layers of the home jersey's front and back numbers for olive green/black, with the player name changing to black. The drop shadows on the home jersey are not present on names or numbers in this style. The Reds logo on front appears as white/black 3D drop shadow/olive green. The red sleeve and neck trim is reduced to black, while the left-sleeve Mr. Red patch is rendered in black, green, and white. The green bar patch with five stars, representing the five branches of the armed services, appears on the right sleeve. In 2019, it is joined by the Reds' 150th anniversary patch. Notably, in the two years that this style of jersey was used for the league-wide Memorial Day promotion, the Reds never played at home on Memorial Day weekend, so any home version of this jersey is from the regular season set vs. the one-off holiday set. Nike takes over manufacture in 2020. It is discontinued after 2021.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Alternate Red

In 2020, the Reds refresh their alternate red jersey, uniting elements of previous uniforms from well before the double-knit era. Made on Nike's version of Majestic Flex Base template, the 2020 alternate incorporates the script "Reds" wordmark based on their 1936 home jerseys, which has also appeared on recent batting practice jerseys (bottom right), here in white/black 3D drop shadow. On the left sleeve, a closeup of Mr. Red's head appears (below left), with black drop shadow, similar to the chest logo on the team's 1956 road jerseys (below right). Front and back numbers carry on as before, in white/red/black 3D drop shadow. White knit trim completes the look, encircling the sleeves just above the sleeve ends. The alternate red jersey is worn both at home and on the road.

Chest insignia, 1956 road

1936 road

2011-2013 batting practice

© GameWornGuides.com

2023 City Connect

City Connect is all about doing something different, and for a team called “Reds,” doing something different meant minimizing their namesake color. To their credit, the did stick to a color that has been a part of their identity - black - as the starting point for this very dark uniform set. The black jersey features the city’s nickname, “CiNCy” across the front in bold, square lettering, which is also black, but trimmed with a little white and red, rendering the letters difficult to read from a distance. The white elements tends to be at the top and left of letters, which the red is at bottom and right, suggesting a drop shadow, though not fully completing the effect. Oddly, the “N” and “Y” in the logo are lowercase, but the same size as the capital letters. The back numbers have the same color treatment, though player names appear in single-color red. Sleeve ends are trimmed with five narrow red stripes, which the team calls “wavelength lines,” that are so close together they appear as one wide band of red from a few feet away. And let’s talk about that red... the team calls the color “infrared” and says that it is “sparked by our passion for our team.” In most cases, infrared light is invisible to humans, but perceptible as heat, so maybe that’s just how hot the passion for the Reds is. A stylized “C” logo appears on the sleeve in the same “infrared wavelength” style, while a sponsor patch appears on the opposite sleeve. Inside the jersey collar, unseen one the field but visible at retail, is a red buckeye leaf, as a nod to the Reds’ home state, and the motto of the City of Cincinnati “Juncta Juvant” meaning “Strength in Unity.” And just above the jocktag, in case anyone who came across this jersey at a store were confused as to what they were holding, the team has helpfully added “Cincinnati Reds.”

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Nike “Vapor Premiere Elite” Jersey Template

Nike Flex Base 2020-2023

Nike Vapor Premier Elite 2024

Following league-wide sweeping changes to MLB jerseys with all teams switching from Nike’s 2020-2023 continuation of the Majestic Flex Base jersey shell to its new Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) template, the jerseys of the 2024 season become an anomaly - a “one and done” season of changes that brought intense scrutiny from players and fans alike. Based on the negative feedback, especially from MLB players, Nike rolled back some but not all of the 2024 changes in time for the 2025 season.

The full rundown of the changes is outlined earlier in “The Basics” chapter, but generally speaking, 2024’s crop of jerseys had changed from earlier versions in several key ways.

- VPE home jerseys are off-white, or light cream color. The earlier Flex Base white jerseys are a bright, purer white. Grays are standardized.
- The front placket is narrower on VPE, which often causes team wordmark lettering that crosses the placket to break differently.
- Neck and sleeve trim elements (when used) are no longer sewn on top of the jersey material, but are now “sewn-in” to the jersey at the seams. Placket trim adornment remains the same, though the trim is now spaced closer together with the narrowing in placket size.
- For improved visibility, the MLB logo on the back of the jersey is moved several inches lower onto the back, down from the collar placket area where it had been since 2000.
- VPE loses the integrated mesh side and back tail panels that had been part of the Flex Base jersey template.
- Player names on VPE are much smaller, and for many teams are done in a standardized block font, all using a much steeper, nearly semi-circular arch.
- For teams with front numbers, the new 2024 font is simply always a reduced size of the back numbers. This was not the way it had been in the past for most teams, with front numbers being a font variant (smaller but usually wider and bolder) than the back font.
- Team logo sleeve patches, and in some cases sponsor sleeve patches change from traditional raised embroidery to flat printed plastic or to sublimated cloth/twill
- All lettering is done using a new more lightweight (thinner) kind of matte-finished twill (commonly called “Nike Twill”). Most, but not all jerseys incorporate barely visible micro-perforation on the numbers, front and back.
- Universally, nameplates are no longer used.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Home

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Reds home jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the red knit trim is closer together than previously. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears slightly wider than before. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Road

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Reds road jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, but fortunately, the front "CINCINNATI" lettering splits in the same place as previously between the second "I" and "N". Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears wider than before. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Script

The switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to the Reds script alternate jersey. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, but the front "REDS" lettering splits in about the same place as previously. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears wider than before. The team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024. The alternate jersey is worn both at home and on the road.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024 Alternate Mr. Red

For 2024, the Reds elevate their Mr. Red Head jersey to full alternate status in the MLB Style Guide - then never wear it in a regular season game. We have seen other examples of teams doing this, largely for the sake of keeping a unique Spring Training and/or BP jersey available to them by making it part of their official 4+1, as Nike calls it (four main jerseys and a City Connect). Though, in practice, it means this really is a BP/Spring Training jersey (and has been since it was introduced in 2020), we document it here because it was made available for the team to use in 2024. Its tenure as an alternate was short lived - it is replaced in the 2025 MLB Style Guide by a new white alternate jersey with the Mr. Red head logo reduced in size and status to sleeve patch. Alas, poor Mr. Red! A fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy...(apologies to Shakespeare).

All that said, the switch to Nike's Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) results in a handful of changes to this style. The most visible change is the league-wide rescaling of the back names and numbers, making them smaller, and arching the name lettering more prominently. VPE has a narrower placket than Flex Base, so the white knit trim is closer together than in the 2020-2023 model. Sleeve-end trim is now sewn in to the jersey rather than on to it, and it appears slightly wider than before. It is unclear if the team uses perforated numbers on these jerseys in 2024, more research is necessary. The team's ad patch appears on this jersey, and varies in sleeve placement based on each players' handedness.

These photos are from 2024 Spring Training, the only time the team used this jersey. We present them here to show how the jersey translated to the Nike Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) template for its only season of use before being replaced by a new alternate.

© GameWornGuides.com

2024-2025 City Connect

The switch to Vapor Premier Elite (VPE) in 2024 creates some small changes to the Reds' City Connect jersey, introduced just one year prior. Player names on back are reduced in size and arch more aggressively than before. Though the placket on VPE is narrower than Flex Base, the "CiNCy" lettering does not look like it was reduced in size very much, if at all, and it still breaks over the placket in much the same way. Despite the intricacies of the "neon shadow" back numbers, the Reds use perforated twill on these jerseys. Sleeve-end trim appears to still be sewn onto the jersey rather than into the sleeve hem, perhaps because of its width. The most significant change is, ironically, the least visible from the field. The heat pressed "CINCINNATI REDS" and "Juncta Juvant" slogans have switched places on the jersey - likely because the buckeye leaf graphic would no longer fit on the inside of the narrower VPE collar. Carryover City Connect jerseys are not updated in 2025, despite the updates to the team's other jerseys for the 2025 season. The 2025 version has the Pete Rose "14" memorial patch above the sponsor patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Home

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. The 2025 version has the Pete Rose "14" memorial patch above the sponsor patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Road

The 2025 season brings many changes to road gray jerseys across MLB. The 2024 VPE gray jerseys suffered from significant sweat-staining issues during games, so 2025 gray jerseys revert back to the same base fabric used for Flex Base, but applied to the VPE template (no mesh side panels or “Air Belt” back panel). Other pre-2024 elements return, including neck and sleeve trim being sewn on to jerseys again rather than sewn in. The redundant, jersey-colored band of trim around the neck opening is also deleted. Back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. VPE’s placket remains narrow, so the “Cincinnati” wordmark breaks in the same place as in 2024. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. The 2025 version has the Pete Rose “14” memorial patch above the sponsor patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Red

The 2025 season brings minor modifications to elements of the VPE template across all teams' non-gray jerseys, a step toward more comprehensive changes to come for the 2026 season. Among them, back name and numbers are enlarged, in most cases, back to 2023 sizes, and perforated numbers are gone. Sleeve patches also revert to full embroidery, back from printed or lightweight embroidered patches. The 2025 version has the Pete Rose "14" memorial patch above the sponsor patch. The alternate jersey is worn both at home and on the road.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Alternate Home

The Reds introduce a new alternate in 2025, a stripped-down version of their existing home jersey. The base of the jersey is white, with the “wishbone-C” logo on left chest in red/black 3D drop shadow. Red trim encircles each sleeve end, and the Mr. Red Head patch appears on the sleeve with a sponsor patch on the opposite sleeve. The jersey lacks front numbers, and the back is identical to the home jersey, with player names and numbers in red/white/black 3D drop shadow. As of press time, the team has worn it only once, in its annual pre-season game against the team’s top prospects. For that game, there are no player names on back. Refer to the illustration from the MLB Style Guide to see how these are intended to appear in the regular season. For 2025, it is likely this style will also have the Pete Rose “14” memorial patch if used in the regular season. The jersey is built on Nike’s VPE template, but according to the style guide, will have larger player names and numbers than the 2024 version of the template.

Left: The entry for this jersey in the MLB Style Guide, showing how it is intended to look in the regular season.

© GameWornGuides.com

Batting Practice and Spring Training Jerseys

Pre-1982 Batting Practice

Robert Eden photo

Robert Eden photo

Dr. Zaius photo

Robert Eden photo

These mesh pullover screen printed jerseys found for sale at different times on eBay by different private sellers. Two claimed that their jerseys were from 1973; one simply said “early 1970s Spring Training jersey.”

Careful examination shows that all three jerseys have differences that can help place them.

They are all made by Wilson, but the style of the neck tag helps frame their age. The top jersey (#21) and the middle jersey (#18) sport a 1978-1985 Wilson tag style. The Wilson neck tag on the bottom one dates it from 1975-1977. Notice that the oldest shirt has a different style of back numbers; the top two are the same font.

Not much else is known about these garments, and given the Reds’ great number of similarly named farm teams and instructional camps, these could be from any of them. They could have been used by the MLB club in Spring Training, but I would bet against them ever having been used in the regular season.

© GameWornGuides.com

1982-1992 Batting Practice

Red mesh pullover with red/white sleeve/collar trim. The Reds occasionally wore these BP jerseys as game jerseys on hot summer days. Reds logo has red border in earlier years, white border by early 1986 or 1987. Wilson BPs were the first to use twill, not embroidered wordmark. Reds' MLB BP jerseys do not use numbers on front. Numbers on back only, one color white, Block Bold used 1983-1984, Reds Varsity 1985-1993. Reds BP jerseys sometimes used that season's commemorative sleeve patches, but are untagged as to year and set.

Taller than typical NOB used. Wilson and Rawlings, then later Majestic, all made these pullover BP jerseys for the Reds. Times were simpler then, and multiple vendors supplied the team each year. I do not have a record of who supplied BP jerseys in each year, but it is clear that there were not many consistent rules followed. First, the team crest on the front: each vendor had their own pattern(s) and methods. Majestic jerseys seen on this page used an embroidered crest with skinny letters reminiscent of the game jerseys of the early to mid 1970s. By the late 80s Majestic had the right to embroider its logo on the sleeve ends.

Top left: On the Diaz example (Bo Diaz played for the Reds 1985-1989) this Majestic jersey uses the Rawlings player name/number fonts. Bottom left: The Lane jersey uses a Majestic Varsity house font. Above: While the Jones jersey (above) uses the Goodman font of the mid-80s!

© GameWornGuides.com

1982-1992 Batting Practice, continued

1983

1984

During this 11 year period, Reds mesh pullover BP jerseys were also made by Wilson and Rawlings. Each maker had its own front crest style and player name/number font set.

Wilson jerseys had front crests made of layered and sewn twill.

Rawlings jerseys had front crests of sewn and layered twill, and in 1987 the Rawlings embroidered sleeve-end logo appeared.

1987

*Reds logo has red border in earlier years (top left), white border by early 1986 or 1987 (right).

1988

© GameWornGuides.com

1980s White Mesh Spring Training/Batting Practice

These white mesh jerseys carry a 1986-style Wilson tag. All letters and logos are sewn on, and are likely to have been used in Spring Training. Every example I have seen shows some evidence of color running from being washed in too-hot water, or even washed in chlorine bleach. They all are somewhat blotchy and pink.

© GameWornGuides.com

Mid 1980s-Early 1990s Alternate Batting Practice Zip-Neck

Nearly every team in the majors seems to have had a set of these short-waist, zip-necked alternate batting practice jerseys at some time. Majestic called this style their “Game-warmer," and Pete Rose is shown in 1986 or 1987 wearing one on the field (bottom left). One non-game worn sample jersey shown below has a Diamond Collection patch as was first used in 1992. I have never seen this patch used on anything before except sample Gamewarmers.

© GameWornGuides.com

1993-1998 Batting Practice/1999 Spring Training

Bill Henderson Collection

(Above) 1994 Reds BP features the rare Reds-only 125th Anniversary sleeve patch

1993 example is not team tagged, while the 1995 one is.

Batting practice design switches to button front as part of the team's uniform redesign in 1993. It is plain red, with all sleeve end and collar trim eliminated. Both Russell and Majestic supply BP jerseys. Front crests return to embroidery (right).

These jerseys are also worn in 1999 Spring Training. Numbers on back in nonstandard styles that vary by manufacturer. Reds logo outlined in white. Names on back shrink to normal 3" size Block lettering. Some early examples still use taller letters

© GameWornGuides.com

1999-2002 Red Batting Practice

2002

Red mesh fabric. Black used as a 3D drop shadow on logo and all lettering. Three-color names and numbers white/red/black 3D drop shadow. No nameplates used.

The Reds sewed their game jersey commemorative patches on regular season BP jerseys. Running Mr. Red is sewn on the left sleeve 1999, 2001. Commemorative patches are sewn to the left sleeve 2000, 2002.

Note that these BPs were worn starting with the beginning of the 1999 regular season. In Spring Training 1999 the team wore their 1998 red batting practice jerseys on the prior page.

1999

2000

© GameWornGuides.com

1999-2002 Black Batting Practice

2002

1999

Black mesh fabric button-front design. Three-color names and numbers red/black/white 3D drop shadow; no nameplates.

The Reds sewed their game jersey commemorative patches on regular season BP jerseys. Running Mr. Red is sewn on left sleeve 1999, 2001; commemorative patches are sewn to the left sleeve in 2000, 2002.

Note that these BPs were worn starting with the beginning of the 1999 regular season. In Spring Training 1999 the team wore their 1998 red batting practice jerseys on a prior page.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003-2006 Red Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

- Soft non-mesh fabric, early moisture-wicking type that faded quickly and was highly susceptible to pulls and fabric pilling.
- Note thin black highlight piping on shoulder.
- Three-color name and numbers on back white/red/black 3D drop shadow. All sewn twill lettering; no nameplates used.
- Mr. Red patch on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2003-2006 Black Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

- Soft non-mesh fabric, pre-Cool-Base light-weight moisture-wicking fabric, extremely susceptible to pulls and fading.
- Note red highlight sewn in piping on shoulder seam. Three-color name and numbers on back red/black/white 3D drop shadow. All sewn twill lettering.
- No nameplates used.
- Running Mr. Red patch on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2007-2010 Batting Practice

Red batting practice jerseys are the only option in 2007. The black version is eliminated for the first time since 1999. The Reds' 2007 batting practice jersey is made from the new lightweight Cool Base fabric, and features a one-button neck and contrasting white and black side panel inserts.

The REDS logo is a heat-pressed appliqué on the front left chest. No numbers on the jersey front.

Back name and number are in the Reds' new custom Gaslight font, also heat applied and rendered in three colors white/red/black 3D drop shadow.

The red jersey fabric was susceptible to fading from the sun and in washing, and many jerseys in the hobby are badly faded like the one shown here (bottom right).

© GameWornGuides.com

2011-2013 Batting Practice

MLB redesigned all team batting practice jerseys for 2011, changing them to a button-front design from the earlier two-button-neck Henley design.

All the rest of the teams made the switch with little fanfare -- maybe changing trim or side panel colors at most –- but the Reds were the only team that offered a brand-new design for 2011.

A new "Reds" script with underline was introduced, white with a black drop shadow on a background of red.

Or was it new after all? Hardly. It was being reintroduced for its 75th anniversary. Pictured here is the Reds' 1936-1937 alternate home uniform, sometimes called the "Palm Beach" uniform as it could be worn with red pants!

Original 1936

Above right: an original 1936 Reds alternate white jersey, yellowed by the years. Right: The Reds' fashion lineup for 1936, including the "Palm Beach" uniform with the red pants. (Marc Okkonen graphic).

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2016 Red Batting Practice

The all-MLB redesign of team batting practice jerseys for 2013 barely impacts the Reds. The changes from 2013 are smaller black side panels, and black-striped knit trim at the sleeve ends and around the collar. All back lettering continues in three colors, in the same font as game uniforms.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014-2016 Black Batting Practice

For the first time since 2006, the Reds add an alternate black batting practice jersey, which is generally worn on the road with gray pants. It features red panels under the arms, and white lettering outlined with black and a red 3D drop shadow. Knit sleeve-end and collar trim is black striped with red.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's new for 2016 Spring Training jerseys in Chapter 8.

2016 Spring Training

2016: For the first time, MLB introduces a Spring Training-specific jersey intended to be worn for workouts and games in the preseason. The jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features a special printed twill, decorated with "2016" and Spring Training symbols, as the main twill layer for every team. The Reds use their regular season red alternate as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill/red/black 3D drop shadow. Front numbers are the standard white/red/black 3D drop shadow. The jersey also features a rubberized CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate Highway sign, reading "2016" and "AZ" representing where the Reds spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2019 Batting Practice

With many players opting for lightweight cage jackets, which are devoid of player identification, instead of traditional BP jerseys with player names and numbers, Majestic introduces a replacement product that may be an attempt to gain acceptance by the pros on field while being more attractive to fans at retail. New for 2017, official team batting practice jerseys are replaced with what Majestic calls a 3/4 Sleeve BP Trainer. The new hybrid is cut in a pullover jacket silhouette, including a short zipper at the neck, but made of Cool Base jersey material. The underarm and back panels are of Cool Base mesh, like the sides and tail of Flex Base jerseys. Player names and numbers are in what Majestic calls “lightweight twill” (as described in Chapter 8). The Majestic logo is applied to the middle of the left sleeve, and a new, heat-pressed Cool Base tag adorns the left front tail. The Reds’ jersey is red, with black back and underarm gussets. The "REDS" in wishbone-C logo, also seen on their regular jerseys, appears here on the front left chest in white with black drop shadow. The back of the jersey is blank. Player number in white/red/black 3D drop shadow in the Reds' special font on the left sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Spring Training

Spring Training-only jerseys return for all teams in 2017, with some minor design modifications. Just as in 2016, the jersey is based on the Flex Base game jersey template and features special printed twill, this year decorated with “2017” and Spring Training symbols. However, all teams now use the same twill, in single-color white with gray printing, replacing the many team-specific combinations from the year before.

The Reds again use their regular season red alternate as a basis for their Spring Training jersey. The name and back numbers are white patterned twill. Front numbers are the standard white/red/black 3D drop shadow, as is used in the regular season. The jersey features a recolored version of the rubberized CFX patch on the right sleeve in the style of an Interstate Highway sign, reading “2017” and “AZ” representing where the Reds spend Spring Training.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Spring Training

The 2018 Spring Training jerseys continue the general design of the previous year, again featuring all player name and number lettering using each team's regular fonts in one layer of twill printed with special Spring Training and 2018-year-specific patterns. The Reds use their regular-season red alternate as their base.

The name and back numbers are sewn on in white patterned twill. Front numbers are the standard white/red/black 3D drop shadow, as is used in the regular season. A new CFX patch, shaped like home plate, is stitched to the right sleeve, featuring "2018" and "AZ" representing their Spring Training home.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Spring Training

The 2019 Spring Training jersey evolves to create yet another iteration of the theme of the last three years. This time, jersey backs abandon the single-color printed twill treatment of the past and return to regular season multi-layered team-color twill like 2016, yet without 2016's printed patterns.

The Reds use a brand-new, one-year-only design, separate from their regular-season standard set, featuring a Gothic "C" in celebration of the 150th anniversary of the 1869 Red Stockings. There is a new CFX patch on the right sleeve, featuring "2019" and "ARZ," referencing their Spring Training home. The name and front and back numbers are white/red/black 3D drop shadow.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020-2023 Spring Training

Spring Training is simplified for 2020, league-wide. For the first time since 2016, Spring Training jerseys eliminate the special sleeve patch indicating the year and location of a team's Spring Training home, and now the lettering is the same non-patterned, multi-layered twill as the teams would wear in the regular season, making many teams' spring jerseys identical to their regular-season alternates. For 2020, the Reds use another brand-new design, separate from their regular-season standard set, featuring Mr. Red on the front left chest, with white/red/black 3D drop shadow name and front and back numbers. It is also worn in a regular season game, April 8, 2022 at Atlanta.

For the 2024 season, it is elevated to full regular season alternate status and appears in the team's official MLB style guide, though the team never wears it in a regular season game.

© GameWornGuides.com

Special Events Jerseys

1978 St. Patrick's Day

Yanks at Lang today; Greens—er, Reds—Sunday

Compiled from staff, wire reports

The New York Yankees will pay their only visit of the year to their one time spring stomping grounds today, visiting Al Lang Stadium for a 1:30 game against the New York Mets.

The Yankees, who trained in St. Petersburg from 1925-61, will start veteran Dick Tidrow on the mound this afternoon. The Mets are expected to pitch Craig Swan, Bill Greif and Kevin Kobel.

The Cincinnati Reds will follow the Yankees to town, showing up Sunday for another 1:30 game with the Mets.

Friday at Tampa's Al Lopez Field, meanwhile, the Reds were up to some new tricks in their game against the Yankees. The Reds played green for a day, sporting specially made St. Patrick's Day uniforms. They came out for batting practice in their traditional red-and-white outfits, but then disappeared into the dressing room.

When they re-emerged, they were resplendent in white uniforms with green hats and green piping. In addition, the uniforms bore shamrocks on the sleeves, much to the delight of the capacity crowd, which was outfitted in green derbys.

"I feel like I've just been traded," said pitcher Tom Seaver, looking as strange in his greenery as he had looked last summer when he first pulled on a Reds' uniform after wearing New York Met pinstripes for the previous decade.

According to a Reds' spokesman, the green uniforms were to be put back in storage after the game but would be used again for future St. Patrick's Day games.

Fifty-three of the uniforms were made at a reported cost of $104 a piece.

Green St Patty's Day jerseys: The Reds are credited with being the originators of this trend, starting with this game in 1978. The REDS logo is multi-layered tackle twill, and all knit trim is green and white.

The Article, "How St. Patrick's Became Baseball's Holiday" by Tom Singer highlights the role the Reds had in establishing this tradition and can be found in the "Special Event Jerseys" chapter of this book.

© GameWornGuides.com

1979-1980 St. Patrick's Day

Above: NOB is misspelled: Dave Van Gorder was supposed to be Bench's successor,but tore up a knee and, well, "that was that".

Robert Eden Collection

On all these examples, the REDS logo is multi-layered tackle twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

1981-1982 St. Patrick's Day

1981 year-tagging is sewn inside the front tail; 1982 tagging is sewn on the outside of the tail.

Published in past editions as a possible uncatalogued road version, we have learned this is an artist's rendering, and is not real.

These 1981 and 1982 Rawlings St. Patrick's Day uniforms are essentially the same, with the exception of the location of the Rawlings jock tag. Wordmark front crest is sewn twill instead of embroidery. With the cost of creating complete new sets of uniforms for a team, especially with the large roster in Spring Training, we can confirm that returning players would wear the same St. Pat's uniforms as the previous year - with the team ordering new ones only for new players.

© GameWornGuides.com

1991 Turn Back the Clock to 1957-1960

June 16, 1991: The Reds played the Phillies at Philadelphia, and wore Rawlings double knit recreations of their 1957-1960 road vests.

Below: Original 1957 road vest made by MacGregor for comparison. Original numbers were a form of Varsity rarely seen after 1970. The A's used it on some jerseys in the early 1970s and these Turn Back the Clock jerseys do their best to reproduce it.

Original 1957 game worn jersey

© GameWornGuides.com

1992 Turn Back the Clock to 1962

AP photo

Cincinnati's Chris Sabo (left) has his 1962-style uniform checked out by teammate Rick Wrona before Sunday's game against the New York Mets at Shea Stadium. Both teams wore old-style uniforms to celebrate Nostalgia Night.

(Above) The two different jerseys shown here that were worn in this game feature slightly different tagging, more elaborate than we saw in later years when these games became commonplace. (Below) Original 1962 Reds jersey for a side-by-side comparison with the replicas.

August 30, 1992: Before they were called Turn Back the Clock games, the Reds participated in a 1962 "Nostalgia Game" against the 1962-attired New York Mets at Shea Stadium in New York, reprising the 30th anniversary of the Mets' inaugural season. These Rawlings replicas are made from double knit, and are not very faithful to originals (bottom right).

This game was quite an anticipated event (it also happened to be televised nationally on cable). It was one of the first Turn Back the Clock games in baseball, though the Reds and Phillies had such a game the previous year. I remember it being really hyped and covered in the news at the time, as the concept had not been used much, and had never been tried in New York.

© GameWornGuides.com

1993 Turn Back the Clock to 1925

Courtesy Jared Wheeler, Mitchell & Ness

July 11,1993: The Reds wore Mitchell & Ness poly-knit reproductions of their 1925 uniforms, with felt lettering and patches. The sleeve patch features chain stitching. They played the Pittsburgh Pirates, who also wore 1925-style uniforms.

Numbers on back were used on these uniforms, even though the originals would have had none.

© GameWornGuides.com

1998 Negro Leagues Tribute (1942 Cincinnati Buckeyes)

Steve Kraljic Collection

June 27,1998: TBTC uniforms in knit, representing the 1942 Cincinnati Buckeyes. Uniforms manufactured by AIS. Opponents were the Detroit Tigers, who dressed as the 1920 Detroit Stars. These jerseys were unusually baggy.

© GameWornGuides.com

2000 Turn Back the Clock to 1969

Reds Mitchell & Ness flannel reproduction of the 1969 Reds road uniform, complete with the MLB 100th Anniversary sleeve patch, worn against the Mets in New York, April 25, 2000.

Small black tag on tail says "T.B.C. 4-25-2000." This was one of the last Turn Back the Clock games that featured flannel jerseys, as the trend became to use knit replicas instead for player comfort.

Comment on originality: Original flannel Reds jerseys are shown at right. Mitchell & Ness is usually accurate in its historical depictions, especially of the earlier flannel styles. These replicas are reasonably good, but we will note that the reproduction's front wordmark is slightly less bold than the original. The numbers should be Block Bold and they are Block regular. Back numbers on the reproduction are an inch too tall, and the player names on back are noticeably smaller than the originals.

1970 original, for comparison

© GameWornGuides.com

2000 Turn Back the Clock to 1975

Steve Kraljic Collection

June 3, 2000: Turn Back the Clock home jersey copy of the double knit 1975 home uniform. Jersey is made by Mitchell & Ness. A red tag on tail features the date of the game – "T.B.C. 6-3-2000". The opponent that day was the Minnesota Twins, who wore their regular road uniforms.

These used 8" numbers when originals were 7"; NOB is too narrow and too short compared to originals.

Original 1975 among the replicas, shows correct sized NOB

© GameWornGuides.com

2001 Turn Back the Clock to 1971

Original 1971

June 6, 2001: The Reds visited the Brewers for a Turn Back the Clock to 1971 game. Russell was the Reds' uniform supplier in 2002, and they must have passed up the opportunity to make these TBTC jerseys, and Rawlings picked up opportunity to make them. The 1971 vintage replica uniforms for the game are reasonably accurate, though the front wordmark is too tall and light in stroke, more closely resembling the font used on period team jackets. The only photos I have (so far) are here. Player names on back are missing; they should be there.

© GameWornGuides.com

2002 Turn Back the Clock to the 1970s

Robert Eden collection

Hudson, Reds hot

Reliever's role key in debut: 7-5 over Astros

Reds 7, Astros 5

Today: Reds vs. Houston, 7:10 p.m., Cinergy Field
Radio: WLW-AM (700)
Pitchers: Reds' Joey Hamilton (3-5, 4.66 ERA) vs. Wade Miller (3-3, 5.58)
Inside: Reds, baseball notes, D5

By John Fay
The Cincinnati Enquirer

It looked like it was going to be a nice and easy win for the Reds Monday night. It wasn't.

But that's not necessarily a bad thing. The Reds did, after all, hang on to beat the Houston Astros 7-5 before a crowd of 32,233 at Cinergy Field.

And they may have discovered a key to the future in so doing.

Luke Hudson, making his major-league debut, shut down a Houston comeback with a perfect inning of relief.

"That was nice to see," Reds manager Bob Boone said. "We needed it. A great job, a great way to start a career. Our bullpen is pretty beat up. He better be ready to go again (tonight)."

Hudson pitched the eighth after the Astros had scored three in the seventh to close it to a two-run game.

"That's not what I expected," said Hudson, who was called up from Louisville Friday. "A close game. We're tied for first place."

Hudson, 25-year-old right-hander obtained from Colorado in the Pokey Reese trade, has great stuff. But it can be hard to tame. His first pitch crossed the plate about seven feet above the ground and went to the backstop.

"That first pitch was awesome," said Danny Graves, who closed it for his 25th save. "He settled down and showed some nasty stuff. My knees buckled on his first curveball."

The victory kept the Reds in a tie with the St. Louis Cardinals for first place in the National League Central. It was the Reds' third straight win and sixth in seven games.

The fans have taken notice. The Reds sold 13,000 after 9 a.m., including 8,600 walk-up tickets after 5:40 p.m. The fact that was turn-back-the-

See REDS, Page D5

The Cincinnati Enquirer/BRANDI STAFFORD
Barry Larkin turns a double play Monday against Houston as Jose Vizcaino slides into second base.

NL/D4
Philadelphia 6, N.Y. Mets 3
Milwaukee 2, Pittsburgh 0
Atlanta 7, Montreal 5
St Louis 7, San Diego 3
Florida 11, Chicago Cubs 1
San Francisco at Colorado n
Los Angeles at Arizona n

AL/D4
Boston 4, Toronto 0
Minnesota at Oakland n
Kansas City at Seattle n

Baseball | Reds, Cardinals win

The Cincinnati Enquirer/BRANDI STAFFORD
Aaron Boone is congratulated by teammates Monday after scoring in the first inning against Houston.

July 1, 2002: The Reds turned back the clock to the 1970s to play the Houston Astros. Both teams wore recreations of 1970s uniforms. The visiting Astros identified their jersey as a 1970 model; the Reds sported the style of jersey they wore 1972-1984. This was Majestic's first shot at making Reds TBTC jerseys, and while they looked pretty good to an uneducated, non-detail-obsessed observer, the player name and number fonts and lettering sizes are inaccurate for any year that this jersey style was worn.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Turn Back the Clock to 1975

Reds joined the Indians in TBTC fun during a June 11, 2004 interleague game in Cleveland.

These uniforms are made by Majestic.

My comments: front wordmark and front numbers too thin, back numbers too large and not bold enough, 3"names too small to be authentic, as the originals were 4." Yes, these are minor details maybe, but it would have been so easy to get it perfect.

Original 1975, quite likely the same jersey in the photo at right

(Left) George Foster models the skintight style worn by the 1975 Reds. (Above, Right) Game photos from this contest show the players wore the 2004 oversized look instead.

© GameWornGuides.com

2004 Turn Back the Clock to 1979

The Pittsburgh Pirates hosted a Turn Back the Clock weekend in Pittsburgh July 23-25, 2004, with the Reds as their opponent. Both teams wore 1979-era replica uniforms for all three games. The Reds dressed in replica 1979 road grays.

Press Release 07/22/2004
Pirates "turn back the clock" this weekend at PNC Park
"Skyblast," "Fam-A-Lee" Reunion and kids' giveaway highlight Reds series

The Pittsburgh Pirates play host to the Cincinnati Reds this weekend at PNC Park. Among the festivities included for the weekend is the team's annual "Skyblast" show, a celebration of the 1979 World Series Champion Pirates and promotional giveaways of a Willie Stargell Figurine and a Pirates Kids Alarm Clock. In addition, the Pirates and the Reds will be wearing replica uniforms from the 1979 season throughout the weekend.

Prior to the Pirates tilt with the Reds on Saturday, July 24 at 7:05 pm, fans will have an opportunity to meet former members of the 1979 World Series Champion Pirates. From 4:306:00 pm on Federal Street, fans can meet and receive free autographs from Pirates alumni such as Dave Parker, Bill Madlock, Grant Jackson, Rennie Stennett, Chuck Tanner and many others. There will be a special "We Are Fam-A-Lee" reunion as part of a pregame ceremony hosted by "Voice of the Pirates" Lanny Frattare. Margaret Stargell will toss out one of the evening's honorary first pitches. To cap off the festivities, all fans will receive a Willie Stargell Figurine upon entering the ballpark, presented by Fox Sports Net.

© GameWornGuides.com

2008 Armed Forces Salute

July 6, 2008: The Reds wore mesh camouflage jerseys as a salute to the nation's Armed Forces. Game photos show that they also wore the 2008 commemorative "NUXY" patch on the sleeve of this one-day jersey, just above the American flag on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Civil Rights Game (1964 Home)

Steve Kraljic Collection

Original 1964

June 20, 2009: The 2009 Civil Rights game was the first one played as a regular season Interleague contest. It was held in Cincinnati between the Reds and the Chicago White Sox. Both teams wore 1964-style uniforms made by Majestic in double knit. The Reds 1964 vests have the odd period-correct feature of player names sewn below the numbers. All Reds lettering in two color red/black numbers and NOB in Block Bold. Original jerseys used navy, not black. Fonts are “close” but not correct. A Civil Rights Game patch is sewn between the back number and the top of the collar. This patch is approximately six inches wide - larger than the previous years’ patches.

© GameWornGuides.com

2009 Turn Back the Clock to 1979

August 21-22, 2009: In Pittsburgh, celebrating the 30th anniversary of the Pirates' last World Championship, the Reds recreated their 1979 N.L. Championship Series uniforms, made by Majestic

As in my earlier comments, name and numbers are in the wrong font and the wrong sizes. So easy to get it right, and it is wrong.

Your author attended this game in Pittsburgh and cringed at the lack of accuracy in both design and fit.

© GameWornGuides.com

2010 Civil Rights Game (1954 Home)

Steve Kraljic Collection

May 15, 2010: For the Civil Rights Game, the Reds and St. Louis Cardinals wore replicas of their uniforms from 1954 -- the year in which both teams fielded their first African American players. The Majestic Reds uniforms are white, with Wilson Varsity numbers on back in red, outlined with black. Civil Rights Game logo patch sewn to the left sleeve. As you can see from the photo at right, these are good reproductions.

Original 1954

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Negro Leagues Tribute (1930s Cincinnati Tigers)

These uniforms look remarkably like real flannel, and I believed they were until this photo was posted on Uni-Watch site www.uni-watch.com identified them as a special type of knit fabric used by AIS that is designed to look just like flannel, even up close!

- July 9, 2011: The Reds and the Brewers wear Negro League throwbacks made by AIS. The Reds represent the 1930s Cincinnati Tigers, and the uniforms look remarkably like flannel, even up close.
- Inspection reveals that they are indeed knit fabric, but made to look convincingly like old wool flannel. They even “look” itchy!
- Numbers on back are in a font that is close to, but not identical to, the one the White Sox used 1976-1981. “Cincinnati” on the front looks similar to the Reds’ current uniforms.

© GameWornGuides.com

2011 Turn Back the Clock to 1944

June 15, 2011: The Reds visited the Dodgers in a Turn Back the Clock game to 1944. The Reds' gray knit uniforms were made by Majestic, and were nearly exact copies of the Reds' period uniforms. Photos of original jerseys show that the Block back numbers are close to the original font – but not exact replicas.

(Above) Original 1942 road jersey.*
(Left) nearly identical 1947 road jersey.*

© GameWornGuides.com

2012 Turn Back the Clock to 1991

August 22, 2012: The Phillies Invited the Reds to a throwback game at Citizens Bank Park in Philadelphia, where the teams wore circa 1991 uniforms. The Reds' Majestic uniforms were "pretty close" to the originals. Impressive that a font close to the actual Block variant used by the 1991 Reds was used, instead of a standard one (as is often done when teams used unique fonts; something "close" is often chosen off the shelf) though player name and number were a little smaller than the originals. As is usually our lament, everything was worn too loose, with sleeves too long compared to that earlier time. In short, the uniforms looked nearly the same, but fit so differently as to seem completely different from the originals they were meant to recreate.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 Memorial Day

Read the full story on MLB's Memorial Day jerseys in Chapter 5.

May 27, 2013: Participating in this all-MLB event, the Reds played the Indians at home and modified their uniforms to incorporate desert camouflage into all lettering and wordmarks. Of all the teams in baseball, the Reds' pulled off the stunt among the best, with the usually hard-to-see camouflage (imagine that) accented with outlines and black drop shadows.

© GameWornGuides.com

2013 Negro Leagues Tribute (1930s Cincinnati Tigers)

June 1, 2013: In Pittsburgh, the Reds wore the same amazingly convincing, flannel-appearing 1930s Cincinnati Tigers uniforms as they had in a tribute game in 2011. AIS again made the suits, using a fabric that is almost indistinguishable in color and texture -- at least from a distance -- from wool flannel. Fancy Red Sox-style wordmark using the traditional lettering font known as Tuscan, and back numbers in a font closely resembling the numbers used by the 1976-1981 White Sox, all in red outlined with black.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 Memorial Day

May 26, 2014: For the Memorial Day contest in Los Angeles against the Dodgers, the Reds took part in the MLB-wide military tribute event by adding camouflage lettering to their road gray uniforms, with results that were less successful than their efforts in 2013. The combination of camo twill on gray fabric is hard to see, though the presence of white outlining and black drop shadowing around all lettering made it somewhat less invisible.

© GameWornGuides.com

2014 St. Patrick's Day/2014-2015 Irish Heritage

March 17 and September 5, 2014 ; June 19, 2015: The team that pioneered the green-trimmed jersey for St. Patrick's Day brings them back in 2014 after a 31-year absence. They liked them so much, they used them again for their Irish Heritage Celebration toward the end of that season. Then, for some reason, they skip St. Patrick's Day in 2015, only to bring them back for the Irish celebration that June. The jerseys are the home batting practice jersey design and weight, with all red jersey fabric replaced with white, and the black supplanted by green, including side panels and knit trim. Mr. Red is dispatched from the left sleeve in favor of a large green shamrock. Front lettering is green/black 3D drop shadow; back lettering is green/white/black 3D drop shadow. Worn with red helmets, undershirts and other accessories, the Reds looked to be celebrating Christmas in the summertime.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Turn Back the Clock to 1990

April 24, 2015: In honor of the 25th anniversary of their 1990 World Series Championship team, the Reds throw back to that year in a home game against the Cubs, who wear their 1990 roads. The Majestic knit pullovers are striking in their accuracy to the originals, featuring back and front red/white numbers in Reds Varsity, and the names on back in larger red/white Block. Front logo is properly represented in twill. If there is one minor nit to pick, it is that the neck trim and shape are a little off, and the MLB logo on the back neck was, of course, not there in 1990. Otherwise, an impressive job to honor this anniversary.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Memorial Day

May 25, 2015: Three seasons, three different Memorial Day jerseys for the Reds. For 2015, the team selects its red alternate jersey for the camo treatment. Here the top layer of twill, usually white, is replaced with the desert camo; the red/black 3D drop shadow layers remain the same. The back numbers are fairly legible against the red background, especially with the drop shadow to help. But on smaller elements, such as player names, front numbers, and especially the REDS text in the front logo, much of the detail disappears, as is the purpose of camouflage. The right sleeve features the 2015 All-Star Game patch. In 2015, the MLB Silhouetted Batter neck tag is changed to dark green/khaki/white.

© GameWornGuides.com

2015 Independence Day

Read the full story on MLB's Independence Day jerseys in Chapter 5.

For Independence Day 2015, all 29 U.S.-based teams adopt patriotic "Stars and Stripes" uniforms for the first time. For this day, all uniforms are lettered in a combination of red, white, and blue, regardless of the team's normal color palette. Jersey trim and patches remain the same as the team's regular jerseys. All teams sport a stars and stripes version of the MLB Silhouetted Batter logo on the back collar. The Reds wear their home white jerseys with the red-background version of the starred twill, which features large white stars; all lettering outlined in blue, including their front logo as well as front and back numbers. On the front logo, the wishbone-C and the REDS text is red starred twill with a white drop shadow, all on a blue oval field. This setup makes the Reds one of a few teams (along with the Cubs and Marlins) to have more than two colors on their front logo for this promotion. Player names on back are in blue. An American flag patch is sewn on the right sleeve.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2017 St. Patrick's Day/Irish Heritage

Jeff Jensen Collection

The Reds go all-in on green for St. Patrick's Day in 2016 and 2017, and for their Irish heritage celebration on September 18, 2016 and September 23, 2017. This Flex Base jersey is in solid green, with front logo and back numbers in white/gray and player name in white -- all in the Reds' special font. The layer of gray is thin and light enough that it disappears from a distance. The right sleeve sports a white shamrock -- a feature shared by many teams for the 2016-2017 St. Patrick's Day promotion. Contrary to his name, Mr. Red appears on the left sleeve in shades of gray and white, while white knit trim encircles both sleeves.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Mother's Day

Read the full story on MLB's Mother's Day jerseys in Chapter 5.

Jeff Jensen Collection

Sunday, May 8: All teams wear special pink-trimmed uniforms for the first time on Mother's Day. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction, with the rubberized tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Mother's Days). The Majestic sleeve logo is rendered in pink, and the back of the collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark pink/light pink/white. The Reds wear their home white jerseys with the front logo REDS lettering and wishbone-C in pink with a white 3D drop shadow over a dark-gray oval field. They are one of a few teams (with the Cubs and Marlins) to have more than two colors on their front logo for this promotion, which helps to increase legibility of the logo's small details. The player names on back are rendered in single-color (dark gray); front and back numbers are pink/dark gray, losing their usual 3D drop shadow. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of pink, gray, and white. All jersey trim, normally red, becomes dark gray. No Bernie Stowe memorial patch on this jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Memorial Day

Jeff Jensen Collection

May 30, 2016: The 2016 Memorial Day jerseys are constructed in the Flex Base style for the first time, and the ChromaFlex MLB logo at back neck becomes black and dark gold for all teams. The new, league-wide template, with higher-visibility woodland camo lettering and black outlines, makes this set more legible than in prior years. The Reds apply the camouflage trimmings to their road gray jerseys for the game. The typically three-color front lettering and front and back numbers lose the drop shadow and are rendered in woodland camo with a black outline,. Player names appear in single-color black. Like other teams, their sleeve patches are reduced to shades of green, gray, and black, and trim elements are also simplified to single-color black from red/white/red. The Reds do not wear the Bernie Stowe memorial patch on this jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

Read the full story on MLB's Father's Day jerseys in Chapter 5.

2016 Father's Day

Jeff Jensen Collection

Sunday, June 19: For the first time, all teams wear special light blue-trimmed uniforms for Father's Day. All jerseys are of Flex Base construction, with the rubberized front tag applied to the front left tail. Every team also features the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon on left chest (a carryover from past Father's Days). The back-of-the-collar MLB Silhouetted Batter patch appears in dark royal/light blue/white. The Reds wear their road gray jerseys with the typically three-color front lettering and front and back numbers losing the drop shadow, here rendered in light blue with dark gray outlines. The player names on back are single-color dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of light blue, gray, and white. All jersey trim, normally black, becomes dark gray. The Reds do not wear the Bernie Stowe memorial patch on this jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Turn Back the Clock to 1976 (Pete Rose Tribute)

June 24, 2016: The Reds retired Pete Rose's #14 in 2016, and as part of the weekend-long celebration, held a 40th anniversary of the World Series-winning 1976 team. For the game, the Reds wore these Majestic knit pullovers that are not particularly faithful to the originals. The 1976 version had a chain stitched front logo; here it is twill. Front and back numbers were originally Block Bold; here they are regular Block. The tall block player names are fairly close to the 1976 jerseys, and the 1976 NL Centennial patch on the right sleeve is appropriate for the year.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Independence Day

Jeff Jensen Collection

MLB creates yet another new Independence Day jersey template for the 2016 iteration, built on Majestic's new Flex Base jersey construction. Each Independence Day jersey has a ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB appliqué sewn on the back of the neck. The Reds are on the road, and wear their alternate red jerseys. All clubs have a choice of two styles of star-spangled lettering twill and the Reds select the blue twill version with gray outlines to replace their normally three-color front lettering and front and back numbers (drop shadows are removed here), with a gray player name on back. For some reason, the logo patch on the front of the jersey uses the blue stars twill for the "wishbone C" logo on a gray oval with the "Reds" text in white. The background field of this patch is typically red, matching the jersey, so the choice of gray makes the logo look strange, especially considering that red is one of the primary colors for the event. It also makes the REDS text much harder to read, especially from a distance. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. New for 2016, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue, replacing team colors. All jersey trim, normally black, becomes single-color blue. The Reds do not wear the Bernie Stowe memorial patch on this jersey.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Turn Back the Clock to 1916

Jeff Jensen Collection

July 6, 2016: Based on their status as descendants of the first professional baseball team, the Reds have no lack of jerseys to throw back to – almost 150 years' worth. For this road game, they turn back the clock farther than ever before: to 1916, against the similarly attired Cubs. The occasion marked the 100th anniversary of the Cubs' first game at Wrigley, which was also against the Reds. The pinstriped, half-button Majestic knit jerseys have the "REDS in wishbone-C" logo, which debuted in 1913, in all red on front, with a fancy, old-fashioned red number on back. Player numbers were not worn in 1916. The jerseys also have a cadet collar -- a common feature for the early 1900s.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016 Turn Back the Clock to 1999-2006 (Ken Griffey Tribute)

Jeff Jensen Collection

July 20, 2016: The Reds recognized Ken Griffey Jr.'s enshrinement in the Baseball Hall of Fame with a Turn Back the Clock game against the visiting Braves, who wore 1969 throwbacks. The team did not establish a specific year for the throwback, calling them merely "Ken Griffey Era." Nevertheless, they match the Reds' 1999-2006 home vest, and duplicate them perfectly -- as well they should. These knit vests were made by Majestic for this game, and for the final two years of their run (2005-2006). Name and numbers are three-color red/white/black 3D drop shadow with no nameplates.

© GameWornGuides.com

2016-2017 Negro Leagues Tribute (1937 Cincinnati Tigers)

September 9, 2016 and August 12, 2017: This Reds' entry honors the 1937 Cincinnati Tigers. The gray Majestic knit jersey features "Cincinnati" in Tuscan font, similar to the Red Sox and Mets, in red/navy on front. Player numbers appear in a fancy display font in red/navy on back. Neck and sleeves are lined with navy/red/navy braid. The uniforms look strikingly similar to the Reds' own 1935 uniforms – because they are. The Tigers wore hand-me-down uniforms from the Reds during their short, four-season history. After a style change in 1936, the Reds went back to this road jersey in 1937, matching the Tigers that year.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Mother's Day

Pink-trimmed Mother's Day jerseys return on May 13-14, 2017. Once again, the Flex Base jerseys have the usual front left tail Majestic heat applied vinyl locker tag and team inventory tag inside the bottom of the placket. Returning as well is the pink MLB Mother's Day ribbon glued on left chest; the pink Majestic sleeve logo; and the dark pink/light pink/white ChromaFlex MLB Silhouetted Batter applique stitched on the back of the collar. All multi-colored lettering is done in the lightweight-twill style. The Reds wear their road gray jerseys with the front logo lettering in pink/dark gray. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while front and back numbers are pink/dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of pink, gray, and white. All jersey trim, normally red/white/red, becomes dark gray.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Memorial Day

The next incarnation of Memorial Day jerseys replaces the previous camo twill pattern with a new style that uses the team fonts in dark olive green with black outlines. The two adjacent dark colors are very difficult to tell apart, especially at a distance. All player names on back are now single-color black, while the back-of-collar MLB logo and team patches switch to an olive green and black treatment. A green bar patch with five black stars, representing the five branches of the U.S. military, appears on the right sleeve, and all trim elements are also simplified to single-color black. The Reds apply this style to their road gray jerseys as worn on May 27-29, 2017 and May 26-28, 2018.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Father's Day

Light blue-trimmed Father's Day jerseys return for the Reds on June 18, 2017. Once again, the Flex Base jerseys have the usual front left tail Majestic tagging and set tagging at the inside bottom of the placket. Returning as well is the light blue MLB Father's Day ribbon glued on left chest, the light blue Majestic embroidered sleeve logo, and the dark royal blue/light blue/white back collar ChromaFlex MLB Silhouetted Batter patch. The Reds wear home white with the front logo lettering in light blue/dark gray. The player names on back are rendered in single-color dark gray, while front and back numbers are light blue/dark gray. All jersey trim, normally red becomes dark gray. The team's sleeve patches are also simplified to shades of light blue, gray, and white. Other teams also wore Father's Day jerseys on June 17, 2017, but that day, the Reds wore their home whites with a patch honoring the dedication of a Pete Rose statue at their ballpark instead.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017-2018 Independence Day (Home)

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two color options for the new twill – appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 1-2, 2017 and July 2-4, 2018, the Reds wear their home white jersey with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and front and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color blue. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue. All jersey trim is single-color red.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Independence Day (Road)

The 2017 version of MLB's Independence Day jerseys introduces a new patterned twill, one with a slightly less busy pattern of stars and the addition of stripes suggesting a waving American flag. Teams again have a choice of two color options for the new twill – appropriately in red/blue or blue/red. The jerseys themselves are again Flex Base with typical manufacturer and set tagging. A ChromaFlex rubberized "stars and stripes" pattern MLB applique patch is sewn on the back of the neck. On July 3-4, 2017, the Reds wear their road gray jersey with red patterned twill/blue front logo lettering and front and back numbers. Player names on back are in single-color blue. Every jersey has an American flag patch sewn on the right sleeve. Once again, team sleeve patches are embroidered in red, white, and blue. All jersey trim is single-color red.

© GameWornGuides.com

2017 Players Weekend

To highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans, MLB introduces the colorful Players Weekend promotion. In addition to relaxed regulations on team-standard color and design of cleats, bats, and other equipment, MLB encourages players to wear nicknames on the backs of a new set of very colorful jerseys. Meant to evoke the look of youth league designs, the two-toned Cool Base pullovers feature bright and contrasting body and sleeve colors, and include a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people in their lives with handwritten black marker messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature a variant of the MLB logo showing the growth of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat-pressed Majestic manufacturer and set tags are applied on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve. All numbers on back are in single color Varsity, and the player names in 2 ¾" single color Block Condensed, regardless of the team's usual font. On August 25-27, 2017, the Reds wear jerseys with white bodies and red sleeves with red nicknames and numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide red/white/red trim. The front features their script "Reds" lettering with underscore, from their recent BP jerseys, here rendered in red/black 3D drop shadow kiss-cut lightweight twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 St. Patrick's Day

Ironically enough, the Reds pioneered the use of green uniforms on St. Patrick's day, back in 1978. So, to honor the 40th anniversary of the trend that is now a frequent spring training occurrence, the Reds celebrate with this white Flex Base entry for 2018. Green/gray "Reds" script on front and player numbers on back, with player names in solid green. Green knit trim encircles the sleeves just above the ends, and the ubiquitous green shamrock takes residence on the right sleeve. On the left sleeve, a special anniversary patch declaring, "First Team to Wear Green." Green is clearly a point of pride for the Reds.

© GameWornGuides.com

2018 Players Weekend

Players Weekend returns for a second year; a promotion intended to highlight players' personalities and to appeal to younger fans. Brightly-colored jerseys are worn on the field on August 24-26, 2018, and once again, the Cool Base pullover jerseys are based on youth league designs with a patch on the right sleeve with space for players to show their appreciation to special people with handwritten messages. Both the patch, and the back-of-collar logo, feature an adaptation of the MLB logo showing the evolution of a ballplayer from childhood to adulthood. Heat-pressed Majestic and set tags appear on the front left hem, and the Majestic logo is embroidered on the left sleeve.

The Reds wear jerseys with gray bodies and red sleeves with red nicknames and numbers on back. Sleeves and V-neck opening are lined with wide red/white/red trim. The front features their script "Reds" lettering with underscore, from their recent BP jerseys, here rendered in red/black 3D drop shadow kiss-cut twill.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 St. Patrick's Day

The Reds debut a new Spring Training jersey with an Olde English "C" on front for 2019, and their St. Patrick's Day entry for that year mirrors that style. Here on a green Majestic Flex Base jersey, the "C" appears on left chest in white/gray drop shadow, while front and back numbers are white/gray without the drop shadow. Back player names are in white, and a shamrock patch adorns the right sleeve.

An updated version of the prior year's "First Team to Wear Green" patch takes up the left sleeve, honoring the achievement of being first in the green-uniform realm, but not calling out the dates as the previous year's patch did for the anniversary.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 150th Anniversary "Turn Back the Clock" Series

As baseball's oldest still-existing professional team, founded in 1869, the Reds can lay claim to a lot of baseball history. And, to mark their 150th anniversary as a pro team, they embark on the most ambitious throwback program in MLB history with 15 different throwback uniforms, spanning from 1902-1999, worn throughout the season. The variations shown here and detailed in the following pages draw from some of the Reds most memorable recent styles and historic older ones from more than a century ago. Overall, the team's dedication to detail, especially considering today's uniform construction and fabrics combined with the importance of player comfort, highlights this initiative as an achievement in presenting team history through on-field throwback uniforms. There's a fascinating story about how the Reds' clubhouse staff managed the 29 different 2019 uniforms the Reds wore (including these throwbacks) at theathletic.com (the story is paywalled).

Why Start in 1902?

With 150 years of uniform history, why did the Reds choose a uniform 33 years after their founding as the starting point of the throwbacks? According to the team, the 1869 long-sleeved, bib-front uniform (a reproduction of which is shown below) would not translate into an accurate throwback that would work on the field today. The 1902 set was chosen because the team opened their Palace of the Fans ballpark that year, which also coincided with a new set of uniforms.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1902

The long march of throwbacks begins on May 4 (the anniversary of the Red Stockings' 45-9 win over the Great Westerns of Cincinnati) with the team's 1902 home throwbacks. Collared, half-button Majestic Cool Base cream jerseys feature a red "CINCINNATI" in an unusual block type on front (note the low crossbeam on the pointy "A"). The most distinctive feature here is the front left chest pocket. One wonders what the ballplayers of 1902 kept here, certainly not batting gloves or body armor. Back player numbers are in what looks to be a bold version of a Block variant used by the Giants and Astros in the mid-70s. Numbers were not worn in baseball at this time. In what will be a theme throughout the series, the anachronistic Majestic logo is on the left sleeve and MLB logo is on the back under the collar.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1911

One day later, on May 5, the Reds jump 9 years in history and feature their 1911 road jersey at home. One of several early blue road jerseys, this entry is represented here in Majestic Cool Base fabric.
A very fancy "REDS in wish-bone-C" appears on left chest in red/blue (the first time this appeared on a Reds uniform), with a similar (but not the same) "C" logo in red and blue on the left sleeve over the Majestic logo. This sleeve logo may have been on the right sleeve as well/ instead on the originals – see photos at right.

Numbers on back in what appears to be an off-white color, in a font very similar to what the Reds wore from 1985-1994. Originals, of course, would not have had back numbers. A cadet collar and three-quarter button placket, all framed in red knit trim, represent some once-common baseball jersey elements that have been lost to time. Very nice attention to detail with the white buttons, which appear to be accurate compared to the photos of the original at right.

Todd Radom photo

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1912

If a jersey could be plain and fancy all at once, this Reds 1912 home jersey, worn May 19, would fit the bill. Of course, much of the "fanciness" comes from the unique and almost hand-drawn-looking back numbers, which weren't worn in 1912, so that year's real jerseys would have verged on plain. Whatever the font is, it matches nicely with the ornate "C" logo on each sleeve. The only other adornment on this cream-color Majestic Cool Base, half-button jersey is a single strip of knit trim running along a single side of the placket and round the top of the collar. Based on the photo of the originals here, the knit trim may not have extended down the placket, but it is hard to be sure. Either way, the set is striking in its simplicity.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1919 World Series

The Reds won their first World Series in 1919 against the infamous Chicago "Black Sox" and wore different uniforms in the series than the regular season. This cream, half-button, navy pinstriped Majestic Cool Base jersey replicated the World Series home version for the June 2 game. The era's "wishbone-C" logo has the "C" in red/blue and the "REDS" in red, with red Majestic Varsity numbers on back (not worn by the team at the time). The jersey is finished with a sun collar, sewn atop a separate sewn-in placket (note the different pinstripe patterns on all three elements).

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1935

Steve Kraljic Collection

The Reds played in MLB's first night game in 1935, and these uniforms throw back to that season, one in which this was an alternate home jersey according to legendary uniform historian Marc Okkonen. Cream Majestic Cool Base jerseys have blue/red/blue braid around both sleeve openings, around the neck opening, and around the neck and placket. And no other adornment, at least on front. Large red/blue rounded numbers appear on back, which look similar to the numbers on 1935 Reds catcher Gilly Campbell a photo from the first night game at left (though it is unclear if this, or the Reds' other 1935 home jersey was used in that game, as the photo is somewhat overexposed). This was the team's last home jersey not to have "Reds," the wishbone-C, or both, on front.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock 1936 “Palm Beach” Alternate

Another alternate for the Reds when they throw back to 1936 on June 30. Called the “Palm Beach” (which is what the uniform’s manufacturer called the lighter fabric used on the originals), this jersey with script “Reds” on left chest was paired with alternate red pants on occasion in 1936 only, a look recreated here by Majestic in Cool Base fabric. The throwback version has “Reds” script in red/cream embroidered patch, and no other adornment save for the red back numbers in a rounded font, similar to what the Cubs now use. A check against the original shows that the font is fairly accurate to what was worn in 1936, as are the red front buttons, a nice nod to the past.

Original 1936, including the “Palm Beach” tag

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1939

The Reds were NL Champs in 1939, and the July 6 entry represents that season with a Majestic Cool Base throwback. Elegant in its simplicity, the “REDS in wishbone C” logo appears on left chest in red/white/blue, while the league-wide Baseball Centennial patch adorns the left sleeve. Red/blue McAuliffe style numbers identify the players on back. Based on the images of a game worn 1940 jersey at left (which was the same style, minus the patch) shows this checks out admirably against the real thing.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1956

And out come the vests…and Mr. Red. These 1956 road throwbacks, in Majestic full knit, represent the first appearance of both for the Reds. The team had vests for both home and road, but Mr. Red, who debuted the year prior as a sleeve patch, appears as a primary uniform element for the first time. He'd be gone by the following year, but on July 7, even though at home, the Reds celebrate the brief, shining moment of this uniform specimen with this Majestic Cool Base jersey. And it's a good copy, when viewed against an original at left, though the front number font differs slightly from what may be original manufacturer MacGregor's version of Varsity in 1956. Many players opted to go sans undersleeves, following in the footsteps (shirtsleeves?) of Ted "Big Klu" Kluszewski, who did the same decades ago.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1961

Blue returns to the Reds' uniforms in 1961, and the 1961 home set returns to the field on July 21. That season, the team marked the passing of owner Powell Crosley with black trim around the left sleeve opening – the equivalent for an armband for a sleeveless jersey. Reproduced here by Majestic in Cool Base fabric, the red-pinstriped vest sports a rounder version of the "REDS in wishbone-C" logo, in red/white chainstitch over blue, with red/blue front and back numbers in what was likely original manufacturer MacGregor's own Varsity font, like the 1956 throwback on the prior page.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1967

In 1967, accent colors go away, while sleeves return as does the wishbone-C, chain-stitched in white on a red background. Reproduced here as a Majestic Cool Base jersey on July 28, this is the first Reds throwback of this series to feature names on back in red, rendered in a proper extra-tall font. The red front numbers on the throwback appear less bold than the original, seen middle right, but otherwise, this set well represents what was a one-year style for the Reds, and its last in pinstripes until 1993.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1969

The 1969 uniform captures the clean white and red simplicity of Reds jersey that will follow for more than two decades. The REDS in wish-bone-C is here chain-stitched in white on a red background, giving the otherwise plain uniform beautiful texture from up close. Block Standard Bold numbers in red on front and back, with small back numbers placed under an extra-tall red NOB. The 1969 MLB 100th Anniversary patch correctly adorns the left sleeve of the Majestic Cool Base throwback. It compares very well to the original, at right.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1976

The Reds won back-to-back World Series in 1975 and 1976, and the August 17 throwback commemorates the second of those seasons. The first of the V-neck pullovers in the series, this Majestic Cool Base jersey features the REDS in wishbone-C logo on left chest, chain-stitched in white over a red background. Red front and (short) back numbers appear in Block Standard Bold, and names on back continue on in the Reds' tall red lettering. Wide white/red trim appears on the sleeve ends, with red/white/red trim around the V-neck. The National League's 1976 Centennial Patch (accurate down to the white copyright symbol and "USA") correctly appears on the right sleeve. Another spot-on throwback, as should be expected at this point in the promotion.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1990 World Series

Another World Series throwback for the Reds, this time to 1990 on August 18. Very similar to the previous 1976 model, this one has some very small differences that are captured here accurately. Made in Majestic Cool Base fabric, this is again a white V-neck pullover with red/white/red neck trim, however, the sleeve trim now matches the red/white/red color pattern. The Reds logo is now white on red twill, as chain stitching disappears. The Reds version of Varsity front and back numbers are now red/white, with the white layer almost invisible, and the same goes for the still-tall back names in red/white block. The 1990 World Series patch is on the left sleeve, with an American flag patch on the right chest over the front number, worn in recognition of the First Gulf War. When this throwback was unveiled, the American flag patch had a gold border instead of the proper white border as in 1990. It was corrected for the game, a very impressive example of the Reds' commitment to accuracy.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1995

The Reds returned to the postseason again in 1995 and wore this jersey style while doing it. This return to vests and pinstripes was honored on September 8 in Majestic Cool Base fabric. Reds logo in red/white twill, front and back numbers are in red/white Reds Varsity font, NOBs still tall Block in red/white. By this point, the commitment to accuracy is measurable, and much easier to pull off with jerseys of comparatively recent vintage.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Turn Back the Clock to 1999

The final of the 15 throwbacks, dating two decades old, takes the field on September 22. Another vest, more stripes, but the black shadows have made their way into what was only red and white for decades. Rendered in Majestic Cool Base, the red pinstriped vest sports front and back block numbers and names in red/white/black 3D drop shadow. Black undershirts with a Mr. Red patch on the left sleeve complete the look worn by franchise favorite Ken Griffey, Jr. during his stint in Cincinnati.

© GameWornGuides.com

2019 Players Weekend

The third incarnation of Players Weekend turns the colorful jersey concept on its ear, reducing all teams to monochromatic designs in either black or white, with all team sleeve patches and trim removed, leaving a clean but stark template. Gone are the contrasting sleeves and special patches with messages of inspiration. MLB says that this new approach is to emphasize the colorful, personalized cleats, bats, and other gear the players choose for the promotion, which spans August 23-25, 2019. Jerseys are now button-front Flex Base, with appropriate Majestic manufacturer and set tagging. Back-of-collar CFX MLB logo is now silver and black. All teams also wear a memorial patch for Angels pitcher Tyler Skaggs, a white “45” in a black circle, on the left sleeve. Most teams removed this patch before auctioning off the jerseys. The Reds wear a white version of their home jersey with the front lettering and back varsity numbers rendered in white/gray with gray nickname on back.

© GameWornGuides.com

2020 “Summer Camp”/2021-2022 St. Patrick’s Day

The Reds revert to their 2016-2017 green St. Patrick’s Day jerseys for 2000, even though their annual game is not played that year. With COVID canceling the game in March 2020, the Reds bring out the green jerseys for “Summer Camp” workouts - the delayed Spring Training that began on July 1. When MLB returned to the normal spring schedule in 2021, these jerseys were again worn on their intended March 17 holiday going forward. Now made by Nike on their version of the Flex Base template, the jersey is in solid green, with front script logo and back numbers in white/gray and player name in white -- all in the Reds’ special font. The layer of gray is thin and light enough that it disappears from a distance. The right sleeve sports a white shamrock -- a feature shared by many teams for St. Patrick’s Day. Contrary to his name, Mr. Red appears on the left sleeve in shades of gray and white, while white knit trim encircles both sleeves. Discontinued after 2022, as no teams wore green jerseys for the annual holiday in 2023, likely as part of Nike’s efforts to simplify jersey variations for all teams.

© GameWornGuides.com

2022 Field of Dreams Game (1919 Home)

For the August 11, 2022 incarnation of the Field of Dreams game in Dyersville, Iowa, the Reds throw it back to their 1919 look. And in a way, to 2019 as well, which is when they last wore a turn back the clock design just like this. Nike made this latest version, half-pullovers in a navy-pinstriped, white Cool Base material, with a four-button front. The left chest sports the Reds' wishbone-C logo in red/navy with "REDS" in red block lettering inside. The jersey is finished with a sun collar, sewn atop a separate sewn-in placket (note the different pinstripe patterns on all three elements). Though they would not have been used at the time this jersey represents, back numbers are added here in bold, red Varsity. Similarly anachronistic are the MLB and Nike logos, which are a sign of our times.

© GameWornGuides.com

2025 Speedway Classic

Braves, Reds to sport NASCAR-inspired uniforms in Speedway Classic

July 21, 2025
By Jason Foster
(Excerpted from mlb.com)

When the Braves and Reds take the field on Aug. 2 for the 2025 Speedway Classic, the night's distinct NASCAR vibe will extend to racing-themed uniforms for the players.

The special Nike jerseys unveiled on Monday stay true to the usual looks of the two teams, but also feature nods to the racing world. These flashes include custom numbers on the backs designed after the numbers on race cars, with outlines, shadowing and italicized "movement" to represent a race car's forward motion.

The inaugural Speedway Classic represents the first AL/NL game to be played in Tennessee.

Ed. note: The Reds use their white home jersey as the base for this modified style. Each team also wears a special "Speedway Classic" sleeve patch. The patch location varies based on player handedness, and appears opposite the team's ad patch, replacing the Reds' standard team patch.

© GameWornGuides.com

Prototypes and Oddballs

1978 Tour of Japan

While Wilson made the Reds road uniforms in 1978, participating players in the bi-annual MLB Tour of Japan postseason exhibition series were issued Rawlings-made road grays for the trip. Photo evidence shows the Reds players wearing Rawlings logoed pants, not worn in MLB. Several of these complete uniforms have come up for auction over the years.

© GameWornGuides.com

1983-1988 Dave Concepción Captain's "C"

Captain's patches are a more familiar element of hockey and football jerseys in U.S. sports, but there have been occasions where they've been worn by baseball players too.

According to research by Paul Lukas, Dave Concepción was the first MLB player to wear a captain's "C" on his uniform. The addition of the letter was called out in a story in the Reds' 1983 yearbook (shown at right).

Photo research shows that Concepción's "C" was inconsistent in size, style, and placement across his tenure as captain, and did not always appear on all of his jerseys, though it was on his BP jersey at least once. Some examples of the variations across the years are shown here.

CONCEPCION'S "C" STANDS FOR CAPTAIN

There is a new "C" on the uniform of David Concepcion and it doesn't stand for Cincinnati. It is the emblem that signifies that he has become the Captain of the Reds.

The title is not one that is used regularly in baseball. For example, Concepcion is the Reds' first since Pete Rose and when Rose was named to that position in 1970, he was the first captain of the Reds team since Bill Werber held the title some 30 years earlier.

It is not a position with specific duties, but there is one quality about baseball captains that seems universal—respect. And that is what makes it special for Concepcion, who will become the senior member of the team when Johnny Bench retires at the end of the season.

"I appreciate knowing that I have the respect of the organization in this way," said Concepcion, the Reds' shortstop since 1970. "This will put more responsibility on me and I am ready for that. I know I can help the younger players."

"The inexperienced players were looking up to Davey already," said Manager Russ Nixon. "Now it will be even more so. I think this will help bring the club closer together."

© GameWornGuides.com

1992/1993 Reversed Logo Colors Batting Practice

Bill Henderson Collection

(Left) I have only seen a couple like the batting practice jersey shown at left, and am not sure if the team ever wore them on the field. The subtle difference on this Diamond Collection batting practice jersey is that the Reds logo is reversed from the usual colors.

At right, notice the standard-colored logo at top for comparison, and a similar reversed logo from the oddball Deion Sanders satin BP shown at right.

"Normal" version for comparison

© GameWornGuides.com

1992-1994 Undershirt

The “Diamond Collection” line of branded products was launched in 1992, and represented products supplied to clubs for on-field use but also available to fans who wanted to own authentic merchandise. It was really the beginning of the massive MLB merchandising that has become a staple of team revenue today. A line of Amapro-labeled team undershirts was sold in limited outlets, albeit briefly, before the contract for team undershirts went to Russell sometime around 1995. This one features a V-neck and an embroidered Reds logo high on the left chest.

© GameWornGuides.com

1985-1993 Phantom Alternate

Bill Henderson collection

These examples are from my collection. They are retail-spec Russell 1992 authentic jerseys with replica lettering. Any insight from other collectors is always gratefully appreciated. Below, the phantom jersey is clearly pictured in the official 1993 MLB style guide!

In 1985 the Reds supposedly introduced this solid (non-mesh) red alternate jersey. Sleeve-end knit stripes are white/red/white.

Though it had been generally accepted that this was available for use on the field up through 1992, I have never come across a game used jersey in this style, and In fact, have never seen single photo of this jersey being used in a game, or for that matter even being worn by a player.

Discussion among Reds collectors that has been going on since our Fourth Edition casts doubt if these were ever used by the team, or even issued to players. I would think that if they did exist, in nearly 35 years of searching, I would have seen one by now. The wordmark is the same as the team jacket's, not the road jersey.

We have removed this jersey from the summary tables at the chapter's beginning, and have moved this jersey to "oddball" status, even noting that the MLB Hall of Fame Dressed to the Nines database has removed this jersey from its historic listing of on-field jerseys.

© GameWornGuides.com

1997 Deion Sanders' Batting Practice Satin Pullover

- More from Deion Sanders: Deion has a specially made shiny red satin batting practice jersey crafted for him in 1997, with his numbers on front and back and his nickname PRIME TIME in tall Reds letters on the back.
- Unknown if the satin jersey below and the one in the period pictures above are the same garment.

© GameWornGuides.com

1997-2004 Barry Larkin Captain's "C"

Captain's patches are a more familiar element of hockey and football jerseys in U.S. sports, but there have been occasions where they've been worn by baseball players too.

Reds Hall of Famer Barry Larkin wore a captain's C from 1997 until his retirement in 2004. The location of the "C," which was appropriately rendered in the team's "Wishbone C" style, moved from sleeve to chest between the team's regular and vest jerseys over the years.

What Happened in 1998?

Larkin was unhappy that the Reds were moving toward becoming a "young and cheap" team by trading away veterans in 1998. As a result, he removed the "C" from his home jersey before the July 4 game in protest (on the heels of two consecutive days with trades). The following day, he replaced the "C" with the numbers of four traded teammates written in marker, along with a question mark, asking who would be next to go. The numbers represented Dave Burba (34), David Weather (49), Lenny Harris (28), and Jeff Shaw (41).

Also, though Larkin had worn the "C" on home and road jerseys in 1997, it appeared only on his home jersey for most of 1998. It was added to his road jersey in late July 1998, after months of absence, and appeared there through his retirement.

© GameWornGuides.com

Oops: Sean Casey's Signed 1999 All-Star Jersey

Known affectionately as "The Mayor" for his habit of talking to everyone who reached first base, Sean Casey was, and still is, a beloved figure in MLB circles. During a breakout season in 1999, Casey was selected to appear in the MLB All-Star Game for the first time. Unfortunately for him, a slight jersey snafu made his inaugural All-Star appearance even more memorable. He retold the story on his "The Mayor's Office" podcast (edited for length and clarity):

"At the All-Star Game in '99 we're coming in, Vlad Guerrero, Sr. to my left, it was like his second year in the big leagues, mine too, [and] to my right Randy Johnson, Bonds, I mean it was incredible…[Red Sox Visiting Clubhouse Attendant] Tommy [McLaughlin] comes in he's like, 'Hey, listen guys, you got two jerseys in your locker. Sign one for charity…the other one you're going to [wear] in the game.' So, I'm there, 'Oh yeah this so cool man.' [I] sign my jersey real big give it to Tommy…

"So, I come back from BP getting ready for the game, go in my locker, can't wait to put on my jersey. I got one jersey in my locker, and it has a huge signature on it…So I go to Tom, I go, 'Tom, hey, I think you messed up man, you put the jersey I signed yesterday back in my locker.' He goes, 'I don't know what to tell you dude, I don't know if the Reds are cheap or what, [but] they only sent you with one jersey.' So, I have to wear this during the game.

"I go in in the fifth inning for [Mark] McGwire, I'm like, 'Oh man I hope no one sees this jersey.' Meanwhile, it's so big this signature. So I go on deck…[Fox announcer Tim McCarver says], 'Did he sign his own jersey?' So, they zoom in…Nobody knows the real story, I only have one jersey. I signed it yesterday…I was mortified."

During the telecast of the game, Reds star Barry Larkin told Keith Olbermann that other players also signed jerseys that they wore in the game, claiming Reds pitcher Scott Williamson and Rockies outfielder Larry Walker had done the same thing. We have yet to find evidence of these players wearing their signed jerseys in this game like Casey did.

© GameWornGuides.com

Late 1990s Prototype Road Vest/Possible 1960s TBTC

The Reds have a long history of sleeveless jerseys, which have come and gone from their lineup over the years. This particular jersey, with Russell tagging that dates it to between 1996-1999, appears to have been made for the team as they were considering a return to a road vest, after adopting a home vest in 1993. The team experimented with "capped" sleeves on their 1997 road uniform, so this may have stemmed from that year's set. Ultimately, the road vest returned to the field in 1999, but in a slightly different form.

This sample, with the telltale "Player 5" stitched on back, differs from the 1999 version in that all lettering is red/black, rather than red/white/black 3D drop shadow, as the team adopted on home and road jerseys in 1999.

It is also possible that this may have been a sample of a proposed Turn Back the Clock jersey, representing the team's 1962-1966 road uniforms, which was never used. If that were the case, however, it would not have been a very accurate representation, as those featured blue-trimmed lettering with no name on back in 1962-1963, and the unusual name below the back number from 1964-1966. Turn Back the Clock uniforms are usually ordered by the home team, meaning that another club may have ordered this up, and perhaps it was scrapped because it was inaccurate. We may never know!

Left: A 1961-1962 Reds road vest, which is very similar (though not exact) in appearance to the prototype above.

Right: A 1999 Reds road vest as it appeared on the field, with a different look to the front and back lettering than was represented on the sample above.

© GameWornGuides.com

March 29, 2002 Chattanooga Game

The Reds visited two of their minor league affiliates' ballparks at the end of Spring Training 2002. The final spring stop was at the home of their Triple-A team in Louisville, KY on March 30 for a game against the Orioles. The day prior, they visited Chattanooga, TN, home of their Double-A affiliate the Chattanooga Lookouts, for a game against the Twins.

This jersey appears to be from that March 29 game, as the embroidery (not a patch) on the right sleeve celebrates the 15 years of affiliation between the Reds and Lookouts, which began in 1988. This example was made up for pitcher Lance Davis, who had spent 2001 with the big club in his only year of Major League service. It is unlikely that Davis wore this jersey, as he was put on the disabled list on March 21, 2002, and spent that whole season in the minors between Louisville and Chattanooga.

We have not seen if a similar jersey exists for the March 30 game in Louisville, however, the Reds had just started their affiliation with that Triple-A club two years prior, so this may not have warranted any kind of special recognition. More research required.

© GameWornGuides.com

Sewing Shop Oddballs

The guy in front is correct!

QUALITY CONTROL DEPARTMENT

Here are game photos of mid-1990s Reds road jerseys with the numbers on the wrong side for that style …

In the years that have passed since I first noticed the first 1999-tagged road vests with the front numbers sewn on the right-chest side, I have come across more than a half-dozen others offered by dealers or at auction. I have no confirmation from the team, but I suspect that a whole set was sewn this way, perhaps on purpose because they were ordered that way, and then the team changed its mind as to which side they wanted the front numbers sewn, and a new set was made. If this had happened, say, in 1970, surely the numbers would have been stripped off and resewn. But by 1999, the cost of labor to manually remove numbers, and the newly lower cost of automation to simply sew up a whole new set, may have made this an easy decision. Be on the lookout for these "wrong side" jerseys for sale online.
